The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." OUR GOD

Our God, He is the Lord of hosts,
A God to glorify;
A God who loves his children all,
And He is ever nigh.

Our God, He rules the universe,
He has the endless years;
And when we go to Him in grief
He quietens all our fears.

Our God, He is the mighty one,
He made the heavens all;
He hears the very humblest cry,
He'll fit us if we fall.

Our God, He has infinite power,
His wisdom past compare,
He always hears His children call
We never need dispare.

God gave his Son to die for us—
He died that we might live;
And if we go in God's own way,
He'll all our sins forgive.

WHAT I BELIEVE AND WHY

No. 9

Charles Clifford Maple

Just a few more thoughts on the mission of the church. Many times we come to the conclusion that the mission of the church is to preach doctrine, evangelize, organize, establish churches, etc. True, but there is another duty of which we wish to speak, and that is the work of developing the members, the spiritual growth, the cultivation, the teaching, the shepherding, the training in the spiritual life. This is one of the reasons why we need the church and this is what we believe to be a part of the work and duty of the church.

Peter exhorts in the closing verse of his epistle (II Peter 3:18) "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." Again he writes (I Pet. 2:2), "As new born babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby."

When one enters the Christian life he is only a beginner in the gospel of the kingdom; he is not in the kingdom, he has "faith" in; for between faith and the kingdom Peter has placed a list of Christian graces that one must grow into. The Christian life is by him pictured as one of growth and development (II Pet. 1:5-11). We have learned from the study of the commission that Christ gave his followers, that is the church, into which the disciples were soon to be organized, was to "teach." You will observe that teaching is twice commanded (Matt 28:19, 20). Those who would be baptised were to be taught, and those who were baptised were also to be taught, therefore the church is to teach those within its fold.. "Add to your faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity," says Peter. And the church with its pastoral oversight should cultivate these Christian graces that in every life they may be and may abound.

Let the church then urge that the reading and studying of the word of God, the life of prayer and communion, the attendance at the means of grace, the breaking of bread and the fellowship of the saints, be ever kept in mind. The church, the bride, the Lamb's wife, is what the individual members of the church are; therefore if the church is to be presented without spot or wrinkle, holy and without blemish (Eph. 5:26, 27), what manner persons must those be who compose it! We believe the church therefore has a large work to do in teaching her members and training them in the Lord.

Our aim has been to state what we believed upon these questions and to give the reason why. We hope that we may be able to say I believe as I do because God's word says so. May all things be after the divine pattern; may we ever rightly divide and understand the word and speak the word faithfully. Isaiah says (26:1,2) that it is the righteous nation that keepeth the truth that shall enter in through the gates in that day. May we not say the righeous individual that keepeth the truth will also enter, for such individuals make the "righteous nation" spoken of.

These articles, which we have had the privilege of presenting to you during the past few weeks, we have prepared without as much time as we had hoped to be able to give to them. We have endeavored to present to the readers of The Restitution an outline of the teaching of the Word of God as we understand it, and we hope that some one may be benefited by our effort.

"Finally, brethren, pray for us that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified even as it is with you." Amen.

THOU GOD SEEST ME

Sister Tabor

"Thou God Seest me" were a few words of exhortation given to us by Brother Goss at our Sisters' meeting, which was held at Sister Stroud's. He said he was trying to let those four little words be his guide; he also thought if we kept in memory those words we should not be far from the kingdom. I also remember while in England at a meeting when a young brother had just put on the all-saving name, an older brother came up to him and said, "Brother, you are now clean in God's sight; now try and show yourself worthy of your high calling, and whenever you feel tempted to do worng just think of these words, 'Thou God Seest Me.' "

Thou God seest me. If we keep in mind this thought,
We shall not be so very far from God.
It will help us on our journey along the narrow road,
Walking in the steps where Jesus trod.

Thou God Seest Me. Wherever we may go
We cannot hide ourselves from thee,
For thine Almighty Presence is with us everywhere:
On land, or on the restless raging sea.

Heavenly Father, how we thank thee for thy kindness unto us;
For giving us thy well beloved Son;
And still the door is open to those who are without,
For "whosoever will" may truly come.

That glorious time will soon be ushered in;
The Gentile times we see are nearly run.
We cannot grasp the joy that is in store
For those who are truly waiting for thy Son.

We cannot all do things just as we would;
We have not all the same amount of strength:
"A bruised reed," He says, He "will not break;
A smoking flax He will not ever quench."

So there is hope for those who do their best,
Who put on His all-glorious Saving Name,
Oh Father, if our faith be but a spark,
We ask that thou wilt fan it in to a flame!

SPRINKLING NOT BAPTISM

Those churches that use sprinkling as a mode of baptism assume as their authority the religious rites required under the Mosaic law, and the custom as adopted by some of the early Protestant churches; also its use in Ezekiel's prophecy as typifying the cleansing of Israel after the return of Christ to the earth (Ezek. 36:25). The sprinkling required under the law was not baptism, and had no reference whatever to their seal of the covenant with God, for that was circumcision, but it was a sacrificial ceremony wherein the priest sprinkled blood on the books and on all the people, and also on the tabernacle and all the vessels of the ministry (Heb. 9:19, 21). These sacrificial ceremonies under the law were only patterns or types of heavenly things, and were for the purifying of the flesh, but now the antitypical blood of Christ, when typically sprinkled on our hearts through faith and obedience to him (Heb. 10:22), cleanseth us from all unrighteousness (1 John 1:9).

By referring to Heb. 9:13 we find that the religious rite of sprinkling under the law was for the purifying of the flesh, and then by referring to I. Peter 3:21 we find that Peter calls especial attention to the fact that baptism (from the Greek word baptisma, meaning immersion or dipping in water) is not putting away the filthiness of the flesh, as was the case in the Mosaic rite of sprinkling, but is "the answer of a good conscience," a figure typifying the burial and resurrection of the dead, and Paul refers to it as a seal of our covenant with God (Rom. 4:11). When Ananias told Paul to arise and be baptized, and wash away his sins (Acts 22:16) he did not mean that the water would wash away his sins, but that the act of obedience to Christ's command would, as a covenant with God, which was already accepted through faith and repentance, and thus make him a covenanter with God, so that the blood of Jesus would be applied to wash away his sins.

As we have no recorded authority in the Bible that sprinkling was ever used for baptism, we must refer to history to find when it was first so used by the churches. According to the standard encyclopedias, the first use of sprinkling for baptism was only in case the candidate was sick, and the earliest cases recorded were said to have occurred in the third century. They say that clinical baptism was only permitted in the case of necessity. The council of Ravenna, in 1311 A. D. was the first council of the church which legalized baptism by sprinkling, by leaving it to the choice of the officiating minister.

The church of England did not adopt sprinkling as a mode of baptism until in 1643 A. D. Our only recorded authority for the use of either pouring or sprinkling for baptism is that it was used by certain denominations as a religious rite or ceremony for the purpose of initiating the candidate into full membership of that sect. We do not question the sincerity of those who use pouring and sprinkling for baptism, nor their belief that they are using them in fulfillment of our Lord's command,, but we surely have no record that the Lord ever authorized them to be used either for baptism or as a seal of his covenant by which we believe adopted his household and heirs of his promises.

Some may believe that inasmuch as circumcision of small children was a valid seal of the covenant with Abraham and his fleshly seed, that infant baptism is a valid seal of the new covenant in the Christian era. This is a vital mistake. The covenant made with Abraham and his offspring and all boughten servants, and again later with Israel who were Abraham's fleshly seed, was for a temporal purpose only, and the token of circumcision (not necessarily of the heart) was for a reminder in their flesh that they were to obey God while they continued to be his favored people, and this rite could best be performed while the children were small; whereas under the new covenant and during the Christian era the purpose of the covenant and seal is not temporal but eternal, the object being to try from the heart a called-out people, the chosen of whom are to be Christ's bride, the elect, who are to reign with him on the earth, for they are the "called and chosen, and faithful" (Rev. 17:14); and this seal can only be made by those who are old enough to understand the gospel.

THE BLESSEDNESS OF CHURCH GOING

J. J. Schamberger

Said Moses: "Blessed are they that dwell in his house" (temple or tabernacle) Psa. 84.

Why are so many people poor and languish spiritually? Because they don't attend church services. Who don't people have any confidence in them? Because they manufacture every excuse imaginable to stay away from church service.

Imagine men and women who are healthy and strong giving as a reason why they don't attend church, that they were "tired," or "hot," or "cold," or had "too much to do"! Now is there one of these flimsy excuses that these folks will use when the day of reckoning comes? Can they and will they stand before God and offer such an untruth as a reason for not going to church? We trow not.

When company comes on Sunday these folks jump at the chance to stay at home with company so as not to attend the services! It is a burning shame that the world with law can get more to church than Protestants with grace! It would not be so if Protestants were not so miserably back slidden and cold!

If you want to know, wife, why your husband has no confidence in your profession; if you want to know, husband, why your wife thinks your profession is a sham; if parents and children want to find out why so little confidence is resposed in them regarding their Christian profession, they can soon find it out. It is your lazy attitude toward church going. You can join lodges, keep up their dues, play with the world fast and loose, attend theaters and other questionable places of amusement, but inside of a church you are scarcely ever seen! The invitations from the Lord for you to go to prayer meeting or church on Sunday fall like a dull thud on your ears and illicit absolutely no response! It is enough to make angels weep to see—even among us—the carelessness about church going. May God pity you, you poor backslider. When people get like that they need to get down and pray and ask for forgiveness. If they don't do this, but continue on in their careless way, THEY WILL MOST CERTAINLY BE LOST.

IMMORTALITY—WHEN RECEIVED.

H, V. Reed.

It is a remarkable fact that the word immortality occurs but five times in the Bible, and is never used by any writer of the Bible except Paul. There is a popular impression that the words "immortal" and "immortality" are of frequent occurrence throughout the Scriptures and apply or refer to the soul of man. We find no such expression as an immortal soul, deathless spirit, disembodied spirit, or a world of departed spirits. These phrases that are so common in the pulpits and in the hymn books, are not used by the prophets or the apostles; indeed, the word immortality as used in the scriptures is presented in a way to show us that it is not man's own by inheritance, but his privilege hereafter.

The scriptures in no way represent man, body, soul, or spirit, as capable of performing all the functions of life in a separate state. Those who have thought but little upon the subject will be surprised to learn that the uses of this word immortality are such as to convey the impression that it is not inherent in man, or is not any part of his present nature.

The apostle in writing to Timothy, brings out the word immortality, as belonging to God alone, in the following significant words: "Which in his times he shall show who is the blessed and only potentate, the king of kings and lord of lords who only hath immortality, dwelling in light which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath seen nor can see, to whom no man hath seen nor can see, be honor and power everlasting. Amen" (I. Tim. 6:14-16).

It will be seen from this specific declaration that immortality belongs to God, and to God alone, hence it is inconsistent to affirm that all men are in possession of the precious boon of endless life, for immortality literally means deathlessness, or that which cannot die.

The question is propounded in Job iv:17, "Shall mortal man be more just than God? Shall man be more pure than his maker?" In this question we have a striking contrast presented. Man is mortal; the Apostle Paul states that God only hath immortality. Here then we have the two extremes of life. Man's life is temporal; God's life is endless. Now the question arises in what way can mortal man attain immortality? The Apostle Paul answers this question in Rom. ii., 6, 7: "Who will render to every man according to his deeds. To them who by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, honor, immortality, eternal life." The mortal man seeks for immortality, which shows that he is not in possession of the desired boon but there must be some means devised by, or through which mortal man can thus seek for immortality. May we not therefore look with confidence into the scriptures to find how God has revealed or brought to light the immortal life to man. In II. Tim. 1:10, we have the desired information: "But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ, who hath abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through gospel." From this text everyone must see that the gospel brings man the tidings of endless life, reveals to him a state of endless existence through obedience to the gospel, which sheds its golden promises upon the dark pathway of our existence.

The final question is, When shall man, who is required to seek for immortality, obtain the priceless gift? We are not lost for a scriptural answer to this important question. The time and manner of obtaining this boon of life are presented to us in 15th chapter of I. Cor. In these words: "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For the corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So, when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying which is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O, death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" Of this quotation we learn, first, that a mystery has been unveiled by the apostles second, that this mystery is embodied in the fact that man is to be changed at the time of the resurrection, from the mortal to the immortal being; third, the time of the resurrection is the time of the trumpet's sounding; fourth, the time when death shall be swallowed up in victory.

We have now quoted every passage wherein the word immortality occurs in the scriptures, and it will be seen that God only has it. Man must seek for it through the gospel as a means, then he will obtain it at the resurrection of the dead, at which time the reign of death shall be broken, and eternal life, with all its blessings and immunities, shall flow from Jesus as the Life Giver to the world. Over the gateway to the eternal city we hav the impressive words: "There shall be no more death." Immortality, then, becomes man's own by obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ, and will be obtained when the holy dead shall be quickened to life by the coming of the son of man, who is the way, the truth, and the life.

In harmony with what has been said before, we may add that the phrase "eternal life," which occurs so often in the discourses of Christ, is always applied to the righteous. Granting that the phrase carries with it the blessings and happiness of a new state of being, it must also include existence itself. It is evident that those who are out of Christ are in no way to enjoy the benefits or the existence promised to those who are in Christ.

Eternal life does not come to man through the first Adam. He forfeited the right to the tree of life by disobedience, and the flaming sword guarded the entrance to that tree, which was to be the means of perpetuating life. Had it not been for the appearing of Jesus the Messiah, as the second Adam, endless life would never have been offered to man. The promise is: "He that believeth on me I will give everlasting life, and raise him up at the last day;" he that believeth not shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him."

We may examine all the terms of life used in the New Testament, and we shall find there is not one phrase of endless existence—strictly speaking—that belongs to those who are aliens from God. The promise of life, the hope of life, the resurrection of life, the book of life, the river of life, the tree of life, and all other similar phrases, belong exclusively to those who overcome; hence, we must conclude that immortality is conditional and dependent upon our obedience to the gospel, which reveals to us the fountain and promise of endless life.

The terms "condemnation" and "death," "perishing," "losing life," and similar terms or phrases, refer to the impenitent. The scriptures also represent that pain, sorrow, and sin shall cease in the universe of God and universal blessing will flow to all who finally overcome and attain to that immortal destiny promised to those "who shall attain to the resurrection of life." and the subsequent blessings and immunities associated with the reign and triumph of Christ Jesus, who has promised eternal life to all that obey him.

THE DEVIL TRANSFORMED

G. H. P. S.

We learn by reading the Bible that the devil was once an angel in heaven, but by disobedience he made himself a devil—Baptist Flag Scribe.

Give chapter and verse please. Paul says the devil transforms himself into an angel of light, but you say he was an angel and made himself a devil. You say the opposite of what Paul says. But Christ says the devil was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the truth (John 8:44). Does "an angel in heaven" commit murder? But,—behold, your discovery from the Bible is that this "angel of heaven" fell from grace through disobedience and made of himself a devil, but a man cannot fall from grace. How much better to be a man than an angel! If you were an angel you might fall from grace and become a devil. The new passage about the devil found in the same chapter where you find the Baptist church—the first chapter of the book of Presumption.

HEBREW JUSTICE

"Defend the poor and fatherless; do justice to the afflicted and needy" (Psa. 82:3). A Hebrew translation of the word "charity" does not exist. The nearest equivalent is Z'dokoh, which is translated literally and correctly "justice" in Psalms 82:3.

Does the absence of the word "charity" in the Hebrew vocabulary imply that Israel did not practice charity? No; but it means that assisting the unfortunate, helping the poor, is not charity, according to our acceptance of that term. With them it was not charity, but "justice;" not charity, but Z'dokoh. "To do justice and judgment is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice" (Prov. 21:3).

"TILL HE COMES"

J. R. Jones

What, till he comes? "Ye do show the Lord's death" till he comes. How show his death? "As oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup ye do"—by eating the bread and drinking the cup. His death is to be shown till he comes, but his death is shown by eating and drinking; therefore the eating and drinking are to be continued till he comes. When the eating and drinking are done the supper is observed; but the eating and drinking are to be done till he comes, therefore the supper is to be observed till he comes. No cessation, no hold up on this side of the Lord's coming.

Of eating the bread Jesus said, "Do this in remembrance of me." Of the cup, "This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me." Both of these to be done in remembrance of Jesus the Lord; but both of these to be done till Jesus comes; therefore the Lord wants to be remembered till he comes.

Till he comes he will be away, but he wants to be remembered while he is away, by those who have been redeemed by his blood and who are members of his body. He wants not to be forgotten, but to be remembered while he is away. When he does come, events will happen and scenes transpire of such a nature that there will be no danger of his being forgotten from that time on, neither by the redeemed nor by the damned. No, it is in this present evil world, where sin abounds, where indifference prevails, where everything but right is daily seen, where the flesh is hourly appealed to, and the Lord is away, that the danger is.

A GRACIOUS INVITATION

Viola Gaseley

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28).

This gracious invitation to the laboring and heavy laden of earth is given by Christ, with a promise of rest. He says, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matt. 28:29-30).

The duties and restraints of the gospel are not oppressive to the subdued heart, but are a relief from a more terrible yoke and crushing burden. The Christian has rules to obey, labors to perform and self denials to learn. In the comparison of Christianity with the old forms of Paganism we find a decided relief in the duties and restraints imposed. The duties and restraints of the gospel are blessing in themselves.

The gospel, when believed and obeyed form the heart, imparts comfort, gives strength in the day of labor, light in the hour of doubt, yields support under trials and burdens, imparts joy even in the deepest sorrow, and overbalances all that may be conceived of as a yoke and a burden.

The gospel reveals to us views of so glorious a future life that all the sufferings and labors of this life are unworthy to be compared with it. "Moses chose rather to suffer affliton with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of reward" (Heb. 11:25,26). Paul said, "I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us" (Rom. 8:18).

Humanity is blind. We toil under crushing burdens, and at the same time spurn the Cross of Christ as too heavy to bear! Christ offers to exchange burdens, but is refused. Nothing except entire consecration and entire reconciliation to God can obtain real freedom.

Jesus is calling the weary to rest,
Calling today, calling today:
Bring him thy budren and thou shalt be blest,
He will not turn thee away.

Let us, beloved, bear complacently the burdens of this present life; for the burdens which are well borne become light. Let us also heed the Savior's invitation so that when he comes again we will be invited to sit down with Him upon his throne.

SUNDAY MORN. ADDRESS

Robert Roberts

This breaking of bread is a pleasure; and the pleasure is of a kind that yields profit, which is a great and constant evidence of the wisdom of Christ in appointing it. There is no exercise in life which we can ever compare with it. It differs from every effort of instruction in which men can engage. We do not come together at the table of the Lord to learn. We do not meet to revive knowledge of any abstract truth we may have acquired. We meet to call to our remembrance a personal friend. He who commanded it, and whose command is alone our reason for attending to it, said "Do this in remembrance of me." The institution is intensely personal in its meanings and associations, both as regards the object it brings before our minds, and as regards the relations it is intended to establish between ourselves and that object.

In this, it differs from all human systems of wisdom or knowledge. These systems are impersonal. They exist independently of any man. The men die and are forgotten, but the systems live on. English Liberalism is for the moment bound up with the name of Mr. Gladstone, but Mr. Gladstone will die and Liberalism will go on its course as if such a man had never lived. The scientific speculations popularized by Charles Darwin will thrive long after his bones have mouldered to dust. It is not so with Christ. He did not found a system, in the ordinary acceptation of that term. He offered himself. His language was "Without me, ye can do nothing." "I am the living bread that came down from heaven, whereof if a man eat, he shall live for ever," "I go away, but if I go away, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also," "I go to my Father and your Father; to my God and your God." "This is the Father's will that of all that he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day."

It is therefore a man—a person—a friend we meet to think about and to fix our minds on; more, a head, a captain, a God. In this, the truth supplies our need as no human system does. We need truth and duty drawn into this personal focus. We are not constituted to worship the abstract. Our minds have no faculty to work on the infinite. We are adapted to the personal and the single. We can worship truth incorporate and individualized. Every power of the mind is thus drawn out: every spring of the heart opened. Christ meets all our need. He is the standard of our duty, the magnet of our loyalty; the absorbent of our love, the theme of our intellectual appreciations, the stimulator of our sublimest sentiments and the adequate object of our most fervent adoration. There is no extravagance in Paul's declaration that "in Him are filled up all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge."

In this is the perfect beauty of the gospel as contrasted with the wisdom of the world in its most pretentious forms—that in Christ, we have a man who is "the truth." Astronomic truth has no personal applications. It is beautiful, but it is high and cold, like the glitter of the stars on a frosty night. It speaks no hope and yields no guidance. We are glad to retire from the fatiguing futility of trying to grasp it, and to take refuge in our small mortal ways. So with all other forms of scientific truth. They know us not and comfort us not as persons; and mock us with their sterile beauty and consistency, telling us that low and mortal we are, and must remain, and that the grave is the inexorable corollary of life. On the other hand, if the world offers us a friend in some man of excellence, we have a theme more suited to our smallness. But how equally vain in another way! The best and strongest of mortal men are like the worst and weakest in one respect: "all are of the dust and all turn to dust again." As the flowers that grow and bloom, and show their beauty and exhale their fragrance in their season, and then wither and vanish, so the best mortal friend we can have is but a transient form of the universal power, destined to disappear in the ceaseless transmutations of things, and leave us comfortless and forlorn. Mortal friendship has no root. "The flesh profiteth nothing." Human knowledge has no result, and human friendship no permanence. And thus if we look to the wisdom of the world in its ultimate issues, "all is vanity and vaxation of spirit." What is wanted is, something that will connect the eternities at which science can peep, with the personal attractiveness of firendship made perfect and abiding. This is exactly what is done for us in Christ. "The word was made flesh and dwelt among us." The Word, which is God, and by which all things have been made, becoming flesh, has given us a man "full of grace and truth,"—a man in whom blend the sublimity of the infinite, the beauty of the perfect, the interest of the advantageous, and the felicity of the strong and lovely—yea also, the solution of history, the secret of futurity, and the remedy of the world. Science is poor by his side, for he holds in his hand the power whose multiform products science can but register and classify in man's puny style. History apart from him is a high-banked accumulation of cloud and fog, lurid with distant conflagration; futurity, an inpenetrable night; destiny a frightful abyss; the universe, a suicide engendering enigma.

In Christ is peace. He combines all that the heart can desire or the intellect aspire to. He is a friend and a head, and at the same time, the incorporation of the eternal and the universal. Sublime and glorious combination! He gives bosom to the aching heart and pillow to the tired head. They are no empty words that he uttered, though they have been deprived of all meaning by the vapid sentimentality with which they are usually associated, when he said "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest"—rest now, from the burden of human futility,—rest supernal in the issue to which he is leading human life on earth.

Being such, ought we not to listen, with fervent submission, to his voice? He says, "Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well, for so am I." If he be master, what are we? His servants whose part it is to obey his word—with understanding, with implicitness, with thoroughness. This is reasonable. It is what he commands. It is what human masters exact: do you think Christ will be satisfied with less? On this Christ has spoken plainly, and it is for us, in calling him to remembrance, to remember what he has said. He says "Call me not Lord, Lord, if ye do not the things that I say." "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." "The man that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not, is like a foolish man that built his house on the sand, from which it was washed away by the descending storm." Here is a point that it is not possible to emphasise too strongly. However unpopular, the doctrine may be—however much men may fail in acting on the principle it remains the same truth that will confront us at last when life's feverish struggle is in the past for ever—that the standard of our acceptance with Christ in the day of His appearing will be the obedience of His commandments. We may overlook this in the theoretical contentions forced upon us by the modern exigencies of the tutrh. We may even in some cases be tempted to profanely make light of the commandments of Christ, either as an impossible rule of action, or as one that in our curious blindness we may say no man acts up to, but the fact remains the same. God has given no authority since Chirst's ascension to relax any of those commandments given for general obedience.

Let us spend a moment in considering one or two of His commandments. Three times He asked Peter, "Lovest thou me?" This points directly to what, in a certain sense, we might call the first of His commands. All through His teaching, He exhibits himself as an object of love. He makes a man's love the test of his worthiness of the privilege of his friendship. "If any man love father or mother . . . . . more than me, he is not worthy of me." This was the new and extraordinary teaching in the midst of Israel. They had been accustomed to the commandment delivered to them of old time;" "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart. . . . Him only thalt thou serve." Here was one placing himself on the same pedestal as the Father. "I and my Father are one." This was what the Jews could not endure. They took up stones to stone him, saying, "For a good work, we stone thee not, but because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God." The truth has enabled us to understand where the Jews failed to understand. Begotten and anointed by the one spirit consubstantial with the Father. Jesus was the manifestation of the Father—the Son of the Father whom it was the Father's will all men should honor, even as they honor the Father. Therefore the test that men were Messianically upon to give to the Father, things to Christ also, the love of whom becomes the test of fitness for inclusion in the family of the Father. Here then, Christ calls upon us—commands us—to love him. It was a love active with Paul. He said "the love of Christ constraineth me." It was a love that was strong, high, deep. He speaks of it as "the love of Christ that passeth knowledge." This is what we might call natural to the subject. Love varies with the value and lovableness of the object it acts upon. A man does not love his horse as he does his friend, nor the coals in his cellar, as the books in his library. A man who truly knows Christ cannot love anything as he loves him. Because he is so gerat, the love of him, when fully awakened, is a love transcending what we feel for any other object. The command to love him, and by compairson, to hate even our own lives, is reasonable; for, ultimately, it will be seen that he is our life and our joy; that apart from him there is no well being at all. It might seem as if the command to love were an anomaly. Love, as an affair of moral affinity, might seem beyond the range of command. It is not so really. We have all heard of people trying to love persons to whom they did not feel drawn: and we have heard of success. Love can be cultivated. How much more where all the materials of love exist, but are inactive from inertness or ignorance, and where it is but needful to apply the fire of the will to set the whole aflame. The love of Christ will grow with acquaintance and contemplation: it will grow till it becomes the leading and constraining bias.

Christ gives us a rule by which we may judge of our attainments in the matter. "He that hath my comamndments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." And again "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." And again, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." It is evident that Christ will not accept a sentimental appreciation that falls short of practical compliance with his enjoined will. The reasonableness of this will commend itself. Do we not see in every day life that where love exists, it powerfully inclines the subject of it to do what is pleasing to the object of his love? Should we not say that one did not really love another if he showed himself indifferent to his wishes? Christ is only recognizing a universally operative rule when he says, "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." It is therefore, in our power to judge ourselves, as we are told to do. Do we know his commandments and keep them? The answer will be the true decision of our standing in the matter of love. Love cannot be quenched: hatred may tire, but love, never.

We look at Christ. There is everything to love—his own excellence: his unflagging devotion to the Father: his tireless compassion for the multitude: his love for his friends, even unto death: his holiness as the sin hater and sin remover: his power, both to heal and to destroy: his towering greatness as the Son of God and the heir of all things: his immeasurable importance as the coming possessor of all things on earth and the dispenser of the permanent goodness of the ages—everything combines to engage the highest love, a love passing knowledge, when the eyes are fully open to his unsearchable wealth in all things. With this love aglow, his commandments become easy, and shortcomings a burden. We eagerly believe and are baptized. We joyfully yield him the first place in our lives, with bended knee and confessing tongue. What next? We desire to do what he instructed the apostles to enjoin on us: to "observe all things whatsoever he has commanded." Love cannot be satisfied with anything short of this. He has commanded many things—some of them easy—some of them difficult. Love will not evade the difficulties: it will desire to "observe all" the things, difficult and easy.

Of one thing, he specifically says, "This I command you," namely, "that ye love one another." It is well that he spoke so plainly as this. It is a great help in the matter. It is compaartively easy to love Christ, because he is "altogether lovely," and it is in a manner natural to love the lovely. But among ourselves, there are many faults and blemishes—a good deal that is not lovable; and if Christ had not made love one to another a matter of command we might have given in to our aversions and found ourselves hating where we ought to love. We are not to wait for the lovable before we love. We are to be beforehand with it, and even shut our eyes to the unlovely. Love covereth a multitude of sins. We are to carry this love so far as to "love even our enemies, and do good to them that hate us and despitefully use and persecute us." Some say this is impossible. It is impossible for those who start wrongly. No man who does not first love Christ will love his enemies. If a man love Christ, he can love his enemies, because Christ has commanded it. His love of Christ will constrain him. If he look only to his evil neighbors and his own feelings, he will fail, he will hate his enemy and do him evil, in word and deed. But if he have Christ in consideration and view, he will find it possible to do good to them that hate him. The will of Christ whom he loves will help him.

The reason that Christ gives will also help: "That ye may be the children of the Highest who sendeth his rain upon the just and the unjust." The goodness of God is a fine copy for mortal man who was made in His image. It is high and, in its perfect form, unattainable by weak, erring man. But in measure, we can reach to it in obedience to Christ, who says, "Be like unto your Father." He giveth liberally and upbraideth not. So the Lord loveth a cheerful giver. The world prescribes political economy as the rule of action. Christ prescribes the character of God as the standard. It is for us as His children to choose the one and refuse the other.

THE BIRTH OF THE SPIRIT

Almus Adams

In considering this important subject it is necessary to notice, first, What is it, and second, When is it? But before doing so it will be necessary in order to get a clear understanding of the subject to offer a few objections to the popular view of this subject. Let us follow this method of being born of the spirit at conversion, which is the popular view.

First, We must start a revival. The prefix "re" means again. Then those who were previously converted have died, or been unborn, and must be reconverted or reborn. A revival would not in any way apply to the world, for they have never been born again or converted. Notwithstanding the name and disregarding its import, a bench is installed and worldly people are invited to come to this place of mourning and get religion. These are some of our objections to this first custom. Jesus said, "Go into all the world, and preach the gospel." When this is done the minister has performed his duty. Jesus told him to do nothing more. But to the hearers he said, "Believe and be baptized." This is plain. One is to preach the gospel, and the other is to believe. Any other form is man-made, hence not sanctioned by God. Where do we find it recorded that Jesus or his apostles in any of their meetings ever asked any one that wished to be prayed for, to stand up? Where is it recorded that Jesus said, Go and ask people to come forward and kneel at the mourners' bench and be converted. Is there any thing in the Bible that would form an excuse for such work? Where is it recorded that we are to pray for God, by the power of the spirit, to convert some one? If this is the means of conversion, and the point when they are born of the spirit, will someone harmonize it with Acts 10:34? Peter here tells us that God is no respector of persons, yet if God converts people in answer to prayer, and by direct power, and then fails to convert all, you have either limited his power or made him a respector of persons. So we learn that the whole proceeding is unscriptural.

When the gospel is preached to the people and they are asked to believe it, the responsibility is thrown upon them, and relieves God of any further obligations. Jesus said, "Except a man be born of the water and of the spirit he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." We are told people are born of the spirit at conversion; if so, they are born of the spirit before of the water, and the order of Jesus has been reversed.

Now this question presents itself, Can anyone reverse God's order and be guiltless? In verses 8 Jesus said, "The wind bloweth where it listeth (or wills), and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: So is every one that is born of the spirit." Here we are told that the spirit is referred to as coming and going like the wind. But by this interpretation Jesus' words are again reversed. He said it was every one that is born of the spirit that could come and go like the wind.

Let us see if we can learn from the scriptures which of these two interpretations are true. During the ministry of Jesus, what was his means of travel? He walked, did he not? He never rode but once that we have any account of; he was too humble for most of our modern ministers. We never hear of his appearing and disappearing at will do we? But how was it after his resurrection? Jesus never said anything without making himself understood. After his resurrection he demonstrates what he told Nicodemus, that those who are born of the spirit can come and go like the wind. Now open your Bible at Luke 24:13. Here we find two of the berthren on the way to Emmaus, and all at once Jesus appears on the scene, goes with them to the city, and finally reveals himself by the breaking of bread and the giving of thanks. At the point where their eyes were opened he "vanished," or as the margin says, "ceased" to be seen.

Here he has given us the first demonstration of what he told Nicodemus. These two brethren went back to Jerusalem and found the disciples and reported, and while giving their report, Jesus stood in their midst. We must be careful and not go to the other extreme and suppose that Jesus could materialize and dematerialize at will, and thus become allied with the spiritualists. We are told "their eyes weer holden." We nowhere learn of Jesus walking from place to place since His resurrection. It is just the reverse to what it was before his death.

Have these demonstrations any meaning to the person who believes he is born of the spirit at conversion? For further proof that it comes at the resurrection we cite I Cor. 15:42-49. Instead of Paul proving garduation in the kingdom he is showing the difference in the way they go down and come up. It is sown in corruption; it (same it) is raised in incorruption. It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory. It is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. So now they have been born from the dead to a spiritual nature—the same person with a changed nature; the same flesh and bones. Paul brings to view here two Adams: one, the head of the natural race; the other, the head of the spiritual. One had its beginning at creation; the other at the resurrection, Elijah was caught up into the firmament, and the angel caught Philip away, but Jesus never among all his great works moved from one place to another in this manner during his natural life.

He had to wait till the proper time come. In other words he could not demonstrate the birth of the spirit out of its order. Paul says, "There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body," then we are asked to believe that we possess both of these now. But Paul refutes that by saying, "As we have borne the image of earthly, we shall bear the image of the heavenly." The spiritual nature is acquired by doing God's will. It is promised to the overcomer. Have you noticed that Jesus never asked the Father for any thing until he had done the work first? The spiritual nature, with all the other things God had pormised, awaits us as overcomers. "To him that overcometh," Jesus says. Then our duty is plain. Jesus said "I have overcome the world," and we can see the result. If we can say with him. "I have overcome the world," the same result will follow.

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

In Belief and Practice Between the Resurrection of Christ and the Death of Constantine in 337. —XVII — Conclusion — The Council of Nice.

We have carefully examined step by step the various changes that took place in the church during the first three centuries, and have seen the little church at Jerusalem develop and spread. Heathen doctrines were gradually introduced, slowly changing the hopes and expectations of the church so much that if Paul had been awakened from the dead and had beheld the "fathers" gathered at the Council of Nice, about the year 325, he would have been astonished to know that they were assembled there to discuss religious doctrine by the edict of a Roman emperor, of whom Witherow says: "He appears to have adopted the Christian name from expediency rather than from conviction, and, stained with the kindred blood of wife and son and nephew, ill deserves the name of saint bestowed in fulsome adoration by a venial church. Even the priests of the false gods, aghast with horror at his crimes, exclaimed, 'There is no expiation for deeds like these.' He used both pagans and Christians, both orthodox and heretics, as instruments for his political purposes. His object seems to have been rather to raise and strengthen a hierarchy of ecclesiastical supporters than to assist the cause of truth, and he imposed on the organization of the Greek and Latin churches that monarchical and secular character which they have ever since retained."

The bishops were assembled in that council to manufacture our so called orthodox creed. When this creed had been duly settled, it was subscribed to by the bishops in order to make it more complete and binding. Two of the bishops had died and were buried at Nice while the council was sitting. In order to get their signatures, the creed as subscribed to by the living ones was placed on the garves of these dead fathers with this inscription: "O fathers and brothers, you have fought the good fight, you have kept the faith if what we have done is pleasing to you who now see Him face to face, add your names to ours." The document was left there during the night, and in the morning we are told their signatuers were added to the rest!

In the year 313, when Constantine was not familiar with the different sects calling themselves Christians, he issued this edict: "Be it known that we grant to the Christians and all other persons full liberty to follow the religion which they choose, that the Divinity who resides in heaven be propitious to us, and to those who live under our empire." At this time Constantine was anxious to have the good will of the Christians in general, as he had then powerful rivals to contend with.

However, when he had overcome all these by the aid of the Christians, and was establishing an orthodox endowed religion, about the year 332 this edict was issued: "Understand now by this present statute, ye Novatians, Valentinians, Marcionites, Paulins, ye who are called Cataphayrians, and all ye who devise and support heresies by means of your private assemblies, with what a tissue of falsehood and vanity, with what destructive and venomous errors your doctrines are inseparably interwoven, so that through you the healthy soul is stricken with desease, and the living becomes the prey of everlasting death. Ye haters and enemies of truth and life in league with destruction! . . . . Why do I still bear with such abounding evil? . . . . Why not at once strike at the root of so great a mischief by a public manifestation of displeasure? . . . . . We give warning by this present statute that none of you henceforth presume to assemble yourselves together. We have directed accordingly that you be deprived of all the houses in which you are accustomed to hold your assemblies, and our order in this respect extends so far as to forbid the holding of your superstitious and senseless meetings, not in public merely, but in private houses or any place whatever. Let any of you, therefore, who are desirous of embracing the true and pure religion take the far better course of entering the Catholic Church and uniting with it in holy fellowship, whereby you will be enabled to arrive at the truth. In any case, the delusions of your perverted understandings must entirely cease to mingle with and mar the felicity of our present times. I mean the impious and wretched double mindedness of heretics and schismatics. . . . . And in order that this remedy may be applied with effectual power, we have commanded that you be positively deprived of every gathering point for your superstitious meetings. I mean all the houses of prayer (if such he worthy of the name) which belong to heretics, and that these be made over without delay to the Catholic Church, and that any other places be confiscated to the public service, and no facility whatever be left for any future gathering."

That edict was drastic enough for the so-called Catholic Church to follow with additions in after ages, and outlined the spirit of that church thus enthroned in power, which is called the "mother of harlots" in Revelation. Eusebius, one of his bishops, thus writes: "The members of the entire body became united and compacted in one harmonious whole, and the one Catholic Church, at unity with itself, shone with full luster, while no heretical or schismatical body anywhere existed. And the credit of having achieved this mighty work our heaven protected emperor was able to attribute to himself." This was, of course, a gross piece if flattery to the emperor, for he knew to his cost that all the heretics so-called were not converted to orthodoxy by such measures.

It was still the rule of the church that all converts had to be immersed before they could be received as members of the church, but in the case of Constantine this condition was waived, and he was not baptized till a few days before his death; although he presided in their councils, and, as we have seen, dictated as to what orthodox and what was not. After his baptism he exclaimed: "Now I know that I am counted worthy of immortality, and am partaker of Divine light." When he died, he was canonized as a saint.

After the Council of Nice was over, Constantine invited the obedient bishops to a banquet, and this is how Eusebius writes of it: "Not one of the bishops was wanting at the imperial banquet, the circumstances of which were splendid beyond description. Detachments of the body guard and other troops surrounded the entarnce to the palace with drawn swords, and through the midst of these the men of God proceeded without fear into the innermost of the imperial apartments, in which some were the emperor's own companions at table, while others reclined on couches arranged on either side. One might have thought that a picture of Christ's kingdom was there shadowed forth, and that the scene was less like a reality than a dream. He gave them presents according to their rank, with an injunction to observe the results of the council."

Rev. Edward L. Cutts, in his History of Constantine the Great, says: "The emperor and the bishops fondly believed that the happy unanimity of the Nicene synod had given lasting peace to the church, and there seems to have been an idea that the union of the church and the world, so strikingly symbolized in the first General Assembly of the church, marked the beginning of that last age when the kingdoms of the world should be the kingdom of the Lord and of His Christ, and the knowledge of the Lord should cover the earth as the waters cover the sea." But instead of this it was the beginning of a period of tyrannny by bishops, and gross ignoarnce covered the earth as the waters covere the sea; and the "man of sin" was rapidly developed, hastening on to the condition of things described in Revelation xiii.

About the year 319 Constantine issued an edict enjoining that the first day of the week, or Sunday, should be kept as a holy day; and in the same year he issued another edict in which he directed his heathen subjects not to neglect to consult the Aruspices, the heathen mode of foretelling the future. The early Christians had from the beginning as we have seen, met on the first day of the week to remember the Lord's death till He come, but the edict gave them the privilege of keeping the day as a holy day, which many of them could not do before.

The great controversy that raged at the Nicene Council was in regard to the Trinity, or rather in regard to the so-called eternal Son ship of Christ, and this is part of the creeed they formed there, to which the dead bishops were supposed to have attached their signatures during the night. "We believe in the God, the Father Almighty, Maker of all things, visible and invisible. And in one Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, begotten of the Father (the only begotten, that is, the essence of the Father, God of God), Light of Light, very God of very God, begotten, not made, being of one substance with the Father. . . . But those who say, 'There was a time when He was not, and He was not before He was made,' and, 'He was made out of nothing,' or, 'He is another substance or essence,' or, 'The Son of God is created,' or, 'changeable,' or, 'alterable,' they are condemned by the holy Catholic Church."

Philip Smith, B. A., in his History of the Christian Church, says "Origen was the first to teach expressly the eternal generation of the Son." The fathers of the first and the early part of the second century were contented to take the Bible declarations on this subject such as "Behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call His name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto Him the thorne of His father David" (Luke i. 31, 32). And His own testimony concerning Himself as related to the Father: "The, Son can do nothing of Himself, but what He seeth the Father do" (John v. 19); "As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father" (John vi. 57); "For as the Father hath life in Himself, so hath He given to the Son to have life in Himself" (John v. 26); "I can of Mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge" (John v. 30); "But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father" (Mark xiii. 32); "Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away and come again unto you. If ye loved Me, ye would rejoice, because I said, I go unto the Father; for My Father is greater than I" (John xiv. 28). Of God it is said: "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth He any man" (James i. 23) But of Christ it is said, He "was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin" (Hebrews iv. 15). But these scriptures did not suit the Nicene fathers, presided over by the heathen Constantine, for if any one but himself had acted as he did, they would certainly have called him a heathen.

There was still a large party not represented at this council, "who held for the most part the supernatural generation of Christ by the power of the Holy Spirit, and that the Divine power resided in Him continually, and from the beginning, and not as the Gnostics said, from its communication at His baptism." Philip Smith, B. A., also says: "Origen was a disciple of Ammonius Saccas, who died A.D. 244; he taught what is called Neo-Platonism, which taught the doctrine of one Supreme God in whom was joined the Platonic Trinity. . . . Under this Divine Trinity the care of the world was intrusted to gods of an inferior order." Such were the beginnings of the theory regarding the Trinity read into the Scriptures. Thus was finally launched into the world our orthodox creed which has deluded millions through the ages.

GOLD DUST

It is impossible for us to come near to the Lord except as we shall exercise faith and trust in Him, in His goodness, in His power, in His wisdom, in His love.

We are to be on the alert to pass along the blessing which we have received, and to esteem that this is the chief business of life with those who have consecrated themselves to the service of the King of Kings.

They tell us that not a sound has ever ceased to vibrate through space, that not a ripple has ever been lost upon the ocean. Much more is it true that not a true thought, nor a pure resolve, nor a loving act, has ever gone forth in vain.

Those who live on the mountain have a longer day than those who live in the valley. Sometimes all we need to brighten our day is to rise a little higher.

It is the overcomer those who are meet to the Master's use, those who are dead to the world and alive unto Christ that will constitute that favored class whom the Lord when He cometh shall gather together as His first fruits.

Through obedience to righteous law comes perfect liberty.

CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Brother:

I take pleasure in writing a few lines to ask some of the brethren to write an article for The Restitution and explain the meaning of blasphemy against the Holy Spirit. We have had it for a Sunday school lesson and the superintendent claimed it was a person that lived the word and died in, unbelief. I claimed it was a person that came to the knowledge of the truth of the kingdom of God and died on the all saving name and went back and became a worse sinner than before. Will some one please explain the subject fully. Write for The Restitution so I can send it to the school.

MRS. J. H. DAVIS.

Dear Restitution:

We are bound to thank God for you brethren, etc. (II. Thess. 1:3). I was favored for the first time, last week, with an exchange by a brother in Hot Springs, who gets both papers, and not till then had I known of arrival to The Restitution, and am pleased to note the differenece. While both have been shaken loose, so to speak, from the former platform, the one has built back more firmly than ever—while the other is not so strongly built.

My brethren these things ought not to be (James 3:10). The way out is given in (Matt. 5:20,23,27). Amen. Selfishness and jealously ruined King Saul (I. Sam. 24: 8-16; James 1:12-14; II. Tim. 4:1-8)

Please allow me to say that I think Sister Wince has given us the key notes to the Man of Sin, spoken of in (Dan. 7:25; Rev. 13: 11), also (II. Thess. 2:3,4,7,8,11). Any system teaching that God has neither body, parts, nor passions has virtually denied both the Father and Son, thereby exalting the creature above the Creator (I. Heb. 1:3). Don't you think so?

Bro. J. S. Hatch preached for us in several places, both in Ark. and Miss. The most noted places were: Sherman, Olive Branch, and Hormands, county site of De Soto, in the Baptist church. He baptized my dear mother, and sister Bessie Humphreys in the faith of the gospel of Christ, some 20 years ago, both having been immersed before, while in their teens. The last named is still living, and is in the faith, at Washita, Ark.

But dear mother fell asleep June 15, last year, on a Wednesday evening, about sunset, having been staying with sister Betsie for some time previous to her death. She had partially lost her mind, hearing and sight, for some time, ere she died, hence was considerable trouble. She was the last of a family of fourteen children.

Brother, I am not able to farm, and more afflicted than usual, but if you can read my scribbling and see fit to insert it I may try to write some more. I see that you have your hands full, so to speak, and I am glad to see you stand for the truth. Only be kind and go slow in rebuking an elder. Your position now makes you the servant of all (II Cor. 10:1; Tit. 3:2). Now if you want Bro. Hatch's song, i.e., one I learned of him entitled, "The Gospel Train," I have it on memorie's page, so good bye.

R. A. HUMPHREYS.

(Will be glad to publish the song, Bro. Humphreys, if you will write it for The Restitution—Editor).

OBITUARY

Jas. C. Musselman

James Chapin Musselman was born February 18th, 1840, in Wabash county, Indiana. On May 27, 1887, he was united in marriage to Glendora Alspach. To this union were born five daughters.

He enlisted at the beginning of the Civil war with the 8th Indiana Infantry Volunteers, and served gallently to its close; dying on the 49th anniversary of his hardest fought battle, July 3, 1912, aged 72 years, 4 months and 15 days.

Funeral services were held in a large house of worship in Gilead, Ind., where the writer addressed the audience upon the Bible view of future life.

Some years ago the wife of Mr. Musselman was baptized by the writer, and two daughters became obedient a few years since. May the Mother continue teaching the gospel to the other daughters.

J. F. WAGONER.

A. F. Harlan

Allen F. Harlan was born March 18, 1852, and died at Holbrook, Neb., July 20, 1912. A wife five children, and 9 brothers and sisters survive him. He was born in Randolph county, Indiana, and moved to Iowa with his parents when about 12 years of age, and located near Eldora. In the 70's he came to Nebreska and took up a homestead in Furnas county, about five miles south of Holbrook. He lived in Furnas county continuously except one year spent in Oregon. He was baptized and united with the Church of God in 1888, and lived a consistent Chiartian life. He was a man of strong force of character, always found upon the side of right, earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. The church has lost a staunch supporter, the community an honored citizen, the family a kind father and husband. But we sorrow not as those who have no hope. We laid him away to await the Master's call at the resurrection of the just. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

O. J. ALLARD.

ACTS AND RESOLUTIONS

Horace Mann once remarked: "I have never heard anything about the resolutions of the apostles, but a good deal about the acts of the apostles." It was a keen criticism, which every Christian will do well to remember. The boy who wrote, in an examination that "resolution" meant "something that melted down" was not as far wide of the mark as he might have been. That is what happens to every resolution that does not get into action; and without action, resolution is not only worthless, but harmful, since it accustoms the mind to decide and then stop short of action.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

PROOFREADER

Years of experience in proofreading; now completing a technical course in the art. MSS prepared for the printer and proofs read. Book work a specialty. Limited amount of work by mail accepted at popular prices.

ROBT. G. HUGGINS,

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

The man who possesses faith unfeigned will do what others will not do: but a man of sham faith will not sacrifice anything for the sake of it.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints conjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:15); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." REDEMPTION

Tune—I do believe.

The Savior shed his precious blood
Redemption to procure,
To reconcile mankind to God,
And make his promise sure.

Chorus:

I do believe, I now believe,
I will accept the means,
I will arise and be baptised,
And wash away my sins.

'Tis faith that purifies the heart,
The faith that works by love,
That bids us from our sins depart
And all God's mercy prove.

Repentence leads us to confess,
That Jesus is the Lord;
Forsake our sins and wickedness,
Obey his holy word.

We are baptised into the name
Of Christ, the Son of God,
And thus exalted we may claim
Redemption through his blood.

In all we do through good or ill,
We will ourselves prepare.
To do our gracious Father's will
In humble contrite prayer.

Then when our Lord from heaven shall come
To sit upon his Throne,
We'll reign with him one thousand years,
The kingdom just begun.

With Abraham and Isaac too,
And all the glorious band.
We then shall walk the kingdom through,
And claim it as our land.

Baptised believers, they may claim,
The kingdom to them shared,
It shall be given unto them,
For whom it is prepared.

The Kingdom stands forever more
It shall not pass away,
For God shall claim it as his own
Forever and for aye.

A CONQUERER

Sterling Russell

A conquerer is one who prevails over, or surmounts by an effort. If this is accepted by all as true, it must be seen that the person who is going to overcome must have mental power or will power. Will power and force of character are synonymous. How have the truly great attained to the honored positions they hold? Let us take a few examples from the world at large.

Wellington said that Napoleon's presence in the French army was equivalent to forty thousand soldiers. Of John Hall it is said, "The man behind the sermon is the secret of power." It was character that elected Washington and Lincoln to the presidency.

Thus we find that force of character is the predominating factor in man's life. One of our city's well known business men and Bible students remarks in his book, "And then an indomitable will—power that will insure push and perseverence to overcome difficulties. This will power can be cultivated and strengthened until it becomes invincible, or it can be neglected, wasted and destroyed, leaving a moral wreck behind."

Now possessing an invincible will, let us go ahead and do things. A person with great force of character scorns impossibilities. Napoleon said, "Impossible is in the dictionary of fools." Is there one whom difficulties disheartens? He will do little. Is there one who will conquer? That kind of a man never fails. A resolute determination is half the battle of life, but accompanied by an untarnished character and an unfaltering faith in God, its achievements are beyond computation. As Paul said, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Strong will power and an arrogant, stubborn will are entirely different and the person with the latter comes to grief.

Still we must not trust wholly in our own power or we will fail. Napoleon was one of the world's great conquerors in war. Caesar was greater, as he had the then known world at his feet for a time. What great illustrious conquerors in the world's eye, but how insignificant in God's sight! The greatest conqueror ever known was Jesus Christ. He overcame the wickedness of this world with a hard fight and death at the last, and is sitting in glory at the right hand of the Father. We read in Prov. 16:32, "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." A conqueror must be born and be taught how to use his many weapons and defensive armor and shield. Then being fitted out he is ready to enter the field o battle. Let us see how it is done.

A brother, a conqueror, is born of water. He is now partaking of that divine nature. Let us proceed in equipping him. "Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breast plate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Above all, taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked; and take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." Now is he equipped. We are told to "study."

Our brother has done so, and is ready to go forth conquering, a hero working for God. He does not go in his own strength, but "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit." And praying unceasingly for strength from the Father above, keeping his face and steps upward, overcoming evil with good. To rise requires an effort. Any man can slide down hill. No one is safe in taking a look downward "just this once." "A traveler once ordling the Susquehanna on horse back became so dizzy as to be near losing his seat. Suddenly he received a blow on his chin from a hunter, who was his companion, with these words, "Look up!" He did so and received his balance. Looking on the turbulent water endangered his life, and looking up saved it."

Of all heroes, God's heroes are noblest. A soldier who rises above what the world calls fame and success, and is fighting for Christ, is indeed heroic. Choose upward, ever toward that which is elevating and ennobling. Let your ambition be to be remembered, not as a great scientist, lawyer, scholar, doctor, or merchant, but as a great man; every inch a man, gentleman, a Christian.

This armor seems rather old, seeing how the world has progressed in warfare. But do we consider that satan uses the same weapons he did centuries ago and that nothing else but this armor will save us? Inspiring thought. Let us get this armor on. If we have not, and we cannot fail.

Let us look at a few texts in conclusion (Rev. 6:2), "And I saw and behold a white horse; and he that sat on him had a bow; and a crown was given unto him; and he went forth conquering and to conquer." Here we find in this vision, Christ revealed to the writer as sitting on a white horse.

In this kingdom all things will be white, which is emblematic of truth and righteousness. A man who has a weak will has weak eyes, but a man with a strong will has quite a different eye. This Faithful One who sits on the white horse has eyes that were as a flame of fire. Can we imagine how terrible a will power he possesses? Do you think he is sitting carelessly and stoop shouldered on his horse? I think not. Rather he is sitting erect and fearless. It is said a man cannot aspire if he looks down, for the spirit that does not soar is destined to grovel. If we look down our shoulders stoop; if our thoughts look down our character bends. It is only when we hold our heads up that the body becomes erect, and as our thoughts go up our lives will become erect. Then being enshrouded with the white garment our lights will shine forth bright as the sun, and cannot help being seen by the world.

Christ carries a bow, so there must be arrows. "Thine arrows are sharp in the heart of the king's enemies: whereby the people fall under thee." Our Conqueror brings good tidings and says, "Thy God reigneth!" But be ever on the lookout, Oh! Overcomer! and "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." Determine to overcome and you shall receive a crown. Then you can say, "But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

Being a conqueror over all things in this present world, the victory is won. Now for the reward which is another display of God's Omnipotent, All wise power. For we read, "To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame and am sit down with my Father in his throne;" also, "Will I give to eat of the tree of life," and keepeth my works unto the end to him will I give "power over the nations." And lastly, "He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God, and he shall be my son."

In Daniel 12:3, "And they that be wise (or teachers, marginal rendering) shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever." Readers, determine with the help of God to become an overcomer, a conqueror, who will shine as the brightness of the firmament and shine as the stars for ever and ever.

THE COVENANTER'S RELATION TO GOD AND THE CHURCH

F. M. Howell

Paul says, "As many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." The sense in which baptized believers "put on Christ" is not only that they become members of Christ's body, the Church, and put on the divine inclination and Christian zeal, but also that they take on them the name of Christ, and become adopted children and heirs of God. It is while in the divine institution of the church that the many members pass their trial of probation (Jas. 1:12; I. Peter 4:12), and should make a spiritual growth in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord unto a perfect man (Eph. 4:13; I Peter 2:2). Those repentant believers who pass through this figurative birth from their watery grave, become new creatures spiritually in Christ (II. Cor. 5:17), and while in this probationary body should overcome the temptations incident to the world and the flesh; for it is only "he that overcometh shall inherit all things." For the evils to be overcome see Gal. 5:19-21; Rev. 21:7,8.

The prophet Isaiah says God's people, the Church, will be called "The city of the Lord, the Zion of the Holy One of Israel" (60:14), and the prophet Micah, in prophesying of the Church, says it is as a woman in travail until the time that she has brought forth (4:10:5:3). Paul says, "We brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise," and he says Jerusalem which is above (meaning the Church triumphant), is the mother of us all (Gal. 4:22-30).

We find, then, that all who have been begotten of the Spirit with the word of truth (Jas. 1:18), and have made the proper development while in this probationary body by being overcomers at death, in the resurrection will be born of the Spirit, born from among the dead, with spiritual bodies, with God their Father, the Church their mother, and Jesus their Elder Brother.

Some reader may not understand how the church can be the mother of the saints, and also the bride of Christ. The church has two phases—the present or probational phase called the "church militant," and the future or eternal phase called the "church triumphant." It is also referred to in regard to the divine institution as a body within which are many members, and at other times the members are called the church. The church militant is the divine institution within which body the called ones, the Spirit begotten ones, pass their trial of probation and spiritual growth; whereas the church triumphant refers to the future state of that body which will contain the aggregation of only such members of the church militant as are overcomers at death, and have been born of the Spirit at the resurrection. The church militant contains all who profess the name of Christ, both good and bad, the wheat and the tares, of which Jesus said, "Let both grow together until the harvest" (Matt. 13:30). This is the "great house" of which Paul said, "But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some to honor, and some to dishonor" (II Tim. 2:20) This is the body in which Paul said we do groan, being burdened (II. Cor. 5:1). It is "eternal" because it and its members will continue forever; and it is in the "heavens" because this house, this tabernacle, this kingdom, is composed of righteous people, and its dominion and greatness is above all nations. This is the heavenly Jerusalem, the house over which the son will rule, of which Paul said, "But Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end" (Heb. 3:6). This is the "Jerusalem which is above," which Paul said (referring to it as a divine institution) "is the mother of us all, the offspring of which is the "bride," the "Lamb's wife," the "holy city, New Jerusalem," which John saw in vision, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband (Rev. 20:3). This will occur after the elect have been gathered together by the angels from "the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven" (Mark 13:27). "And the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee And the Lord shall be King over all the earth" (Zech. 14:5,9).

May the great Mediator of the new covenant assist all true searchers after truth to make their "calling and election sure."

WHY I AM NOT FOR TURNEY AND CARTER

John Remer

After reading a few copies of the paper that is edited by Samuel C. Carter, of Minn., I am now going to write an article for The Restitution, giving my reasons for not indorsing the new Christian party movement.

In the first place, what the paper claims would be enough to convince a student of the Bible that God had no hand in it. It claims to be the Holy City, New Jerusalem, coming down from God, and that it has the lamb, slain from the foundation of the world, and that he has with him the hundred and forty and four thousand that were redeemed from among men, spoken of in Rev. 14:1-4. If this be the fact why not have Jesus for President and Moses for Vice President, instead of having Turney and Carter at the head of the ticket? I am one that is free from sect and party, and expect to remain so. The Son hath made me free; and while I read that God said that he would send them a strong delusions, that they all might believe a lie and be condemned. I think that the election this fall will prove that somebody is condemned.

The reason that I do not think that that movement will take sufficient to elect a President is because the sects are so far apart and are so much divided. Another reason is the Holy City that John saw coming down from God out of heaven, will not need a President. Another reason is, electing presidents is man's way, and God has said, "My thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are my ways your ways. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways." He was speaking to the rulers among men in Isaiah's time (Isa. 55).

Then another reason for not believing in the movement is this: Jesus never said, "Fear not little flock, for it is the Father's will that you get posession of the kingdom by ballot," but he said, "Fear not little flock, for it is the Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

My greatest reason for not participating in the church movement at Howard Lake, Minn., is that Daniel and Paul both claim that the death shall arise and take an active part in Kingdom affairs; and I will guarantee that Carter and Turney nor any one in all Howard Lake have ever seen any one that has been raised from the dead. Paul says the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible.

Have any of the people at Howard Lake heard the trumpet sound. If it sounded four years ago why haven't some of old Missouri's sufferers heard it by this time?

Now there are several more reasons for not believing in the movement, and they are Bible reasons, but I will not mention them, as it would make this article too long. But the Lord said, while here on earth, that there would be anti-Christs; and when they shall say, "Lo, here is Christ, or lo, there is Christ," believe it not; for as the lightning cometh from the east and shineth unto the west, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be. When he comes all will know it, just as we all know that it is daylight. Brethren, be not deceived. Let us watch and pray, for I believe the time is here for the prophecy of James to be fulfilled. "Ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted and your garments are motheaten, your gold and silver is cankered and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasures together for the last days" (Jas. 5:1-5).

Don't you think those that run the steam rollers in Chicago and Baltimore in the last two national conventions are described in this third verse? "Behold, the hire of the laborers, who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth, and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth." The Lord of Sabaoth was represented at these conventions by Bryan, at Baltimore, and Roosevelt at Chicago. You know that when God wanted to oppose a fraud he took a man that knew all about the fraud, Martin Luther was a monk. See what he did. He didn't fear the priest, either.

HOW TO PLEASE GOD

E. W. Knapp

So then they that are in the flesh cannot please God (Rom. 8:8).

As we are fleshly mortals, how can we please God? By walking not after the flesh, but after the Spirit; for with the mind we serve the law of God; but with the flesh the law of sin. The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, makes us free from the law of sin and death. For what the law could not do in that is was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit. For they that are in the flesh cannot please God.

Then it seems that if we walk after the Spirit we will please God. We that have intelligence enough to know good from evil, if we always do the right, we will walk after the Spirit, and to be spiritually minded is life and peace; but minding the flesh is death.

What is minding the flesh? Loving the world and the things of the world, being led by the spirit of lust, of envy; doing things to please man. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. We cannot love the world and love God too. God manifested his love towards us in that he sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. We cannot live through him unless we accept him, and become related to him. We can become related to Christ in only one way; and that is in believing in him and being initiated into his body by baptism. Then we become heirs with him to the promise that God made to Abraham. We must have faith; for without faith it is impossible to please God; we must show our faith by our works; we must have hope; must endure temptation, must seek for glory, and honor, and immortality, by doing well at all times. If we do these things he will give us eternal life at the coming of Christ. Do his will, and you will become a brother of Christ (Mark 3:35). Christ was born of the will of God (John 1:13). David served his own generation by the will of God. Paul was an apostle of Jesus Christ by the will of God. And Jesus Christ gave himself for our sins that he might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God. Paul commands us to do the will of God from the heart: Abstain from fornication; defraud not a brother; suffer for righteousness' sake, for in the sight of God it is better to suffer for well doing than for evil; live not in the flesh to the lusts of men, in every thing give thanks, for this is the will of God. Only those that do his will receive the promise, "He that doeth the will of God abideth forever." It pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe. A simple rule to follow and which will please God is Do right.

The greatest enemy is one who would shut our eyes to danger.

When doing for God, we may trust him to care for us.

To prevent the committing of even one sin is a great thing.

History is of great value, furnishing examples for our following as well as for our warning.

The wise heed warnings, and thus turn aside the danger which threatened.

Think high thoughts, achieve great deeds, live good lives.

God warns in order to save.

Have three things always present in your mind; what you were what you are, and what you will be.—St. Bernard.

Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done, whether you like it or not.

Loving an enemy not only changes our attitude toward him, but is very likely to change his attitude toward us. Many an enemy is transformed into a friend by no power but the alchemy of love.

That day is best wherein we give
A thought to others' sorrow;
forgetting self, we learn to live.
And lessons born of kindly deeds
Make golden our tomorrow.

EDITORIAL

The article in last week's Restitution entitled "Similar Types," slipped through the editor's hands uncredited. As many will suspect by its style, Bro. F. M. Howell, one of our pleasing and able scribes, was its author.

We have received $1.50 from Ella R. Gates. No post office or state is given, so we cannot credit her. Will she kindly supply this information.

The Power of Prayer—If you have a dish of sand and there are particles of iron in it, you would feel for them with the finger in vain. But take a magnet and sweep through it, and how would that draw to itself the most invisible particles by the mere power of attraction! The unthankful heart, like the finger in the sand, discovers no mercies. But let the thankful heart sweep through the day, and as the magnet finds the iron, so it will find in every hour some heavenly blessings; only the iron in God's sand is gold.

Manner of Preaching—A lady, recently, says Bro. Schamburg, in giving her views of the preaching of a minister to whom she had listened several times, said, "I thought it was the business of the minister to feed the sheep. This man don't feed us; he only throws clubs and stones at us; and sends us, bleating and hungry, home." Many ministers might gather a useful hint from this as to the proper mode of dealing with the flock of Christ. Harshness, severity, fault-finding, accomplish but little good in the family, the church, or the world. True, it is the pastor's duty to admonish and rebuke, to correct error and reform sin; but always in the spirit of the Master. A scolding minister never yet succeeded in anything but in scattering the flock and weakening his hold upon the affections of his people.

An Extreme Rebuked—From our youth we have heard Russellites and Restorationists of all kinds quote Acts 3:21 eloquently, sincerely, and repeatedly to prove a restitution without limits and conditions. Such an extreme construction of language, such an exhibition of ignorance, deserves kindly but firm rebuke. Anyone with a smattering knowledge of Greek knows that Apokatastasis here translated "restitution" would be satisfied by the rendering "due accomplishment" (of the prophecies, that is), and so merely sends us back to what "God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Brother, read this text as translated in The Revised Version, think about it awhile, and quit using it recklessly.

Turkey Now Faces Civil War—A message from a correspondent at Constantinople by Marconi Transatlantic Wireless, August 8th, discusses the situation in Turkey which, he says, has become increasingly grave in the last twenty-four hours. The text of the message follows:

"The committee of union and progress, which seeks to set up a rival parliament, may even utilize the dethroned Abdul Hamid for their purposes.

"The men who pulled the now half mad despot from his throne are quite capable of using him as a pawn in their present fight against the government. Should the committee adhere to its threat and summon the late ruler of their country elsewhere, it will naturally go further and complete the constitutional usage by forming a cabinet and proclaiming a Sultan.

"Abdul Mamid is ready at hand—a hopeless prisoner in the power of those who today threaten to plunge Turkey into the throes of civil war. Were he taken from his villa prison and proclaimed Caliph, Europe would be treated to the spectacle of two reigning sultans and two governments in power simultaneously in the Ottoman Empire.

"Many Turks of the old as opposed to the young school who still believe in Abdul look upon him as the rightful ruler. These are not without a certain amount of reason on their side, for the sacred law of the Moslems decrees that there can be but one Padesha—a sultan cannot be chosen while his predecessor is still alive."

CORRESPONEDNCE

Dear Brother Huggins:

Perhaps you think we come too often. I think those who can meet from week to week with those of like precious faith can hardly realize how far from home and kindred we who are isolated feel. We realize what the old Scotch song means:

I am far frae my hame,
An I'm weary afterwhiler
For my longed for hame coming
An my Fathers welcome smile.

I cannot tell you how much the Restitution is to me. I always read the editorials and letters first and imagine I am having a little visit with brethren.

You said July 21st was a day of rejoicing in Cleveland: Say rather to all the faithful, for when one is born into the household of faith, does not every member rejoice? And more than this, there's joy in heaven also over every one who comes into our Lord Jesus, the Anointed One. We who are here have been reading Brother Maple's articles with great interest, wondering just where he stood; and when we heard of his obedience to the word we thanked God and took courage. Dear Bro. Maple, our Lord has honored you so much in giving you the privilege of sacrificing something of place and position for him. May God bless you abundantly and may you abound more and more in his work.

May our Father's blessing rest upon all the faithful; and may we, soon, very soon meet face to face in his glorious kingdom.

Your sister in the Lord,
FLORA A. WOOD

"THE PRAYER OF FAITH SHALL SAVE"

By the kind permission of the Editor of the Tower we are able to give our readers this able article from the pen of Dr. Taylor:

A few weeks ago, while reading the Diaglott, I noticed that the word translated sick in James 5:14 was astheneo, a word derived from a-sthenes, meaning without strength (a, without; sthenos, strength). From this is derived asthenia, a word much used in medicine. From my knowledge of medicine I knew that a person might be asthenic without being diseased or sick, so I looked up the word rendered sick in the 15th verse, and this I found to be kammo, a word which occurs only three times, and means, "to labor, suffer from fatigue." The other passages are Heb. 12:3 and Rev. 2:3; which Young's translation renders as follows: "For consider him who endured such gainsaying from the sinners to himself, that ye may not be wearied (kammo) in your souls—being faint." (Heb. 12:3) "And thou didst bear and hast endurance and because of my name hast toiled and not been weary (kammo)." (Rev. 2:3) These passages would indicate that it was the weary and weak in faith who was told to call for the elders, and not the one suffering from disease. There are other words which mean sick, such as nosos, meaning sickness, unsoundness, disease; echo kakos, meaning to be ill.

These two words are never used to denote moral or spiritual sickness, while asthenous in its various forms is so used, and while it is frequently rendered sick in the common version, it is never rendered sick in Young's translation, and the revised version has the number of times reduced.

I also looked up the word healed, and found that there are three words rendered healed, viz., (1) therapeuo, meaning to attend to, heal, cure, sozo, to make sound or whole; iaomai, meaning to heal. This last word is the one used by James, and it has also the significance of saved, as the following passage will show: Matt. 13:15, "For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed, lest at any time they should see with their eyes and hear with their ears and should understand with their heart and should be converted and I should heal (iaomai) them." (See also Acts 28:27, 28; Luke 4:18) "The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the Gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal (iaomai) the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised." Jno. 12:40. "He has blinded their eyes and hardened their heart, that they should not see with their eyes nor understand with their heart, and be converted and should heal (iaomai) them."

Acts 10:38. "How God anointed Jesus of Nazareth with the Holy Spirit and with power, who went about doing good and healing (iaomai) all that were oppressed of the devil." I Pet. 2:24. "Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we being dead to sins should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed (iaomai).

These passages can be applied only in a moral or spiritual sense, while therapeuo is never applied in such a sense but always relates to a cure of a physical disease.

As examples of the use of astheneo, I quote the following: Matt. 8:17. "That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities (astheneia) and bare our sickness (noso). "Matt. 26; 41. "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing but the flesh is weak (astheneia)." Rom. 4:19, "And being not weak (astheneo) in faith, he considered not his own body now dead, when he was about an hundred years old, neither yet the deadness of Sarah's womb." Rom. 5:6, "For when we were yet without strength (asthenes) in due time Christ died for the ungodly." Rom. 6:19, "I speak after the manner of men, because of the infirmity (astheneia) of your flesh: for as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity unto iniquity; even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness." Rom. 8:3, "For what the law could not do in that it was weak (astheneo) through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin condemned sin in the flesh." Rom. 8:26. "Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities (astheneia), for we know not what we should pray for as we ought; but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." Rom. 14:1, 2, "Him that is weak (astheneo) in faith receive ye, but not to doubtful disputations. For one believeth that he may eat all things; another who is weak (astheneo) eateth herbs." I Cor. 8:11,12, "And through thy knowledge shall the weak (astheneo) brother perish for whim Christ died? But when ye sin so against the brethren and whom Christ died? But when ye sin so against the brethren and wound their weak (asthenes) conscience ye sin against Christ." Heb. 4:15, "For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with a feeling of our infirmities (astheneia), but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin."

Nosos is the word most commonly used to denote sickness or disease and occurs in the same verse in contrast to astheneia, viz, Matt. 8:17, "That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias, the prophet, Himself took our infirmities (astheneia) and bare our sickness (nosos)."

From the foregoing I would conclude that James referred to Christians who had become weak in faith, or, to use a common expression, had "backslidden." This is indicated in verse 16, "faults" being translated from paraptoma, meaning a falling away.

I hope I have made myself clear. The following is a more literal translation of Jas. 5:15-16: "Is any weak among you, let him call for the elders of the Church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the wearied one. And the Lord shall raise him up, and though he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him. Confess your fallings away one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

BAPTISM

J. J. Schamburg

1. It is called a washing (Acts 22:16 Eph. 5:26). Now if we would be clean we must wash.

2. It symbolizes (and points forward to) the resurrection (Rom. 6:5). Would we teach a resurrection of the dead? Then let us show our faith in it by obedience.

3. After we are baptized we may receive "the gift of the Holy Spirit" (Acts 2:38; 19:6).

4. By obeying it from the heart (Rom. 6) we may escape the "wrath to come" (Matt. 3:7; Luke 3:7).

5. By being baptized we fulfill all righteousness (Matt. 3:15).

6. Jehovah always speaks his approval on our obedience in baptism, if we obey heartily (Luke 3:21-22).

7. By being baptized we put on Christ (Gal. 3:27).

8. The ark was a figure of baptism and it saved, so "doth baptism," says Peter (I Peter 3:21).

9. Paul was told to be baptized washing away his sins (Acts 22:16).

10. We don't commence holy living till after we have obeyed in baptism (Luke 3:12-14).

11. The new life begins then for we are raised to walk—says Paul—in "newness of life" (Romans sixth chapter).

12. After it we rejoice over sins forgiven (Acts 8:38; 16:33-34).

13. In and through being baptized we "glorify" Jehovah (Luke 7:29).

14. If we refuse to be baptized we reject the counsel of God against ourselves (Luke 7:30).

16. Repentence and baptism are sure to procure remission of sins (Acts 2:38; Mark 1:4; Luke 3:3; Acts 13:24; 19:4).

17. We cannot come into saving contact with the blood of Jesus which "cleanseth from all sin, unless we are "baptized unto his death" (Rom. 6:3). Hence it is absolutely necessary that we be baptized.

18. Israelitish bondage was typical of sin, and was blessedly left behind when Israel was baptized unto Moses. These things, says Paul, were "our (N. T. Christians) example" (I Cor. 10:6). So at baptism we leave sin behind and praise God, we too (as Israel), start for the promised land—the "new earth."

THE TRUTH DEFENDED—12

An Ex-Methodist Pleads for the Truth

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

Now one more point. We were taught the wicked would be cast into a lake of fire and burn forever, that hell is to be eternal. Hell will be destroyed in the second death. Is any thing destroyed and yet not destroyed? Now let us use our reason and also the Guide, the word of God, on this subject, and see what we discover.

Did it ever appear strange to you that a wicked man should die, go to hell, and then thousands of years after be brought back and judged to see what place he belongs? Does it not seem as if God was doing a hard thing to send into torment those who rejected him, and let them there burn for ever and ever, when he says himself that man is evil from his youth up? You say Yes, but this is our reasoning; we have the word to prove that such will be burned up, destroyed, done away with, and not tormented forever.

The word hell is found in our English Bible, but the word is translated, and in the original is found in almost every case to mean grave; and as used in the Bible it never means the kind of a hell we have believed. It means the same as the old Saxon word (a place where the good or bad reposed together in a state of unconsciousness), the grave, or death state. In the New Testament the word translated hell in the original is hades, a place of darkness. In the Old Testament the corresponding word is sheol, meaning grave.

Let the wicked be ashamed, and let them be silent in the grave (sheol) (Psalms 31:17). For thou will not leave my soul in hell (sheol, grave), neither will thou suffer thine Holy one to see corruption (Pasims 14:10). This is spoken of Christ, his soul was in the grave three days. We know Christ was not in hell, was he? The sorrows of death compassed me about and the pains of hell (sheol, grave), got hold upon me; I found trouble and sorrow. Then Jonah prayed unto the Lord his God out of the fishes belly and said, I cried by reason of mine affliction unto the Lord, and he heard me out of the belly of hell (margin, grave) (Jonah 2:18). And thou Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven shall be brought down to hell (hades, grave); for if the mighty works which have ben done in thee had ben done in Sodom it would have remained until this day (Matt. xi: 23). Now, no trace is found of the city of Capernaum. It was destroyed, brought down to hell (hades, grave).

In the parable of Lazarus and the rich man we read: And in hell (hades) he lifted up his eyes, being in torment and seeth Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom (Luke 16:23). Christ spoke to the rulers in parables and this is one of them. Hell or hades that Christ speaks of here, represents the Jews in their trodden down condition: they are destroyed as a nation, and as hades means that which is in darkness, so this is their state today. They were like the rich man, the gospel was preached to them they considered the gentiles as dogs; but they died as a nation and they are buried and tormented among the nations of the earth and the gentiles are carried by adoption into Abraham's bosom; so we find nothing here to give us the idea of the hell of our past teachings.

And I say also unto thee, Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell (hades) shall not prevail against it (Matt. 16:18). Parkhurst says the gates of hades may always be allusive to the form of the Jewish sepulches, which were large caves with a narrow mouth or entrance, many of which are to be found in Judea (Greek Lexicon).

WHAT IS GOD'S PURPOSE WITH MAN?

L. S. Bronson

God's first purpose with man was to subject him to law in order to form character. For without law no character, good or bad, can exist. "Where no law is there is no transgression" (Rom. 4:15).

His second purpose with man is obedience. "Though he (Christ) were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered" (Heb. 5:8).

"Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice and to hearken than the fat of rams" (I Sam. 15:22).

God's third purpose with man is service. "Ye shall walk after your God and fear him and keep his commandments, and obey his voice, and ye shall serve him and cleave unto him" (Deut. 13:4); "Oh come let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our maker" (Psalms 95:6).

The fourth thought in the mind of God in his purpose with man is character building. The material which God desires to enter into the spiritual life of man consists at least of three elements: Crucification of self; giving of self in service; and denying of self.

First, the crucifiction of self. "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts" (Gal. 5:24).

"But God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world" (Gal. 6:14). A complete reparation is here shown.

The second element in the building of spiritual manhood is giving up of self. "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service" (Rom. 12:1). "Honor the Lord with thy substance and with the first fruits of all thine increase" (Prov. 3:9).

The third element God's purpose for man in spiritual life is the denying of self. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world" (Titus 2:11-12).

"And he said to them all, if any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me" (Luke 9:23).

The fourth element is worship and exaltation. "Exalt ye the Lord our God and worship at his footstool, for he is holy" (Pasims 99:5).

"Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord. Praise ye the Lord and give thanks unto his name" (Psalms 150:6).

I. Character building.
II. Obedience.
III. Crucifixion.
IV. Giving.
V. Denial of Self.
VI. Worship.
VII. Reward. (Rev. 2:17).

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Victory

"Now thanks be unto that God who always leads us forth to triumph with the Annointed One, and who diffuses by us the fragrance of the knowledge of Him in every place" (literal translation of II. Cor. 2:14).

When you are forgotten or neglected or purposely set at naught and you smile inwardly, glorifying in the insult or the oversight because thereby counted worthy to suffer for Christ—that is victory.

When your good is evil spoken of, when your wishes are crossed, your taste offended, your advice disregarded, your opinions ridiculed and you take it all in patient loving silence—that is victory.

When you are content with any food, any raiment, any climate, any society, any solitude, any interruption by the will of God—that is victory.

When you can lovingly and patiently bear with any disorder, any irregularity, any unpunctuality, or any annoyance—that is victory.

When you can stand face to face with waste, folly, extravagance, spiritual insensibility, and endure it all as Jesus endured it—that is victory.

When, like Paul, you can throw all your suffering on Jesus, thus converting it into a means of knowing His overcoming grace, and can say from a surrendered heart: "Most gladly, therefore do I take pleasure in infirmities in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake"—that is victory (II. Cor. 12:7-11).

To love equally as much the grace that comes through being "instructed how to be hungry" and to suffer, as you love the faith required to know how to be "full" and to abound in health—this is victory (Phil. 4:12).

When death and life are both alike to you through Christ, and to do His perfect will, you delight not more in one than in the other—that is victory, for, through Him you may become able to say: "Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death" (Phil. 1:20; I. Cor. 15:54).

The perfect victory is to "put on the Lord Jesus Christ," and thus to triumph over one's self (Rom. 13:14).

In all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us" (Rom. 8:37)—Selected by Ada Drew, Dixon, Ill.

WHEN JESUS COMES

When Jesus comes to earth again (Jno. 14:3),
In glory with His angel bands (Matt. 16:27),
The age (not world) comes to an end (Matt. 13:40)
And restitution times begin (Acts 3:21.)

Then dead in Christ will live again (I Thess. 3:16),
And living ones in Him be changed (I Cor. 15:51),
Like Christ their Lord the saints will be (I Jno. 3:2),
And live through all eternity Mk. 10:30; Lk. 18:30).

They'll be as glorious as the sun (Matt. 13:43),
And like the angels go and come (Matt 22:30);
They'll come and go as does the wind (Jno. 3:8),
And like their Lord, cannot sin (Heb. 4:15; I Jno. 3:9).

They then will know as they are known (I Cor. 13:12),
With endless life they will be crowned (Jas. 1:12);
They'll have the power of their Lord (Jno. 14:12);
And judge the world by Jesus' word (Jno. 12:48).

Joint heirs with Christ on earth they'll reign (Rev. 5:10),
Over nations of every name (Rev. 2:26);
With rod of Iron they will rule (Rev. 2:27),
Of glory of God will earth be full (Num. 14:21).

The sword and spear will be no more (II Cor. 2:18; Mic. 4:3),
All nations will forget their wars (Psa. 46:9; Isa. 2:2);
The nation that will not obey (Isa. 60:12),

Will be punished without delay (Zech. 14:17).

Upon their land will fall no rain (Zech. 14:17),
And saints will bind their kings with chains (Psa. 148:8);
In the land where it never rains (Zech. 14:18).
They'll suffer agonizing pains Zech. 14:18-19).

The city where the saints will dwell (Rev. 21:9-10),
Will be the new Jerusalem (Rev. 21:1);
For it the tree of life will grow (Ezk. 47:12).
River of life from it will flow (Rev. 22:2).

The law from it will then go forth (Isa. 2:3),
To east, to west, to south, to north (Mic. 4:2);
All nations to the Lord will turn Psa. 72: 11, 17),
And law of God they all will learn (Psa. 86:9).

The cow and bear together eat (Isa. 11:7),
And straw will be the lion's meat (Isa. 65:25);
The weaned child shall put his hand (Isa. 11:8).
Upon the cockatrice's den (Isa. 11:8).

On hold of asp suckling shall play (Isa. 11:8),
A child shall lead wild beast to play (Isa. 11:6);
All evil beasts shall cease to be (Ezk. 34:25),
While death of infants will not be (Isa. 65:20).

These blessings are for they who love (II Tim. 4:8).
The Lord's return from heaven above (I Thess. 4:16),
And are looking for Christ to come (Heb. 9:27-28).
Then to them He will say, "Well done" (Matt. 25:21).

PEACE

We are living in a time when strife and turmoil seem to be ruling in every imaginable way. Nations have been and are at variance with each other. It is sometimes the case with individuals. There are some who are always ready to make it unpleasant for others. The more we think of this and see it, the more we long for peace. Peace never harms anyone. Peace never makes trouble.

When Jesus was out in the ship with his disciples, a great wind storm came up, and the waves dashed into the ship. It so frightened the disciples, that they went to the master, who was asleep, and wakened him. They cried unto him "Master, carest thou not that we perish?" Jesus arose and said to the sea, "Peace, be still."

The wind ceased and there was a great calm. The change from storm to that of peace was so great they wondered what manner of man he was, that the wind and sea should obey him.

At the time of the birth of Jesus there was with the angel, a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God and saying "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace good wil toward men." There is a time coming, and we hope it will be soon, when we will have peace on earth and good will toward men.

God will not always allow the state of things to exist, as it is now. Many people will have to transform their lives, before they can be acceptable to have their share in the Kingdom of God.

Paul said that God is not the author of confusion but of peace." How happy we are to know that God, who is our Creator and Father, is the author, the originator of peace.

David said in Ps. 34, "Depart from evil and do good, seek peace and pursue it." What good advice this is for all. If we cease doing evil we will be sure to do good and by so doing, we seek peace.

Paul said in Heb. 12:14, "Follow peace with all men and holiness without which no man shall see the Lord." This shows the great importance of living peaceably with one another. It is not always easy to do this. It is very necessary to follow peace for without peace no man shall see the Lord.

The work of righteousness shall be peace, and the effect of righteousness quietness and assurance for ever (Is. 32:17). "And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace" (Jas. 3:18) "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God" (Matt. 5:9). Notice the beautiful harmony in the words of Isaiah, James and Jesus. O, how sweet and comforting it is to know that our God is the God of peace! He has shown us how we may have peace—by working for it every day. We cannot receive it without working for it. To those who do not make the effort, there is a great warning. Without peace no man shall see the Lord. To those who strive, there is a reward, "The fruit of righteousness is soon in peace of them that make peace." Then comes the blessing of the peacemakers, "They shall be called the children of God."

Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ: to whom be glory for ever and ever" (Heb. 12:20-21). Let us sing praises to God for the resurrection of Jesus from the dead. He is the prince of peace. It was prophesied so, many years before his birth. It is through him that we may obtain our future life. How blessed it will be to reign with him in the Kingdom of God.

Paul said, "For the Kingdom of God is not meat and drinks; but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit, for he that in these things serveth Christ is acceptable to God, and approved of men" (Rom. 14: 17-18).

Jesus said, Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid (John 14:27). "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee" (Is. 26:3). "And the peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus. Finally brethren, whatsoever things are honest; whatsoever things are just; whatsoever things are pure; whatsoever things are lovely; whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue: and if there be any praise, think on these things" (Phil. 4:7-8-9).

RELIGIOUS CHANGES

The Beginning and Development of Orthodox Theology

By Wallace Mason

As we draw aside the veil of antiquity we get some startling developments from the regions of Babylon and Egypt. Professor Raport says in his history of Egypt: "We learn that the Egyptians believed even at the earliest times, in a resurrection from the tomb, a day of judgment and a future state of rewards and punishment." I again quote from early Egyptian records: "God cannot be figured in stone; he is not to be seen in the sculptured images—neither works nor offerings can be made to him, and he cannot be made to come forth from his secret place. The place where he liveth is unknown; he is not to be found in inscribed shrines; there existeth no habitation which can contain him, and thou canst not conceive his form in thy heart. God is one and alone and none other exists with him. God is the one, the one who hath made all things. God is a spirit, a hidden spirit, the spirit of spirits, great spirit of the Egyptians the divine spirit."

These quotations from early Egyptian records take us back into very close touch with the people who came through the deluge, and who taught their descendants a knowledge of the true God. But also, men soon began to neglect their teachings and proceeded to form theories and systems of their own, as men have been ever prone to do in all ages. It was not long after the flood when men began to deify their great ancestors, and it was thus that the idea ultimately worked out that all men were immortal beings at their birth. But this idea never was taught by the Egyptian priests so far as I have been able to discover. That was a much latter day development, as I will show latter. Although some persons in their enthusiasm give credit to the Egyptians for having believed and taught that man is an inherently immortal being; Amelia B. Edwards, in a work entitled, "Pharaoh's Fellahs and Explorers," says: "Now it is a most remarkable and interesting truth, that the orient Egyptians were the first, the very first people of antiquity, who believed in the immortality of the soul. This is a cardinal fact which we must never forget to place to their credit. But they also believed in the immortality of the rest of the man, in the literal resurrection of the body, and in the ultimate reunion of body, soul, intelligence, name, shadow, and Ha." If Edwards had been a little less enthusiastic in his endeavors to give credit to the Egyptians for their great discovery of the immortality of the soul, and had weighed his authorities a little more carefully, he would have seen that they did not believe or teach the inherent immortality of man, and even if they had, it is very questionable whether they were the "very first" to deify their ancestors, who were saved in the ark, which was beginning to work out ultimately into inherent immortality.

Long before the Egyptians came into existence, Eve in the garden was deceived by the serpent with this statemnt: "Ye shall not surely die." God had said that if they transgressed they would die; the serpent said they would not die: which one spoke the truth? and on whose side are those who affirm man at birth is an immortal being? Professor Maspers, one of the greatest authorities on ancient Egypt says: "The Egyptians thought that life once begun might go on indefinitely, if not accidently stopped short. Why should it cease of itself? And so men did not die in Egypt, they were assassinated. . . . . Often the murder was of the unseen unseen world. . . . . It was imperative that during that last sleep which for them was fraught with such terror, the flesh should neither decompose, nor turn to dust, that it should be free from offensive odors and secure from predatory worms." "The gods (who were deified men) were spared none of the anguish and none of the perils which death bestowed so plentifully upon men. Their bodies suffered change and gradually perished until nothing was left of them. Their souls, like human souls, were only the representatives of their bodies and gradually became extinct, if means of resisting the natural tendency to decay were not found in time." The careful embalming of the body was an imperative necessity to the continued existence of the soul, and not only this, but food, or a semblance of it, had to be left with the dead body for the soul to feed on. All this cost money, for the bodies had to be very carefully embalmed, and the priests, like most other priests in all ages, would expect to be well paid for their services. Therefore millions of poor people died in Egypt who were not embalmed, who had no money to leave to pay for expensive services over them; therefore their souls could not continue to exist, according to Egyptian belief.

The embalming of the bodies of the dead probably originated at a very early period. They at first believed in the resurrection of the dead, and it is probable that when they began to loose faith in God's power to raise the dead from the dust (as many at the present time do), they started to embalm the bodies of the dead to preserve them and have them ready for the resurrection. In course of time the idea of the resurrection was generally lost sight of, and the priests deftly turned this operation into a necessity to preserve the life of the soul. The natural body in the Egyptian language was called Hhat, and it could be changed into a spiritual body, called Sahu, by prayer and ceremonies on the day of burial. In close connection with this stood the heart, the foundation of good and evil thoughts, called Ab, and the image or double Ha, which could move freely from place to pleace, apart from the body, after death it could dwell in the man's statue, and offerings were made to it. The soul was called Ba, and it could go to heaven and enjoy. Also, it was represented as a hum, and headed hawk and it came back to reanimate the body at the resurrection. The man had also a shadow called Hhaibit, it could separate itself from the body when alive. Another part, called the shinning one or Hhu, it is frequently represented as a mummy. They all became separated at death. They evidently all did not believe this nonsense, for we have this message left by the wife of one of the high priests in the century before Christ: "O my brother, my spouse, and my friend cease not to eat and drink, to fill thyself with wine, and to make sweet love. Enjoy each festive day, and follow thy desires. Let not care enter into thy heart, all the years that on earth thou remainest.

The underworld is a land of thick darkness. A sorrowful place for the dead. They sleep after their guise and never awake and behold their comrades. Their father and mother they know not. No yearning for their wives or their children [illegible] seek" Which [illegible] Epicurian saying [illegible] Paul) "Let us eat and drink [illegible] morrow we die." The Re[illegible] had departed, like many [illegible] from the great God of heav[illegible]

MY DAY

O Father, grant my every day may be
A day of service to mankind and Thee.
Errands on which my willing feet have trod
And words of helpfulness to others said.

No flowers upon the graves of friends I'd fling,
But words of cheer to hearts oppressed I'd bring.
Thy sweet approval of each word, to be
The light along the path that leads to Thee.

If e'er the deed of service I'm denied,
O Thou, who for mankind was crucified,
Refresh my heart with sweet humility,
And make my waiting service into Thee.

SIXTEENTH ANNUAL STATE CONFERENCE

Of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus to be Held in Oregon, Illinois, August 21-25, 1912.

The brethren of Illinois and other states, together with their friends, are cordially invited to attend the Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus which will be held in Oregon, Illinois, August 21st to 25th, inclusive.

The admonition addressed to the Hebrew brethren is equally applicable to the Church today. "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more as we see the day approaching."

As the work of the Lord, which He has entrusted to us, of far greater importance than the labor pertaining to this present world? Each individual member of the Church of God is personally responsible to perform his duty in the Master's service.

You cannot do my work—I cannot do yours; so let us meet in Oregon with the firm determination each to do his part that our united efforts may redound to the honor and glory of God.

Secretaries of local Churches are requested to bring complete reports of the year's works in their localities.

Local Conference Collectors are urged to see that the annual conference dues are paid and duly reported to the State Treasurer, Brother J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Illinois.

Ladies' Aid, Berean Societies, and Sunday schools are asked to submit reports of their respective departments.

Shall the Conference employ an evangelist next year? If so, come prepared to advise the board as to whom you wish, and as to how much you are willing to subscribe to his support.

The following ministers are expected to be present this year: Joseph Williams of Indiana; L. S. Conner of Ohio; Peter Jeffrey, S. J. Lindsay and G. Eldred Marsh of Illinois.

Board and lodging will be furnished free to all who come.

For particulars regarding train service, etc., address G. Eldred Marsh, Box 626, Oregon, Illinois, who will cheerfully furnish any information in that regard you may desire.

A complete program will be provided by this committee at the time of the Conference.

COME and help us make this meeting a success. YOU are NEEDED!

J. M. Glotfelty, E. F. Gesin, G. Eldred Marsh—Committee.

PROGRAM

Of the Twenty-fifth Annual Conference and Camp Meeting of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, August 24, September 1, 1912, Chautauqua Park, Iowa.

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus:
Greeting:

As it nears the time set for the Annual Conference, which will be held as usual at our Camp ground at Waterloo, Iowa, this year from August 24th to September 1st, inclusive, we send you this greeting and a printed program.

We invite you to be present and take part in the various meetings, and to assist in making plans for the next year's work. You should be on hand to hear the reports of officers and evangelists, and to learn how the money you have contributed to the support of the Conference has been expended.

Those who have attended the Conference heretofore and experienced the pleasure of associating with those of like precious faith in a meeting of this kind, and of listening to the word of God from the lips of those who speak, it is not necessary to urge to be present, as they know of the benefits to be derived from a meeting of this kind, but to those who have not as yet met with us, we urge upon you the necessity of partaking of these annual feasts of spiritual food, so that in the months to come we may all be better able to overcome the evils of the world and have new courage to press forward to the mark of the high calling.

Good speakers will be in attendance to preach the word. All should make a special effort to attend this meeting.

General Instructions

If our "Conference Baggageman" is at the depot when you arrive, give him your baggage checks; if he is not there bring your checks to the camp ground and give them to the president.

To reach the camp ground, you may board any one of the following street cars: Cedar Falls Interurban, East Fourth Street or Loop Get off at Chautauqua Park.

Tents will be furnished free. Bed springs or mattresses 50c each for the 10 days. Blankets and comforts 10c each per night. Beds furnished transients at 25c per night. Meals served at the dining hall at the camp ground. Letters may be addressed to you as follows: Waterloo, Iowa, Park Station.

Keep this program and bring it with you; also tablet and pencil, Bible and hymn book. Come to stay all through the meeting if possible.

For further information write O. J. Allard, Fort Dodge, Iowa.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5&7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear brethren, the work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Piercetion, Ind.

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearts allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

THE GOSPEL TRAIN

A Memorial of Bro. J. S. Hatch

The gospel train is coming, I hear it just at hand ;
I hear the car wheels moving and rumbling through the land;
I hear the bell and whistle coming around the curve,
She plying all her steam and power and straining every nerve.

O, see the gospel engine, she's heaving now in sight;
Her steam valves they are groaning, the pressure is so great;
No signal for another train to follow on the line—
O sinner, you're forever lost, if once you're left behind.

O see the engine banner, she's fluttering in the breeze;
She's sprangled in the Savior,s blood, but yet she floats with ease;
This is the gospel banner, her motto's new and old;
Salvation and repentance are burnished there in gold.

She's nearing now the station,
O sinner, don't be vain,
But come and get your ticket and be ready for the train;
The fare is cheap and all can go, the rich, the poor are there,
No second class on board this train, no difference in the fare.

I think she'll make a little halt to mood upon the line—
And give you all a chance to go, but yet she'll make her time;
She's coming around the mountains by the rivers and the lakes;
The Savior, he's on board this train 'controlling steam and brakes.

—Written for The Restitution, August 5, 1912, by R. A. Humphreys—Read 1. Cor. 12: 12-26.

MAY WE KNOW?—PART II.

Mrs. Flora A. Wood

As our attention has been called several times in different numbers of The Restitution, to prophetic time and the signs of our Lord's coming, and as there seems to be a great diversity of opinion on these subjects, it seems to me a proper and important question to ask, may we know in regard to these things ,and has our Lord given us instruction in this matter?

Note Jesus' words in Luke 21: 36. "Watch ye therefore." For what are we commanded to watch? He tells us in the thirty-first verse; The kingdom of God. And why are we to watch? He tells us again in the thirty-fourth verse; So that day may not come upon us unawares.

One more question, What are we to watch? Look at the twenty-fifth verse of the same chapter; The signs of his coming. "When ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the door."

Now do not these scriptures answer the question at the head of this article? Yes, we may know when the Lord's coming is near at hand; and more, the Lord himself has commanded us to know. Of what use would the signs of our Lord's coming be if we could not understand them or know of the times of which the scriptures speak? Paul says in I. Thess. 5: 4-5, "Ye brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief," or as our Lord says "unawares." Why? Because he has given us certain signs of his coming, and the prophets have given us the exact time of the duration of events until the sanctuary be cleansed. And I say again, these signs would be useless if we could not understand them and know when they were fulfilled.

Now let us look at some of these signs and see if they are difficult to understand when we take the word, of God to guide us, and not men's fancies, Jesus says in Luke 21:25, "There shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars, and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring." Let me digress a little here.

Suppose the planet Mars to be inhabited, and the inhabitants and the planet both are under a curse for sin. Suppose Mars was to be redeemed from this curse and the Redeemer says, "You will know when your redemption is near by certain signs I will send you." Now does it seem reasonable that all the inhabitants of Mars who were looking for redemption would be peering over on our old earth, or away to Jupiter, or up into the sun or moon for those signs? Would they not naturally and reasonably look upon their own planet for these signs? They would be nothing to the earth or Jupiter or any other world, only that one to whom they were signs. So we believe when Jesus said there would be signs in the sun, and moon, and stars, that he meant the sun, moon, and stars in our political heavens. This must be true because for six thousand years the sun, moon and stars have run their appointed courses with no change or variation. The sun has always given light by day and the moon by night. Every night for six thousand years the stars have been seen in their own place, ever turning in their own orbits. We have also direct Bible proof for this interpretation. See Is. 13, speaking of Babylon; Isa. 34:7 speaking of Egypt; Rev. 11: 19 speaking of the power in the political heaven of earth as shaken at the setting up of Christ's kingdom. For six thousand years we have seen no change in the sun, moon, and stars of the atmospheric heavens; but in the political heaven of our earth there has been constant change. Do we not see now as never before a treading down of one star by another; a scrambling for place, and a crowding out of lesser lights? Jesus says there shall be perplexity among the nations. Can we not see this being fulfilled all over the world? Are not Germany and France much perplexed as to just where they had better ally themselves? And so it is with England and our own country. Russia alone has marked out her course and is going towards the goal, turning neither to the right nor left. Are not all nations perplexed as to how to handle this question or that? This is certainly as never before a time of perplexity among them.

"And upon the earth distress." The luminaries of the political heavens are perplexed as to the best solution of the questions of the day; but among the masses of earth is distress, as witness the fearful plagues sweeping the earth, the thousands perishing for bread, the untold misery and horror of all the large cities of the world.

"The sea and the waves roaring." This cannot mean the literal sea, for even since the Lord set the bounds of the ocean and said, "Thus far shalt thou come and no farther," the sea and the waves have roared. But has there ever been a time when all the seas of people or nations have armed themselves, and muttered, and growled, and roared at each other as now? We all know of the immense and rapid firing guns invented very recently. When they are brought to bear upon the seas of people gathered together there will indeed be a "roaring" that will be felt.

Notice now another sign our Lord gives through Paul. I Thess. 5:3, "For when they (the nations) shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction shall come upon them." Are not the great peace congresses saying peace and safety, for we will arbitrate all international questions and there will be no more war among the nations. We of the light know what to look for next as coming "suddenly." A sister said to me at our Bible class not long since, "I do not think the Lord can come right away because the Jews have not gathered wealth enough in the Holy Lord to tempt the cupidity of the nations to come up to take a "spoil and a prey." It does not seem to me the saints have to wait until that time comes, for the Lord says, Pray that ye may be accounted worthy to escape this time of trouble of which the capture of Jerusalem is the end, not the beginning. The saints will certainly be gathered and prepared for their work before the Lord comes to the aid of the Jews fleeing from Jerusalem, for they are with him then (Heb. 3:13; Jude 14.)

Of course we cannot know certainly how long a time this will take, but Jesus tells us we may know when he is at the door. When one stands before our door the very next thing is the meeting of the one outside.

I have only space in this article to note a few of the signs the word of God gives us that we may know (not guess or think) that our Lord is at the door. The all wise God has given us lines of prophecy for the sole reason that we know when the sanctuary will be cleansed; and of these I will speak in another article. Brethren, was there even a time when the church of God should be clear on times and seasons as now? It is not a solemn thought that perhaps nothing intervenes between the Lord's calling and our gathering unto him? Then let us look into these things in the light of God's word and see if we cannot say in faith, "Our redemption draweth nigh."

Oh that every member of Christs' body might be drawn nearer to gether in the unity of the faith and in love!

My longing heart cries out, oh, come!
Creation groans for thee,
The weary pilgrim sighs, oh, come!
Bring immortality.

BROTHER JUDD'S INTERESTING LETTER

Dear Bro. Rothe:

"Our subject then is, "The Bible Use of the term Seed: Some Truths to be Learned from It."

Genesis is truly called the "Book of Beginnings," and the first chapter is the beginning of all beginnings connected with this wonderful earth of ours. It seems to be such a mine of inexhaustible treasure, that sometimes I feel I cannot leave these early chapters to pass on to those beyond. How can any person doubt the existence of God with so much in themselves and around them to prove the existence of a Mighty Designer, "The Lord of Hosts," wonderful in counsel and excellent in working (Isa. 28:29).

Surely it is more difficult to believe there is no God than that there is one!

Design (excellent working) runs through all God's works. God created the earth, and Isaiah tells us he created it not in vain. Another translation is, He created it not a waste. The heaven and the earth created, the land and water separated, God immediately begins to beautify the earth, and make it fit for the habitation of man.

In passing it is most helpful and important to note how beautifully the character of God is brought out incidentally. The first that he does is to clothe the naked earth with grass; the next necessary thing in all the world next to sun and dew (water being already included in the foundation of heaven and earth), for were the world's crop of grass to fail a single season, the whole earth would starve But note the reading in the margin; why did they not put it in the text if it is the correct translation? God not only provides grass but he takes care to provide "tender grass."

Two great characteristics of God are brought out in this chapter. (1) God's greatness and mighty power; (2) His tenderness—just the very points which, when combined in man, make him great. Very possibly, yes even probably this thought was in David's wonderful 23d psalm, "He maketh me to lie down in pastures of tender grass" (variorum Bible).

The next thing we notice is that God first created the forms of vegetable and animal life. And then provided for a continual supply of all by a definite basic plan as the means to that end. There is sufficient in nature to show that God was not limited to any particular method in carrying out his purpose.

While this is true, there is vastly predominating evidence to prove that he did choose that there should be definite principle by which all animal and vegetable life should be sustained, and that the method chosen was by seed. It is most interesting and instructive to notice how that subsequent to the creation of the first species of animal and vegetable life, more prominence seems to be given to the seed, than to the original creation, and little wonder, for it seems to be the master piece of God's creation, the finishing touch to everything that has life: Man, high in his own estimation, is not excepted, he, too, is the outcome of seed, though he may endeavor in many ways to hide it.

The Creator, however, is not ashamed of his handy work, and does not hesitate, by the most frequent repitition, to designate to man his true origin. This fact proved, and it is wonderfully proved. We surely have destinctive evidence of the mortal nature of the human race; for it is equally true of him as of the remainder of life upon the earth, that all seeds do not come to fruition, though quite capable of doing so under favorable conditions.

But our main reason for entering into this subject is to ascertain what Paul means by being found naked in II Cor. 5:3. It is admitted by nearly all Christians that Paul here refers to death. Some do not admit it, but it is our intention here to adopt that interpretation as we think it is correct. Before discussing verse 3 let us notice some important points in the two preceding verses. Paul's mind was a mind of strong reasoning, and forceful metaphors frequently entered into his arguments. He seemed to delight in using contrast as a fitting back ground for the better display of his subject, and the present is no exception. By a reference to a note in the variorum Bible, it will be observed that the word "house" in the first clause of first verse, is not the same in the original as in the second clause and second verse. He contrasts the tent dwelling of this tabernacle with our house which is from heaven. One is tent-like, temporary; the other house-like, permanent. There is little question, that he refers here to our present body, and the body that shall be ours. This form of language, however, does not, and we shall see, by any means indicate that we are a being separate from our body, any more than a table without legs is a table in point of fact.

There could not be a table without legs, nor are the legs by themselves a table: both features must be there, else can be no table, strictly speaking.

Let us further notice that both the earthly and the heavenly body are referred to as a building. The earthly body he calls a building, and the heavenly body he calls a building. Where does Paul get his idea?

As already pointed out, Bible writers (and by that I mean the authors of the various books of the Bible) especially New Testament writers, seem to prefer getting their illustrations from scripture than elsewhere. To my mind Paul unmistakably gets his idea from the book of Genesis, the book from which much of his teaching is gleaned. Let us turn, then, with him to Gen. 2:22 (margin) and there we find in Hebraw, "builded he a woman." What can more aptly describe the growth of a seed in either the vegetable or animal kingdom than that term "building?" It is surely like a building, being framed together. We can with the Psalmist exclaim that we, yes we, ourselves are fearfully and wonderfully made. We have it, then, on pretty good authority, that God "builded" a woman and not something to put the woman into. It is a remarkable fact that if the reverse is the case, we have ample description in the Bible of the house, but none at all of its occupant. Has that never struck you as strange?

To further illustrate my thought let me turn to I Cor. xv, where Paul wrote more fully on the subject of death and resurrection. Paul here takes wheat as an illustration, and the language is so emphatic that it seems almost incredible to suppose that he does not mean its application to be actual.

He says, "Thou sowest not that body that shall be but bare (naked) grain God giveth it a body, to every seed a body of its own" (R. V.) Could language be plainer? The bare (naked) grain of wheat, the wheat seed and not the body, but God gave it a body. First, the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear. Then Paul goes into rapture of the wonderful varieties and differing glories of the different bodies and we can ourselves extend it ad lib. The body of the acron is the oak, and so on with all manner of seed, the lily, the fir tree, the pansy; so Paul links the thought to the animal kingdom ,each body differing in glory after its kind, then carries it on to the celestial bodies, meaning, no doubt, angels or heavenly beings, to whom God has given bodies of varying grandeur.

Now for a further thought, and then we must leave the subject for a time. Paul says, "So is the resurrection of the dead." Do you believe it to be metaphor only? I am inclined to take its application as actual, more than is generally thought, bearing in mind, of course, the difference of subject —the vegetable and human I Pet. 1:23(Rv.), "Having been begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever." Many of us are agreed that we are begotten now and born at resurrection, and there certainly seems much to favor the thought. We cannot be begotten without seed, and we cannot be born without that seed developing into a body, the natural process taking time, while the spiritual will be in a moment.

It is more than we can comprehend, but is there not much food for thought? Perhaps interchange of thought may be helpful both in building up and pulling down. May we be ready and willing for either process.

R. H. JUDD.

"THEY SAY"

S. Roxana Wince

Who says? Why Jameson, Fausett and Brown, the Commentators. Well, what do they say? Anything out of the common line of orthodox teaching? I should think so.

"They say," commenting on 1 Cor. 15:53, "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality," that "here only, besides 1 Tim. 6: 16 the word 'immortality' is found and that "nowhere is the immortality of the soul, distinct from the body, taught, a notion which many erroneously have derived from heathen philosophers. Scripture does not contemplate the anomalous state brought about by death as the consummation to be earnestly looked for (2 Cor. 5:4), but the resurrection; then—not before. Death has yet a sting even to the believer, in that his body is to be under its power till the resurrection. But then, the sting and power of death shall cease forever, Death is swallowed up in victory. In Hebrew of Isaiah 25:8, from which it is quoted, 'He (Jehovah) will swallow up death in victory;' i.e., forever; as 'in victory' often means in Hebrew idiom. (Jeremiah 4:5. Lamentations 5:20). Christ will swallow it up so altogether victoriously that it shall nevermore regain its power (Hosea 6:2:13, 14; 2 Cor. 5:4. Hebrews 2:14, 15; Rev. 20: 14; 21:6). Verse 55 is quoted from Hosea 13:14, substantially but freely used by the warrant of the spirit by which St. Paul wrote. The Hebrew may be translated, 'O death where are thy plagues? Where, O hades, is thy destruction? The LXX. 'where is thy victory, (literally in a lawsuit) O death? Where is thy sting, O Hades? 'Sting' answers to the Hebrew 'plagues,' viz., a poisoned sting, causing plagues.

Appropriae as to the old serpent (Genesis 3; Numbers 21:6) 'Victory,' answers to the Hebrew 'destruction,' (Cf Isaiah 25:7, 'destroy,' veil, 'over all nations,' viz., victoriously destroy it. And to 'in victory' (v. 54), which he triumphantly repeats. The 'where' implies their past victorious destroying power and sting, now gone forever; obtained through satan's trumph over man in Eden which enlisted God's law on the side of santan and death against man (Romans 5:12; 17:21). The souls in Hades being freed by the resurrection, death's sting and victory are gone."

Commenting on the words, 'put on immortality,' they say, "As a garment," and refer to 2 Cor. 5:2, 5, to sustain their position—the very passages that are usually quoted by orthodox ministers to prove the immortality of the soul.

The last trump—at the sounding of the trumpet on the last day (vataglus) (Matt. 24:31; 1 Thess. 4:16). Or the spirit of St. Paul hints that the other trumpets mentioned subsequently in the apocalypse shall precede and that this shall be the last."

So the teaching of these commentators in this instance at least is that the soul is not immortal, but that souls having gone into hades or the grave must be freed by the resurrection and be "clothed" or "put on immortality" before "death's sting and victory are gone."

OVERCOMERS

Ethel Lehman

First, everything is promised to the overcomer; our future inheritance depends upon our being overcomers. We know that we cannot stand still in this life; we either go forward or backward. If we are not conquerors, we will be conquered. Paul in Rom. 12:21 says, "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

Now comes the question, How may we be conquerers?.

John tells us that it it our faith that makes overcoming possible.

Think of the blessings that he promises us; eternal life and a place in his kingdom. He also gives us strength and helps us conquer, for alone we can do nothing. David says, "He (Christ) is a strong tower." and that he will help those that believe and obey.

So long as we love we serve. We serve whom we love. We cannot conquer in a day, nor a week; it takes a life time. We know how short the days seem to us when we are very busy; then how like nothing the days, yes our lives must seem to the eternal God! How unworthy and ungrateful we must seem to God and yet he has promised us life, the greatest of all gifts, if we are overcomers.

Let us, then, turn our minds on things eternal, and let our love always be first for God. Our God is a jealous God. If he is not placed first in our lives he refuses to be second. He is everything or nothing to us. Paul says "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation or distress, or persecution, or famine or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." That we may all be overcomers and sit down in the kingdom with all the, worthy ones, is my prayer.

EDITORIAL

New friends are sometimes like new songs; sweet and interesting for a while, but soon worn out.

Fast friends generally abandon you when you slacken your speed.

There is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother (Prov. 18:24).

The religion of our Lord Jesus Christ does not exempt us from trials or hardships, but it gives us power to bear whatever comes.

Jesus says, "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord," etc., but he will disown them, in fact, will deny ever having known them. Wordy profession will avail nothing in the day of his coming

"He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me" (Matt. 10:37).

EDITORIAL RECIPROCITY

The Editor of The Restitution, under the captain, "Trying to Be Friendly With Adventists," has brought to the front food for editorial thought. Editor Huggins has this to say:

"For many years we have tried in many ways to become friendly and cordial with the Adventists, but our well-meant efforts have been repelled with the effectual 'cold shoulder.' When we became Editor of The Restitution we made another endeavor to break the ice, thinking that perhaps the editors of their different papers would warm up some and smile a welcome to one who was just entering upon the serious responsibilities of editorial labor. We did receive a few friendly letters, but most of them remained quiet. The Editor of The Messiah's Advocate is a noble exception. He often reprints articles from our sheet, and warmly commends them, too. We wish more men like him were editors—men who are not afraid to publish the truth, no matter by whom written. If a Catholic Priest were to write an article for The Restitution advocating truth, it would be printed for the truth's sake. Our motto is:

Let truth be seized where ever found,
On Christian or on heathen ground.

As to why they are reticent we are left to surmise, as no explanation is tendered. We merely point to the unique condition, and ask the editors of The Crisis, Hope, Messenger, and other Adventista papers to remedy this unchristian situation."

Brother Huggins has opened a subject upon which we have meditated much. Our editors have reciprocal duties. A little warming up at home and the extending of the hand of welcome to such editors as Brother Huggins would wonderfully increase the spiritual life of all who hold to Conditional Immortality. The secular press sets a splendid example in Editorial Reciprocity.—Burr A. L. Bixler, editor Present Truth Messenger.

THE OLD TESTAMENT REPRODUCED IN THE NEW

The New Testament tree is planted in Old Testament soil; it strikes its roots clean through all the literary strata from Malachi to Moses. It derives its sustenance from the rich inspirational deposits of four thousand years. It takes hold on the God of Genesis, and wraps the sinews of its strength round the primeval promises of coming Messianic blessedness for all the countless families of Adam's restored race. Its veins are filled with the life giving sap of a thousand more ancient prophetic utterances; while it waves its stately boughs over the graves of patriarchs, priests, and prophets, and in its spreading foliage revives the image of the righteous deal from "Abel to Zecharias," each "trees of righteousness" and "plants of renown" studding the historical soil of the ancient nation like a "wood of Lebanon." Dropping the figure: the New Testament almost reproduces the Old, and brings to view again the principal scenes and events of Mosaic and pre-Mosaic times. We are introduced afresh, to Adam, Abel, Abraham and Aaron; to Benjamin, Balak, Balaam, and Boaz; to David and Daniel; to Eve, Esau, Enoch, Elijah and Elisha; to Gabriel, Gideon and Gad; to Isaac, Issachar Isiah and Israel; to Jacob, Joshua, Jephthae, Jesse, Jeremiah, Joel, Job and Judah; to Kish and Korah; to Lamech, Lot and Levi; to Melchizedeck and Moses, to Noah, Nathan and Naaman; to Pharaoh; to Rachel, Rebecca, Rahab, Reuben and Ruth; to Shem, Sarah Samuel, Saul, Simeon and Solomon. All these, and more or less of events they represent, stand up before us again, that they may receive such re-applications of their cases as the new foundation of things in Christ required. And so same with places: we make the acquaintance again of Sodom and Gomorrah, Tyre and Sidon, Hebron and Bethlehem; Damascus; Egypt and Ethiopia; Galilee and Gaza; Idumea; Joppa and Jericho; Magog and Mesopotamia; Syria, Samaria and Zion; all these centres coming in for some fresh attention at the hands of the New Testament recorders, as more or less figuring in the events interwoven with the life of Christ or the ministry of the apostles. Then Matthew and Luke take us through the Old Testament genealogies, the one backward, and the other forward. Then Stephen brings us through the history of Israel from Abraham to David; then Paul finally runs over a whole hundred of ancient worthies from Abel to the last of the prophets. And the same thing is true of the events and institutions; they are unceasingly wrought into the apostolic fabric: the creation, the deluge, the exodus, the crossing of the Red Sea, the fall of Jericho, the giving of the law, the institution of the Passover, the wilderness wandering, the subjugation of kingdoms, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego in the fire, Daniel in the lion's den, the captivation in Babylon, and a host of other details; all of which are made to do duty over again in the preaching of the gospel to the forty-second generation of Israel's sons, or their subsequent confirmation in the faith of Christ. And as we look back and see that as Moses laid the foundation of Jewish privileges seventeen hundred years before the final abolition of the old covenant system, so Christ laid the basis that led to the door of fellowship being opened to the Gentiles at the beginning of our nineteen hundred years of A. D. history. Beyond a remnant the Jews rejected the overtures of the gospel as they did the Messiah himself; the largest results being probably obtained from Gentile sources. Roundly speaking, during 2,000 years before Christ, God's saving operations were solely connected with Abrahams, Isaac and Jacob, and the house of Israel, as now, for nearly a similar period, they have been taking out a people from amongst the gentiles. And it is next worthy of note, that nearly the same length of time has now elapsed since the providential revival of the first century faith and practice in modern times, as obtained between its first preaching by John the Baptist, and the destruction of Jerusalem. A revival that enables us at once to grasp the entire intention of revelation, and to discern as unmistakably, that we have reached the last sands of Gentile ascendancy, coincident with the gradually developing events, which give speedy promise of Israel again in their own land, Christ in the earth, and "the kingdoms of the world in his hands, as the divine pageant for all the evils under which the benighted and oppressed nationalities of the earth incurably groan. The accomplishment of this is apart to the whole Bible a new and lasting interest, for the generation that will survive the judgments by which the transfer of human power to divine hands will be effected. Meanwhile it even now shines like the sun in its strength for those whose hope is the kingdom of God established upon the ruin of all human governments.

EVANGELISTS, PASTORS & TEACHERS

H. L. Babcock, the Managing editor of the Herald, has the following beautiful and truthful remarks upon the subject of Evangelists, Pastors and Teachers which we gladly insert with slight revision:

The Apostle Paul mentions these offices as being among the gifts to the church by Christ when he ascended up on high. See Eph. 4:11. They are all offices of ministry, or service, for the "edifying of the body of Christ," and were to continue "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" (ver. 13).

These offices, together with those of apostles, and prophets, constitute all the offices which Christ has instituted in his church. Others, such as bishops, cardinals, popes, etc., are of human origin and without scriptural authority.

Now, an evangelist is "one who announces glad tidings." His work is distinguished from that of a pastor in that it is not confined to one church or locality. He opens up new fields or pastures wherever he may be led, and leaves the work in care of a pastor or shepherd to build up. Philip was an evangelist, and an excellent example of what Christ intended in that office. He was ever in touch with his Master, through the Holy Spirit, and when the Spirit said Go, he obeyed; whether it was to Samaria where a large company of people "gave heed to those things which he spake" (Acts 8:6); or "unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem to Gaza, which is desert," where his audience consisted of but one man, and he an Ethiopian (Acts 8:25).

How different from some modern evangelists who must have a written contract with a church, guaranteeing a stipulated price for their work, before they will go and preach the gospel to dying men!

Philip was content to fulfill his commission and didn't get jealous of Peter and John when they came down from Jerusalem to Samaria, after hearing of the good work he was doing there, and prayed for his converts "that they might receive the Holy Spirit" (Acts 8:15). This was work for others, and he left it for them to do. God give us more men like Philip for these last days!

Now, an evangelist may be a teacher and a prophet, or both, but he is seldom fitted for pastoral work. This is a work requiring different qualifications.

The word pastor means, shepherd or overseer. When Paul called the Ephesian elders to bid them farewell as he was going up to Jerusalem, he said to them: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers" (Acts 20:28). The Greek word here is episkopos, meaning, watcher, guardian, or overseer. It has the same significance as shepherd or pastor—one who guards and cares for the flock.

A pastor's work is local. He is to instruct those under his charge and seek to establish them in the faith. How many converts have fallen away because of the lack of pastoral care. Converts need to be fed in order to grow strong, and this is the pastor's work.

Paul realized this need when he came to Ephesus. Apollos, the evangelist, had preceded him there, had won some disciples to the gospel by his preaching, and had passed on to Corinth. On Paul's arrival he sought out these disciples and said unto them, "Have ye received the Holy Spirit since ye believed?" They seemed to be in the same condition that the disciples of Philip in Samaria were in before Peter and John came down from Jerusalem and prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Spirit. Their reply to Paul's question, that they had "not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Spirit" shows a lack in Apollo's teaching which Paul was able to supply. And he not only instructed them intellectually, but laid his hands on them, whereupon "the Holy spirit came on them; and they spake with tongues, and prophesied" (Acts 19:6). They now had the witness in themselves, and we doubt if they could have been convinced then that there were no Holy Spirit. There is nothing so convincing as the demonstration of a truth.

But Paul did not pass on quickly and leave these disciples, as Apollos had done. He saw they lacked many things yet, even though they had received the Holy Spirit and had spoken in tongues. They needed pastoral care. So he remained in Ephesus for "the space of three years," and "ceased not to warn everyone night and day with tears" (Acts 20:31). The result of his faithful ministry there was the establishing of one of the most spiritual churches of those early days. They grew from "babes in Christ" up into strong men and women of faith and love (see Eph. 1:15), so that they were able to receive the "strong meat" of the Epistle which Paul addressed to them afterward.

We have mentioned that an evangelist might be also a teacher and this is true of a pastor. In fact he must be a teacher in order to feed the flock of God. Paul seems to join these two gifts in one office in the passage first referred to. He does not say "some pastors and some teachers," but, "some pastors and teachers," indicating that the pastor is also to be a teacher. This fact is so plainly evident that no argument seems necessary to prove it.

CORRESPONDENCE

Brother Huggins:

In the series of articles on "Baptism, or the Seal of the New Covenant," which are appearing in The Restitution, I have noticed two typographical errors on important points, which, if not corrected, might prevent the reader from understanding the intended distinction between the two covenants.

The first occurs in the first article in the issue of June 25, which should read, "While in God's covenant to Abraham and his seed the promise was for an everlasting possession of Canaan, the covenant he made with Israel on Mount Sinai was for a possession of Canaan only so long as they obeyed his voice (Lev. 26)."

The second error appears near the middle of the article on "Sprinkling not Baptism" in the issue of July 30, and should read, "By which we become adopted children of God, and members of his household, and heirs of his promises." I have underscored the expressions printed wrong.

Yours for the truth,
F. M. HOWELL.

Dear Brother:

A few words in regard to church work.

There are a few of the brethren in and around Los Angeles. We don't get together very often, but we have an ecclesia at South Pasadena, and will be glad to hear from any one who lives near enough to attend and help us in the work of spreading the truth.

We have a very able preacher in Brother L. V. J. Kimball, of South Pasadena, who will, I'm sure, be glad to hear from any of the brethren in or around Los Angeles. I know there are many more of them in this part of the state who ought to wake up and get busy in the work. We will be glad to welcome them and have their assistance in spreading the truth.

We are hoping for a state conference in the near future and will be glad to hear from any of the brethren in the state of California in regard to same.

In conclusion, I'll say that I'm willing and ready to go any where and do any thing in my power to promote a more perfect organization in the state. I'm not as far advanced in the truth as some of the older brethren, but I can give a reason for the hope that is in me, and have decided to do any thing the church asks of me, the Lord being my helper. Will be pleased to hear from any of the brethren.

Your brother in the faith,
JOE TUCKER.

Brethren:

The way to obtain a knowledge of God is to accept his word and live thereby. Obedience, patience, and zeal gives us a love for work. Paul said, "Awake to righteousness and sin not; some have not the knowledge of God: I speak this to their shame." There is no excuse for ignorance when they hear the word preached and can read the Bible. How can they escape when they neglect so great a salvation? "To-day, if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." Some start and a little temptation sweeps them from their feet. Like the seed on stony ground they have no root, and the sun soon withers them up. They see themselves in a mirror and soon forget what manner of man they are. The best way is always to remember our short comings and endeavor to make our faults virtues, as put the word with meekness and with a willingness to learn. Christ said, "I thank thee, Father, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." Thus we see the meek and humble gain a knowledge of God, grow in grace and truth, while the proud are resisted. Those that are not willing to learn cannot be taught. May God help us to be taught by the word of truth. Oh Father, ever kind and true, guide us in all that we may do!

KATIE DAVIS.

Bro. Huggins:

You say, "With regard to Bro. Renier's article in this issue (6th inst.) on prayer?" It will be observed by the reader that he opposes both public prayer, and the standing posture."

Public prayer, strictly speaking, is not scriptural doctrine, because the Savior taught his disciples it contained an element they were to avoid — hypocrisy. Hypocrites courted adulation from their auditors in the synagogues and on the street corners. Therefore the Savior's warning was the danger signal to sincere disciples in the dawn of the Christian dispensation.

Modernity encourages attempts by the world to convert the church and the world in this has been three-fourths successful. Hence public prayer. Mahomet taught his followers, "All the world is a place for prayer." Not so with the Lord and Master, "But thou, when thou prayest enter into thine inner chamber and having shut thy door, pray to thy Father who is in secret." Prayer is a personal matter between the petitioner and God the Father. Jesus loved to retire to the confines of the mountain after the toiling and moiling through the workday and there in solitude pour forth his cares and needs to the heavenly Father.

The apostles and evangelists did not practice public prayer, but in the privacy and harmony of their own company they prayed in secret with power (Acts 4:23-31). Public prayer before a promiscuous audience is often a mock sermonette in the guise of prayer, a jest for the scoffer, and burlesque for the unholy and the profane.

Scripture tells, Jesus prayed at the tomb of his intimate friend, Lazarus, to glorify God in performing the miracle of raising Lazarus from the dead, and that the bystanders might believe. It is also recorded that the Christ dying in agony on the barbaric cross prayed in pain and pity not for himself, but for his cruel persecutors to be forgiven by the heavenly Father for their ignorance.

In these exceptional circumstances, which can never again be repeated, who will maintain the Savior taught prayer in public?

As to the posture in prayer there is no stereotyped rule, although the concensus of scripture favors standing.

IAN KATISON.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

We have had so many good letters from the sisters every where I thought I would also pen a few thoughts.

Every time I take up a daily paper I see so much about children being compelled to care for aged parents who probably have spent their lives in caring for and educating them.

It brings to my mind the fifth commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother, that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." This, brothers and sister, is a time-honored commandment, and on looking up the scriptures we can see times without number where a blessing has been called down upon the heads of those obeying it, while on the other hand, II. Tim. 3:3 shows us that those who are disobedient to parents, unthankful, without natural affection, will surely come into judgment.

This I am sure will appeal to those of us who are parents. What a labor of love our work is! Nothing is too hard for us to do, but how hurt we feel if we fail to receive some consideration from our loved ones. I have this one thing in my life to look back on and be thankful for (that I never spoke harshly to father or mother), although in their old age they were very often a severe trial to me, and I know I can claim our heavenly Father's promise, "Thy days shall be long in the land, which the Lord thy God giveth thee." It seems to me this commandment must have been paramount in the mind of God, for it is the first he gives us with a promise.

In Prov. 1:8, 9 Solomon, the wisest man that ever lived, says, "My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and despise not the law of thy mother, for they shall be an ornament of grace unto thy head and chains about thy neck." Also in I. Timothy 5:4, "But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn first to show piety at home and to requite their parents, for that is good and acceptable before God."

This duty to parents, brothers and sisters is strong and plain.

Show me the girl or boy who is careful and kind to his or her parents, and I will show you one who is not far from the kingdom. Let us be ever so religious and apparently good our actions toward our parents will tell for or against us. We are dealing with One who looketh on the heart, not on the outside.

Just a last word to our young people: be kind to your parents. If you see your father or mother tired and worn out, step in, take the burden off their shoulders as much as you can, and you will have great recompense of reward.

The duties of children to parents and parents to children are identical. Parents must not provoke their children to wrath, but bring them up in the fear and admonition of the Lord (Eph. 6:4).

In return the children must love their parents, for this is his pleasure that has commanded.

May our gracious Father give us all grace to do his will, is my prayer.

CATHRINE COWELL

WHAT IT IS TO BELIEVE ON THE LORD JESUS CHRIST?

W. H. Wilson

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts xvi. 31).

There cannot be the least question with regard to salvation being fundamentally based upon a scriptural belief in the Lord Jesus Christ, and the real question at issue in our investigation should be:

What Constitutes Such a Belief?

We must recognize an essential difference between a belief about the Lord Jesus Christ, and a belief in him. A person may entertain a belief about the Lord Jesus Christ, and at the same time have no personal interest in him.

Let me illustrate: In time now passed two men stood prominently before the religious world as teachers; one was Mr. Calvin, and the other Mr. Wesley. These two men taught opposite doctrines, the one contrary to the other; each had followers who announced their belief in either one or the other. The one who believed in Calvin's teachings was called a Calvinist, and the one who approved of Mr. Wesley's teaching was known as a Wesleyan, or a Wesley Methodist. A man could not be a believer in Calvin, unless he should first have knowledge of Calvin's teaching. A Wesleyan may have knowledge about Calvin, and his teaching, and still not believe in him, because his convictions were that Calvin's teachings were error. Hence, to be a believer in Mr. Calvin, a person must and, Approve of such teaching as being true.

Hence a person cannot be a Christian or a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, unless he shall.

First, have knowledge of the message which constituted the burden of his teaching while on earth.

Second, he must approve of such teaching as being true, and confirm such approval, by obeying the instructions contained in the said message required of all such believers, who then become believers in the Lord Jesus Christ.

A person may have knowledge of the said message, and approve of it as being true and still not be a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ in a scriptural sense, by reason of his not obeying the instructions required of all such believers contained in the said message. Such a person may be a believer about the Lord Jesus Christ, but not a believer in him.

The same conclusion can be arrived at by a biblical study of the phrase:

"Christ the Lord"

Many who profess to be believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, ignorantly suppose the phrase to be nothing than the personal name of a man, like Peter Jackson, etc. The angel said, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus," signifying Savior. "Christ the Lord," is an official appellation acquired by Jesus. The Analytical Concordance by Robert Young, L. L. D., says of the word "Christ (Christos, in the Greek; annointed. The official appellation of the long promised and long expected Savior, denoting his kingly authority," etc.

"Lord" is of Saxon origin, and signifies monarch, ruler, governor, etc.

From whom did Jesus acquire the official appellation, "Christ, the Lord?"

See Acts ii:36: "Therefore, let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have persecuted, both Lord and Christ."

The house of Israel were called upon to "know assuredly" (positively, or certainly) that God had given him the above official appellation. Hence, an official appellation which Jesus had acquired from his Father, could not be his personal name.

Tidings of great joy is involved in that official title. See Luke ii: 9-11: "Fear not; for I bring you tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior; which is Christ the Lord." Hence, the "good tidings of great joy," which will grow out of the above official appellation, will be the official exercise of the kingly powers, designated in the aforesaid title. Over what people will he exercise his kingly authority granted him as being the Christ?

See Matt. ii:1,2: "Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the day of Herod the king, behold there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that was born (Christ the Lord) king of the Jews?" See verses 3, 4. "When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born." He now wanted to know where the king of the Jews should be born, and asked for that information, by using his official appellation, Christ. The answer to his question was, "In Bethlehem of Judea..... for out of thee shall come a Governor that shall rule my people Israel."

Where is he that is born king of the Jews? Where shall the Christ be born? Answer to both questions—Out of Bethlehem of Judea shall come the Governor that shall rule my people Israel.

Now we see clearly that the word Christ, as the official appellation of Jesus signifies his kingly authority over the nation of Israel. This is further confirmed by Nathaniel (John 1:41-47), "Rabbi, thou art the King of Israel."

See also Acts xvii:1-7. Paul went into the synagogue, for three sabbath days, and reasoned with them out of the scriptures, affirming that "this Jesus whom I preach unto you, is the Christ," the King of Israel. This is just what the enemies of Paul understood by Paul's affirmation, that "this Jesus whom I preach unto you is Christ," will be seen by the charge made before the rulers of the city. "These all do contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus."

It is not possible to believe in Jesus as the Christ, and not have knowledge of his official appellation as the King of Israel.

Philip understood it in this way, see Acts viii:5-12: "Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them," "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women."

This is all involved in the phrase, "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ." Apart from this way no one can possibly become a scriptural believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is to those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, who are promised salvation. No one can possibly be a believer in him unless he first believes the message, the preaching of which brought Jesus to the cross and that was his claim to be the king of Israel or in other words, the proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom. See Heb. ii:3-4: "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him: God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit." We have here three guide posts.

1. "Which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord;"

2. "Confirmed unto us by them that heard him;" and

3. God's confirmation by signs, wonders, miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit.

In Acts x. and xi. we have the case of Peter sent to Cornelius to give him words of salvation, or "the great salvation." See Acts xi: 13, 14. "Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter, who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved."

These "words" we shall present by see, is "the great salvation which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord." See Acts x: 36, 37. "That word I say ye know, which was published throughout all Judea." As to what was published throughout all Judea, and given by Peter to Cornelius as saving words, see Mat. ix:35. "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." This was the only word which was preached by Jesus throughout all Judea, and was none other than the gospel of the kingdom. Verse 37 says that it was that which "first began to be spoken by the Lord."

1. Began from Galilee as the place;

2. "After the baptism which John preached," as the time when he first began to preach it from Galilee.

In confirmation of this see Mark i:14. "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God."

Jesus did not begin to preach until John was put in prison. His mission did not begin until John's was finished. Hence the "great salvation which at first began to be spoken by the Lord."

1. First began at Galilee;

2. And not until John had completed his, which was when he was cast into prison, and

3. His saving words were none other than the gospel of the kingdom.

The gospel of the kingdom signifies the good news concerning the kingdom. What kingdom? See Luke 1:32, 33. "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." The good news (or gospel) of the kingdom relates specially to the kingdom of Israel. When David sat on his throne he ruled over Israel. When Jesus sits on David's throne he also must reign over Israel, or it will not be David's throne.

"Where is he that was born King of the Jews?" (Matt. ii. 1-2). Out of Bethlehem "shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel" (Matt. ii. 5, 6).

All bogus gospels leave the kingdom of Israel out.

REFLECTIONS

J. W. Denton

The sects all teach that man is saved by "faith alone." At the same time they will contend that the Holy Spirit comes in answer to prayer to enable the sinner to believe. It seems that they can not realize that when they so contend, they deny salvation by "faith alone." Again, if the sinner is powerless to believe till God quickens him by the Spirit, and God alone can do this quickening which is necessary to believing, and God fails to do his part and the sinner is lost, who is responsible, God or the sinner? Remember, the sinner can not act till God does his part, viz.: quickens him. But God refused to do his part, which would enable the sinner to do his. Now, because God failed to do his part, the sinner couldn't do his, yet God condemns him because he didn't! This makes God responsible for the damnation of all who are lost.

Again if the sinner can not do his part till God quickens him, and can not keep from doing his part when God does quicken him, then if we do not have universal salvation it is because God withheld the "quickening" that he might be damned! But as God "wills that none shall perish," and none can perish that he "quickens," then it follows that all will be saved or God has acted contrary to his own will by withholding the quickening power necessary to believing. View it from any angle you wish, and you will see that God is responsible for the damnation of the sinner, or, to avoid this, he must save all. Such are the consequences of the theory of necessity of a power separate from the word, hence of faith. While this is the result of just conclusions drawn from sectarian teaching, what about our brethren who contend for a work of the Spirit in Christians, separate from the word? It seems to me that the merest tyro in reasoning can see that such work (if there is such) could not be a work of faith. Why? Because faith is the fruit of the word of God in the heart. Any power or influence separate from the word is bound to be separate from faith unless faith can be produced in the absence of the word. As men are to act by faith to please God, and faith "comes by hearing the word," if there is a power, or influence separate from the word, such power or influence is separate and apart from faith. If such power, comfort or influence exists separate from the word of God, such power, influence or comfort is not of faith, as faith is the result of, or fruit of the word. If such power, comfort or influence exists and is necessary to salvation then faith and the "obedience of faith" are not sufficient.

If faith is not sufficient, neither is the word of God sufficient, for faith is measured by the word. As such power, comfort, or influence is not of faith, the only way the person or persons could be conscious of such comfort would be by feeling. Don't say, such comfort exists, and I know it because God said it. This does not relieve the pressure. Because you believe such comfort exists within you and said comfort is to be separate from the world, then you must believe this comforter influences separate and apart from the influence of the word—hence without faith again.

THE SIEGE OF BABYLON

"If there was a city that seemed to bid defiance to any predictions of its fall, that city was Babylon. It was for a long time the most famous city in the whole world. Its walls, which were reckoned among the wonders of the world, appeared rather like the bulwarks of nature than the workmanship of man. The Temple of Belus, half a mile in circumference and a furlong in height—the hanging gardens, which piled in successive terraces, towered as high as the walls—the embankments which restrained the Euphrates—the hundred brazen gates—and the adjoining artificial lake—all displayed many of the mightiest works of mortals concentrated in a single point. Yet, while in the plentitude of its power, and according to the most accurate chronologers, 160 years before the foot of an enemy had entered it, the voice of prophecy pronounced the doom of the mighty and unconquered Babylon. A succession of ages brought it gradually to the dust; and the gradation of its fall is marked until it sunk at last into utter desolation. At a time when nothing but magnificence was around Babylon the great, fallen Babylon was delineated exactly as every traveler now describes its ruins. And the prophecies concerning it may be viewed connectedly from the period of their earliest to that of their latest fulfillment.

Much time having been lost, and no progress having been made in the siege, the anxiety of Cyrus was strongly excited, and he was reduced to great perplexity, when at last it was suggested and immediately determined to turn the course of the Euphrates.

But the task is not an easy one. The river was a quarter of a mile broad, and twelve feet deep, and in the opinion of one of the counsellors of Cyrus, the city was stronger by the river than by its walls.

Diligent and laborious preparation was made for the execution of the scheme, yet so as to deceive the Babylonians. And the great trench, ostensibly formed for the purpose of blockade, which for the time it effectually secured, was dug around the walls on every side, in order to drain the Euphrates, and to leave its channel a straight passage into the city, through the midst of which it flowed. When all things were in readiness for the execution of his design, Cyrus, having formed his army into two great divisions, stationed them respectively where the river entered and where it emerged from the city, and hastened with the ineffective part of his troops to the lake which the Queen of Babylon had made, and suddenly diverted the course of the Euphrates. So soon as the water ceased to flow into its wonted channel, Cyrus having returned to his army, commanded those about him to descend into the dry part of the river, to ascertain if a passage could be effected; and on their reporting its practicability the order was given to the vast besieging army to pass the bed of the river as a road into the city.

While a host of enemies thus stole into Babylon, like a thief into a house by stratagem and at night, no situation for the moment could have been more critical and dangerous than theirs; for if the design had been discovered and if the gates leading from the river to the city had been shut they would have been shut us as in a net, and their destruction would have been seemingly inevitable; and but for the word that never errs, and the eye that watches over all, the assailants would have been the victims. But the Babylonians, given up on that night to intemperance in honor of their god, exercised no caution as they felt no fear, and the enemy passed into the city without obstruction or opposition—for though they knew it not the prophecy was true "the gates shall not be shut." —Keith's Evidence of Prophecy.

SIXTEENTH ANNUAL STATE CONFERENCE

Of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus to be Held in Oregon, Illinois, August 21-25, 1912.

The brethren of Illinois and other states, together with their friends, are cordially invited to attend the Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus which will be held in Oregon, Illinois, August 21st to 25th, inclusive.

The admonition addressed to the Hebrew brethren is equally applicable to the Church today. "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more as we see the day approaching."

Is not the work of the Lord, which He has entrusted to us, of far greater importance than the labor pertaining to this present world? Each individual member of the Church of God is personally responsible to perform his duty in the Master's service.

You cannot do my work—I cannot do yours; so let us meet in Oregon with the firm determination each to do his part that our united efforts may redound to the honor and glory of God.

Secretaries of local Churches are requested to bring complete reports of the year's works in their localities.

Local Conference Collectors are urged to see that the annual conference dues are paid and duly reported to the State Treasurer, Brother J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Illinois.

Ladies' Aid, Berean Societies, and Sunday schools are asked to submit reports of their respective departments.

Shall the Conference employ an evangelist next year? If so, come prepared to advise the board as to whom you wish, and as to how much you are willing to subscribe to his support.

The following ministers are expected to be present this year: Joseph Williams of Indiana; L. E. Conner of Ohio; Peter Jeffrey, S. J. Lindsay and G. Eldred Marsh of Illinois.

Board and lodging will be furnished free to all who come.

For particulars regarding train service, etc., address G. Eldred Marsh, Box 626, Oregon, Illinois, who will cheerfully furnish any information in that regard you may desire.

A complete program will be provided by this committee at the time of the Conference.

COME and help us make this meeting a success. YOU are NEEDED!

J. M. Glotfelty, E. F. Gesin, G. Eldred Marsh—Committee.

PROGRAM

Of the Twenty-fifth Annual Conference and Camp Meeting of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, August 24, September 1, 1912, Chautauqua Park, Iowa.

Dear Brothers and Sisters of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus:

Greeting:

As it nears the time set for the Annual Conference, which will be held as usual at our Camp ground at Waterloo, Iowa, this year from August 24th to September 1st, inclusive, we send you this greeting and a printed program.

We invite you to be present and take part in the various meetings, and to assist in making plans for the next year's work. You should be on hand to hear the reports of officers and evangelists, and to learn how the money you have contributed to the support of the Conference has been expended.

Those who have attended the Conference heretofore and experienced the pleasure of associating with those of like precious faith in a meeting of this kind, and of listening to the word of God from the lips of those who speak, it is not necessary to urge to be present, as they know of the benefits to be derived from a meeting of this kind, but to those who have not as yet met with us, we urge upon you the necessity of partaking of these annual feasts of spiritual food, so that in the months to come we may all be better able to overcome the evils of the world and have new courage to press forward to the mark of the high calling.

Good speakers will be in attendance to preach the word. All should make a special effort to attend this meeting.

General Instructions

If our "Conference Baggageman" is at the depot when you arrive, give him your baggage checks; if he is not there bring your checks to the camp ground and give them to the president.

To reach the camp ground, you may board any one of the following street cars: Cedar Falls Interurban, East Fourth Street or Loop. Get off at Chautauqua Park.

Tents will be furnished free. Bed springs or mattresses 50c each for the 10 days. Blankets and comforts 10c each per night. Beds furnished transients at 25c per night. Meals served at the dining hall at the camp ground. Letters may be addressed to you as follows: Waterloo, Iowa, Park Station.

Keep this program and bring it with you; also tablet and pencil, Bible and hymn book. Come to stay all through the meeting if possible.

For further information write O. J. Allard, Fort Dodge, Iowa.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with uestions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear breathren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints conductors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

MAY WE KNOW?

Part II.

Mrs. Flora A. Wood

I cannot do better than open this article by a quotation from Robert Roberts: "There are many signs abroad indicative of the near approach of Christ's kingdom. To discern them history and prophecy must be known and understood to some considerable extent." The first question we naturally ask is: Has God any set time for his work of restitution? Look at Psalms 102:13; Acts 17:31. We see by these scriptures that God has a set time and an appointed day in which these things are to be fulfilled.

Our next inquiry is: Has the Lord seen fit to reveal that time to his saints? Let us go to his word again. In Daniel 8:13 we find the following question asked: "How long shall be the vision?" Did the Holy One answer? He certainly did; see verse 14 of the same chapter. Now of what use was the question or answer if no one could understand, and why did Daniel record the vision and time so minutely if it was to remain in obscurity? Daniel 12:10: "None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." Now here are two positive statements: The wicked shall not understand, the wise shall. From this it seems to me the prophetic times are given in the same manner that many of Jesus' sayings were: Hidden to those who are blind to search them out as hidden treasure, but revealed to those who are upright and wise (Revelation 13:18; 17:9).

It seems to me from all these scriptures that we can say of prophetic time as of "The sign of the times"—we may know and understand if we apply our hearts to wisdom. We find that in the past God never left his people without a knowledge of impending events. Noah knew when the time of the destruction of the world was near; Lot was called out of Sodom; Daniel says, "I knew by books (the prophets) that the seventy years of captivity were about to expire;" our blessed Lord said the time is at hand. We do not think it possible that God would leave his saints in ignorance of the time of the most stupendous event in the world's history—the setting up of the kingdom of God—and that we are left without any clue as to where we are in the stream of time. If God has not given times and season by which we may know, as an English brother says, "We have no clue to our whereabouts in the Gentile era, and no knowledge of the length of that era, and have no reason for believing ourselves in the neighborhood of the end."

But this clue is given to us. Turn to Daniel 8th chapter. In this chapter Daniel had a vision of the kingdom of the earth under the symbols of certain beasts. He is not left in doubt as to what these beasts represent, for an angel is sent for the express purpose of explaining this to him.

Now Daniel is taken down the stream of time until the coming of the Prince of Princes to set up his kingdom—even the coming of our Lord, for which we are longing and seeking signs that it is near. While Daniel is thinking upon what he has seen it is said unto him that the length of this vision or the time to elapse from what he first saw to the end is 2,400 days (King James' translation reads 2,300 days, but the correct number as given in different manuscripts is 2,400. This can be satisfactorily shown to any one who doubts it). So whatever is meant by the 2,400 days was to elapse from the beginning of what Daniel saw in the 8th chapter to the coming of the Prince of Princes. So we see God has not left us in ignorance of the times and seasons. We have only to apply the wisdom given in the word to find the meaning of the 2,400 days, and can know where we stand in the history of the world, and how near we are to the cleansing of the sanctury.

Let us see now if we can get a starting point from God's word (not man-made theories) for this period. But first I want to speak of the days themselves. Are we to understand these as literal days of twenty-four hours each, or are they as the rest of the vision, symbolical? We never see the literal and symbolical mixed in God's word. If ever they are, the matter is so clear as to admit of no doubt as to what is literal and what is symbolical language; and inasmuch as the vision is given in symbols, naturally the time would be also. But let us see.

That God has often used a literal day to represent a literal year of time is beyond question (Numb. 14:29; 30:33; 34). Here God says, "Each day for a year."

This event has passed into history and cannot therefore be wrested from its true significance. See also Ezekiel 4:4. Here in mimic representation of the siege of Jerusalem, God expressly says, I have appointed thee a day for a year. How fitting, then, the length of time a kingdom or kingdoms should endure, besieging and being besieged, should be represented on this God-given scale. I know that Rom objects to this measurement, but her reason for this is so obvious that it does not merit answer.

One thing that seems to me to forever settle the question as to the length of time the days represent is the magnitude of the things seen in vision; for instance the rise and development of the Persian Empire alone took nearly forty times 2,400 literal days. It seems to me this is sufficient to show beyond a doubt that the 2,400 days represent 2,400 years.

That being so we have only to find the commencement of this time, and it is easy to see where we are in the history of the world. Now the question Daniel heard asked and answered is: "How long shall be the vision?" So we have only to look at the first event seen by Daniel in the vision to see where to start our line. Turning to Dan. 8:3 we find the first thing brought to view was a ram having two horns, which the angel explained to Daniel to be the Medo-Persian kingdom. Now the only question is, At what time in the history of the Medes and Persians did Daniel see the kingdom in vision? By looking again at Dan. 8:3 we see that it was when one horn had gained the ascendancy over the other. History says that the Persian power came in with Cyrus' accession to the throne, and his family held the power until conquered by Greece some two hundred years later. Now of necessity the vision must begin when the Persian kings had reigned long enough to make the Persian horn the higher. Scholars tell us this was in the reign of Xerxes 484 B. C. If this be the true starting point of the 2,400 days, it is easy to knw just where we stand in the stream of time, and we may know when the end of Gentile time and "the set time" to favor Zion be come.

I cannot close this article without expressing my thanks to our beloved Editor of The Restituton for helping me out of the labyrinth in which I had become lost in this prophesy and showing me the clear light of God's word upon it. May we all come into the bright light of truth, more and more, as the gross darkness that surrounds us, deepens.

THE TRUTH DEFENDED
No. 13

An Ex-Methodist Pleads for the Truth

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

I have given several of the texts in which the word hell has been translated from the original word sheol or hades, both meaning grave, place of darkness and ruin, where the good and bad repose together in a state of unconsciousness.

There is one other class of texts where the original word is Gehenna. Superstition has taken the idea of the popular hell fro mthis word, which was the name of a valley near Jerusalem, which has and will be again the scene of great slaughter. It was there the Jews burned their children alive to false gods. A certain place in this valley was called Tophet. This valley is spoken of in 2 Kings xxiii:10; 2 Chron. 28:3. The Assyrian army was destroyed there (2 Kings 19:35). It was called the valley of Hinnon because owned by Hinnon. It was of this valley that the prophet speaks when he says, "It shall no more be called Tophet or valley of the son of Hinnon, but a valley of slaughter." And he goes on and explains why; because the Jews were to be destroyed and Jerusalem made desolate (Jer. 19:6-9, 7:3). The same valley is spoken of by the prophet Isaiah, "For Tophet is ordained of old, yea, for the king it is prepared; he hath made it deep and large, the pile thereof is fire and brimstone doth kindle it (Isaiah 30:33). By reading more of the same chapter we find that God is speaking of the time when the people shall dwell in Jerusalem and weep no more, and also of the battles to take place at the beginning and at the end of the thousand years' reign. This valley of Tophet or valley of slaughter, which is translated by the word Gehenna, is the place where the Lord will burn with unquenchable fire his enemies. The fire will be unquenchable because it will not be quenched until there is nothing left to burn. Then it is not quenched, but it goes out after all is burned up. Christ says,

And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off; it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell (Gehenna) into the fire that never shall be quenched, where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched (Mark ix:43). We read in the history of Jerusalem that this valley of Tophet was a terrible place where the filth and dead bodies of the great City of Jerusalem were cast, and a fire was kept burning for five or six hundred years, both day and night.

It is claimed that the worms our Lord speaks of were the worms that constantly preyed upon the dead bodies until they were destroyed. The prophet says, "And they shall go forth and look upon the carcass of the men that have transgressed against me, for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh" (Isa. 66:24). A carcass is not a living person. "Our God is a consuming fire" (Heb. xii: 29). It will be an everlasting death; for there will be no resurrection from it. It will be eternal, for they will be consumed into smoke through eternal ages. Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be as stubble, and the day that cometh shall burn them up, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch, but unto you that fear my name shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings, and ye shall go forth and grow up as calves in the stall. And ye shall tread down the wicked, for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the Lord of Hosts (Mal. 4:1-3). If they are to be "ashes" they surely won't live for ever and ever alive in torment. For the day of the Lord is near upon all the heathen. For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shall all the heathen drink continually, yea, they shall drink, and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been (Obs. 15-16). For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place, and it shall not be (Psalm 37:10). Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power, when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (II Thess. 1:9,10; II Peter 3:9). The triumphing of the wicked is short, and the joy of the hypocrite is but for a moment; he shall perish as his own dung; they that have seen him shall say, Where is he? He shall fly away as a dream, and shall not be found; yea, he shall be chased away as a vision of the night (Job 20:5-8). But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs, they shall consume, with smoke, shall they consume away (Psalm 37:20). Let the sinner be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more (Psalm civ:35).

INSPIRATION

B. A. Meerman

Moved to a high pitch of enthusiasm through the inspiration received from the many excellent articles in The Restitution, and also by the recent Sunday morning discourses, led me to choose the above subject, and have a part in carrying on the good work.

"Inspiration," in Mr. Webster's most explicit defination is, "influence emanating from any object, giving rise to elevated thought or emotions." I would add to this a desire to follow the example set by others. In Job. 32:8 we read, "But there is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding."

As the poet writes his verses through inspiration so were the scriptures written, as we find in II Tim. 3:16, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness," so is every other thing done which leads to the higher ideals of life, by following where others have started.

In studying the truth we find this to be a very prominent thought: one is inspired to live a better life than their past and to keep from the many worldly pleasures all around us.

Inspired by the beautiful writings of the Prophets, before us and the thought of the great reward which awaits the faithful, makes it easy to live the life of a Christian instead of a disbeliever with nothing but death in view.

As we look about from day to day and see iniquity abounding on every hand we must realize that the end is drawing nigh, that the rule and oppression of this wicked world is about to cease; therefore brethren, let us be steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. Then will our reward be great and we shall see him and be made like unto him, who is ruler over all things.

Our every day walk of life should be guided by the thought, "Would Jesus do it?" Of course it is almost impossible in this day and age to live the life our Savior lived, but if we keep this thought before us, we surely cannot sin beyond forgiveness.

Teach others the great and glorious truths; speak not angry words against your enemies, be ready with an answer should not those in the fold ask questions; continue faithful and be willing to bear the trials of this world, and then shall we surely find favor when the Master appears from heaven to gather his family together.

Let us be watching,
Let us be true,
The time is approaching—
Signs tell us its due.

THEY COULDN'T FIND IT

B. Roxana Wince

The members of the M. E. church in a flourishing city of Oklahoma had built a $75,000 meeting house, and the financial committee were out soliciting funds to finish paying off the debt, and ran across a certain Mr. W—. "Will you not give us something?" they asked.

"Certainly, certainly," replied Mr. W—; "twenty-five or fifty dollars, whenever you show me the chapter and verse in the Bible that says we go to heaven when we die." The leader thrust his hand into his pocket and pulled out a Bible that he always carried with him and the whole party trooped into a near by office, sure that the coveted money would soon be in their possession. Page after page was turned, while the crowd stood by growing tense and anxious. The passage could not be found.

"Well, gentlemen," Mr. W—— said, "you seem not to be able to give a reason for the hope that is in you; at the present time it is night now, and I must go home but I will extend my offer indefinitely. Whenever you find the text, the money is yours."

Months have elapsed since the incident occurred and the committee have presumably given up the search, for they have never called on Mr. W— for the proffered reward.

I trust that their inability to find the text set them to thinking, as Mr. W— intended it should. It is impossible to "be always ready to give a (scriptural) reason for the hope that is in us," if our hope, is not a scriptural hope. That we do "not surely die," as the devil affirmed, when we cease to breathe, but are mysteriously transported to heaven, is not the hope of the gospel; it does not look to Christ for future life in the sense that immortality and incorruption are gifts, utterly dependent upon his power to raise us from the dead, that they are not inherent in man, and can be bestowed only at the resurrection. The text is not in the Bible that says "We go to heaven when we die."

CONCERNING THE KINGDOM AND THE GREAT KING

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth are passed away, and the sea is no more" (Rev. 21:1).

The above text is ascribed to John the Revelator, who suffered martyrdom by banishment on the lone isle of Patmos in the Grecian Archipelago, for preaching and upholding the gospel of the kingdom and propogating the teachings of Jesus the Christ. And when the shadows are lengthening into the late afternoon of this gospel age, people are found who think John was a dreamer, because being alone in dreary solitude his cogitations drifted into exaggeration, and they refer to a case in point the erratic author of the Pilgrim's Progress, who also dreamed in prison solitude. But this is a detail.

That John was vividly endowed with prophetic vision is fully portrayed in graphic word pictures bearing on the time soon to dawn on the earth, and known as "the Lord's Day," when Jesus will be Lord and King over the whole earth, in land and sea extending under the whole heaven. How far the scope of that expanse is simply beyond the ken of human knowledge.

In the atmosphere or "spirit" of that day, John was there, as surely as was the patriarch Abraham, of whom the Savior spoke to the unbelieving Jews, "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day, and he saw it, and was glad" (John 8:56).

When the time is consummated and the Lord's day instituted it will be the knell of the old order of things now existent. A new heaven, superb in delination of beauty and splendor, and the sin cursed earth swept and garnished from every thing offensive; a new earth prepared for the Bride of the Lamb—the church. Briefly pause and endeavor to realize the wonder of wonders: the waters of the immense sea abated from its bed to exist no more; the king of that vast domain will easily be the greatest of all kings. "The King of kings and Lord of lords," His name is Jesus and his title Christ, long despised and rejected of men, but when he comes to possess the kingdom and reign, refractory knees shall bow and tongues profane with contempt will openly confess he is the Lord Jesus Christ, then the solitary places of the desert and where the turbulent waves of the sea held high carnival so long will, metaphorically, clap their hands in very joy.

At the present time, A. D. 1912, a great deal is heard concerning circling the earth by various modes of travel. This is wholly incorrect. As there are three-fourths more sea than land, enormous stretches of this immeasurable wilderness have never been visited by a single sailing craft. "Travelers of the sea complain of its emptiness, not a single sail can be sighted for weeks and even months at a time." And unless on or near the commercial highways of the ocean, very seldom is the monotonous perspective of sea and sky relieved by a solitary ship despite the fact there are 35,000 vessels of all classes used in commerce exclusive of the navies of men-of-war, throughout the world.

The future ruler of this vastly extensive domain beyond anything of the kind ever ruled over before, bids his followers be of good cheer. "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

What a king shall dwell amongst us,
In these happy, happy days!
Jesus Christ, the King immortal,
O, how worthy of all praise!"

The sea is to give up the dead that is in it. Then many grim mysteries and grimer tragedies will stand revealed in that mighty charnel house, where vessels not a few have gone down with all on board encountering the dangers of the deep; not a spar or bottle message ever reached the shore to tell meagerly the anxious and waiting friends the awful fate of those they loved.

Geology teaches the sea has been everywhere. On the peaks of the highest mountains marine fossils are found, suggestive that death prevailed in aquatic life prior to the pronouncement of the curse, and corroborative of Gen. 1:9,10, when the bounds of the all-prevailing sea were set, when God had spoken, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed."

So to John it was reserved to tell in essence the glories of the coming kingdom and its capital, in Rev. 21,

"Wherefore we receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken, let us have grace whereby we may offer service pleasing to God."

How poor they are that have no patience.—Shakespeare.

"The hardest thing in the world to kill is a misstatement, whether it be made with intention or in ignorance."

"Little things done well make a great soul, and small duties are always great duties in the sight of the angles."

Each day is like a furrow lying before us; our thoughts, desires and actions are the seed that we each minute drop into it, without seeming to perceive it.

But man, as man, thy brother call;
And scatter like a circling sun
Thy charities on all.

Faith spoken should agree with faith put in action. Ezra took God at his word, when he led his company a four months' journey, through the wilderness, with no guard but the angelic host.

Christians should speak freely to one another of the things that concern the inner life. The diffidence which seals our lips on the most vital of all topics, robs us of one of the chief sources of strength.

Difficulties are God's errands, and when we are sent upon them we should esteem it a proof of God's confidence—as a compliment from him—H. W. Beecher.

A person who makes happiness the object of his life is pretty sure to be unhappy. If he lays himself out to be a worker with and for God, he is pretty sure to be happy, no matter how forbidding his surroundings might be.

Courage is a great moral quality, not the common courage of dash and excitement, but the courage of a long sustained effort. In the matter of living and carrying on its duties through sunshine or storm, through success or failure, courage is only another name for faithfulness.

Prayer is not intended to save us from the need of exerting ourselves. To ask God to do for you the things that you are too lazy to do for yourself, is to insult omnipotence. Nehemiah had a better point of view, when he prayed for strength for the hard task he had chosen, and that his efforts might be crowned with success.

The value of prayer in quieting the brain has been discovered by many a mental specialist. Dr. Hyslop said the other day to an audience of physicians that, as one whose whole life had been concerned with the sufferings of the mind, he would state that of all the hygienic measures to counteract disturbed sleep, depression of spirits, and all the miserable sequels of a distressed mind, he would undoubtedly give the first place to the simple habit of prayer.—The Christian Worker.

There is a story of an artist pupil, who had wrought long on his picture, trying to make it to please his master. But the work seemed to be a failure, and he sat down by his easel in sore disappointment and dropped asleep. Then, while he slept, the master came in, and understanding the boy's disheartenment, quietly took the brush and finished the picture. So our Master comes to us in our discouragement, when we have done our best, and with His own hand puts finishing touches on our work and makes it perfect.

The Creator's Own Book—The book cannot be got rid of. It is not a question of discrepancies or questionable authenticities — which, by-the-way, do not exist in the case, but are only alleged by the unscrupulous malice which in its turn deceives honesty in many cases. It is a question of the whole character of a book which is a library, extending over thirty centuries in its composition. Study this character; read this book; read it daily and diligently, as the transcendent importance of the subject demands, and you will find that it is its own evidence. It cannot be accounted for on any theory of human composition. It defies explication in all its narratives and all its prophecies on such a principle. It is intelligible only on one principle; it will answer to no other. It is a book of divine inception—it is a book of divine narrative—it is a record of divine doings, divine sayings, divine prophecies, divine purposes. Every one who reads it with discrimination—who brings to it any knowledge of human nature and human books, and any capability of discerning between things that differ—realises in the mere reading of it, apart from all extraneous questions, subjects and investigations whatever, that the question of the Creator is settled for ever by the Bible and the Bible alone.

The Bible is distinct from all books and systems in this, that its main aim is to make man acquainted with God. It is not a book of philosophy, it is not a book of morals, it is not a book of poetry; per se, it is a stately, majestic, pure record of what God has done among men, with the object, He has plainly declared throughout—the object of making himself known, and of bringing men into adoration and subjection. It makes nothing of men; it makes everything of God. This is according to reason; for man is but a transient form of eternal power; eternal power alone is intrinsically great and worthy. And of this eternal power, it tells us what we could not know, but what is also according to true reason. It tells us this eternal power is a unit filling heaven and earth with a simultaneous presence, as a light fills a room, yet having a located radiant focus as light in a gas-lit room has focus and source in the gas jet that illumines it. It tells us that this universal power with glorious kernel and invisible extension is the Father, filling immensity by the plenitude of His inextinguishable and undiminishable presence — the one person in whom and of whom are all things — the seat and source of the wisdom which has contrived all things—the Creator, possessor, and dreadful majesty of heaven and earth, before whom the highest angels bow in awful reverence.

THE GREAT WHITE THRONE

In connection with the Great White Throne, John saw other thrones. "I saw thrones" saith he, "and they sat upon them, and judgment had been given unto them." A principal throne encompassed by other thrones. His vision of the thrones is more fully described in chapter iv. They are the Thrones of the House of David, occupied by "the First-fruits unto the Deity and the Lamb," who "sit with the Son on his throne (ch. iii. 21). It is the throne of the new Kingdom ruling over all without a rival. John's position in the vision when he saw this great throne of the Redeemer, and the redeemed, who had washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb," and therefore communicated whiteness in vision to all things identified with them—is when he and they had "executed the judgment written" and "given to them," and were able to rest from their labours" (ch. xiv. 13). Judgment had been given to them sitting upon their thrones" he saw and as the result of it execution by the means represented in the military array of ch. xix. they had cast down the thrones of the Kings of the nations, and had appropriated their "many diadems" to themselves—(Dan. vii. 9., Apoc. xix. 12). The thrones were now theirs who had conquered them; "and they sat upon them," ruling the subject nations (Ch. ii. 26, 27). And so thoroughly and absolutely had they overcome "the kings of the earth and their armies" that there remained no place, space or country where they could hold their own. The earth was conquered to the end of it, and all the nations were inherited by the King of kings and Lord of lords (Ps. ii. 8). In the words of the seventh vial, "every island had fled away, and the mountains were not found"—the kingdoms and empires of the world had disappeared as completely as the empires of Alexander and Napoleon I.

The establishment of the Great White Throne of Christ and his Brethren changes the face of the entire world. The Gentile constitution of society in Church and State is entirely abolished; and all the sinners, the "miserable sinners," as they truly declare themselves to be, or "the spirituals of wickedness" as Paul styles them, who constitute hierarchies, aristocracies and office holders of the body politic, will be abolished with it being "scattered," "put down" and "sent empty away" (Luke ii. 51—53). Popes, cardinals, Archbishops, bishops, priests, parsons, and all sorts of superior and inferior dealers in "sorcery" and "lies;" emperors, kings, cabinets, diplomatists, officers of state, military and naval commanders, parliaments, congresses, and all sorts of legislative bodies—these will be chased into the darkness of annihilation, and historical contempt, as "the Devil and his Angels" who for ages were "them who destroy the earth" (Ch. xi. 18). All these constituted things with the peoples, nations and tongues in their political aggregation, are the Gentiles, "Heavens and Earth," or Body Politic. Its complete suppression by the world-wide dominion of the Saints is apocalyptically represented by the saying, "The heaven and the earth fled away and place had been found for them no more." The manner of their flight is symbolically illustrated in Dan. ii 34-35, where, as elements of Nebuchadnezzar's political image, they are smitten by the Stone Power, and "broken to pieces together and become like the chaff of the summer threshing floors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them; and the stone that smote the image became a Great Mountain, and filled the whole earth." Eureka III.

THE EVERLASTING COVENANT

E. W. Knapp

The first everlasting covenant was made known to Noah. I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth (Gen. 9:8-17), called in the 16th verse "the everlasting covenant." When we see the bow in the cloud we can call to mind, that God placed that token there 3564 years ago, and it means that no flood shall destroy the earth again. Four hundred and twenty-seven years after this God made another everlasting covenant with Abraham and his seed, God changed his name from Abram (meaning a high father) to Abraham (meaning Father of a great multitude). "And I will establish my covenant in their generations, for an everlasting covenant, He that is born in thy house, and he that is bought with thy money, must needs be circumcised, and my covenant shall be in your flesh for an everlasting covenant" (Gen. 17:7, 13). God changed the name of Abraham's wife to Sarah (meaning Princess), and then God said, "Sarah shall bear thee a son, and thou shall call his name Isaac, and I will establish my covenant with him, for an everlasting covenant, and with his seed after him" (Gen. 17:19).

Four hundred and thirty years after this a covenant was made with Moses. This was not an everlasting covenant, and was a covenant with the Jews, only and was in force 1490 years, until Christ was crucified.

Then ended the Mosaic law or covenant (Gal. 3:25). After that the gospel was preached to Jew and Gentile alike, and the everlasting covenant of God's blessing the nations, and establishing his kingdom here on earth, was preached, and was commanded to be preached, until Christ comes on the resurrection morn, and raises to an everlasting life all those that believe and obey God's everlasting covenant. This covenant has a promise of eternal life to all that believe and embrace it in God's appointed way; whereas, the Mosaic covenant had no promise of life, or reward for keeping it beyond this life. The reason the Mosaic covenant was done away was because it did not provide a way for a life in the future, and therefore according to God's plan, was imperfect. But God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son (not one of his adopted sons), but his own real, true son, as a sacrifice for sin; and he was a sinless being, because he was born of God. And he through God's plan and purpose, is the promised seed that will bless all nations of the earth. The covenant is everlasting, and the blessing will be everlasting. Those that obey the gospel, and are baptized into Christ, become heirs with Christ and will be raised at the resurrection, and will be blessed with Christ, as rulers over the nations. The nations will be blessed with a righteous king and righteous rulers, with religious laws, no more sin, or sickness, or sorrow, or death, nor anything to make afraid. This state of things is to continue everlastingly. We have God's word for it, and we believe it. We see that in the law that God laid down for Abraham to follow, was circumcision. Why do we not follow that command now?

Because Paul declares that the law of commandments contained in ordinances, was nailed to the cross. "Ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power, in whim also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh, by the circumcision of Christ. Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him, through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead" (Col. 2:9-14). So it seems that belief and baptism into Christ takes the place of circumcision. Read Phil. third chapter. We think the words of the everlasting covenant are the promises God made to Abraham, Isaac and Israel, recorded in Gen. 12:2, 3, 7; 13:14, 17; 17: 5, 8, 19; 22:15, 18; 26:1, 5; 28:13, 14; 35: 10, 12).

If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise (Gal. 3:29).

LITTLE THINGS

On Sunday morning and not long ago we attended services held in one of our city churches. After the meeting was over the minister gave out this invitation, "You are all cordially invited to the Thursday evening prayer meeting, and if you come we shall expect something from you." Surely that was not an unreasonable request, nor a groundless expectation. We are now living on the earth; our neighbors and friends expect something from us; society expects something of us, the world expects something of us, and God expects something of us. What are we giving out in our lives in answer to these demands and expectations? Is it of good report, or of the opposite character? "Oh," says one, "if I could only do some great work I would gladly do it." Those who are always waiting to land some great thing are never prepared to do any of the small things in life; for the great ones are but the product of little things. When God created the world he saw that one mighty Niagara was enough for this continent, But he also knew it needed ten thousand little rivulets to beautify, enrich and water the thirsty land.

When Naaman would be cured of his leprosy and learned there was a prophet in Israel that could heal it, is said, "He went with his horses and chariots and stood at the door of the house of Elisha," expecting some great thing from the prophet. But Elisha only sent his messenger to Naaman saying, "Go and wash in Jorden seven times and thou shalt be clean." But Naaman was enraged at the prophet because of the simplicity of his remedy to heal and save. Said he, "I thought (we sometimes think) he would surely come out to me and stand and call on the name of the Lord God and stretch his hands over the diseased place and heal." And he turned and went away in a rage. But his little Jewish maid said unto him, "If the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldst thou not have done it?" How much rather, then, when he says to thee, "Wash and be clean." That was a small command given by the prophet. But only his condition and the pain from his disease drove him to obedience. Not willing to obey God's commands because his requirements are small and simple! Not willing to carry his yoke upon us when he has declared it is easy to carry and his burden is light!

We need never expect to reach large proportions in any direction without first carefully considering the little details that enter into our life. Has God required of us great and difficult things in order to be his children?

Listen: "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God (Mal. 6:8). To "deal justly," cultivates honesty; to "love mercy" makes us tender hearted; to "walk humbly with our God" destroys pride in our hearts and life. Will we comply with these requirements of God and thereby live for him here, and then enjoy his companionship in the world to come? Then "dispise not he day of small things," and then the day of great ones will follow.

REFLECTIONS

J. W. Denton

The sects all teach that man is saved by "faith alone." At the same time they will contend that the Holy Spirit comes in answer to prayer to enable the sinner to believe. It seems that they can not realize that when they so contend, they deny salvation by "faith alone." Again, if the sinner is powerless to believe till God quickens him by the Spirit, and God alone can do this quickening which is necessary to believing, and God fails to do his part and the sinner is lost, who is responsible, God or the sinner? Remember, the sinner can not act till God does his part, viz., quickens him. But God refused to do his part, which would enable the sinner to do his. Now, because God failed to do his part, the sinner could not do his, yet God condemns him because he didn't! This makes God responsible for the damnation of all who are lost.

Again, if the sinner can not do his part till God quickens him, and can not keep from doing his part when God does quicken him, then, if we do not have universal salvation it is because God withheld the "quickening" that he might be damned! But as God "wills that none shall perish," and none can perish that he "quickens," then it follows that all will be saved or God has acted contrary to his own will by withholding the quickening power necessary to believing. View it from any angle you wish, and you will see that God is responsible for the damnation of the sinner, or, to avoid this, he must save all. Such are the consequences of the theory of necessity of a power separate from the word, hence not of faith. While this is the result of just conclusions drawn from sectarian teaching, what about our brethren who contend for a work of the Spirit in Christians, separate from the word? It seems to me that the merest tyro in reasoning can see that such work (if there is such) could not be a work of faith. Why? Because faith is the fruit of the word of God in the heart. Any power or influence separate from the word is bound to be separate from faith unless faith can be produced in the absence of the word. As men are to act by faith to please God, and faith "comes by hearing the word," if there is a power, or influence separate from the word, such power or influence is separate and apart from faith. If such power, comfort or influence exists separate from the word of God, such power, influence or comfort is not of faith, as faith is the result of, or fruit of the word. If such power, comfort or influence exists and is necessary to salvation, then faith and the "obedience of faith" are not sufficient.

If faith is not sufficient, neither is the word of God sufficient, for faith is measured by the word. As such power, comfort, or influence is not of faith, the only way the person or persons could be conscious of such comfort would be by feeling. Don't say, But comfort exists, and I know it, because God said it. This does not relieve the pressure. Because you believe such comfort exists within you, and said comfort is to be separate from the word, then you must believe this comforter influences separate and apart from the influence of the word—hence without faith again.

You say you believe said power is there separate from the word, yet you can not produce one act thought, impression or suggestion separate from the word that God would approve. If this comfort is independent of the word of God, then such comfort, thought or act is not influenced by the word of God. As God's word is truth, and this comfort is distinct from truth, then of course this comfort differs from truth. That which differs from the truth can be no part of the truth.

THE WORD OF GOD—WHAT IT DOES

Thos. Gideon Fowler

The word of God is powerful. By it the flood was brought upon the world of old; and by it the heavens and earth that are now are kept in store (2 Pet. 3:6, 7). By faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God (Heb. 11:2). The word of God is like the fire which beats, and the hammer which breaketh the rock in pieces (see Jer. 23:29).

Some preachers would have people believe that the word of God is a dead letter and of no power until there has been an operation of the Spirit upon the heart which effects an entrance and giveth power of understanding to the heart; and without such an operation no one can receive or understand the word.

If this were true, no one could be responsible for the way he conducts himself as he is incapable of understanding what to do to please God. Therefore man could not be responsible for his life of sinfulness as there was no ability on his part to know God's will. As this would leave man with no will but his own, he has done the best he could when he followed it. Responsibility is measured by ability. The extent of one is the extent of the other. As there would be no ability till the operation of the Spirit upon the heart there could be no accountability until the operation of the Spirit upon the heart. But there can be no just condemnation (and God is just) where there is no accountability. Therefore there could be no condemnation without an operation of the Spirit, hence the operation of the Spirit, according to such a theory brings damnation and not justification. See?

But as it is not our purpose at present to discuss the operation of the Spirit we shall leave this thought with you and proceed to show what the word of God does.

The word of God is quick and powerless, sharper than any two-edged sword. Heb. 4:12. Quick means alive, therefore the word of God is alive—not a dead letter.

The word of God is powerful, yes, powerful to save, for Peter was to speak words (word of God) whereby the Gentiles were to be saved (Acts 11:14).

It, the word of God or gospel, is the power of God unto salvation to every one who believeth, to the Jews first and also to the Greek (Rom. 1:16).

What does the word of God do? (1) It begets (James 1:18). But how does it beget? Paul says he begat the Corinthians through the gospel (I Cor. 4:15). (2) By it we are born (I Pet. 1:22, 25).

Those who have their souls purified are born of God. The soul is purified by obeying the truth—word of God. Therefore, as Peter puts it, we are born of the word of God by obeying it.

By it we live. Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). "As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word (of God) that ye may grow thereby (I Pet. 2:2).

By it we defend ourselves. It is our sword (Eph. 6:17).

The word of God sanctifies. "Sanctify them through thy word thy word is truth" (Jno. 17:17).

The word of God has cleansing power. "Now are ye clean through the word which I have spoken unto you" (Jno. 15:3).

We are saved by the word of God. "Wherefore lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness and receive with meekness the engrafted word which is able to save your souls" (James 1:21).

The word of God gives us light. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path" (Psa. 119:105).

We get understanding by the word of God The opening of thy words giveth light. It giveth understanding unto the simple (Psa. 119:130). It is by the word of God that we know of God, of Christ, of angels, of heaven, of the devil, and of hell. The word of God tells the origin and destiny of man.

Even those who say the word of God is a dead letter, will not deny that the people who believe and faithfully keep the word of God will be saved eternally. Therefore I would suggest that you be more careful to maintain good works as the word of God directs and worry less the operation of the Spirit.

"Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I will also keep thee from the hour of temptation, which cometh upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth" (Rev. 3:10).

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE REPORT

The Annual Conference was held at the Fairview school house about four miles south of Holbrook. Sister Cora Harlan, who lives about half a mile from the meeting place, gave us the use of her large house to serve and prepare the meals in. Everything for our comfort was at our disposal.

Everything indicated that the good brethren in the vicinity had neither spared their time, thought nor money in providing those things necessary for the comfort of each one.

we owe to them a great debt of gratitude for their efforts.

A cook was hired by the brethren there, and the brothers and sisters waited on the table. Every thing was fresh from the country gardens, which was greatly enjoyed by those who live in the city. Everyone, old and young, seemed to be delighted with the menu.

Now I shall attempt to tell of the many good things of the Conference.

The meetings were a feast of good things from the first to the last. Regrets were heard on every hand that the time was drawing to a close. Everyone said, "This is the best conference yet." We had from two to three sermons each day, which were preached by Bro. Jos. Williams, of Forest, Ind., and Bro. O. J. Allard, of Ft. Dodge, Iowa. Bro. Williams gave us many fine and helpful talks. Not only in his sermons but in our other sessions during each day. Bro. Allard gave us some fine sermons and helped us more than we can express in the Bible readings and in the other sessions.

Every meeting was well attended and the best of interest manifested. The members present showed an unusual appetite for strong spiritual food.

During business sessions reports from the different churches were given, which showed that at each place the brethren were doing their best to keep active in God's work.

The following officers were elected: President, J. H. Adams; vice president, R. P. Story; secretary, Ola Crouch; treasurer, J. A. Williamson; corresponding secretary, Hal Harlan.

The young people had their session each day, which was lead by Sister Eva Sterns, of Sac City, Iowa. She gave us many fine thoughts in her talks, and took up with us the study of the book of Genesis, so that we can now take up the study of any of the other books in the Bible in a profitable way. The young people certainly owe Sister Sterns a debt of gratitude for what she did for them. We all truly hope she will come back to our conference next year and help us again.

During the whole meeting the registration committee reported that one hundred and fifty registered, and that at the last session Sunday evening an attendance of 106. The school house was well crowded and many stood on the outside.

Sunday afternoon we went to the Republican river where we had the pleasure and joy of seeing two young sisters put on the name of Christ. We hope and pray that they will always stand firm and never be ashamed of the step they have taken.

This is a short report of what we enjoyed in company with those of like precious faith. Let us all hope and pray that we may meet in the kingdom, if not again in this world of sin. But let each one begin now to plan on attending the conference next year. Those who never have attended don't know what a feast they miss each time.

SPIRITUAL GROWTH

COL. 2:6, 7

W. P. Jones

At this time of the year there everywhere abound evidence of growth in nature's kingdom. The seed which contains the germinal principle of life is deposited in the soil. If conditions are favorable, there is a threefold growth: (a) downward, (b) upward, (c) outward.

1. In its growth downward it takes root, whereby it is able to extract deeply from the soil and absorb the moisture necessary to life and growth; 2. Upward in order to form a body or trunk that will support branches to hold the fruit that will later be produced; 3. Outward that it may be larger, giving form, roundity, strength, etc. Now, Paul says in this lesson "As you have received Christ, so walk ye in him, rooted and built up in him and established in the faith as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving" (Col. 2:6-8).

Now, the above sets forth three fold growth in grace, rooted, settled, established in the faith of the Son of God. First, begin right; a good beginning is essential. What the foundation is to a house, faith is to the Christian life. If the foundation consists of faith, and increase of faith is necessary to growth or development in the divine life, whatever is necessary to the foundation is necessary to spiritual development. But upon what or in what does faith stand? Listen to Paul, the apostle: "And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of man's wisdom declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified. * * * * And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and power (What for, Paul?) That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God" (1 Cor. 2:1-5).

Upon what does your faith stand, on the testimony of God or of men? This downward growth is necessary to our firmness or stability. Like the mighty oak that has withstood the storms for ages, still stands because it is deeply rooted with a solid growth downward.

Second, "built up." This suggests upward growth because it leads to a higher life, individuality and collectively; as a body—be church. Onward and upward should be the slogan of every soldier of the cross.

Third, "Abounding therein," says Paul in verse 7. This suggests, in the third place, the outward growth. Now, as a tree grows outward from the heart, so must our growth be from the heart, all acceptable service must come from the heart, hence the necessity of purity of heart—sincerity of purpose. The condition of heart, whatever it was in the beginning, will permeate or express itself in every subsequent act or obedience. If the fountain is pure, the stream will be pure (Matt. 7:16). The animal kingdom subsists upon both the vegetable and mineral kingdom, likewise our outward growth is made to depend on the downward and upward growth, and all three on the food taken in order of development. But what is the means of growth in Christ? As this is so important we will let the great Teacher answer; "Man (the inner man) shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (Matt. 4:4). This shows plainly how we are to live. But the objection says, "This only shows the word of God is necessary to life, and life is not growth." Yes, but life is necessary to growth, as there can be no growth without life. But let us consult Peter, the divine philosopher: "Wherefore laying aside all malice, and all guile and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby" (1 Pet. 2:1,2). Now, on becoming a lovely tree in the garden or vineyard of the Lord and bearing the fruit of the Spirit (Gal. 5:22) we must grow in grace, but in order to grow we must receive the word. Then our growth as Christians is gradual, that is, step by step, not like the modern Sankies, full grown at the first or second work of grace, as they say, and like the wasp of a certain variety of frog, larger at first than at any other time. The Savior says: "The earth bringeth forth fruit of itself—first the blade then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear" (Mark 4:28). So their theory it at antipodes or squarely a contradiction of the teachings of the Savior and the apostles. Let us be sure our growth upward is not like those who built the tower of Babel, or the prayer of the Pharisee, which spirit was one of self laudation towering high to glory in self and to be seen of men. But on the other hand, the greatest should be humble, be the servant, of all, and take counsel from David when he said, in the first chapter of Psalms "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly * * * * but his delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night. He shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of waters that bringeth fruit in his season, his leaf also shall not wither and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper."

Y. M. C. A. REPLY TO ROMANISTS

The Y. M. C. A. admits to association membership decently behaved persons whether Celiristians or not, but does not allow them to vote on questions of policy unless they are members of protestant evangelical churches. The Roman church, alarmed at the number of Romanists seeking such membership have attacked the Y. M. C. A. in various quarters.

From "Twenty-Third Street Men," a Y. M. C. A. periodical, edited by Burt. B. Farnsworth, we take the following extracts in reply to an attack upon the Y. M. C. A. by a Romanist periodical called America:

We are taken to task for using the word "Romanist," which, we are told, is very distasteful to the members of the Roman Catholic church. E. Spillane, S. J., takes the laboring oar in America in behalf of our insulted members. If he knew the facts of his church as well as he does its traditions, and was as loyal to them, he would not make such a statement. He would know that the encyclical of Leo XIII., issued in 1889 concerning Heckerism, states that the proper and legal title of that church is "Roman Church," omitting the word Catholic. That being true, the members are "Romanists." We supposed Leo XIII. to be good authority, especially in the eyes of Roman Catholics. If he is not, we shall be glad to be set right and to apoligize for the use of the word "Romanist."

America complains because the Romanist members are not permitted to vote in the association. How long since the Roman church began giving its members a voice in determining the policy of that organiation? For 1,500 years that church has stood like adamant against giving the laymen any voice in determining any question of policy in the church. The only religious freedom granted the laymen by the Roman Church is the freedom to obey the "commands" of the Italian hierarchy handed down through the priesthood and the privilege of paying the bills. Unless they accept willingly these privileges they "dishonor the church and themselves."

Until the priesthood becomes solicitous enough for the rights of the individual church members to give them a voice in the affairs of the church, it is rather unbecoming for the priesthood to criticise the Y. M. C. A. for not granting what they themselves have refused to grant.

If the Roman Church can hold its members, well and good; if it fails, it is not our fault, and it is failing. Its present adherents in the United States, counting every man, woman and child in Roman Catholic families, according to the Official Directory of that Church for 1911, is 15,155,069. Father McCabe, in "The Decay of the Church of Rome," says that if the church had held its own families and their children during the last twenty-five years, without any conversions from Protestantism or increase from immigration, it would now number 23,000,000 members.

The Y. M. C. A. has never conducted a campaign of proselyting. It is a Protestant organization, but it has admitted to its membership men of all creeds and of no creeds. America would like to have us shut our doors in the face of any Romanist who applies for membership, but the Roman Church never shuts its doors in the face of Protestants who wish to enter it. In fact, the Paulist Fathers and many others of that denomination make a business of proselyting from Protestantism. Why does the Roman Church criticise the Y. M. C. A. for an alleged policy which policy that Church has always followed? America says further that "Catholicity is Christianity, and Christianity is Catholicity," which is a re-emphasizing the position of the Roman Church. Since the fourth century that church has held that there is no salvation outside of its membership, and that all outside, including Protestants, are heretics and on the the road to everlasting torment.

The Roman Catholic member often does not know what his "lawful superiors" have pledged him to, but his "lawful superiors" know and some day he may learn. He is learning now. If he will read the Western Watchman, a Roman Catholic paper published in St. Louis and edited by a Roman priest, he will find in the issue of September 28, 1911, the editor saying, "Protestantism is ruffianism organized into a religion," and further on, "All Protestants are criminals." His statements have not been repudiated by the hierachy. Why not?

If the Roman Catholic Church wants to hold its members, let it do more for them, and not blame us for what we do. These men come to the association because they can get what their church does not and will not give. In spite of years of protest from the Roman priesthood, the number of Roman Catholic members in the Y. M. C. A. has steadily increased. There is a reason for it. Let the priesthood face the facts and quit "condemning."

We have never heard of a single criticism from a Roman Catholic member in regard to his being discriminated against. In fact, he has more voice in the affairs of the association than he has ever had in his own church, which is so excited about his not being allowed to vote in the association.

We hope our attitude is made plain in the above statements.

FLEE INTO EGYPT

Matt 2:13

A. D. E.

Rev. 11:8 tells us that the place "where . . . . our Lord was crucified" is spiritually called Egypt. The literal location was in Palestine, but, speaking spiritually, "Christ, our Passover," was sacrificed in Egypt (1 Cor. 5:7; Exod. 12). According to the declaration of Jehovah, the seed of Abraham must first pass through a bitter experience in the land of Egypt before their final exaltation (Gen. 15:13). How fitting then that Egypt should symbolize the place of the cross! Egypt precedes Canaan; the cross precedes the crown—not only for the children of Israel, or for our Lord, but for every present-day disciple as well. In seeking the earthly, "the paths of glory lead but to the grave," but in seeking the spiritual, the path of the grave leads but to glory. Take heed therefore lest thou miss the glory by refusing the path that leads thereto.

God said to Jacob, "I am God, the God of thy father; fear not to go down into Egypt; for I will there make of thee a great nation; I will go down with thee into Egypt; and I will also surely bring thee up again (Gen. 46:3, 4). So we say by application, "Fear not to go down into the place of death with Christ, for God is with thee and He will surely bring thee up again in resurrection life" (Rom. 6:4, 5). Dismiss the hesitating fears which hitherto have caused a shrinking back and let them no longer deter you from yielding absolutely to the crucifixion. Christ died that He might "deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage" (Heb. 2:15). The fear of death with Christ produces a bondage from which only that death can deliver. "If ye be dead with Christ" (Col. 2:20), why that slavish bondage of conscience to Pharisaical rules? "If ye be risen with Christ" (Col. 3:1, 2), why those carnal ambitions?

We read that "Jacob went down into Egypt and died" (Acts 7:15). God's promise that He would surely bring him up again out of Egypt found fulfilment in reference to Jacob individually, when his body was carried back to the land of Canaan by his own sons, for burial (Gen. 50:13). What a mockery this must have seemed to those acquainted with the facts, who yet did not comprehend the grander fulfilment which was to be realized when a whole nation which sprang from him was brought into the land of promise! So it may seem with those who go down into the place of death with Jesus Christ. The individual life may seem to be lost, but ultimately it will be found to have resulted in greatest fruitfulness. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit" (Jno. 12:24).

Sister Edna I. Smith was united in marriage to Bro. Greenleaf P. Allard Aug. 19, 1912. Editorial congratulations. Friends will please note that Bro. and Sister Allard will be at home after Oct. 1, at 1229 Sixth avenue, north, Ft. Dodge, Iowa.

INDIANA CONFERENCE NOTICE

To the brethren of the Church of God in Indiana:

This call is made for assembling of ourselves together in conference at the Hillsburg church in Clinton County, on September 19 to 22, inclusive. Those coming from a distance please write Bro. Wm. Huffer, Michigantown, Ind. and conveyances will be provided. Notice is given also that a vote will be taken relative to a change of that portion of our constitution requiring the holding of not less than two conferences yearly, it being deemed advisable by some of the brethren owing to lack of funds, that we reduce the number to a single yearly conference. Each church is desired to express themselves in person or by letter.

SOME THINGS TO THINK ABOUT.

D. C. Janes.

Wholeheartedness.

This is a quality which God loves to see exist in man. The Most High is entitled to wholeheartedness service. This he asks and we should not try to satisfy him with less.

The Great Commandments

When Christ was asked "which is the great commandment in the law?" he answered: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul and with all thy might" (Matt. 22:37). This is wholeheartedness.

Solomon's Words

The wise man said: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might" (Eccl. 9:10). In the face of this, we should not be indifferent nor half-hearted regarding the service of the Lord. Who enjoys seeing a man working sluggishly?

What Paul Says About It

"Whatsoever ye do, work heartily, as unto the Lord, and not unto men" (Col. 3:23). We are assured that our labor is not in vain in the Lord and that an immense reward will be given to the acceptable laborers in the vineyard of Jesus Christ. Why then should we not be wholehearted, energetic Christians, driving ahead at our work for God like those who love their Master and their employment and who are expecting promotion on some good day to come?

SMALL THINGS TEST MEN

In small things lie the crucibles and touchstones. Any hypocrite will come to worship, but it is not every hypocrite that will attend prayer-meetings, or read the Bible in secret, or speak privately of the things of God to the saints. You shall find the same true in other things. A man who is no Christian very likely will not tell you a downright lie by saying that black is white, but he will not hesitate to declare that whitey brown is white—he will go that length. Now, the Christian will not go half way to a falsehood, nay, he scorns to go an inch on that road. He will no more cheat you out of two pence farthing than he would out of two thousand pounds. He will not rob you of an elf. Even a Pharisee will ask Christ to his house to sit at meat with him—he is willing to entertain a great religious leader at his table; but it is not every one who will stoop down and unloose his shoes: for that very Pharisee who made the feast never brought him water to wash his feet, nor gave him the sincerity of his hospitality by forgetting the little things, I will be bound to say Martha and Mary never forgot to unloose his shoelatchets, and that Lazarus never failed to see that his feet were washed. Look, then, I pray you, as Christians, to the service of Christ in the obscure things, in the things that are not recognized by men, in the matters that have no honor attached to them, for by this shall your love be tried.

—Spurgeon.

In life's small things be resolute and great
To keep thy muscle trained.
Knowest thou when fate
Thy measure takes? or when she'll say to thee,
"I find thee worthy. Do this deed for me."

PROGRAM

Of the Twenty-fifth Annual Conference and Camp Meeting of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus in Iowa, August 24, September 1, 1912, Chautauqua Park Iowa.

Dear brothers and Sisters of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus:
Greeting:

As it nears the time set for the Annual Conference, which will be held as usual at our Camp ground at Waterloo, Iowa, this year from August 24th to September 1st, inclusive, we send you this greeting and a printed program.

We invite you to be present and take part in the various meetings, and to assist in making plans for the next year's work. You should be on hand to hear the reports of officers and evangelists, and to learn how the money you have contributed to the support of the Conference has been expended.

Those who have attended the Conference heretofore and experienced the pleasure of associating with those of like precious faith in a meeting of this kind, and of listening to the word of God from the lips of those who speak, it is not necessary to urge to be present, as they know of the benefits to be derived from a meeting of this kind, but to those who have not as yet met with us, we urge upon you the necessity of partaking of these annual feasts of spiritual food, so that in the months to come we may all be better able to overcome the evils of the world and have new courage to press forward to the mark of the high calling.

Good speakers will be in attendance to preach the word. All should make a special effort to attend this meeting.

General Instructions

If our "Conference Baggageman" is at the depot when you arrive, give him your baggage checks; if he is not there bring your checks to the camp ground and give them to the president.

To reach the camp ground, you may board any one of the following street cars: Cedar Falls Interurban, East Fourth Street or Loop Get off at Chautauqua Park.

Tents will be furnished free. Bed springs or mattresses 50c each for the 10 days. Blankets and comforts 10c each per night. Beds furnished transients at 25c per night. Meals served at the dining hall at the camp ground. Letters may be addressed to you as follows: Waterloo, Iowa, Park Station.

Keep this program and bring it with you; also tablet and pencil, Bible and hymn book. Come to stay all through the meeting if possible.

For further information write O. J. Allard, Fort Dodge, Iowa.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 509 pages, 5&7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in white cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Higgins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water, a fountain of purity.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST

A SERMON BY ROBERT G. HUGGINS, AUTHOR OF "THE BIBLE; ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS," AND EDITOR OF THE RESTITUTION

Text: "I delivered unto you first o fall (en protois, Among the Foremost Points) that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures" (1 Cor. 15:3).

Brethren, Sisters and Friends: The sum of religion, as seen by modern and popular sentiment, is abstract sincerity, goodness of character, piety of sentiment, etc.; belief of doctrine is at a discount. I have heard ministers of different churches boast that they had not preached a "doctrinal sermon" for years. Let me, however, show you

I. The Importance of Doctrine—The word "doctrine," at which many take fright, is really a harmless word; it means simply teaching, instruction, what is taught. When ministers, then, boast that they have not preached a doctrinal sermon for years they are boasting in plain English that they have not taught anything, have imparted no instruction to the people, for years! Turn from them to the example of our Lord and see the difference between them. His first sermon was a doctrinal one. "He opened his mouth and taught them" (Matt. 5:2). "And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings"—had concluded his sermon—"the people were astonished at his doctrine; for he taught them as one having authority" (Matt. 7:28, 29). Denominating the things taught in this discourse as the "doctrine of Christ," John sets forth its funadmental character in the words: "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine (of Christ), receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds" (II John 9, 10, 11). The essential nature of the "doctrine of Christ" is here made obvious; abiding in the Father and the Son is conditioned upon us abiding in the doctrine; if we abide not in it or "transgress" it in any way, we "have not God"! And Paul sounds the same note of warning in writing to Timothy: "Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee" (I Tim. 4:16). Since Christ preached doctrine; since abiding in the Father and the Son depends upon our acceptance and adherence to the doctrine he preached; and since Paul says that my salvation and the salvation of those who hear me depends upon taking heed and continuing in doctrine, I have no apology to offer for preaching this doctrinal sermon on the death of Christ.

I. The Importance of Christ's Death—No one can fail to see the importance of Christ's death who stops to consider what was accomplished by it. According to Daniel, the cutting off of the Messiah was to "finish the transgression, make an end of sins, make reconciliation for iniquity, seal up the vision and prophecy, and anoint the most Holy" (Dan. 9:24, 25). "He put away sin by the sacrifice of himself" (Heb. 9:26). "He died for the ungodly" (Rom. 5:6); they can be saved from wrath only "through him" (ver. 9). "We were reconciled to God by the death of his Son," declares Paul, through whom we "have now received the atonement" (Rom. 5:10, 11). Without the death of Christ no "end of sins" could have been made; no "reconciliation of iniquity;" no reconciliation with God; no atonement; and consequently no salvation would be possible.

II. Christ's Death Is Part of the Gospel—It is asserted with emphasis and repeatedly in the holy scriptures that no one will be saved except believers of the gospel (Mark 16:16; Rom. 1:16; I Cor. 1:21; II Thess. 1:10; 2:10-12). Let me quote from Paul in I Cor. 15:1 "I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand; by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain." Here he makes it plain that the salvation of the Corinthians hinged upon them believeing the gospel which he had preached, and by them keeping it in "memory." Then he proceeds to tell what he had preached, what they had "received," "believed," and were keeping "in memory"—what matters involving their salvation: "I delivered unto you first of all* that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures." He declares that the death of Christ was one of the "first" things in his gospel message. To the Romans he says that one condition upon which the investiture of righteousness depends is a belief of the death and resurrection of Christ: "To whom it (righteousness) shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead; who was delivered for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification" (Rom. 4:24, 25). The word "therefore" with which Rom. 5:1 begins shows that when the apostle there says, "Therefore being justified by faith," he was talking about the faith which he had just defined in the previous chapter. If Christ was not "delivered" to death for our offenses, he could not be "raised again for our justification." Keeping in mind that the "faith" the apostle speaks of is faith in the death and resurrection of Christ; we can see how much he predicates upon that belief: "Being justified by faith (in the death and resurrection of Christ), we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ: by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God," (Rom. 5:1, 2). "Justification," "peace with God," access to "grace," and "the hope of the glory of God"—all these blessings of salvation are made contingent upon our faith in the death and resurrection of Christ. If we do not believe in the death of Christ we cannot be "justified by faith;" if not justified we cannot have access to God's "grace;" if not in God's favor we are cut off fro mthe hope of the glory of God," and are consequently hopeless. We are not stronger in these statements than Paul; he is their author. In assuring the Thessalonians that their dead would be raised to life as the Lord had been brought from the tomb, he says: "This we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent (go before) them that are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend fro heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up (conveyed or snatched away) together with them in clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words" (I Thess. 4:15-18). All the "comfort" of these words; all the promises they contain; all the hope they give the living and the dead, are conditioned on an "if," and that if is a matter of belief; and that belief is about the death and resurrection of Christ conjointly: "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again" (ver 14).

*"First of all" (en protois) is literally "Among the chief things;" things that are foremost; the foremost points (Heb. 6:1). See the translation of MacKnight, Kneeland Bonquest, Young, Emphatic Diaglott, etc. The statement has no relation to time, but to importance. The things of the kingdom were preached before the death of Christ in point of time (Matt. 4:23; Luke 8:1; 9:2, 6; 18:31-35); afterwards the "things concerning Jesus (belief)" his death, burial, resurrection, etc., were added to the gospel of the kingdom, as part of the gospel, because they are the means through which the kingdom may be obtained (Acts 8:12; 19:8; 20:25; 28:23, 30, 31). The death of Christ, Paul is careful to show, has been lifted up to equality with the chief things of the kingdom.

Our salvation, then, clearly depends upon us believing the death of Christ. It may be that some are wondering why we are putting so much stress upon this simple and "first" element of the gospel. They may be saying to themselves: "Why all this ado about the death of Christ?

IV. Who Doubts It?. Everybody professing Christianity believes in the death of Christ." It is just because I am suspicious that many do not believe it that I am pressing the subject so vehemently upon your attention. I have grave apprehensions that many repudiate this fundamental truth of the gospel, even among those professing to be Christians, and I will give you some of the reasons on which I base my apprehensions. When a little boy in school I studied Steel's Physiology. The first sentence in the book is, "Our bodies are the houses we live in." Here is a clear distinction between us and our bodies; they are "houses," and we are the tenants who live in them. Suppose a neighbor's house takes fire and is totally burned, but the tenant of the house, the neighbor, gets out unhurt, possessing life and consciousness. If anyone should report that he was burned up would they not circulate a falsehood? Certainly; all can distinguish between the house which was burned, and the man himself who made his exist out of the house, with life and consciousness retained. Now if the body of Christ was the "house" in which he lived, and it, when it died, Christ got out of it, with life entire and conscious faculties unimpaired, have you not denied the death of Christ?

Startling as the statement may seem, shocking as it may be to some of you, I must say emphatically that all who believe in the immortality of the soul deny the death of Christ. If you want this affirmation corroborated you have it in their garbling of God's word to sustain the dogma. As a result of wresting the scriptures, which is a sin that God says is worthy of destruction (II Pet. 3:16), they plead that Christ and the thief went to paradise the day they died (Luke 23:43). If Christ went there that day, did he go dead or alive? You say, "His body died." What of it? That was only the "house" he lived in. Suppose that tumbled down; suppose it did die, and Christ, the tenant of the house, got out with life and mental attributes untouched by death, and went away in company with the thief to paradise alive and conscious—did Christ die?

Again, by handling the word deceitfully (II Cor. 4:2), ignorantly and unintentionally it may be, they claim, and seriously too, that Christ preached to the souls of the antidiluvians during the three days that his body was dead (I Pet. 3:18-20). Ask them, Were the antidiluvians good or bad? they answer, Bad. Ask them, Where do bad people go when they die? they reply, To hell, a place of eternal torment. Ask them what kind of a place that is and they will respond like the old darkey when he said in a sermon on this subject, that he could not adequately describe it; he could only attempt to give them a few glimpses and hintlets. To give them a vague conception of how hot a place it is he said: "Take all the coal in the world, pour on it all the oil in the world; ignite it and when it is burning at its utmost fury, take and immortal soul out of hell and throw it into that appalling tempest, and it would freeze to death!" Pretty warm place, I must say. And now seriously, my friends, a question. When dealing with Luke 23:43, our friends send Christ with the thief to paradise to bask in bliss; forgetting that when they deal with I Pet. 3:18-20 they send Christ to quite a different region. But waiving this contradiction, a serious question now confronts us. If, when Christ's body died on the cross, he got out of it alive and went into a missionary enterprise among the doomed in hell (where it was impossible to make a single convert!); if he preached in that hot place for three days and nights; of course he preached and sweat, and sweat and preached—but was he dead?

V. "Christ Died According to the Scriptures"—When Paul declares that we are saved by the gospel "received," believed" and kept in "memory," and that prominent as a "first" element of it is that "Christ died for our sins," he is careful to state that we must believe in his death "according to" a standard— "the scriptures" (I Cor. 15:1-3). Our salvation depends upon us believing the gospel; belief of the gospel depends upon belief of the death of Christ; and belief of the death of Christ depends upon unbelieving that he died "according to the scriptures.' The question of paramount importance then is, What is death in the scriptures? They define it, not as a going to heaven, paradise, or hell, but as returning to dust (Gen. 3:19); not as dying and still living, but as dying and not living (Isa. 38:1); not as a going to heaven to praise God better than here, but as going to the grave (ver. 10). "For the grave cannot praise thee, death cannot celebrate thee; they that go down into the pit cannot hope for thy truth" (ver. 18). They declare that while the living can praise God, the dead cannot (Isa. 38:19); that they do not remember God, or give him thanks (Psa. 6:5); that their thoughts have perished (Psa. 146:4); that they do not know anything; their love, hatred, every work, devise, knowledge and wisdom—all our mental attributes have perished (Eccl. 9:5, 6, 10); and that consequently if man ever lives "again" he will have to be "raised out of his sleep" (Job 14:14, 12). "There is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branch thereof will not cease. Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof die in the gorund; yet through the scent of water it will bud and bring forth boughs like a plant" (Job 14:7-9). The tree apparently dead, is not really dead. In contrast with this, of man it is said, "But man dieth, and wasteth away, yea, man giveth up the spirit and where is he?" Deader than a tree; life-principle wholly extinct; for "man lieth down and ariseth not; till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep" (ver. 12). As death is the extinction of life, this question becomes a pertinent one, "If a man die (like this), shall he live again?" (ver. 14). "Again," you know, repeats. If man is immortal he cannot die; his body may die, but he lives on in death; he lives on after the resurrection; and he lives on through eternity—his life is possessed without interruption forever and forever. He can never "live again," because he never quits living! But if man is mortal and ceases to live at death, then, when he is raised from the dead he can "live again."

Now when Paul says, "Christ died according to the scriptures," he means that he died according to these testimonies. Do you believe them? Or do you contemptuously reject them and say with the pride of a wounded spirit, "Why, you make out Christ's death and the death of the entire family of man to be like the death of beasts!" Precisely that is what the scriptures say, and Christ died "according to" them! Hear them: "I said in mine heart concerning the estate of the sons of men, that God might manifest them, and that they might see that they themselves are beast. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them: as the one dieth, so dieth the other. Yea, they have all one breath (ruach, spirit); so that a man (when he is dead) hath no preeminence above a beast. * * * All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again" (Eccl. 3:18-20). "The scriptures" here quoted, "according to" which Paul avers Christ died, declare that God has "manifested the sons of men." What does that manifestation reveal them to be—gods, angels, immortal souls—what? "That they are beasts!" What "one" thing in particular befalls them alike? "As the one dieth, so dieth the other!" They die alike; and after they are dead they "all go to the same place; all are of dust, and all turn to dust again." Both die alike, both dwell in the same place, and both are in the same condition in death, "so that a (dead) man hath no preeminence above a beast." If you do not believe Christ died "according to" these scriptures, you do not believe the gospel Paul preached, and cannot hope for the salvation which God offers you through the death of his Son.

VI. Christ's Death Under New Testament Representations—In my prereration I wish to show that the death of Christ means the same thing in the New Testament as it does in the "scriptures" of the Old Testament. In its phraseology his life "vanished away" like vapor (James 4:14); he is said to have "lost" his life (Matt. 10:39); to have "given" it for his disciples (ver. 11); to "lay it down" for his sheep (ver. 15); and then at his resurrection to "take it again" (ver. 17, 18)—all meaningless and impossible statements if Christ did not sacrifice his life on the cross. Who owns what has "vanished away?" Who possesses what he has "lost?" Who holds in his hand what he has "laid down?" How can one "take again" what he has never let loose? And how can Jesus have been alive when he was dead, when he declares himself: "I am he that liveth, AND WAS DEAD; AND BEHOLD, I AM ALIVE FOR EVERMORE!" (Rev. 1:18).

Reader, consider this sermon, Bible in hand. After a studious reading, pass it on to your friends who have immortal souls, and it will cast off the unclean spirit. Five cents for (two copies; twenty-five cents per dozen. Order from the author, Robt. G. Huggins, 10823 Lee avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

UNBELIEF

By S. Roxana Wince

Tom Paine gloried for a time in his unbelief of the Book that came from God. All his talents were used to that end. He talked against it in private and in public. He used his pen with tireless industry that he might overthrow the faith of the world in that precious Book.

"Its predictions had not come true," he said. "No nations as countless as the stars and thousands, had sprung from Abraham of Ur of the Chaldees. Neither Abraham nor his children were in possession of the land of promise. Ten of the tribes were lost, never to be found, and Judah with the among the Gentiles—a poor, oppressed remnant of Levi, was scattered and down trodden race, who would never return to their land," according to orthodox teaching, "He could not believe in a God who would make such splendid and explicit promises to a man and to his descendants of inheritance in a country, that the man had been called out of his own home land to view from all points of the compass, and to which that God had given him a deed of eternal possession confirmed by an oath, only to set that deed and those promises aside, in casting off and utterly rejecting the seed of his friend."

Alas for the teaching—the teaching that makes infidels of men! If Tom Paine had only known the truth; if he could only have seen as we do, that "the promises made of God to the fathers" are to be literally fulfilled in the return of Israel to their own land and in the reign of Jesus "over the house of Jacob forever," he would not have groped in the darkness of unbelief through life, nor have died in such agony and remorse. It will not do to substitute heaven as the place that God decded to Abraham's seed; the seed put into Abraham's hands gives us no boundary lines of a country away from this earth.

The river of Egypt and the great river, the river Euphrates, are not in heaven, nor have the Kenites, the Kenizzites, the Kadmonites, the Hittites, the Perizzites, the Rephaims, the Amorites, the Canaanites, the Girgashites and the Jebusites ever dwelt there. The deed will hold no place that these people have not once possessed. Abraham was made "heir of the world," not of heaven. The heirs of a man, cannot take the deed, or will, that gives them farms in section so and so of Washington township, Kos. County, State of Indiana, and claim certain lands in the valley of the Rhine. The thing is too preposterous to think of.

People say lightly that "it makes no difference where the place is," and yet, God makes the place, the all important thing,—the very gospel upon which our faith must hang. That Israel possessed the central land for a time does not fulfill the promises; their tenure of that land must hold good for eternity. Tom Paine saw is as the churches do not see it, and when the churches said that "Israel would never have that land," he rejected the Bible as false.

But we wonder—as we read his dying words—If he did not at last find out that it was the churches that were teaching falsehoods and not God? It must be so, he must have learned that God has indeed "given the earth to the children of men," that "the earth is to abide forever;" that the children of Israel are to be literally restored to the Holy Land, the curse be taken off the earth, the tabernacle of God be with men, the nations be saved, and the immortalized ones of all ages, become the joint rulers with Jesus over all the kingdoms of the world, for he said, "I would give worlds, if I had them. If 'The Age of Reason' had never been published, O Lord help me! O Christ help me! Stay with me! It is hell to be left alone!" Unbelief brings no comfort to a dying man. And to the man or woman who has been a leader and teacher in the ranks of unbelief, remorse and terror are almost sure to come at the close of life. Work done for the devil is very unsatisfactory work. We cannot pillow our heads on his breast, nor trust in him to be raised from the dead. To take his name on ourselves and to enter his service, is only to get our pay in "death," for death is the only wage he can give.

But to have our feet set on the immovable Rock, is to make sure of a blissful close to the present life, and to have certain hope of resurrection glory. No one ever heard the dying Christian, wishing for worlds to give that he might blot out what he had written to strengthen the faith of men in the word of God.

Unbelief finds destruction staring it in the face at the end; while belief sees the whole horizon, glowing with the rainbow colors of deathless hope. Believe, obey, and work for God and be safe.

If we are trained from youth to grow on the trellis of Christ we can hardly be separated from it, but if we wait until we are old and have been accustomed to trailing on the ground, it will be hard to train us to stay fast.—Florence Westfall.

If you are on the mountain top you had better stay there, because if you get off the Lord may test you.—J. H. Anderson.

THE NAME QUESTION

Charles Clifford Maple

The following article appeared some months ago in one of our exchanges published by The Advent Christian People. In view of the fact that there are many who think human names are proper and "It makes no difference what the name may be," "There is nothing in a name, any way," we publish this article and the reply:

Having read several articles by able writers on the proper and correct church name, the question which confronts us is, Is Adventism as a name, identifying us as a people, is the name unscriptural?

Let us consider this question from a Bible standpoint. The first Adventist pointed out in God's word is Enoch. Jude 14. The last Adventist mentioned is John in Rev. 22:20. Prominent Adventists were the Apostles. Positive Adventists are such as Job, David, Isaiah and Abraham. Celestial Adventists are the heavenly an[illegible] 1 Peter 1:12. King of Ad[illegible] groaning creation. Rom. 8:19. [illegible] The best book on Adventism is the Bible. The grandest promises in the Bible are to Adventists. The grandest promises in the Bible are to Adventists. The greatest of all songs in the Bible is the Advent song that will be sung by the Redeemed. Rev. 5:9, 10; 1 Cor. 15:57. They will outsing, outring, outshout, the angelic song of Bethlehem. The gospel story is the good news of Adventism. The prophetic people in whom God delights as outlined in type, symbol and prophecy, as no other people are Adventists.

"Christ's first advent was only a prelude of what is to follow. His mission, teaching, suffering and death were only a means of the end to bring about the final great triumphant victory over death, sin and the grave, and to bring in everlasting peace and righteousness which will be accomplished at his second advent.

"Take Adventism out of the Bible and there will be but few leaves left besides the covers. The greatest, grandest shout in the universe will be when Adventism is accomplished. Rev. 5:13.

The following names are applied to God's people: Brethren, Friends, Disciples, Household of Faith, Church, Church of Christ, Church of the Firstborn, Church of God. All these names are used by Christ and the apostles, are therefore scriptural, none of these names condemned, none commanded. Furthermore, in the day and age in which we live a name in itself, like a label on a package, carries little weight. When these names were first applied to believers they carried weight. Today they have largely lost their significance. The same names are used to denote beliefs of opposite faiths.

So the name Adventist added to Christian Church gives it a significance. That the name is biblical, is beyond successful controversy. Hebrews 9:28. "Unto them that look for him shall he appear the second time without sin unto salvation." This question embraces our faith in God's word. As this verse was too long a name to adopt as a church name we have it condensed in one word, Adventism. All the talk about it being an unscriptural name amounts to nothing, as the word stamps us, as long as thus used, as people holding Bible truths, and a message due in the day in which we live, and until Jesus shall be revealed the second time.

The following is a reply to the article which appears as an editorial in another of our exchanges. We think this article and its reply are well worth the careful reading of every Bible student, especially any who may have occasion to meet those who contend for a human name.

The editor who replies to this article takes the position that the Church of God is the true Bible name.

Will our readers kindly consider with us the above statements in the Spirit of Christ. If there is any truth in them let us accept it. If on the other hand it is found to be all error let us reject it, for error will never save us. Prove all things, hold fast to that which is good.

The above writer says: "Let us [illegible] the question [illegible] plain. [illegible] did [illegible] out in [illegible] is John in Rev. 22:20? [illegible] examined the foregoing texts and fail to find the terms Advent, Adventism or Adventist. The writer says that Enoch was an Adventist. The Bible doesn't say so. On what authority, then, does he base his statement? Job, David and Abraham never claimed to be Adventists. Why does the writer claim it? Our Lord Jesus Christ never used such expressions as Advent, Adventist or Adventism. Why claim that He was king of Adventists?

"The grandest promises in the Bible are to Adventists." So? Give Scripture references please. "The best book on Adventism is the Bible." We could as truthfully say: "The best book on Astronomy is the Primer." The word Astronomy no where occurs in the Primer. The terms Advent, Adventist and Adventism are not found in the Bible. How then can the writer say: "Take Adventism out of the Bible and there will be but few leaves left besides the covers."

Notice again what he says about the names that are applied to God's people. "Brethren, Friends, Disciples." We understood that he was going to [illegible] ference has [illegible] Church. The names [illegible] are applied to individuals but never once to the Church. The same is true of the word "Christian." The term "Church of Christ" is not to be found in the Bible. Once we read of "Churches of Christ," which is a descriptive title the same as church of the first born, etc. I have children but my name isn't father, that word is descriptive of my relation to them. Christ is not a name at all but a title. So that "churches of Christ" is used to point out those churches that own Christ, the Anointed, as their head.

Is it true that names, like labels, carry but little weight? Is there a Mrs. DeBeer? If so let her call herself Smith for a while and see what a row it will stir up. Are there any little DeBeers? Let some one persist in calling one of them Jones and see what will happen. No significance in names? Try what has just been suggested to Bro. DeBeer and see.

"When these names were first applied to believers they carried weight. Today they have largely lost their significance." Why? If they had significance and weight when used by Christ and His chosen apostles, why haven't they now? Are we getting farther advanced than Christ and His colaborers? Are the terms saints, brethren, disciples, etc. too much behind the times? God pity a people that profess to be a Bible people that say, Bible language has no significance in the age in which we live.

"So the name Adventist added to Christian Church gives it a significance." And so our brethren, who claim to be a Bible people, must add a little to the Bible to give it significance. Of course, Christ and the apostles failed to express themselves in significant terms of the twentieth century and it needs twentieth century advancement to make up the deficiency and add the needed significance.

Of course, we realize that our Adventist brethren will cry out that advent means coming and coming means advent and that they are Adventists because they believe in the second coming of Christ. We will grant for the sake of the argument only that coming means advent and vice versa. What of it? That has no bearing on the name of the church. You are learners or disciples; why not the Disciples Church? You are all conditionalists; why not the Conditionalists Church? You are all baptists, why not the Baptist Church?

Of course you are making prominent the doctrine of Christ's coming. Any more so than Christ's Himself or Paul? Christ didn't call Himself an Adventist in order to be significant. Paul was not continually prating about Adventism in order to give weight to the doctrines he preached. Such terms are foreign to the Scriptures, either in the English or the original. We know of no version, no lexicon, no commentary, no concordance, that gives advent for any of the words that are translated coming or appearing. So we see that the name Advent has absolutely no Bible Foundation Whatever. From whence comes it then? From the Dictionary. There are some words that by common usage come to have certain meanings. We open our Dictionary and find the following: "Soul, the immortal spirit of man." Is this a true meaning? No. Common usage has given it this meaning. Our A. C. brethren repudiate this definition in no uncertain terms. Then why take a Dictionary name for a people who boast that they are a Bible people.

We here wish to quote a few words from one whom we consider one of the grandest men in the A. C. ranks—Eld. John A. Cargile. Although we have never seen him we admire him from what we have read of him and his writings.

If you will look in Present Truth Messenger of May 9th, on page 5 in Bro. Cargile's article on the pre-existence of Christ at the close of the first paragraph you will find the words which follow. "If it is not Bible language let us discard it, very kindly and lovingly. REAL CHRISTIANS WILL NOT BECOME OFFENDED IF WE WANT OUR IDEAS EXPRESSED IN BIBLE LANGUAGE." (Caps ours). That is just what we contend for—to have our ideas expressed in Bible language. "Real Christians will not be offended." Uncle John, will you stand by this principle on the name question? If so stick to the following:

"I have manifested THY (God's) NAME unto the men which thou gavest me." John 17. 6. "I have kept them in thy name," John 17:12. "Holy Father, keep through (Greek, in) THINE OWN NAME those whom thou hast given me." John 17:11. "Feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Acts 20:28. "Unto the Church of God which is at Corinth." 1 Cor. 1:2; 2 Cor. 1:1. "For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the Church of God?" 1 Tim. 3:5. "That thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, WHICH IS THE CHURCH OF THE LIVING GOD, the pillar and ground of the truth." 1 Tim. 3:15, "For I am the least of the apostles, ... because I persecuted the Church of God." 1 Cor. 15:9; Gal. 1:13. "For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ of (Greek, for or from) whom the whole family is heaven and earth is named." Eph. 3:14, 15.

The foregoing is Bible language. And there is not Bible language for any other name for the church. About one hundred times it is referred to as THE church. Some definite church? Which one? The Advent Christian Church? Not in Bible language. It is THE CHURCH OF GOD to which reference is made in every case (109 in all) where church (Greek, ekklesia) is mentioned."

We say, Amen. Let us stand for Bible names for Bible things.

BAPTISM—A SYMPOSIUM

Alice B. Curtiss

The ordinance of baptism was first used by John the Baptist, according to New Testament teaching, hence his title, "John the Baptist." We are told that he preached the baptism of repentence for the remission of sins (Luke 3:3). Should not this subject of baptism interest every one? It certainly should, as we are told in Acts 2:38, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ." For what? "For the remission of sins." How many have the promise of salvation? "As many of you as have been baptised into Christ have put on Christ; and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." We are told in Ephesians 4:5, "There is one Lord, one faith, one baptism."

What form of baptism then is Scriptural? Any form of baptism that is unscriptural is worthless to us as far as salvation is concerned. Romans 6:4 says, "We are buried with him by baptism unto death." Col. 2:12 says, "Buried with him in baptism, wherein we are also risen with him through faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead: and you being dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh, he hath quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses." We see here that baptism is a figure of death, death to sin. Romans 6:3, says, Know ye not that as many of you as were baptised into Jesus Christ were baptised into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. The word "buried" that is used in these quotation, is the strongest word that could be used to express immersion. No other form of baptism was used by Christ's disciples of which we have any record. Baptism is a figure of death, burial, and resurrection, and the act has a deep and solemn meaning. It is indeed a savior of death unto death, or a savior of life unto life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection (Rom. 6:5. O, the happiness for each one to know that we are dead to sin, that we are indeed new creatures in Christ Jesus, that as far as the east is from the west so far has he removed our transgressions from us.

We are the heirs of his rich promises, sometime we shall enter into that beautiful city, the New Jerusalem, "Jerusalem the golden, with wine and honey blest"—what rapture! What glory! And now if there are any who have not obeyed the gospel, let me say as did St. Paul in Acts 22:16; "And now why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."

Baptism

Mrs. Anna Lehman

Before faith came we were kept under the law, shut up unto faith which should afterwards be revealed. Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. But after faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster, for ye are all children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. To be a child of God one must be baptised unto Christ. John the Baptist says, "I indeed baptised you with water unto repentence." Matt. 3:13 says, "Then came Jesus from Galilee to Jordon unto John to be baptised of him." Jesus was baptised not for any sin that he had committed, but that all righteousness might be fulfilled. Now in order that we may inherit eternal life we must believe the gospel, repent of our past sins, and be baptised. He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved, but he that believeth shall not be damned. Philip went down to the Samaria and preached Christ unto them.

And when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptised both men and women (Acts 8:12). Philip also preached to the eunuch; "opened his mouth and began at the same scripture and preached unto him Jesus. And as they went on their way they came unto a certain water, and the eunuch said, See here is water, what doth hinder me to be baptised? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest." To effect the salvation of any one there must be a great deal of labor put forth. The word must be preached. The order is, belief, repentence, then baptism. We cannot gain the kingdom without all this. Christian baptism means to be buried with Christ in water and to arise to walk in a new life; "For as many of you as have been baptised into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew or Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male or female, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." May we all be heirs to this promise, is my prayer.

ECHOES FROM THE OHIO CONFERENCE

D. C. Robison

Our conference of 1912 is a matter of history. None, save those who have engaged in arranging for such an event, know the many things that must be done to make it a success. The "little flock" at Salem, fed and lodged all who came to the satisfaction of all. We are under many obligations to our neighbors for their hospitality in opening their homes for lodgers. It is written that "A thing of beauty is a joy for ever;" so must we consider our conference. The program was all that could be expected; every hour was well filled. But few changes were made in it, and those were made to benefit the alien. We were pleased to notice that there were more of that class than had attended former conferences. Quite a few were present at our opening session. All seemed to enjoy the address of welcome given by Sister Neill. She extended to all the hospitality of our homes and hearts. The response came from Bro. W. C. Heacock, thanking the Salem ecclesia for their kind offer and accepting it in the Christian spirit in which it was given.

Our program arranged for a song service or social meeting to begin the morning, afternoon and evening services. The songs selected were in the spirit of the word. Many praise hymns were selected and beautifully rendered.

This put all in the spirit of love and forbearance. The speakers were helped by these services. There were no open emotional expressions but all were in the unity of the spirit of Christ.

In speaking of our Bible school work we can truly say that all enjoyed the good lessons and fully appreciated the manner in which the teachers presented their subjects. We had two new speakers this year. Brethren Anderson, from South Carolina, and C. C. Maple, of our own state. Their sermons were well received by all who heard them. Their subjects were well chosen and ably handled. They gave us a feast of fat things.

It was noticeable that many additions had been made to the class of young people. We question whether you will find a more intelligent and enthusiastic class of young men and women than we have in the One Body. We also noticed that they attended every service during the conference. The many testimonies given in our song service and social meetings show that they have obeyed Paul's admonition to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

Their hearts are in the good work.

Our prayer is that they may not only be blessed individually but have also the true missionary spirit and carry the gospel to those who have never heard it. May the lessons learned strengthen them for the next conference or help them to be ready when the Lord shall come.

The keynote of the conference seemed to be "The Lord is coming." Every song, testimony, prayer, and sermon was a cry for the Master. "So come Lord Jesus."

Our attendance from over the state was good. A larger number attended this conference than any former one.

We feel that we must not close these lines without speaking of the work done by our sister's meetings during the year.

It was noticed in their reports that they had relieved the distressed in helping them in spiritual and material gifts. Their hour was "a feast of fat things." The papers read and exhortations given reflected much credit upon the society. This, with the young people's society, is a great help in a spiritual way to the whole conference.

Several letters were read from those who could not attend and were enjoyed by all present. We believe we are capable of judging of the good done by our conference, as we helped to organize it nine years ago in our city, and have been present at each conference. As long as every one feels that there is an individual work to do and labors to perform on his part, our meetings will be blessed of the Father.

OHIO BRETHREN, ATTENTION!

Your attention is called to the evangelistic notice in this issue of The Restitution. Brother R. G. Huggins and myself will be associated in the work a portion of the time this fall. We aim to enter several new fields with the kingdom message. We are trusting that it may be possible to get into many new fields where it seems advisable to establish churches, and in other places establish preaching points which may be visited from time to time by our evangelists.

In this way we hope to reach many who have never heard the glad tidings. We realize that many will oppose us for the truth has always been unpopular.

In the last days "they shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables" (2 Tim. 4:4. But let us be faithful.

Beloved, let us spread the message of the soon coming King.

How it rejoices our hearts to find now and then one who is interested in the truth, and who is willing to search the scripture to know whether these things are so, and find that they are are willing to be baptized into the all-saving name.

We need not expect great multitudes to flock into the church. It has always been a "little" flock," and we may expect that now and then, here and there, will be those who love the truth more than error.

Yes, there are some, "God hath visited the Gentiles to take out a people for his name." But the time of the Gentiles are drawing to an end, and those who come out must come out soon.

Let us preach the gospel of salvation, those things which concern the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ.

You may help this work along in many ways. Will not brethren who know of fields where there is an opportunity to enter with the truth, kindly write us and also cooperate with us in entering those fields?

We ask your prayers and support in the work of our Lord and Master. May we occupy until he shall come and then be made rulers in the kingdom, according to his promise.

C. C. MAPLE.

REPORT OF SISTER'S MEETINGS

Secretary's Report of Sister's Society in Springfield, Ohio.

For the past year we have studied John's gospel, each member taking in turn a chapter and bringing out the lessons they contained. We feel we have been brought closer to our Lord by studying this grand gospel. John in his portrayal of Christ's teaching, brings things very vivid to our minds, and makes the lessons very plain.

The closing chapters were taken by Sister Woodburg.

She also gave a summary of the whole, illustrating by drawing. She drew a tree, showing where God is the Root, Christ the Righteous Branch, also the door and the vine.

We must abide in the vine or we wither and are cast off.

Seven visits were made to the sick, I am thankful to report general good health among us.

May God's blessing rest and abide with us forever,

JESSIE L. FISH, Sec.

TRINITARIANISM

Joseph Bland on John i. 1

It is not sufficient to quote the words in John 1:1, to establish the doctrine of the Trinity, or the pre-existence of Christ, and His unity with the Father. We believe with our Trinitarian friends that in the beginning (or in a beginning) was the word, and the word was with God (with the God—ho Theos) and the Word was God." In the last sentence the article is omitted, and the passage is said by some scholars to mean that "the Word was divine." In the Englishmen's Greek Concordance" we read that "as a general rule the article is used when a term (i.e. a word, or a combination of words) presents the object about which the mind is busy as objectively present to it; (as 'the God,' ho Theos, The Deity), a term which is merely characteristic has no article." e.g. "The Word was Theos, God, or 'Divine in Nature.' " According to this—concerning which much more might be written, it means that the word—whatever is meant by that—was Divine. If you say the word was with Him—God, and was Him—God, you do not establish the doctrine that there are two Gods, for, again and again in the same book of John, the fact is insisted upon strongly to the contrary (John v:44: xvii: 3). And if it is said that "the Word" is God in the personal sense, then you are confronted with the stupendous difficulty that God "became flesh and dwelt among us" —God, whom "no man hath seen at any time" (John i. 18)—instead of one described as "the only begotten from the Father, who was "full of grace and truth"! One difficulty and error leads to another. If this teaching were true, then God was born of a woman, and Mary was the mother of God, the creator of the universe! It would also be true that this Divine being "advanced in wisdom" (Luke ii:52), was limited in knowledge (Matt. xxiv: 36; Acts 1:7), could "do nothing" of Himself, confessed that there was one greater than He, prayed to a Being outside Himself, sorrowed, suffered, cried in His agony, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" died and was buried was raised from the dead by a Power beyond His own, and a hundred other difficulties would confront us which are all absent when we rightly interpret the Word of God.

The Occurrences of the Word "Logos"

Now setting aside the question as to what period of time is meant by the phrase "In the beginning" or quite correctly "In a beginning"—assuming that the words carry us back to the time of the creation let us see if we can answer the question, what is the Word, or Logos? It is printed here with a capital letter, and the idea of Personality is associated with it by Trinitarians—the Personality of Christ in a pre-existent state, "the Word was with God, and was God." But in other places where the word Logos occurs, it is not printed with a capital letter, nor is the idea of personality in any way associated with it. The word itself means, according to Dr. Young, "a word, speech, matter, reason." If we turn to the Greek Lexicons, and find the word Logos, the explanation given is "I. The Word by which the inward thought is expressed; also" (that is to say equally though secondly in mention) "II. The inward thought or reason itself." In the New Testament the word occurs more than two hundred times. The following are a few out of the many; in no case does it convey the idea of personality. "Speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed" (Matt. viii:8); "He answered her not a word" (Matt. xv:23); "The sower soweth the word" (Mark iv. 14); "If a man love me he will keep my words" (John xiv:23); "The word which ye hear is not mine, but the Father's who sent me" (John xiv:24); "The word which God sent unto the children of Israel" (Acts x:36); "for from you hath sounded forth the word of the Lord" (I. Thess. 1:8). In all these, and in the vast number of other places where the word occurs the meaning is plain; something spoken, a message delivered, a communication from one to another. Nowhere, except it be in the first chapter of John, and in one other place—Rev. xix. 13—does anyone think of associating the word with a Person. In the latter place Jesus is appropriately called "The Word of God," because He is the fulfilment and embodiment of that Word. He is the Word fulfilled, the word of promise from the beginning, the one testified of by Jehovah, the Psalmist, and the Prophets; for all their predictions are fulfilled in Him, and through Him—at His first coming—God's truth was communicated to mankind in a preeminent degree, and at the period to which this vision refers, when He comes to smite the nations, and fulfill the many predictions of the prophets, He will be the manifestation of the Word of God, which He is very appropriately designated.

Should Logos be "He" or "It"

But in John i. there is no justification for personifying the word Logos. It is true that Logos is a masculine word, but—as one scholar states "that does not entail in connection therewith the words He or Him any more than agape—love, diatheke—covenant, or charis grace, must be referred to as She. In English those three words are all neuter as well as Word or Purpose; accordingly, then, although agape is femine, and though love is said to perform many personal actions in I. Cor. xiii., yet we do not read 'love vaunteth not herself doth not behave herself unseemingly,' etc. Just so Logos, though masculine, should be referred to in John i: 1-4, as 'it,' and all through the chapter." If you refer to the Emphatic Diaglott, you will find the word "it" is given to represent the neuter noun "word" or Logos, instead of making that word appear to be the name of a person to be represented by the masculine pronoun "him." And "there is no reason"—to quote from another writer—"for considering the word Logos as a person in the beginning of John's gospel, for there is nothing in the connection or narrative to indicate such a meaning, nor that it is here personified; nor does the Greek word from which it is rendered demand its personification." The correct rendering therefore ought to be of verses 3 and 4, "All things were made by (or through it, and without it was not anything made that hath been made. In it was life; and the life was the light of men." The substitution of the word "him" has done much to obscure the meaning of the passage and fasten error upon the minds of men. We appeal to the great authority of Dr. Campbell. He says, "It deserves to be remarked that every version, which preceded the present English version, as far as I have been able to discover, uniformly employed the neuter pronoun it." And this is the case in the Bishop's Bible, the Geneva to English Bible, Tyndal's Bible, etc., We may understand in this place the meaning to be either the word, the utterance, "the inward thought," the wisdom, the power, or the eternal purpose of the Deity. The word—whether we consider it as his creative word, or as the word of promise relating to the Messiah in whom his eternal purpose centered—"was in the beginning with God" and was itself.

vine. It was the outcome of the wisdom of the Deity. It cannot be separated from him by whom it was conceived, whose power and wisdom was behind it, in whom it was—so to speak—rooted, and by whose spirit it was made operative in creation, and afterwards in the production of that Son for whom all things were created, in whom all things relating to the new creation consist, who was the fulfillment of the word of promise which was in the beginning with God and was made to our first parents at the time of the fall, "in whom all the promises of God are yea and amen," and through whom the divine purpose formed in the mind of God at the beginning is to be completed and brought to fruition "to the glory of God, the Father" (Phil. ii:11).

All Things made by IT

John tells us, in this disputed text, that "all things were made by it (not by him); and without it was not anything made that hath been made. In it was life; and the life was the light of men." Now whether this be considered as the word of God alone, or the wisdom of God, or both, it is perfectly true. It was God who spake in the beginning whose word was obeyed, by which all things were brought into being. "In the beginning God created the Heaven and the Earth" . . . "And God said, Let there be light: and there was light." So it was throughout the creation. It was his word, or power, or wisdom, by which it was accompanied—not by the power of Jesus, who, at that time—though truly fore-ordained before the foundation of the world, just as the Saints were chosen in him from that period—had no personal existence, and was not the agent of the Father in the creation of the material heavens and earth. This is ascribed to the Father throughout the Scriptures. In complete harmony with what John states is the declaration of the Psalmist (Ps. xxxiii: 6-9), "By the word of the Lord were the Heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth."—— "For He spake, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast." In Isaiah xliv:24, we have also a very explicit statement which appears to exclude very decidedly the agency of any second person in the work of creation. "Thus saith the Lord, thy redeemer, and He that formed thee from the womb: I am the Lord, that maketh all things; that stretcheth forth the heavens alone; that spreadeth abroad the earth; who is with me?" Marg. "By myself." Now here we have a strong assertion that he did these things alone by himself; and a challenge to any doubter to answer the question, "Who is with me?" Trinitarians take up that challenge and assert that some one was with Him—and yet was not separate from Him! That Jesus was pre-existent and the agent of this creative work which God, the Holy one of Israel, so solemnly claims as His Own! It is as though they flatly contradicted the Almighty, and claimed to honor Him by the contradiction! They break what Jesus called "the first commandment of all" in importance, and claim to be special representatives of the truth in doing so? They persist in ascribing to Jesus a divinity which He did not claim, an equality with God which He repudiated, and believe they honor Him by so doing, which can never be the case. He even went so far as to ask the question—"Why callest thou me good? None is good save one, even God" (Mark x:18), and though we believe Jesus to have been the Son of the Highest, and sinless in character, and the effulgence, or reflection, of the glory of the Father (Heb. 1:3), this passage shows that there was in the mind of Christ, a goodness, a perfection in One, and that One, God, which He could not and did not claim. Had he been God Himself He could not, we think, have spoken thus.

In the Apostolic utterances, too, we find the same kind of evidence that the work of the creation was that of the Father, the One they worshipped, and to whom their petitions were made. After a certain persecution of Peter and John recorded in the 4th chapter of Acts upon the release of the Apostles, they resorted to "their own company," and joined in thanksgiving to God, and this is how they commenced their prayer—"O Lord, thou didst make the heaven and the earth and the sea and all that in them is. Now God is addressed in this petition as distinct from Jesus, who is called in it the Lord's "Anointed," and twice over in the same prayer, "thy holy Servant Jesus," a clear proof that they did not regard Him as on an equality with the Father, (See also Rev. iv:11.)

We have pointed out that Jesus was the fulfilment of the Word of promise made in the beginning to our first parents, and certainly the word and the wisdom of God dwelt in Him and His power was manifested through Him in a marked degree, so that He was in the highest sense a manifestation of God, whose words He spake, and whose works He performed as He repeatedly declared, but equality with God, which the theologians thrust upon Him, was in a position which Paul distinctly tells us, He did not attempt to seize, "he counted it not a thing to be grasped," but humbled Himself, even unto death. "Wherefore also God highly exalted him, and gave unto him the name which is above every name," so that, eventually, every knee should bow in His name, and every tongue confess that He is Lord, "to the glory of God, the Father." That is the ultimate aim of the mediatorial work of Christ, that the world should be filled with the knowledge of God, that His name should be exalted above all, that He should everywhere be supreme.

From the very beginning Jesus was contemplated and promised by the Almighty to undo the work of the first Adam by which sin and death entered into this fair world, but it was not until the "last days" of the Jewish commonwealth that He appeared. "When the fullness of the time (of the promise) was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, and that we (Gentiles) might receive the adoption of sons" (Gal. iv:4, 5). So the Word of promise "became flesh, and dwelt among us," and, writes the apostle, "we beheld his glory, glory as of the only begotten from the Father, full of grace and truth (John 1:14). A Man divinely begotten, partaking of the characteristics of His Father, and having conferred upon Him His wisdom and power, and afterwards—when He had proved obedient unto death—exalted to His Father's right hand, made higher than the heavens, glorified in nature, filled with "all the fullness of the Godhead bodily" (Col. ii:9)—a position and a privilege which Paul prayed the believers might attain unto (Eph. iii:19)—and having had conferred upon Him "All power in heaven and in earth" (Matt. xxviii:18). He was thus made higher than all other sons of men because of His sinlessness. That is the secret of his exaltation and power, and that was doubtless the result of his paternity. "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity: therefore God thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows"—His fellows being members of the human race, who had not manifested a perfection like unto His (Heb. 1:9).

RAILROAD PROPHECIES

"Whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place until the the day dawn."—2 Pet. 1:19. "When ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand."—Luke 21:31.

"Within this ample volume lies the mystery of mysteries.
Happiest they of human race to whom their God has given grace
To read, to fear, to hope, to pray, to lift the latch and force the way;
And better had they ne'er been born, that read to doubt, or read to scorn."

Ay, did men but understand it, there is no possession on earth like the deliverances which God has given us by His Holy prophets. Treasure, then, the sacred record of them. The Bible is the Book of books. . . . . And, as Sir Isaac Newton, "who explored the firmament with unwearied wing, and made an apocalypse of the stars, felt that he was sounding a greater depth and rising to a loftier height when he sat down, a patient student of this Book, to ascertain the mind and make plain to less gifted souls the meaning of the Spirit of God" which herein speaks, it surely cannot be beneath us, or a waste of time and energy, or anything less than a pleasant duty and a high privilege, to devote ourselves with some degree of specialness to what God has here caused to be written for our learning upon whom the ends of the world have come.—Jos. A. Seiss, D.D., "Voices from Babylon."

An age which rejects the argument from miracle, is confronted by that from the fulfillment of prophecy. As the evidence of the first becomes more questionable on account of its remote antiquity, that of the second becomes more irresistible year by year. Fulfilled prophecy is miracle in the highest sphere—that of mind. It is the ever growing proof of Divine prescience in the authors of sacred Scripture. . . The author would strongly deprecate the false and foolish popular notion that all study of prophecy is unpractical—a notion too often propagated by passing, but mischievously influential allusions to the subject, from pulpit, platform and press, made by those who know little either of it or of its effects. It ought to be a sufficient rebuke to the levity that hazards such an assertion, or admits such an idea, to recall the facts, that one-third of the Bible consists of prophecy; and that our Lord and Master said "Search the Scriptures," not a portion of them. The apostle Peter expressly tells us that we do well to take heed to the "more sure word of prophecy," as to a light shining in a dark place until the day dawn and the day star arise. Is it unpractical to make use of a good lantern on a pitch dark night, in traversing a dangerous road? or is it not rather unpractical and unreasonable to attempt to dispense with it?—Rev. H. Grattan Guinness, in The Approaching End of the Age.

When you ride in the cars do you not like to have a time table with you? It may be a strange road to you; but as the brakeman announces a station you look at your list, and, finding the place mentioned, you say, "Only four more stations and then we shall reach our destination." And finally you say, "Now we must be all ready to leave the train, for the next station is B——." How do you know? Why, you have the official program of the company, and you have noticed all along the journey that you came to the stations just in the order predicted, and now all are past but the one to which you wish to go. Suppose that some one who had no time-table, or who was so unbelieving that he would not verify its assertions, should say, "I do not believe you can tell anything about it. I do not, think we are within hundreds of miles of B——," would it shake your faith? No. And now will you let me call your attention to the God given list of stations on the railroad of time—the official program of Jehovah? I refer to the consecutive prophecies of the Bible, which I have here called Railroad Prophecies. Some ten or more of such we find, extending to the end of time, and like the railroad time tables, giving station after station, from the era of the writer to the Second Advent and the resurrection of the dead. Have you noticed that many able and godly men have declared that we are near these great events?

Are these things so? To be sure there are many who say that we can tell nothing about it, but have you looked over the official program to see? You are confident when on the railroad, and does not Jesus say, "When ye shall see these things, know that it is near, even at the doors?" Numbers will admit that Jesus has promised to come again some time: but "Scripture contains more than general promises on this subject; it contains many specific, orderly, and even chronological prophecies. We have full and explicit inspired predictions by which to shape our predictions, and these numerous and detailed prophetic statements do not leave us like shipwrecked sailors on a dark night, on a wild and stormy sea, deprived of chart and compass and ignorant of their bearings. If we will use them aright, they place us rather in the position of a weary crew, at the end of a long and dangerous voyage, exploring by the morning twilight the chart on which their track has been marked down, noting the thousands of miles they have sailed, recognizing each high land and island they have passed on their course, and all the lights and beacons long since left behind, cheering each other as they observe that a faithful chart whose accuracy their long experience has demonstrated, shows but two or three waymarks ahead—waymarks absolutely coming into sight—and rejoicing in hope of a speedy entrance into a peaceful port."—Dr. Guinness.

Prophecy is history in advance. It gives warning of coming judgments, announces deliverances to the people of God, and affords unmistakable evidence of the inspiration of the Bible. "The Scripture cannot be broken" (John 10:35). And inasmuch as the prophecies relating to the first advent and other important events have been fulfilled literally, it is evident that we are to look for the literal accomplishment of remaining predictions.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home: let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

The truth gives a man the hope of seeing with his own eyes the work of God, at last triumphant in the earth whether he live or die; and of himself sharing the blessedness for ages covenanted for all the earth through Abraham and his seed.

Forgetful hearers allow themselves to be diverted by the ephemeral things of life from the important business of making themselves familiar with God's word by reading. They are without excuse.

Real faith is a treasure, a companion of delight, a spring of living water a fountain of purity.

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (3 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:18, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." THE PROPHETIC WORD IS NOW BEING FULFILLED

W. H. Wilson

It is a glorious thing to have the privilege of living during the closing scenes of this Gentile age. Our eyes now behold that which prophetic students for ages past have desired to see. The midnight cry is now ringing out upon the air, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh."

The great bell of time is tolling out the passing of the age, and yet an infidel world and a slumbering church is unmoved. Mene, Tekel, Upharsin, can be read prophetically in blazing letters upon the political sky. The nations cry "peace," and build "Dreadnaught war ships."

Worldly men and statesmen proclaim that a great political and financial and social crisis is impending and hence "men's hearts are failing for fear," are apprehensive of some disaster they cannot divine and what it will end in. Prophetic students know what it all means.

The present status of affairs in the Turkish Empire is the most significant sign, this Gentile age has yet seen. Every prophetic student is well aware that on the dismemberment of that empire, rapid and important changes will go right along. The following special cable to the Chicago Daily News shows that Turkey is now experiencing a mortal wound:

OUTLOOK FOR TURKEY IS GRAVE

Believed It Will Be Dismembered If It Does Not Fight Desperately

Constantinople, Turkey, Aug. 20.—Pessimism pervades all enlightened circles in Turkey and the wisest men regard the imperial outlook as graver than at any previous time for generations. Willingness to wage a desperate defensive war is believed to be the only thing that can delay the porte's loss of control of its European territories. The internal plottings and fermentations are bad enough but the foreign designs on the integrity of Turkey are worse. The former could be managed without the loss of a foot of Ottoman territory; the latter appear to foreshadow the marshalling against the Turks of a force so gigantic that the most united and powerful nation in Europe could not resist it.

Russia and Italy have for months been undermining the Ottoman position—Russia by menacing miles of Turkish frontier with great arays of troops; Italy by prosecuting actual war against Turkey at every possible point of attack. Now the drama is rapidly increasing in scope. Austria regarding the moment as peculiarly opportune for advancing against Turkey, directly by diplomatic means and indirectly through arm bands within the Turkish borders and incursions of Montenegrin troops.

Today word arrives that Austria is supported not only by Germany and Italy, but by Britain, and consequently by France. Where, therefore, it is asked, has Turkey a friend? The anxieties and difficulties of the Ottoman cabinet cannot be overstated. It meets at frequent intervals, sits long, talks much, and makes no progress. Meanwhile the committee of union and progress is actively fomenting another revolution. What the world is witnessing appears to be the gradual passing of the empire of Osman, or, in other words, the crushing of Turkey's attempt at constitutionalism by the combined military weight of Europe.

The following is a later cable message from Constantinople:

Turkish Prince Assails Plan for Protectorate over the Moslems

Constantinople, Turkey, August 29.—Prince Seba-Eddine, speaking to the correspondent of The Daily News today, said that Austria's move to break up the Ottoman empire had been temporarily checked. The prince is a prominent Turkish reformer and revolutionary. He also is an advocate of a decentralized form of government for this country.

"Decentralization is what we need," he said. "The plan proposed by Count Leopold Berchtold, the Austrian foreign minister, would mean a European protectorate over Turkey. This we cannot tolerate. The plan is making slow progress, partly owing to European suspicions, but mainly because it cannot be pushed to a successful conclusion without a war with Turkey, for we would fight even in our present embarrassed condition. Austria probably will hesitate to force matters to this extreme."

God grant that we may not close our eyes to these things lest the day of the Lord come upon us unawares.

For some time past I have been collecting from the public press evidence on the present fulfillment of prophecy. That you may all have the benefit of this collection, I have printed them in a 32 page pamphlet, the price of which is ten cents each. They are now ready to mail.

When I read in the public press of today that God's Prophetic Word is being literally fulfilled; it is to me a great faith strengthener, and I am determined more than ever to be an overcomer in the name of Jesus. Let us now all pull together for the kingdom.

DOCTRINES OF DEMONS

A. Wallace Mason.

1 Tim. 4:1. "Now the spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times, some shall depart from the faith giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of demons." The word, of course, in the English version is "devils," but demons in the Greek has a different meaning than the word diabolos, translated devil. I have shown in previous articles that demons were supposed to be departed souls, both good and bad, and by the fourth century this doctrine was rampant everywhere among "orthodox Christians, and the results followed predicted by Paul: "Speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience scared with a hot iron." A maxim of the heathen philosophers was incorporated into the church which was "That, in order to the attainment of true felicity and communion with God, it was necessary that the soul should be separated from the body, even here below, and that the body was to be macerated and mortified for this purpose. The result was as described by Mosheim an incredible number of proselytes . . . who maintained that communion with God was to be sought by mortifying sense, by with drawing the mind from all external objects by macerating the body with hunger and labor, and by a holy sort of indolence, which confined all the activity of the soul to a large contemplation of things spiritual and eternal. . . . The whole east was filled with a lazy set of mortals, who abandoned all human connections, advantages, pleasures and concerns, wore out a languishing and miserable life. . . . In order to derive a more close and rapturous communion with God and angels.

That their conscience became seared as with a hot iron is shown by the history of St. Cyril, of Alexandria as narrated by Gibbon. This saint had a band of five hundred Nitian monks attack the Perfect of Egypt on the street. His guards fled from the wild beasts of the desert; his protestations that he was a Christian and a Catholic were answered by a volley of stones and the face of Prestes was covered with blood." The loyal citizens rallied to his support and he had the monk put to death who had wounded him. Then St. Cyril had the monk's body transported in solemn procession to the cathedral and a great ovation pronounced over him and his name was changed to Thaumasius, meaning "the wonderful," and he became one of the great saints. A little later, in 415 A. D. these monks (under instruction from this St. Cyril) tore Thypatia a teacher of geometry from her chariot, dragged her in to their church, and with the assistance of "Peter the reader" tore her to pieces. Mosheim says "It is impossible to describe the rigor and severity of the laws which these senseless fanatics imposed upon themselves. In order to deliver the celestial spirit from the bondage of this mortal body." "They ran naked through the lonely deserts . . . they prolonged the life of the emaciated bodies by the wretched nourishment of grass and wild herbs, avoided the sight and conversation of men, remained motionless in certain places for several years, exposed to the rigor of the seasons; all this was considered as true piety, the only acceptable method of worshiping the deity." At the same time the bishops and leaders were fighting for position and power and the streets of Rome and other cities frequently run with blood caused by the various factions fighting in order to elect their particular champion to the prominent position of authority. The priests were forbidden to marry, as we have to this day, and that great structure was being raised described as the "mother of harlots." That the vilest things predicted concerning the papacy is amply proved by their own statements. At a council called at Rome in the vatican in 1870 which proclaimed the popes infallible, there was a long discussion among the bishops assembled before this was done. Bishop Strasmayer was opposed to this being done. To prove that it should not be done he gave an address which the following quotation is part of; the bishops tried their best to howl him down, but did not succeed. "The Emperor Theodosia II. made a law by which he established that the patriarch of Constantinople should have the same authority as the pope of Rome." "The fathers of the council of Chalcedon put the bishops of the new and old Rome in the same order and all things even ecclesiastical." "The council of Carthage forbade all the bishops to take the title of Prince of the bishops or sovereign bishop." "As for this title of universal which popes took later, St. Gregory believing that his successors would never think of adorning themselves with it, wrote these remarkable words: None of my predecessors have consented to take this profane name; for when a patriarch gives himself the name of Universal, the title of patriarch suffers discredit" "Pope Pelagio II. calls John Bishop of Constantinople who aspired to the high priesthood imperious and profane." Boniface III. (607-8) made the paracide Emperor Phocas confer the title of Universal Bishop on him." "Gregory the First calls any one antiChrist who takes that title (578-90)." Hadrian II (807-872) declares civil marriages to be valid. Pius 7 (1800-23) condemned them Sixtus V. (1585-90) purchased an edition of the Bible and recommended it to be read. Pius VII condemned the reading of it. "It should never finish my brethern if I were to put before your eyes the contradiction of the popes in their teachings." Pope Vigilus (538) purchased the papacy from Bellisarius, Lieutenant of the Emperor Justinian. It is true he broke his promise and never paid for it." You know the history of Farmasus too well for me to add to it Pope Stephen XI., "had his body exhumed dressed in his pontifical robes, he made the fingers which he used for giving the benediction cut off and then he had him thrown into the Tiber, declaring him to be a perjurer and illigitimate." Gebardo the great flatterer of the popes had dared to say in his chronicles (901) this century is unfortunate as for nearly 150 years the popes have fallen from all the virtues of their predecessors and have become apostate rather than apostles." Baronius (born 912) speaking of John XI. (931) natural son of Pope Sergino and Marazia he wrote these words in his annals. The holy church has been vilely trampled on by such a monster. John XII (956) elected pope at the age of 18, through the influence Contestans was not one whit better than his predecessor. I am silent on Alexander VI., father and lover Lucretia. Well might he be silent concerning Alexander VI. and his notorious daughter and monstrous son, all of them proverbs of vileness. I turn away from John 23 (1319) who denied the immortality of the soul and was deposed by the holy ecumenical council of Constance. I do not speak of the schisms which have dishonored the church. In those unfortunate days the see of Rome was occupied by two and sometimes three competitors. Which of these was the true pope? If you decree the infallibility of the persent pope, you must decree the infallibility of all his predecessors without excluding any. But can you do that when history clear as the sun proves that the popes have erred? Could you do it and maintain that avaricious, incestuous, murdering, simonical popes have been vicars of Jesus Christ? They did that very thing.

GOLD DUST

The life of a true Christian is a demonstrated life.

If you would keep your life blameless you must keep your imagination clean.

Never talk of other people's faults without necessity and avoid those who do.

They only are strong who are tried, who battle, hold fast their faith and conquer.

It is more urgent to pay our brother the debt of love than to discharge our debt to the temple. The moral purification of man is the great object of the worship of God.

In perplexities, when we cannot understand what is going on around us, cannot tell whither events are tending, cannot tell what to do, because we cannot see into or through the matter before us, let us be calmed and steadied and made patient by the thought that what is hidden from us is not hidden from Him.

ANNA DREW.

REPENTANCE

Sister Woodbury

What is it? Briefly answered, contrition, deep sorrow for sin, a halt in morals, leading to spiritual tendencies; eventual reform to a betterment of physical and mental conditions.

Thus God repented that he had made man and caused a deluge to efface sin from the face of the earth, to end in a new order of things, a betterment of conditions in morals through the sight souls saved, might lead up to principles of right doing in the generations to come.

And in this achievement through just and righteous Noah, a better sin covering it and that provided in type for our first parents of the "coats of skins."

This was done in the type setting forth the method of a sin covering resultant from repentance in the figure. "that doth now save us," "and the Lord shut believing Noah in," i.e., into the Ark of safety.

So the Isaac type of the lamb slain in shedding of blood (without which there is no remission) and the actual coming of the prefigured lamb a willing sacrifice for sin in the setting forth of bettered conditions through repentance in the accepting of God's plan of salvation in the death and resurrection of his sent Son.

For instance, the prodigal son, wearied of his conditions in abandoned life of ease and plenty, repented of his conduct toward kindred and home, yearned to return to former conditions, and a contrite heart prevailing, did return repentant to the parental home, bringing joy and gladness to the father's heart that the "lost son was found."

There is joy also in heaven over one sinner that repenteth. This repentance bettered moral and mental conditions in the leading up to a better life to the wayward youth.

Such is the exhortation of Peter to the Gentile world. Repent of past misdemeanors. Accept rituals as indorsed by Jehovah through prophets, Christ, and his Apostles, that in so doing a better life in believing his bylaws in the obedience of them will lead to an overcoming life, and in the coming kingdom life ever more, because of repentance to gain it.

Repentance, then, is the first step toward the cross. Dying to sin; living thereafter in hope of realizing glorification: and believing and obeying all prerequisite to that end.

ADDRESS AT THE SISTERS' MEETING

By President, Sister Neill

Dear Sisters in the Lord Jesus:

At the beginning of another year, I think it will be a good plan to refresh our minds with the object for which we meet, for if the object be lost sight of, the meetings will fail to do their work.

I trust none have forgotten that when we planned to meet together every two weeks, it was for the purpose of becoming better acquainted that we might the better help each other as we should see our need, either by words of encouragement, or sympathy, or work, or sewing, and a donation of 5 cents weekly, that we might be ready to give substantial aid if occasion required, or help spread the glad tidings of the coming kingdom of God, by contributing for literature and distributing the same, as time and circumstances would allow.

This was, and still is, the object for which we meet, and surely it is a good object, and God has blessed us in it, for we have been able to do more than any of us had thought possible.

I myself thought we ought to accomplish rather more good by united effort, but I did not forsee that so much could be done. For over two years we have met together in perfect confidence and unison, and because we were united, the good we have been working for has been accomplished.

We have not met together, just because it pleases us to do so, but for a purpose; and let us have the purpose always in view, no matter what subject is before us for consideration. Let us continue in unity, for united we stand, and divided we fall, for where divisions are, unity and harmony take wings.

As president of our meetings I am here to serve you, and to work with you, as unto him that bought us with his own blood, however and when ever I can, and I trust I have made it manifest to you, for that has been my earnest prayer.

I hope and trust that we will all continue to work together in love and unity, and in sympathy and co-operation, losing sight of self, in the object of our meetings, asking the Father to add his blessing, and this year will see still better results, since experience has helped us to some extent. Trusting these few words will meet your approval and encourage us to still greater effort, I am ever one with you in serving the Lord.

PREFERING ONE ANOTHER

In Paul's letter to the Roman Christians, he enjoined upon them this duty: "In honor, preferring one another." Paul knew that the great tendency in most of people was that of seeking his own advancement, regardless of the advancement of any one else. He also knew that many would hinder others from advancing, if, by so doing, they could promote themselves. There was such tendency, even in some of the Christians of that day. It was most difficult for them to hold themselves down to humble positions and love self-estimates. They loved to have the pre-eminence. Dr. Adam Clarke, the great commentator, in discoursing that clause, says: "Consider all your brethren as more worthy than yourself and let neither grief nor envy affect your mind at seeing another honored and yourself neglected. This is a hard lesson, and very few persons learn it thoroughly. If we wish to see our brethren honored, still it is with the secret condition in our minds that we be honored more than they. We have no objection to the elevation of others, providing that we may be at the head. But who can bear to be what he calls neglected?".

We may see an example of self-preferment in James and John. Christ's own apostles, when they asked him to give them chief places in his kingdom. They aspired to be above their brethren. They wanted higher honor than the others had. Christ at once rebuked such a spirit, and at other times he insisted that his disciples should maintain becoming humility. He told them that the lowliness of heart was the only true attitude which received the commendation of God. How very weak and unspiritual are those who claim to possess the greatest spirituality.—Advocate.

ETERNAL PUNISHMENT AND ETERNAL LIFE

"And these shall go away into eternal punishment; but the righteous into eternal life" (Matt. 25: 46. R. V.)

Our text has to do with final destinies. What does it teach?

1. The punishment is eternal.—This way of life and the way of death, ever set before us in the Scriptures, do not meet in the world to come. Whatever the punishment is, it does not reform the wicked. If this punishment is torment of mind, it must last forever; if the death of the body and soul is in the lake of fire, the there is no resurrection from that death. The theory of final restoration is foreign to the text before us.

2. The punishment does not involve eternal life.—Only the righteous go away into eternal life. Eternal life is contrasted with eternal punishment. The wicked could not live forever without having eternal life. But "the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 5:23.) If the wicked do not have eternal life they must ultimately die—cease to exist.

3. Eternal life means just what it says—eternal life.—They go away, or enter upon, eternal life. Why should we interpret the terms "life" and "death" in any other than a literal sense when considering future destines? Surely those who listened to the Master that day would understand him to mean a life that would be eternal, when he spoke of the righteous going away into "eternal life."—Sel.

To refuse to deny self means nothing less than to deny the Lord.

Work for someone, be it ever so slowly,
Work for some hope, be it ever so lowly.
Work! for all labor is noble and holy.

Cleveland, O., September 10, 1912

EDITORIAL

If some reader will send The Restitution of February 26, 1912, to Sister Chas. H. Thomas, of Rollins, Montana, they will have her thanks for the favor.

There has been a great demand for The Restitution of September 3rd. Already the extra copies have been sent out. In many cases we have sent our sermon in booklet form instead of the paper.

September 8th, after the usual Sunday morning exhortation, Miss Maud Darrah, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, was baptized from the remission of sins, and to become an adopted heir of the promise made to Abraham and his seed. The truth was introduced to her several years since by Bro. and Sister Robison. She attended our conference this year, where her interest became deepened. She accompanied Sister Huggins home, after conference concluded with the express purpose of devoting herself to the study of the things which God has revealed for our belief and obedience. After a pleasant stay of two weeks she became "taught of God," and rendered an intelligent "obedience of faith." She left on the 9th for Mt. Vernon, where she will be in practical isolation. In a few weeks, however, she will return to Cleveland, and remain with us indefinitely.

From Sister Hannah Barber comes the request for Sister S. Roxana Wince to give the readers of The Restitution her life and photograph. Many others share Sister Barber's idea. Come on, Sister Wince; many will be looking for your face in the paper; don't disappoint them.

Communications have been superabundant this week; so much so that paucity of room has forced us to abridge them somewhat.

The Editor and church had a delightful visit from Bro. J. H. Anderson, of Pelzer, S. C., during the week following the conference. He spoke at our mid-week meeting and departed next day for visits with other churches in Ohio.

Our sermon in last week's Restitution, entitled, "The Death of Christ," is now published in booklet form. Price, one copy 3 cents; two copies 5 cents; twelve copies, 25 cents. It may be ordered of Bro. C. C. Maple, The Restitution Publishing Co.; Bro. W. B. Tomlinson; or the Editor. This sermon has been published at our own expense, and the only way for us to get our expenditure of money back is through its sale. Will readers please note this, and send us an order soon?

A paragraph from the press sent by Bro. Adams states that the conference of Nebraska held at Mooreficld was a success. It was a success from start to finish. Everyone who took part seemed to be greatly pleased. Both Sunday nights the crowds were too large to be accommodated in their church and the Methodist church building was used. See report from Sister King in this issue.

"No Turkey at all"—[illegible] are some in the present [illegible] who boast of being the spiritual Israel, and would appropriate to themselves all the blessings promised to Israel and the nations, in the restoration of all things spoken by the holy prophets since the world began. They are willing to give the literal Israel all the curses, sorrows, and persecutions that have been their inheritance for many generations: but want to rob them of all the promises of the future prosperity and glory, that Christ has so abundantly provided for them in his coming kingdom. Truly the race of the Pharisees is not yet extinct: selfishness, and unbelief are still their obesetting sins. The old story of the "Turkey and the Goose" will apply in their case. A Yankee and an Indian were out hunting together, and agreed to divide the game equally between them. A fat turkey and a poor goose was the fruit of their day's labor. The Yankee said to the Indian, "Now we will divide the game; you shall have the goose and I will have the turkey; or, I will have the turkey and you shall have the goose." "How," said the Indian, "you no say turkey to me at all." So these modern Pharisees say to the poor Jews. You shall have the curses, and I will have the blessings; or, I will have the blessings and you shall have the curses. Well may the Jews say, "You no say turkey to me at all." Well, never fear; if God says turkey to his ancient people, who have received at the Lord's hand double for all their sins; His word will not fail (Isa. 40:1, 2).

LOVE BEGINS IN FEAR

That love begins in fear may sound discordant to some; it is an unpopular doctrine with many, we know, but unquestionably true, as a writer in the Firm Foundation makes manifest. That fear is the foundation of love, may seem to be a paradox to some. For John says, "There is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear, because fear hath torment" (1 Jno. 4:18). While this is true, the scriptures plainly teach that perfect obedience to God begins in fear. No man will obey God who does not fear him. Hence "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom" (Job 28:28; Ps. 3:10)—the beginning of knowledge (Pro. 1:7; also Prov. 9:10). To show love to God men must obey his commands. "For this is the love of God that we keep his commandments" (1 Jno. 5:3). Men will not do this unless they fear his authority. "Noah, moved with fear, built an ark to the saving of his house." Heb. 11:7. This was perfect obedience to God's command. Therefore, perfect obedience is perfect love, which casteth out fear. For he who obeys God in all his commands has nothing to fear, for his love is perfected by his obedience. If fear moves to obedience and obedience is love, certainly fear is the foundation of love, and the seeming paradox is a fundamental truth—that love begins with fear. We can see this principle true even in the animal creation. The dog or horse which fears his master obeys him best. Fear brings attention to, and respect for the authority of the ruler or master.

But we refer to the fear of God, which is the real "bed rock" of love to God. Satan began his awful work to destroy human souls by turning the mind of man from fearing God. He said to Eve, "Thou shalt not surely die," in eating the forbidden fruit. She failed to fear God, and believed this falsehood and brought death by disobedience on all the human race.

His satanic work has continued from Eden's lovely bowers to this enlightened nineteenth century. Men still believe satan's falsehoods, and walk in their own ways to serve the living God.

Why? Because there is no fear of God in their hearts. This has been a common charge against man from generation to generation in every dispensation. We could quote hundreds of examples of this charge.

But we come nearer home to find the evils that follow those who have not been taught to fear, those whose duty is to instruct men in the right way.

Parents make a fearful mistake if they fail to teach their children to fear and obey their authority, to walk right towards their instructors at all times. This applies to all government common to man, national, social, parental, or religious. Without fear, children grow up to despise government, choose their own ways, and walk the broad road to destruction.

No genuine parental love will be found where children do not fear parental authority. The neglect of this principle being thoroughly established in the minds of children has filled our prisons with criminals, and our penitentiaris with convicts. Many a poor mother's heart is broken if her children are not taught to fear God and man.

Truly, then, could Solomon say, "The conclusion of the whole matter is to fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man."

THE SIGNS FOLLOWING.

A correspondent asks why the signs of Mark 16:17, 18 do not follow those who believe in our day. Pointing to Acts 2:38, 39 he observes that Peter said that all true believers should receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, for the promise is unto you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. As I understand it, it means all that ever would believe, event to the coming of Christ.

The record in Mark 16:17, 18, is not a general promise offered as a reward for faith and obedience, but a special promise having a special object, viz: to confirm the word preached by the apostles.

The apostles are commanded to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, with the promise that those who believe and obey shall be saved; also that these signs should follow them that believed. In the last verse of this chapter, the apostle records the fulfillment of the apostolic commission, and the specific object of these signs.

"And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with the signs following." Inspiration could not more clearly and definitely define the object of these miraculous gifts, viz: to conform the word preached by the apostles. The testimony of the apostle Paul is of the same import. Heb. 2:3, 4 "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation; which at first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us (Paul and his Hebrew brethren) by them (the other apostles) that heard him. God also bearing them witness both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Spirit according to his own will."

According to this testimony, the grand and only object of these miraculous gifts of the Holy Spirit was, to confirm the word which was first preached by Christ and afterwards by his apostles. When therefore the word had been all preached, confirmed and written, the object of these miracles had been attained, and they ceased. Paul having enumerated the most important of these gifts, (viz.: supernatural tongues, knowledge, prophesying, power,) affirms that they shall cease (1 Cor. 13:1, 2, 3, 8). At the 13th verse of the same chapter, he tells us what should remain, after these miraculous gifts have passed away, viz: faith, hope and charity.

These are all the church or world needs after a perfect revelation of the will of God had been given; and this revelation had been confirmed by all the evidences necessary to produce all the faith and obedience, and inspire all the hope and love that God requires; and which will ultimat in an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. More evidence than this would be superfluous.

The object of all the noted miracles of Christ, was to confirm his word and mission. He appeals to his works as the highest evidence (John 5:36). The object of his miracles was to give evidence (John 1:15).

The apostle John closes the canon of inspiration, with the denunciation of the most awful judgments upon any man who should attempt to add to the words of the prophecy of this book, or shall subtract a word therefrom: thus demonstrating the perfection of the word and its evidences; thus demonstrating also that these miraculous gifts had attained the end for which they had been given, and therefore are no longer needed.

The gift of the Holy Spirit promised (Acts 2:38, 39,) was for the same specific object. Those "afar off" were of course in the world in which the apostles preached. Those who God, in this text promised to call, were such only among the believers in the word, as should be selected for a specific purpose. It does not follow because none but believers were called as mediums, through whom to confirm the word, that therefore all believers were thus called. Please observe,

1. None received the gift of the Holy Spirit, except those upon whom the apostles laid hands. That this gift was not a reward of faith and obedience, which all believed the Gospel of the kingdom, and been baptized into the name the apostles should go all the way from Samaria to Jerusalem, to lay hands on them before they could receive the gift of the spirit (Acts 8:12-17).

2. The object of the apostles laying on hands, is recorded in the 15, 16, 17 verses. "Who when they were come down prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost. For as yet it was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit."

3. On whomsoever the apostles laid hands, they received the power to speak with tongues and to work miracles. And those who received this gift, demonstrated it in a tangible manner, as an evidence of the divine mission of the apostles, through whom this power was conferred. Verses 18, 19, 13. "And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Spirit was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands he may receive the Holy Ghost. Then Simon himself believed also; and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs, which were done." Let those who profess to receive the gift of the Spirit at the present day, give the same evidence. Paul also explains the mdium through which and the object for which this gift of the Spirit was conferred. 1 Tim. 4:14. "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy with the laying on of hands." When the apostles, on the day of Pentecost, received the gift of the Holy Spirit, they spake with tongues, and gave unmistakable evidence to all present.

The same was true with the house of Cornelius, and the twelve disciples of John's, on whom Paul laid hands (Acts 2:10, 44-46; 19:1-6). Philip and Stephen, two of the seven deacons on whom the apostles laid hands, both evidenced this gift working miracles (Acts 8:5-13).

For this reason these gifts are called signs or an evidence. They would not confirm the word if these evidences were not visible, tangible and miraculous.

Saul evidently lost this power before his death, or he would not have left his dear friend and brother Trophimus, sick at Miletum (2 Tim. 4:20).

PROMISES TO COLONISTS BY NEW PASHA, OF JERUSALEM.

Announces that Government Will Grant Practical Autonomy To Colonies.

New York, Sept. 2.—A cable from Palestine by way of London to the Jewish Daily News, says The Jewish Independent, carries the information that Muhadi Bey, the new pasha of Jerusalem, visited the Jewish colonies and the Hebrew gymnasium at Jaffa. A reception was arranged for him at which were present the chief rabbi of Jaffa and representatives of all the colonies.

The pasha delivered an address in which he declared that the rumors of the Turkish government's unfriendliness to Zionism are absolutely without foundation. He further said that the government is now preparing to grant autonomy to all Jewish colonies having at least a population of one hundred. The sultan, he said, will do all in his power to make the Jews feel at home in the land; all he asks in return is patriotic cooperation to solve the problems with which the government is confronted at the present time.

The pasha thanked the people for the reception and complimented them on the splendid condition of the colonies he had visited.

The news from Palestine has been confirmed by the Odssa Chovevi Zion committee.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Editor:

I see in one of the late issues of our dear old Restitution an article called "The Blessedness of Churchgoing," written by J. J. Schamburg, which I read with much interest. Yes, I can say for one, it is a great privilege to be able to go to church. I used to go regularly, also to Sunday school, and took an active part in each meeting. My daughter and I would walk a mile, and most of the time were the first ones there. She was organist and I led in singing, also looked after the Lord's table, and had lots of other work, but I enjoyed it all—never was too tired to do for my church. I was at that time a member of the Christian church and worked faithfully in it; but I am sure now my labors were in vain, for I did not understand the Bible as I do now. I left my church as soon as I saw where I stood. I began to read, and soon saw one had to believe in the covenants of promise, and that I was in a lost condition; that at that time I was without Christ, being an alien from the commonwealth of Israel and a stranger from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world—in a lost condition. But thanks be to God, and to all who have helped me to see where I stood. Now I haven't the blessed privilege of church going. We have churches of various denominations in our town, but I cannot believed what is preached, therefore I sit at home on Sunday and study my Bible while my husband attends the Methodist church.

Yes, dear brothers and sisters, if you have the privilege of church going, don't for anything neglect it, for the time may come that you will be cut off from the blessed privilege. We should realize that our time to work is short. The Christian should always rejoice when the day arrives for him to meet at the house of the Lord to break bread and sing praise to his holy name. Your sister in Christ.

MRS. J. W. CRAWFORD.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

As I cannot be with you personally, am writing a few lines by way of remembrance. When I first thought of writing I wondered what I could say that would be of any use among so many able writers, and active workers, whose opportunities of serving the Lord are far greater than my own. Just then the words of Jesus came into my mind, "She hath done what she could." And I thought there are others like myself who are not permitted to go out and do great things, but we can all do the little things that are needed close at hand. Only the Lord knows if we are watching for every opportunity to speak a word in his name, to tell the good news of the kingdom; or even to speak a cheering word to some one who is discouraged, or to help lift a load that is too heavy for one to carry alone.

There are many things in every day life that seem but trifles, yet as sure as the Lord appreciated the widows two mites, so sure will he appreciate our efforts to serve him in whatever way we can.

So brethren and sisters let us take courage and keep on doing the best we can, according to our ability, ever striving to let our light shine brightly, thereby trying to lead others into the straight and narrow path, that leads unto life eternal.

May the Lord bless you all and make you a benefit, not only to those who meet with you, but also to others.

I want to be like Jesus.
Engaged in doing good.
So that of me it may be said
She hath done what she could.

ELIZA A. BLYTH.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I thank my God upon every remembrance of you, always in every prayer of mine for you all, making request with joy, for your fellowship in the gospel from the first day until now. Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you, will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ (Phil 1:3-7). Four years ago I attended my first conference for I was no longer a stranger from the covenants of promise, but a fellow citizen with the saints and of the household of faith. What I learned and how much strength was given to me to go on fighting the trials of life, would be impossible to tell, but that conference was the means of helping to bear fruit in organising our Sisters' Society in Springfield, where all have grown by being members, and have been an inspiration to the little church and to all other sisters' meetings.

It is with deepest regret I am unable to be with you this year, for a conference to me fills one so full of spiritual food. I live on it all year. It was through the beautiful fellowship manifest at the conference in my home five years ago, which set me to thinking for myself, and with encouraging words from different ones, it just seemed God's hand was held out to lead me into the fold, and I know there are others among the young folks who are able to testify also to the great influence brought about during a conference. It is such a glorious priviledge to met with those of like precious faith to help build us up in our most holy faith, and to press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Those of the brethren who now attend, cannot realize what such a gathering means, especially to the young brothers and sisters who need food, strength and encouragement in order that we do not lose our crowns. If you do not succeed in bringing even one unbeliever into the family, do not become discouraged, for you have sown the good seed and must wait for it to grow; and if you gain just one sinner, hasn't the conference with all its work, time and money paid? You will all of one accord say, "Yea, verily," for you know many are called, but few chosen. Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ that ye all speak the same thing and that there be no divisions among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment. (1 Cor. 1:10); for we are urged to assemble ourselves together to exhort and sing praises to God, and the more so as we see that day of Christ's coming to take up his great power and reign. What does Malachi say in regard to all those who fear the Lord? "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and that that upon his name."

And now, dear ones, listen what a grand promise comes to those who fear and spake often one to another: "And they shall be mine, said the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my [illegible] even my [illegible] treasure; and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him" (Mal. 3:16-17). May God, our Father in heaven, bless all.

Pray for the isolated ones; we need your prayers. The Lord be with all and give you his peace.

Your sister in Christ.

JESSIE KAUFFMAN.

All the loved ones in the Lord, greeting:

Repentance is sorrow for sin; the term is frequently used in this way in the New Testament. We find that the author of true repentance is God. "Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Savior for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins (Acts 5:31), meaning Christ. Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem (Luke 24:47). When they heard these things they held their peace, and glorified God saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life (Act. 11:18). There is no difference between the Jew and the Greek, for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him (Rom. 10:12).

Sinners are the subjects. It is believed in general that none but sinners can repent, yet we find in [illegible] repented that the Lord that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him at his heart. And the Lord said, I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth, both man and creeping things, and fowls of the air, for it repenteth me that I have made them. So we find that there is repentance other than for sin and there, such as a change of [illegible] purpose.

The means of repentance is the word. In order to [illegible] we must have teach[illegible] and evangelists to [illegible] word. Thus they are the instruments of bringing some to repentance. When one becomes converted to anything and sincerely believes it, he repents and changes his mind and actions. Paul did when he was converted, he repented of his former deeds, although he thought before that he was doing God a service.

The means of repentance is the word. And the blessings connected with it are peace, pardon, everlasting life. The evidence of repentance are faith, humility, prayer and obedience, for godly sorrow worketh repentance. But go ye and learn what that meaneth. I will have mercy and not sacrifice, for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. The riches of his goodness and forbearance and long suffering, not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance. Repent ye therefore and be converted that your sins may be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord. Bring forth, therefore, fruits, meat for repentance, (margin), or answerable to amendment of life.

But what think ye? A certain man had two sons, and he came to the first and said: Son go work today in my vineyard. He answered and said I will not, but afterward he repented and went. And he came to the second and likewise said, and he answered and said I go sir and went not. Whither of the two did the will of his father? So we see by these scriptures the absolute necessity of a change of mind and conduct.

We must ever keep God's commands and wishes before our mind and the many precious promises in store for the children of obedience if we do these things we will ever have a wish and desire to please God and not ourselves.

Your sister in Christ,
MARGARET POOLE.

To the Brothers and Sisters in Nebraska:

During our recent meetings it was noticeable how few were ready to take an active part. All seemed willing but when asked to lead in one of the Bible lessons the general reply was, "I have nothing prepared." It is very true that we cannot lead in a lesson which we have not all ready been over and studied thoroughly, and it is also true that we cannot study and prepare a lesson in an hour's time before meeting. Let, us, then, commence now to prepare at least one lesson that we, ourselves, can show up in a truer, clearer light than it has ever been shown before.

Choose a subject, then study and think on it in the right spirit, wanting the truth only, what ever it is, and you will have original thoughts that will be of great help to others and of greater help to yourself than any that is handed out to you ready made; for your thoughts have been digested and assimilated, while thoughts handed out by others come too rapidly and in too large quantities for us to grasp and retain the meaning that is in the mind of the speaker. The good we can do in the meetings by leading in a well thought-out lesson will be far less than the good we will do ourselves. We are told that the word cleanses us and that the gospel saves us. It is by no mysterious power that they do it. Only as we imbibe the true meaning of the moral precepts and gather courage and assurance from the glad tidings of Christ's reign on earth are the words of God able to do their cleansing work.

The full, true meaning of God's word can never be obtained by listening to a few sermons at the end of each conference year. There must be individual study. God will never excuse any of our ignorance as to what is right and wrong because a minister has not told us.

We have the Bible, and minds to think, and time to use if we take it. We may not be able to put into words, as clearly as some, what we think, but it is the knowledge in the mind that purifies, and we are the ones that must put it there. Let us, then, especially the young people, have something ready to offer at the next meeting whereever it may be and with whomever we may meet even if it takes a whole year to get one good thought. Of course, our opinions should always be held subject to dismissal if they are shown to be contrary to the Bible.

ALTA KING.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Will you permit me through The Restitution to thank the brethren and sisters of Ohio for the gift they sent me by my husband? May the Lord bless them. If we do not have the pleasure of meeting in this life, I hope we may meet in the kingdom of God.

My husband arrived home Sept. 3rd. He says he never met better people in his life than yours. May the Lord bless you all for your kindness to my husband, and for the gift you sent me, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

Mrs. J. H. Anderson.

On the morning of August 13th, my young friends, Paul Hatch and I went to the union depot to take the train for Oregon, Ill., to attend the Illinois Bible school and conference. At the depot we met Sister Sadie Morse of Valle Mines Mo., who was also on her way to Oregon. It was with pleasure we traveled together, and was met at the Oregon depot by Bro. G. Eldred Marsh.

Bro. Joseph W. Williamms and G. Eldred Marsh were the teachers of the Bible school. Bro. Williams gave some splendid lessons on the book of Job. Bro. Marsh taught the younger ones, giving them lessons on the fundamental principles of the gospel. Much benefit was received in both classes.

It was at the close of these lessons that Paul came to me and said that Bro. Marsh had given the invitation for baptism. I felt at this time that Paul believed and was convinced, that he should take the necessary and important step. We had several talks together, and it gave me great pleasure to find that he was firm in his belief of "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus;" that baptism was necessary for forgiveness of sins, and that baptism was a figure of the death, burial and reaurrection of Jesus. He wished to rise from the watery grave to walk in newness of life.

On Saturday afternoon of conference, Bro. Marsh preached a most excellent sermon on the subject of "Salvation," for the benefit of those who might be contemplating taking upon themselves the name of Jesus in baptism.

Sunday morning, August 25th a company of brothers and sisters in Christ gathered at the water's edge to witness Paul put on the name of Jesus in baptism. Bro. Marsh read a portion of Scripture and then asked a series of questions on the"things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ." He then asked the final question, "Do you believe these things?" Paul answered in a firm voice, "Yes Sir, I do." Upon his confession of faith, Bro. Marsh baptised him in the name of Jesus, and he became our brother Paul. We were so glad that his father was there to witness it also.

Bro. Paul is a son of Bro. and Sister J. E. Hatch, and grandson of Bro. J. S. Hatch, who is sleeping in Jesus.

Bro. Paul is a member of the Chicago Berean society. He is the second one of the Chicago Bereans who has been baptised in Rock River during conference time. He is quite young, being only fifteen and one half years old, but is a steady, quiet, thoughtful boy, and is an earnest student of the word of God. He has many years of life before him, many things to learn, and many experiences to meet. We believe he will earnestly endeavor to live a consistent Christian life.

Your sister in Christ,
Jessie M. Wilson.

RAILROAD PROPHECIES

(Concluded)

Consecutive Prophecies

1. The Dream of Nebuchadnezzar. (Dan. 2.)—Here we have the great image, with its head of gold, breast and arms of silver, belly and sides of brass, legs of iron, and feet part of iron and part of clay, with the stone that smote the image on the feet, and became a great mountain and filled the whole earth. Five kingdoms are thus symbolized. "By the universal consent of the church of all ages, and of all sections, the first four are allowed to be the Babylonian, the Persian, the Grecian and the Roman empires; and the last, the still future kingdom of the Son of Man. The internal scriptural and historical evidence in favor of this interpretation is so overwhelming and the agreement of all students and commentators of the early church of the Greek and Roman Catholic churches, and of all Protestant churches, so complete, that the few who have of late years ventured to call it in question, must be regarded as rash, unsafe, presumptuous guides, who would destroy the very basis of all sound and solid interpretation of Scripture prophecy."—Dr. Guinness.

Beginning with Nebuchadnezzar, the golden head, all the other parts were consecutively the Medo-Persian dominion, the Graeco - Macedonian dominion, and the Roman dominion, the latter dividing out into numerous fragments and varying kingdoms extending down to the present time. In this fragmentary form, modified with the element of 'the sovereignty of the people—the miry clay of government—this Roman dominion still continues. The kingdom is divided and intermingled with the clay and clamor of the popular will, but the metal which stays all existing governments, the solid material of their laws and administrations is the iron of old Rome, which thus perpetuates itself in spite of the uprisings, changes, revolutions, marches and counter marches in the political affairs of mankind."—Dr. Seiss. "I think we are in the toe nails of the metallic image."—D. L. Moody.

What next? "In the days of these kings (these democratic-monarchic divisions of the Roman empire) shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed." Some tell us that the "stone" represents the establishment of Christianity at the first advent, but the stone was to smite the image on the feet. That a literal kingdom is intended is evident from the following: 1. The others were literal. 2. This destroys and supersedes them. Christianity does no such thing. 3. It comes not by slow growth, but by sudden smiting. 4. It is to stand forever, while the institutions of Christianity are limited to this age. Moreover, it is not to be established by human agencies, but directly and supernaturally by "the God of heaven." Reader! Where are we on the sea of time?

We have passed the coast of Babylon,
And the Medo-Persian line,
We have left the realm of Grecia far behind;
We've been sailing down the Roman shore.
For eighteen hundred years,
And our chart declares the port we soon shall find.

We can see the glory shining
On the sunny hills of peace,
We can catch the balmy breezes from the land;
Soon earth's stormy voyage of sorrow,
And its warring strife shall cease
For God's everlasting kingdom is at hand."

2. The Vision of the Four Beasts (Dan. 7). That the four empires symbolized in this vision are the same four previously symbolized in the image can hardly be questioned. . . . In connection with this last vision the coming of Christ to judge is expressed in a clearer form, and the share which his people shall have in his reign. But the evidence it affords as to the relative period of the second advent is in unison with that of the earlier vision. It places it at the end of the last phase of the fourth empire, and determines its immediate object to be the execution of judgment and its ultimate object the establishment on earth of the everlasting kingdom of the most high in which dominion shall be given to the saints. It thus announces that the coming of Christ will be prior to His reign over the earth, in company with his saints, and it furnishes more accurate data also as to the actual period of the second advent."—Dr. Guinness.

Have the Ten Horns (v. 24) appeared? They have; the Roman empire was divided into ten divisions about the fifth century, and nearly all Protestant commentators are agreed that the little horn represents the Papacy. It overthrew three of the ten kingdoms, and during the 1260 years of Papal intolerance put to death more than fifty millions of the saints.

What next? "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the most high.

3. The 8th of Daniel.—Medo-Persia is here represented by a ram, Grecia by a rough goat, and Rome by a little horn which waxed exceeding great. A measuring period of 2300 days (years) is given, which is evidently nearly expired. Similarly the 1335 days of Dan. 12th, reaching to the resurrection, and the 6000 years of man's dominion over the earth, seem about exhausted and God's sabbath about to begin. As one writer says:

It has long been the opinion of Biblical scholars that we are living in the last days. The light began to dawn on the minds of the early reformers that we were nearing the end. Luther predicted the coming of the Lord within three hundred years. Melancthon thought it was near. John Wesley expressed his belief that Christ would come in 1836. Prof. Bush, in a letter to William Miller on the advent, says, "I do not consider your errors on the subject of chronology of a serious nature. I believe you are sustained by the soundest exegesis, as well as fortified by the high names of Sir Isaac Newton, Bishop Newton, Faber, Scott, Keith, and a host of others." They all agree that the leading periods of Daniel expire about this age of the world.

4. The 11th of Daniel—According to many able expositors all of the events here predicted are in the past except the going forth of "the king of the north" to the Holy Land. A grave feature of European politics today is the "Eastern Question," and thoughtful statesmen predict that the "Sick Man" cannot hold his place in Europe much longer. Then "shall Michael stand up," and the closing scenes of earth's drama begin. Reader! Is your name "written in the book?"

"What an amazing prophesy is this, comprehending so many various events, and extending through so many successive ages, from the establishment of the Persian empire, upwards of five hundred years before Christ, to the general reaurrection! What stronger and more convincing proofs can be given or required of a divine providence and a divine revelation, that there is a God who directs and orders the transactions of the world, and that Daniel was a prophet inspired by Him? No one could thus declare the times and the seasons but He who hath them in His power."—Bishop Newton.

NEBRASKA CONFERENCE REPORT

The churches of God in Nebraska met in their 27th annual conference at Moorfield from August 17th to the 26th. Among the brethren in attendance were members from Blair, Omaha, and Benson, St. Paul, Holbrook, Moorefield, and vicinity. The total enrollment was about 120. Every one, and especially those who were personally acquainted with them, was glad to see Brother and Sister Misner and their two daughters. This was their first attendance to conference for a number of years, and we hope they enjoyed the meeting as much as we.

Like last conference, we were well entertained by the brothers and sisters in and around Moorefield. The hotel, having been vacated a few weeks before, was rented and we had a clean, cool place in which to cook and eat. Bedding was brought from the home and placed in the empty houses, and we had comfortable lodging. We, who come to conference, do not realize the work our entertainment necessitates. Most of the brethren at Moorefield live in the country, and this really doubles the work; moreover, their work did not end with the close of conference: A few days would surely have to be spent in "straightening up" or out the confusion we left. To them is due our thanks for the enjoyment of the meetings.

The greater part of the burden of carrying on the meetings fell on the shoulders of Bro. Adams, he being the only speaker present Through a misunderstanding of dates Bro. Daniels, of Ark., did not get here as expected, and we were all sorry that Bro. Williams could not accept our late invitation, because of previous engagements. We are sure there would have been a feast of good things to the thoughtful from his talks. Bro. Adams shouldered and carried his burden right well. At least one Bible lesson a day was given, lead by various ones. Those given by Bro. Adams were along the lines of church organization, development, purification, etc. Some of the points brought out by the lessons were: 1st. The Bible does not recognize an organized conference, such as we have today. Its origin is with man, and its work purely business, collecting and disbursing money for the spread of the gospel, etc. 2nd. There is no such thing as organizing a church now. Christ organized the true church, making himself the chief corner stone. All a body of believers can do today is to set themselves in order according to scriptures.

His sermons were chiefly on the parables, and we learned many beautiful lessons concerning the coming kingdom which we never could have learned by applying the parables to the church. Brethren every where, let us study. There are many beautiful lessons in the Bible yet to uncover, and they can be dug out by all who study—not by ministers alone. While the food handed out by our ministers is invaluable, how much more nourishing it would be if we received it by self study.

The question box, as usual, was beneficial to all. The discussion of the various questions along with the sermons and lessons have helped to bring many to a fuller realization of the nearness of Christ's coming, and of their individual responsibility in preparing themselves for his coming. Many expressed this sentiment. We seem to have been brought more squarely face to face with the facts that we alone are responsible for our salvation, and that we can not depend on a conference organization, or the ministers to purify our minds and bodies. Perhaps we have separated at the close of previous conferences with more feeling and worked up enthusiasm, but many left this year realizing the stern reality of what we must do.

The business meetings were well attended and enjoyed as such meetings generally are. The following officers were chosen as conference officers: Bro. M. D. Newell, Blair, Neb., president; Bro. Perley Brown, Kearney, Neb., vice president; Sister Alta King, Palmer, Neb., secretary; Sister Emma E. Davis, Omaha, Neb., treasurer.

Bro. Adams was again chosen evangelist. After all the money was payed from the treasury a shortage of two month's salary was found. Bro. Adams generously offered to throw off one month salary if the other would be made up during the meetings, but through the influence of Brother Tandy Stinnette, of Moorefield, Neb., a movement was started by which each member was to pay one dollar and thus pay off all we owe and divide the burden of $65 among us all. This same spirit of appreciation for one another's work was shown when a beautiful fountain pen was presented to Bro. Newell. The summary of Bro. Adams' reports showed 220 sermons preached, 17 baptisms, expenses $101.84, money received on wages and expenses $665.19; due $139.10.

Subscriptions to the amount of $349 were taken for the next year's work. Some have not subscribed, but intend to give as they can. Sister Tribby, who is very poorly, did not subscribe a large amount, but tears came to her eyes when she handed in $2. How valuable that two dollars is in God's sight, chiefly because it is good evidence and proof of a stone that is being rightly shaped and polished to fit in Christ's building and future work when all things that hinder us from doing what we want to do for his cause, are taken away.

The following resolutions were adopted:

We, the people of God assembled in conference at Moorefield, offer the following resolutions: Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt gratitude and sincere thanks for the generous treatment which we have received from the brethren at Moorefield.

That we express our gratitude for the good interest shown in these meetings by our friends in Moorefield and vicinity;

That we, as brothers and sisters of like faith, are truly grieved in losing the help of our fellow worker, Sister Alma Bryant, who has fallen asleep in the blessed faith;

Especially do we thank Bro. Adams from the depths of our hearts for his faithful work among us, both in teaching the word and his living example.

Sister Carrie F. ..e, of Blair, was chosen as a committee of one to write up a history of the Nebraska conference from the old secretaries books. She has done this work for the Blair church and so is better fitted than the most of us for this work. If any one has information along this line, she will be glad to receive it.

GUTHRIE GROVE MEETING

Elds. J. H. Anderson, Stone, and Garret, assisted by Brewer of Guthre Grove, S. C., have recently held a series of meetings at Liberty, N. C., during which two accepted the truth and were baptized into the all saving name of Jesus. At the close of the meetings I had the pleasure of visiting Guthrie Grove church and attended a week's meeting there, which was conducted by these same ministers, assisted by Elds. Harris, Williamson and Durham, who are well armed with the sword of truth. We can well say we had a good meeting. It was the first time I ever had the pleasure of meeting with a church of true believers, except our own little flock at Liberty; and the pleasure it was to me is untold. It was heart touching to sit in that neat little church, one of the dearest spots in the south, founded by dear old Bro. Anderson and gray haired fathers, of whom a few are still living, and as firm and true to the blessed truth as they were in the trying times of the church's infancy.

May I say again that it is touching to sit under the sound of his son's voice and hear him proclaim the grand and glorious truths which his father has planted in the minds of these gray haired fathers, and see him sow the precious seed in the hearts of the young and rising generation, while his father sleeps in the dust in the old church yard, awaiting the sound of the trump of God, which will awake him from his long and silent slumber. Yes, he sleeps silent in the tomb unconscious of that thrilling voice of his son, who stands Sunday after Sunday in the old pulpit where he has often stood proclaiming the glad news of salvation and the coming kingdom, when he expects to shake hands with his father, and with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom.

And let me state that I know of no church that is striving and standing firmer on the sure foundation than Guthrie Grove. It is blessed with the best singing choir of the south. Miss Ida Guthrie is at the organ, and Mr. Manning Pack is leader. He is a graduate from Dayton, Va., School of Music, but his home is at Guthrie Grove, S. C. He is a dearly beloved members of Guthrie Grove church. Thanks be to God for young men who are not ashamed to hold high the glorious banner of truth. Never before had I ever heard music so clear and penetrating sung by mortal tongues.

It has been a great blessing to me for it has inspired me with a lively hope, and has given me more encouragement and I come back to my beloved home at Liberty, N. C., with a stronger resolution and determination to work harder and stand firmer for the grand old truths of our blessed Bible, and may the merciful Father help me to press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling, and lay hold on eternal life.

And if the great enemy death should lay hold on us before our Lord comes, may our lives be so clean behind that he can say with the great apostle Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of life, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but to all those that love his appearing." Oh, the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior. Let it thrill the heart of every believer, for it will be glorious when he comes to earth to take the throne of his father David, and reign as King of kings, and Lord of lords.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with uestions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear breathren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Piercetон, Ind.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:18, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-16), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

51 (a)—EXALTATION OF GOD Tune—Old Hundred—See No 82

1 Be thou, O God, exalted high,
And as thy glory fills the sky,
So let it be on earth displayed,
Till thou art here, as there, obeyed.

2 O God, my heart is fixed; 'tis bent,
Its thankful tribute to present;
And with my heart, my voice I'll raise,
To thee, my God, in songs of praise.

3 Thy praise, O Lord I would resound,
To all the listening nations round;
Thy mercy highest heaven transcends;
Thy truth beyond the clouds extends.

4 Be thou, O God, exalted high;
And as thy glory fills the sky,
So let it be on earth displayed,
Till thou art here, as there, obeyed.

51 (b)—GLAD TIDINGS Tune—What a Friend—See No. 82

1 The glad tidings of the kingdom,
Jesus preached in Galilee;
Bade his followers in their mission,
Tell the same to you and me:
Hope and life are in the message,
Peace, and rest, and joy, are there;
If believing, you receive it,
Run the race with patient care.

2 The glad tidings of the kingdom:
Saying word to dying men;
Still we sing the blissful message,
Christ the Lord will come again!
Still to Savior, we invite you,
Pray and plead with earnest tears,
You may that dear land inherit,
You may have the endless years!

WHO ARE LED BY THE SPIRIT?

"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God ....And if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with Him, that we may be also glorified together" (Rom. viii: 14, 17).

This leading is essential to salvation, for the heirship depends on being children of God, and being His children or sons depends on being led by the Spirit. These extraordinary leadings of the Spirit by immediate inspiration making men prophets and apostles, and were frequently evidenced by miracles. But the ordinary leadings are such as now occur in the enlightment and conversion of men. On this great and important subject, observe

I.—This leading is done by the instrumentality of the word of God; written by holy men of old "as they were moved by the Holy Spirit" (II Pet. i: 21). If to hear the written word of Moses and the prophets is the same as to "hear them," surely to be led by the written word of the Spirit is the same as to be led by the Spirit (Luke. xvi: 29). In converting and leading men the Spirit of God is ever present with His written word—the Holy Scripture. "Where the word of a king is, there is power" (Eccles. viii: 4).

The Spirit in the written word,
Supplies us with a sure record,
To guide our erring steps aright,
And lead from darkness into light.

When a lawyer inquired, "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" the Master did not answer, "What say thy feelings, and thy inward light?" but, "What is written in the law? how readest thou?" And when the lawyer quoted the summary of duty from Deut. vi: 5, the Master added, "This do, and thou shalt live" (Luke x:25, 28). Since then the New Testament scriptures have been added to the Old; enabling us with still clearer light to read what we must do to inherit life. In proving to Sadducees a coming resurrection, our Lord said, "Have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob?" This quotation from Exo. iii: 6, 15, was written about 1500 years before those Sadducees were born; and it shows the delightful truth that God speaks in the Bible, and speaks "to you." How greatly this should endear the Bible to the hearts of every one of us, for

In that Book we can read and see,
God's words addressed to you and me.

Never could the Holy Spirit in any man's heart lead him to contradict the Holy Spirit in the Bible. Therefore when we hear a man claiming to be led by the Spirit, say things that in his own heart seems right, but are contrary to the written word, we know that, however sincere, "a deceived heart hath turned him aside" (Isa. xliv: 20). "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death" (Prov. xiv: 12). A self-deceiver is a self-destroyer; and many such have gone out into the world professing to be led by the Spirit; and yet "speaking perverse things" contrary to the Bible and to one another. Therefore "try the spirits" by the law and the testimony of the written word (Acts xx: 30; I Jno. iv: 1; Isa. viii: 20). The "noble" Bereans believed Paul because they had tested even his preaching by "the scriptures:" not by that inward light which Quakers vainly say every man is born with. (Acts. xvii: 11). The Spirit leads no one to neglect or pervert any doctrine or command of the written word.

II.—The scripture contains that gospel which "is the Power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth;" for Paul says, "the scripture" preached the gospel to Abraham (Gal. iii: 8; Rom. i: 16). Hence the scripture is "able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (II Tim. iii: 15). And this faith cometh by hearing the word which God spoke through the ancient prophets and apostles. They are the true preachers, called and sent of God, and not of men (II Pet. iii: 2; Gal. i: 1; Rom. x: 15-17). When we believe "through their word," as found in the Bible, we are led by the Spirit which inspired them (Jno. xvii:20).

If sinners can be converted and led to salvation without the scriptures, why are not the heathen so converted and led? And why has no Christian Church ever ben found where the teachings of the Bible have never been heard?

The word is the sword in the Spirit (Ephes. vi:17). The brightest daylight shining on a printed page adds not a syllable to it, but rather enables us to see what is already there. And the Spirit, ordinarily, illuminates the written word, applying it to our hearts and understandings; not making us wise "above what is written" (I Cor. iv: 6; Psa. cxix: 18; Ephes i: 17, 18, 19). As warmth and moisture have an active agency in germinating seed sown in the ground, so the Spirit has an active agency in germinating the written "word of the kingdom" sown in "an honest and good heart" (Mat. xiii: 19; Luke viii: 15).

An objector, vainly claiming to have spiritual light independent of the written word, pervertingly quotes, "The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life" (II Cor. iii:6). But "by the letter," all judicious commentators are agreed, is meant the law of Moses, and by "the spirit" the gospel" (Comprehensive Commentary).

III.—Among other great truths taught by the Spirit are the following:

(1) That "the gospel of the kingdom" is the only gospel that God has commanded to be preached in all the world, and that "men and women" must believe that gospel in order to be saved (Mat. ix: 35; xxiv: 14; Mark xvi: 15, 16; Galat. i: 7, 8, 9).

(2) That the kingdom of which the gospel speaks will be established on the whole earth at the second coming of Christ, when he shall reign on the throne of David in Jerusalem; "and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Matt. xxv: 31; Luke i: 32, 33; Isa. ix: 6, 7; xxiv: 23; Zech. ix: 10). The kingdom is not the church, but the reward of the Church (Luke xii: 32; Jas. ii: 5; i: 12). The inheritance of that kingdom with "glory, honor and immortality," is the salvation to which we are so mercifully invited by the gospel (Matt. v:5; I Thess. ii: 12).

(3) That when Christ and His redeemed shall have reigned a thousand years blessing all nations, both sin and death will cease, and the "everlasting kingdom" be delivered up to the Father, and God be all in all. Thenceforth His will shall "be done in earth, as it is in Heaven," that is, perfectly and by every inhabitant (Gal. iii: 8; Rev. ii: 26, 27; iii: 21; xx: 6; Psa. xxxvii:9, 10, 20, Mal. iv: 1, 2, 3; Prov. ii: 21, 22; I Cor. xv: 26, 28; Rev. xxi: 4; Matt. vi: 10).

(4) That immortality, or eternal life, will be given by Christ the judge of quick and dead at the resurrection, to the righteous only: and therefore we are to "seek for" it by patient continuance in well doing (Rom. vi: 23; ii: 7; I Cor. xv: 54; Ezek. xviii: 4, 20).

(5) That Christ died for our sins, was buried, and rose again the third day, so that "by means of" His death believers might be made righteous and worthy to partake of the eternal inheritance in "His kingdom and glory" at the resurrection (I Cor. xv: 3, 4; Heb. ix: 15; I Thes. ii: 12; II Pet. i: 5-11).

(6) That water baptism [redacted] immersion, and is only for "men and women" [redacted] "with the heart," believe the gospel [redacted] also called "the things concerning the [redacted] of Jesus Christ" (Acts viii: 12; Rom. x: 10; Col. ii: 12; Jno. iii: 5).

(7) That it is one duty to avoid "the works of the flesh," and to show in our lives "the fruit of the Spirit, which is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness goodness faith, meekness, temperance" (Gal. v: 18-23; Ephes. v: 9).

These truths of the gospel are believed and obeyed by those who are led by the Spirit and are seeking to attain at last the shining rewards of a blissful immortality in "the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ" (II Pet. i: 11).

IV.—Scriptural examples and illustrations of being led by the Spirit in the process of conversion, are "written for our learning." On the day of Pentecost about three thousand souls heard the Apostolic word, and received it gladly, were baptized, and the same day were added to the church (Acts ii: 38-42). When the Samaritans "believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women" (Acts viii: 12). The Ethiopian treasurer hearing one discourse from Philip believed, was baptized, and went on his way rejoicing (Acts viii: 35-39). At Philippi the jailor and all his house heard Paul and Silas at midnight, and were baptized straightway, and rejoiced, believing in God (Acts xvi: 31-34). At Corinth "many of the Corinthians hearing, believed, and were baptized" (Acts xviii: 8). Here we have three great acts in conversion, given in their exact order: (1) hearing, (2) believing, (3) baptism. These were true converts, having truly believed, repented, been baptized, and led by the Spirit that spoke to them in the Apostles, and also speaks to us in the holy scriptures (Matt. x: 20; Jno. xvii: 20).

HOW GOES THE WORLD?

Newspaper Clipping Sent by Bro. Adams.

Rev. Val. Hennig (Evangelical Lutheran) when questioned about the trend of affairs says: (1) "Until the end of this earth evil and transgression will multiply, which will hasten its destruction. Were it not for the few elect who are to be heirs of heaven, the world would no longer exist. Matt. 13:20 shows plainly that on their account the days will be shortened lest they, too, be deceived." (2) "Observation and history show that attendance at church, spirituality, etc., are greatly influenced by the character of the times. But this fact should be borne in mind: genuine Christianity does not come in outward signs; it is inside of man.

Evangelist S. L. Flowers, author of a number of works and connected with the Flowers Publishing Co., Georgetown, Ill., replies: (1) "I believe the world will wax worse until the coming of Christ as stated in II Tim. 3 and such passages." (2) "No. Church members are becoming more worldly and disloyal, I think as much as anything because of the general craze for pleasure." (3) "A great many pastors, or rather men who take the place of such, are catering to the world and fail to declare the whole counsel of God. They let the bars down for almost anything that wants to enter. There is room for improvement in all the churches."

Rev. B. D. Alden, a prominent Hebrew and Greek scholar, who conducts the "Question Box" in The Christian Witness of Chicago and Boston, replies as follows: (1) "Matt. 24-14, 'The gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations, then shall the end come.' This may be hastened or hindered by the activity or apathy of Christians. 'A witness to all nations' does not mean that all will be converted. A man is a free moral agent. All who comply with conditions will be saved. And for those who reject there is no hope. Heb. 10:26; II Peter 2:20-21; Mark 3:43 to 47; John 5:40; Matt. 25:46, and numerous others." (2) "In all ages some have pressed on, while others rest on past experiences, and others have a name to live but are dead. Many are trying by activity in Christian work to supply what they lack in spiritual attainment. (3) "There seems to be a great tendency in some quarters to omit the preaching of the heinous nature of sin and the necessity of genuine repentance. Apparently many are not converted. The Pentecostal experience is the secret of power. Seemingly, there are evidences of returning waves of power and spirituality judging from the general conference and the hundreds of holiness camp meetings being held this summer."

Other letters from over the country are in evidence but those already published give a good idea of the general trend of opinion. The last letter of this series of articles is that of Rev. W. R. Cain, of Wichita, Kansas, formerly a train dispatcher on the Santa Fe railway, who worked the Western Union wires out since entering the field as an evenagelist he says he now uses only the "wireless system, with direct communication with the Glory world." His style of going after what he considers evil, seems to be somewhat after the manner of a Sam Jones-Billy Sunday combination. He says: "As a sample of the modern Churchianity of some of the 20th century preachers, a picture show in all its completeness was recently installed in the First M. E. church of Wichita, where I live. How is that?"

(1) "The world will not grow better, but the opposite. As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the day of the Son of Man? Things will grow worse until the settling up of the reign of anti-Christ. Prior to this Christ will catch away his sanctified Bride, all the mottoes, signs, etc., you see in missionary conventions and other meetings like this: "The world for Christ" in this generation, are unscriptural. Christ has not been trying to accomplish this but since he left he has been getting a sanctified Gentile Bride. (See both in Acts and Romans). When this is completed He will catch us away and following this will be ushered in the reign of wicked anti-Christ. * * * The pulpits are well supplied with anti-Christ preachers." * * * (2) "Church membership is not to be compared with former years for scooping in worldlings, card signers, etc. Nothing like it was ever known. Popular swing meetings are all the go. Hundreds sign a card, shake hands with the preacher and that is about all there is to it. Once in a while one really gets saved." (3) "There is in print today a booklet showing where one church has made 22 actual departures from their original teaching and some of them are figuring now on another at Minneapolis. Two prominent doctrines advocated by the anti-Wesleyites are that all children are born in the kingand all you have to do is to keep them there and they are O. K. This sets aside the Atonement. The other is that people are saved and sanctioned at one and the same time. And this stuff is being published in offical literature. Two conferences, the Michigan and an eastern conference, took action against these things and adopted strong resolutions accordingly. Things are coming to a focus. The great Apostasy is seen on every hand."

GOLD DUST

The more a man does examine the more does he discover the infirmities of his own character.

Tribulation is not a sign of failure, but a challenge to faith. God's fires are not for destruction but for purification.

There is no respect in which men get closer to Jesus, or more complete in their exemplification of His life, than in the enjoyment and manifestation of the spirit of forgiveness, which is the condition of our own access to the grace of pardon and peace. If we forgive not, there is no forgiveness for us.

Let us not be content with vaguely praying "Lord, what will thou have me to do? but set to work to see what He has already said we are to do and then whatsoever He saith unto you, do it.

No life can be pure in its purpose and strong in its strife and all life not be made purer and stronger thereby.

ANNA DREW.

WHAT DOES THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST MEAN TO THE NATION OF ISRAEL?

Paul Hatch

Israel was God's chosen people from the day he called Abraham out of the Ur of the Chaldees and showed unto him the country which he should afterward receive as an inheritance. He said unto him, "Get thee out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and from thy father's house unto a land that I will show thee. And I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing. And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curseth thee. And in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."

This promise was renewed to Isaac and Jacob. In their long journey to the promised land God watched over them and protected them, and gave unto them commandments regarding their mode of worship and of living.

After forty years of wandering in the wilderness they came to the land of Canaan and from this or until they moved into the land of the Philistines they were successful in subduing the nation. But gradually they became worshipers of idols, and did evil in the sight of the Lord, and he warned them of their wickedness, saying in Duet. 28:48, "Because thou servest not the Lord thy God with joyfulness, thou shalt serve thy enemies and I shall bring against you a nation of fierce countenance that shall subdue you and put a yoke of iron upon your neck, and he shall show no pity to the young or old, and he shall eat thy flocks and herds and shall take you into captivity, and you shall be scattered amongst all nations, and you shall be a password among the nations, and in these nations you shall serve other gods that thou or thy fathers have never known, even of wood and stone."

From this time on they were more or less wicked according to their rulers, and began to be in want of a king or Saviour which God promised to them through the prophets, but they rejected these prophets and also the Savior when he came.

They were led into capitivity and served seventy years, but this made no change in them.

When Christ came they marvelled at his great power, but believed him not, and finally put him to death for doing the work of the devil.

After the resurrection the watch went into the city and showed unto the priests all the things that were done. These soldiers were paid to say that the disciples stole him away at night, which falsehood the Jews believe until this day.

The resurrection means no more to the Jews than to a Gentile unless they enter into Christ and believe on him, but they are still God's chosen people and the apostles are to sit on the twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

EVANGELISTIC NOTICE.

Having been appointed by the conference committee as Conference Evangelist for Ohio, I am ready to answer calls from places where there may be an opportunity to present the truth. Will also be pleased to visit the churches occasionally. Write me at North Ridgeville, O., my permanent address.

EDITORIAL

James Phelps Rogers, son of Sister Rodgers, of Oregon, Ill., born Sept. 4, 1912. Congratulations.

We are sorry to learn, through Sister Eidmiller, of the illness of Bro. Westfall.

We are grieved to learn by letter from Bro. L. C. Cattell, of Eastbourne, England, that cataract has formed on both of his eyes. He was 82 years old Aug. 22. Remember him in your prayers.

Ten lectures by A. H. Zilmer, sent by the publisher, John W. Lea, 1520 N. Robinson street, Philadelphia, Penn. A volume of neat appearance. We have not had time yet to examine its teachings.

From Philip Sidersky, of 300 N. Eden street, Baltimore, Md., we have received numerous booklets, and leaflets; also copies of letters which he addressed to Wm. J. Gaynor, Mayor of New York, who is apparently posing as "a theological censor in New York." Mr. Sidersky also sends reprints of The Brooklyn Daily Eagle, containing a full exposure of "pastor" Russell in his dealings with wife, "Miracle Wheat," business methods, publication of his sermons, etc., etc. Those who care to see the deception of Chas. T. Russell exposed with a merciless hand may send stamp and obtain these reprints of The Eagle from Philip Sidersky, 300 N. Eden st., Baltimore, Md.

In company with Wife and Baby Huggins, we spent last week with Bro. B. F. Smith and family at Monroeville, Ohio. Brother Smith is a successful farmer, whose home was, in every sense of the word, our own. He has one son, Newman, with him in the truth. His wife and daughter Mary, and youngest son Albert, are all interested in the one faith. While there we had six Bible lessons for their exclusive benefit. They are getting pretty well grounded in the faith; their obedience is only a matter of time. Let us hope and pray that God will spare them until they seek his face and may they seek it early.

Those who bring sunshine into the lives of others can not keep it from themselves.—J. M. Barrie.

Love sharpens the eye, the ear, the touch; it quickens the feet; it steadies the hand, it arms against the wet and the cold. What we love to do, that we do well. To know is not all; it is only half. Love is the measure of life; only so far as we love do we really live. The variety of our interests, the width of our sympathies, the susceptibilities of our hearts—if these do not measure our lives, what does?—John Burroughs.

I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live by the light that I have. I must stand with anybody that stands right, stand with him while he is right, and part with him when he goes wrong—Abraham Lincoln.

COUNT YOUR MERCIES

That it is really "a good thing to give thanks" every one may discover for himself by making experiment. Many a cloud has been driven from the spiritual and mental sky by a breath of praise. It is not a good thing to count over sorrows and losses and perplexities; as a rule, we make them worse by doing so; but the counting of our mercies has an invigorating effect, and we are often surprised to find how much richer we are than we thought.—Christian Advocate.

HIGHER CRITICISM FRUITS

The boasted results of the prevalent New Theology teaching, as opening up new views of man, and presenting reasonable ideas of his relationship to God, do not show up very well when tested by the simple plan of finding out how many souls have been turned from darkness to light thereby. It is, of course, granted that at present conversions are not numerous anywhere, but the most arid spots are those where the latest "intellectual critism" flourishes. One who carefully noted the constitution of the Church ministered to by Mr. Campbell, pointed out in a letter to that gentleman that there was not a single case of conversion from the world under his ministry. Needless to say, Mr. C. declined to discuss the matter with him. But that state of things is said to be general amongst churches under Higher Critic ministry.—Bible Standard.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brothers Huggins, beloved:

Your article in last Restitution is most excellent, and I rejoice with you that Jesus of Nazareth, the Christ and Son of the Living God, died for my sins, too, according to the Scriptures, that we may have life for evermore. If so be that we must live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. We must get acquainted with that, which God has spoken, for if we keep ignorant thereof it will prove fatal to us. In your article you surely have given us the strongest proof against immortal soulism, and I wish you to send me one dollar's worth of them, that we may scatter seed. We surely are living in the last days of Gentile times and let us, whatsoever we are doing, do it to the honor and glory of God. Speak again, dear brother, on doctrine and shun not to declare unto us all the counsel of God. Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over which the Holy Spirit hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Amen.

Your brother,
H. JUERGENSEN.

Dear Brothers and Sisters in the Faith:

Our elder brother, Jesus Christ says, "Men ought always to pray and not to faint" (Luke 18:1). Oh how much we today need as never before, to put in practice this saying of our Lord's. Surely Jesus must have been looking down to our day in many of his teachings. How many of his children scattered over this world that are alone, lonely, as far as earthly help and companions are concerned. Are there not thousands perhaps that say at times, "Oh, why does my lot place me away from those of like faith! How much I would be helped, comforted; how much more interested in the truth I would be if I only had some one to talk with who loved the truth and liked to talk on these subjects! There is so much unbelief, so many different doctrines that at times we grow almost discouraged, bewildered, and almost lose heart, hope, and our way, but like a beacon light comes these sayings of our Lord. He warns us in this parable to not faint, not give up, for he said God would avenge his own elect, though he bear long with them (Luke 18:6-8). Beloved, Jesus knew when he spoke those words, and warning passages, just the conditions that would surround his own elect today. Jesus asked, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find the faith on the earth?" (Luke 18:8). So let us not faint, but go daily to his word to get help and comfort. For it is the guide, the light to show us how to go; the food we must feed on daily. Remember that all things work together for good to those that love the Lord. So let us be content, and try to do what he intends us to do in the place he has placed us.

MRS. CHAS. H. THOMAS.

GOSPEL

"But though we, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed (Gal. 1:8).

The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. There is no other means by which we can be justified in God's sight. Hence the importance of the caution contained in our text. If the fountain be corrupted, the streams flowing therefrom will also be corrupt. My object in writing upon this subject is to show exactly what the Gospel is, so that we need not be mistaken on a subject of such vital importance. To show its plan, its purposes, and its adaptation to meet the necessities of the world.

Our text i san index, pointing to the true source of information on the subject—"The Gospel which we preach." It shuts us up to this one Gospel, and excludes every other, "If any man preach any other Gospel than that which Paul preached, let him be accursed. The Gospel may be perverted. It had already been perverted. "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another Gospel, which is not another, but there be some that trouble you and would pervert the Gospel of Christ." This text was written because the Gospel had been perverted, I have chosen it for the same reason. The Gospel has been and is now perverted. This perversion enters into, and guides all the interpretations of the Bible, to the extent to which the Gospel is perverted. The belief of the Gospel unites us to God, to his purposes and plans, the belief of a perverted Gospel separtes us from God, from his purpose and plans. In the one case the Gospel becomes the power of God unto salvation; in the other, the perverted Gospel becomes a snare and defeats the end in view.

How May We Know With Certainty What the Gospel Is?

Just as we understand any other enterprise. 1st. By its purpose, and. By the means to be used to accomplish that purpose.

In all our business enterprises, we ascertain, 1st. What we want, and 2nd. How to obtain it. When we understand definitely these two questions, we are prepared to engage in, or to reject any enterprise. This knowledge is essential. We cannot enter into any business whatever without it. The necessity is universal.

The thing we want, suggests, and controls the means by which to procure it. The means are used only for the sake of the end. Without the end, we have no need of the means. To illustrate: I want a house. This suggests the necessary means to procure a house. I want the means because I want the house, but if I did not want the house, I would not want the means. Again I want to be in New York. To reach this end I must go to New York. I want to go to New York because I want to be in New York. If I did not want to be in New York, I would not want to go to New York. Again, I want the proceeds of a farm. To secure this I want to use the necessary means. But if I did not want the proceeds of the farm I would not want to use the means. Thus it is in every thing we know, and in every thing we do. The end always controls the means. The means are always for the end. Without the end there would be no means. And thus it is, that we may understand with certainty what the Gospel is. We must, in the first place, understand what is the object of the Gospel? What God wants to do? What does he want to bring about? What will be when the Gospel is consummated? What will be its final end? Whatever this end may be found to be, it will suggest and control all the means necessary to its accomplishment. The means will be for this end, and if it were not for this ultimate end, the means would not be used.

Paul Preached the Only True Gospel, What Did He Preach?

Acts 13:32,33. "And we declare unto you glad tidings (the Gospel) how that the promise which was made unto the fathers, God hath fulfilled to us, their children." The promise of glad tidings, which God fulfilled, was made to the fathers (Acts 26:6). "And now I stand and am judged for the hope of the promise made of God to the fathers." Paul's hope was based on the promise made to the fathers. His hope was the hope of the Gospel. Heb. 6:13,18, "For when God made promise to Abraham, because he could sware by no greater, he sware by himself." "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, confirmed it by an oath, that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us." This hope rests upon two immutable things, 1st. The promise made to Abraham. 2d. The oath by which it was confirmed.

This was the hope of all Christians. It was the hope of the Gospel. Gal. 3:16, 29, Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds as of many, but as of one and to thy seed, which is Christ. Christ was the seed of Abraham, and because he was the seed of Abraham he was an heir to the promise, and included in the Gospel, "and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. Know ye therefore that they which are of faith the same are the children of Abraham. Then, the position which Christ occupies in the Gospel, depends on the promise made to Abraham. Christ does not originate the Gospel, but the promise which gives Christ his position in the Gospel, was made to Abraham. This promise is the hope of all Christians, and this promise, Paul says, is the Gospel. Gal. 3:8, And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the Gospel to Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed. In this passage Paul refers us not only to the general promise made to Abraham as the Gospel, but to the particular saying, which comprehended the Gospel, namely, "In thy seed shall all nations be blessed."

Paul, who said in our text, "If any man preach any other Gospel than the Gospel he preached, let him be accursed," refers us to the promise made to Abraham, as the promise which raised Christ from the dead, as the promise for which he hoped, as the promise and oath, which give to all Christians a strong consolation and as the promise which gives Christ his position as the seed, and as the Gospel by which God would justify the heathen through faith.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Annual Report

The Fourteenth Annual Business meeting of the Illinois Bereans was held in Oregon, Illinois, August 23, 1912.

After the reading and approval of the secretary's report, reports were heard from the Oregon, Ripley, Adeline, Chicago, Marshall, Macomb and Dixon societies. Although the membership is small in many of the places, we were glad to hear of the interest and enthusiasm shown in most of the societies and it is our hope that the interest and good work being done by the Berean society may be greatly increased during the year to come.

Reports were heard from the various committees. The Literary Committee reported of having written 71 requests for contributions for the Berean column.

Of this number, there were 42 who contributed and 34 who were never heard from. The committee reported much difficulty in geting responses to their letters asking for contributions. It was suggested that when a letter is received asking for an article for the paper that if it is impossible to write anything at that particular time, a good poem or clipping from some other paper, suitable for this place would be very acceptable. It was also suggested that when a contribution is sent in that the writer state what paper he wishes it to be printed in.

The Isolated Committee reported six new members during the year. Letters were read from some of the isolated members. Mrs. Chandler, Jennie Townsend and Selma Samuelson.

The treasurer reported having received during the year $22.77, and the balance in the treasury at the beginning of the year $45.32, making a total of $108.09. The expenditures during the year were $70.82, leaving a balance of $22.27.

Sister Lelia Whitehead suggested that we have a self-denial month during September, refraining from candy, ice cream, sodas and other unnecessary things and send the money saved in this way to the president. There is always a call for funds which we do not always have in the treasury. Any one, who was not at the meeting, wishing to know for what this money is used, may write to the president for such information.

Sister Leila Whitehead also moved that we send our president, Anna Drew to the Southern Illinois conference and to other points in Southern Illinois. The motion was seconded and carried.

Then followed the election of officers with results as follows:

President—Anna E. Drew, 629 N. Galena ave., Dixon, Illinois; vice president, Leila Whitehead, Ontario street, Austin, Chicago; secretary, Cecil Cross, Oregon, Illinois; treasurer, Verna Woods, 700 Pleasant street, Kewanee, Illinois.

The following committees were appointed:

Tract—M. I. Aslaksen, Harvey, Illinois.

Literary — Jennie Townsend, chairman, Lebanon, Illinois; Mrs. J. M. Glotfelty, Lanark, Illinois; Sadie Morse, Valle Mines, Mo.

Program — Anna L. Adams, chairman, 603 Peoria avenue, Dixon, Ill.; Florence Laning, Ripley, Ill.; William Hardesty, Oregon, Ill.

Isolated—Leota Hanson, 3609 McDonald street, St. Louis, Mo.; Jessie Wilson, 625 N. Willow ave., Austin, Chicago; Emma Van Antwerp, Vermont, Ill.

Meeting adjourned.

CECIL CROSS, Sec.

"THE EARTH IS THE LORD'S"

Some people labor under the impression that if they buy a piece of land they are sole owners of it from surface to center, and of the sky above them, and can will it to their descendants with the same title, unless they choose to sell it. But God, by the pen of his servant David, informs us that "the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein. And he tells us why: "For he founded it upon the seas and established it upon the floods." Surely he has a most important claim upon it, and us. "Ye are not your own. In him we live and move and have our being. Some trust in chariots, and some in horses; but we will remember the name of the Lord our God. Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of his salvation. Because his loving kindness is better than life, our lips should praise him."

LILLIE H. WILLIS.

Dear Bereans and those of like precious faith, greeting:

Last year at our conference I was put on the Isolated committee. Owing to other cares I failed to do much at that work. You know the old song:

If you cannot cross the ocean,
And the heathen lands explore,
You can find a heathen nearer,
You can feed them at your door.

In my weakness I have done what I could for all that came my way, and sowed the seed of the kingdom in every way I could.

I induced a young man to take up Berean work by correspondence with our dear president, who is ever ready to do her part for those who seek to study God's word.

In the spring I located some of the faith in Arkansas City, Kan., and had a pleasant visit in their homes.

My prayer is that you who are blest with the great privilege of hearing these great truths so fully expounded, will gain much from your coming together. Oh, that I might sometime be one of your number and meet all the dear ones face to face! What a feast that would be for one so isolated!

My mind and thoughts are with you. Remember the isolated in all your devotions.

MITTIE CHANDLER.

WILL IT PAY TO BE A CHRISTIAN?

L. S. Bronson

Man is a selfish being, actuated in all of his undertakings by the hope of reward. In no enterprise does he understandingly engage without first resolving this question in his mind. Will it pay? The same thought comes to all of us in religious matters. Will it pay to be a Christian?

It is said in Heb. 11 that Moses refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasure of sin for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt." Why, let me ask?

It is written, "He had respect unto the recompence of reward." There was a time in David's history when he began to have the blues and he said, "My feet were almost gone, my steps had well nigh slipped." Why David? "For I was envious when I saw the prosperity of the wicked. They are not in trouble as other men. Their eyes stand out with fatness, they have more than heart can wish. They are corrupt and speak wickedly; they set their mouths against the heavens and their tongue walketh through the earth."

When David saw all this he envied the wicked, "Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then understood I their end. Surely thou didst set them in slippery places." When David saw this he exclaims, "So foolish was I and ignorant, I was as a beast before thee;" "Whom have I in heaven but thee? It is good for me to draw near to God" (Psalms 73). At last David saw it paid to be on God's side.

After the apostles had been with Christ for a time the question of profit and loss came crowding into their minds; and as they remembered their fishing boats, now moored along the banks of Galilee and their bleaching nets unused upon its shores, they began to wonder if their new venture in life would pay. Impetuous Peter sought Christ and propounded this question to him, "Behold, we have left all and followed thee; what shall we have therefore? And Jesus said unto them, "Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the generation, when the son of man shall sit on the throne of his glory ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or fathers, or mothers, or wives, or children, or lands, for my name sake, shall receive an hundred fold and shall inherit everlasting life" (Matt. 19).

After receiving this reply to Peter's question the apostles were satisfied with their religious investment and showed by their life and manner of death that it paid to serve their redeemer and king. When Christ made himself a sacrifice for man's redemption, did he consent to suffer and die the death of the cross without considering the question, Will it pay? Did he walk up Calvery's heights to his death and suffer himself to be crucified upon the cross while twelve legions of angels stood waiting his command, without some hope or promise of a reward? Had he counted the cost? Was he satisfied that it would pay? Paul in Heb. 12:2 tells us it was for "the joy that was set before him that he endured the cross and despised its shame and is now set down at the right hand of the throne of God." "Wherefore seeing we are compared about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and the finisher of our faith," knowing it will pay if we faint not by the way.

THE TRUTH DEFENDED—14

An Ex-Methodist Pleads for the Truth

Mrs. Chas. Thomas

Does not forever mean forever? Yes; but we read, "Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority, and power. For he must reign until he put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. And when all things shall be subjected unto him, then shall the son himself be subjected unto him, that God may be all in all (I Cor. 15:24-29).

All things are to be done away that are contrary to God's will under the reign of Jesus and his brethren.

After the wicked are no more, and the last enemy (death) destroyed, the Father comes and takes the Kingdom for Himself. A new era starts under the new order of things, for God says: "I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending."

As we reckon time it is proper even to say forever, but when time ends, then the wicked will be no more.

Now in closing let us remember that while the Bible has been translated we still have the original as our guide, and all Bible students of all denominations go back to it for the true rendering of words, but the larger number of them hand down to us the facts covered with their own ideas, superstition and creeds. How many of us that take lead in our Protestant churches without knowing there is an original? Forget past teaching and see what the Bible teaches. Why do the ministers and teachers take a lesson here and there, and tell a story about it, or explain it to mean what they think, instead of teaching us how to study the Bible.

Again, say the word is the guide. Study it with the original at your elbow, for you cannot depend on the ministers and leaders of our orthodox churches. If the Bible is true than Christendom is astray.

When I first saw the truth it looked right, beautiful, and plain, but I reasoned it cannot be possible that the great and learned leaders of our day are all wrong, all in the dark, all leading others when they don't know where they are walking themselves. It did not seem possible that good, saintly people I have known, were all mistaken, and only the ones who showed me the truth was right. No; I reasoned if the whole world believe different, they are surely right, instead of one person; for in all my life this is the first person I ever heard tell such things. So I digged down into the word, and found that I could not doubt its truth.

Then another thought came: Was there not only twelve chosen? Did not Christ say that the Father had hid these things from the wise and prudent and revealed them unto babes? (Luke 12:21). Did not Jesus say, "Enter ye in at the straight gate, for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that go in there at" (Matt. 7:13). Straight is the gate, and narrow the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it" (Matt. 7:14). "Many are called, but few chosen" (Matt. 22:14) "Hearken, my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of a kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him?" (James 2:5) It is really the way Jesus said it should be.

Christianity flourished under the disciples, but in the latter days there was to be a falling away, and we are living in those times. "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? For since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of creation" (II Pet. 3:3-4). "The time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts, shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned into fables" (II Tim. 4:3-4). When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith (the faith) on the earth?" (Luke 18:8).

Some that will see the truth of what I have written will say, "Oh, well, you may be right, but I think if every one does as good as they can, they will be alright in the end." No one can say that and not make God a liar; for the soul that sinneth it shall die. After God has placed us here for the sole purpose of selecting his peculiar people and laid out a narrow and straight way, and we see the truth and don't accept it, we will be lost. Don't think any way will do; there is one way, one Bible. Could God's word live all these ages and millions of doctrines be right? There is only one way, and I find on investigation that there are thousands who see the truth and are watching the signs of the times, and know his coming is close; they are scattered, and are known as the Church of God. The Bible is their creed.

Is it not worth giving up all, coming out from among them, accepting the truth regardless of cost? What is this present life of probation compared with the eternal life to be given soon? Just think: If you neglect this truth you are letting slip the chance to live, when all things are become new. Now is the time to decide. All a person has to do is to fail to see the signs of the times, to let the cards, business, pleasures, and other things of this life choke the word; just to follow the multitudes, and say you will decide these questions later; just neglect this wonderful salvation that Christ died to bring to the world: just to "go away sorrowful," like the righ young man: in other words, just by doing and deciding nothing. Watch, for you will be like the virgins who thought the time was long, and there was lots of time. Let us take warning by what Jesus said of them. :"And five of them were wise, and five foolish, they that were foolish took their lamps and took no oil with them. While the bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept; and at midnight there arose the cry, Behold, the bridegroom cometh." After explaining how they tried to get oil, but were too late and were shut out, he adds, "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."

Our Jesus is coming to earth again,
Coming to stay and as King reign.
In Jerusalem, where all will be endless day.
For sorrow, sickness, death, and pain
Will be wiped away when he comes to reign.

AMONG THE BRETHERN.

Charles Clifford Maple.

At this date (Sept. 12, 1912), we are in a meeting at Jacksonville, near the city of Springfield, at the home of Bro. and Sister A. E. Overholser. Our meeting opened last evening with an attendance of about forty; they prove to be very attentative listeners. We trust they may "search the Scriptures daily," and become better acuainted with the way.

Sister Mattie Neill, pastor of the Salem church, is leading the song services for us in a very delightful manner. We expect Brother Huggins in a few days.

We hope to continue the effort here for some days, which will depend largely upon the interest and attendance. We wish to thank different brethern for letters of encouragement and for suggestions. We do not always find time to reply immediately. You will know, however, that it is because we are busy, and not because we have not the desire. All will be answered in due time.

Do not forget brethern, to keep us informed as to open fields where the word may be preached. We shall not be able to visit all of them, perhaps, but a list will be kept and visits made when in those sections.

Let us work brethern, for the Lord is coming. My home address is North Ridgeville. Mail will be forwarded to me from that place.

IOWA CONFERENCE REPORT

The 25th Annual Conference of the Church of God in Iowa met at Waterloo, Aug. 24—Sept. 1st.

There was a hundred and fifty-two enrolled. The atendance was not as large as usual on account of sickness, but the interest in Bible study and good fellowship among the members was better than ever before. There were good sermons by Joseph Williams Eychaner, O. J. Allard, Eldred March and Jno. Garton, on the Kingdom, Resurection, Coming of Christ, and Signs of the Times, while Joseph Williams gave us practical lessons on how we are saved from sin—how we are dead to the world and live only as God lives in us.

But the meetings which brought the greatest interest and made the people study and think, were the Bible lessons conducted by O. J. Allard and Joseph Williams, and the question box where questions on doctrine and Christian practice were discussed by all with a freedom of thought and speech which showed that the brethern in Iowa had made a marked advance in charity, and have grown in the spirit of love for each other in the last few years. We feel that these discussions, this freedom of thought is the life of the church—that it is very conductive to Bible study, and helpful in obtaining the Christian graces; for it is an established fact that everything grows by action, whether in the world or in the church—while inactions brings congestion, stagnation, rust and death. Therefore we think it better to discuss all points of doctrine to make the people think and study until we come into a unity of the truth. Some of the subjects were: The object of baptism—is it necessary to salvation; difference between John's baptism and Jesus's baptism; the objects of the parables and the lessons from them; what is the beast in Rev. 13; of what covenant is Jesus the mediator; how are we saved from sin; should Christians go to theaters and moving picture shows, etc., etc.

The class for the children was taught every morning by Miss Adella Starbuck, and by the good attendance and interest, we think must have been enjoyed by the little ones, although Miss Della is planning to make it even better next year.

Among those present from other states were Mrs. Orning and daughter Elizabeth, Miss Florence Laning, Mr. White, of Nebraska, Mrs. Saylor, of Kansas, Dr. and Mrs. Prime and others. We were very glad to have these brethren and sisters with us; their presence was an inspiration, and we hope they and others will come again next year.

The secretary reported ten orders signed amounting to $565.59.

The following motions were carried:

1—That visiting brethren be allowed to participate in business deliberations and have the same privileges of voting as the Iowa brethren.

2—That we hire a pastor and evangelist.

3—That we pay 75 a month.

4—That the president appoint a secretary, from each church, to voice funds for the state work.

5—That no question affecting the religious faith or discipline of any members be decided by a vote.

6—That the conference board hire men for the pastor and evangelist.

6—That the conference board issue ministerial certificates to those whom they deem worthy.

8—That the same dining room committee hold office another year, viz.:

Mrs. Maggie Moore....Chairman
Mrs. Ada Moran.....Secretary
Mrs. A. J. Eychaner.. Treasurer

The following officers were elected:

President, O. J. Allard, Fort Dodge; Vice President, A. J. Eychaner, Cedar Falls; Secretary, Eva Stearns, Sac City; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Ada Moran, Clinton; Treasurer, G. P. Allard, Ft. Dodge.

The following were elected church secretaries—Mable Evans Rock, Avon; Mrs. Mary Garton, Marathon; Mrs. Maggie Moore, Waterloo; Mrs. Sadie Clark, Gladbrook; Mrs. Ada Marsh, Irving; A. M. Jones, Eagle Grove; Mrs. Oscar Johnson, Sac City; Mrs. J. Fish, Hickory Grove.

The Conference board engaged Joseph Williams to work in Iowa for a few months and engaged Eldred Marsh as pastor for the following year. The treasury reported $800 on hand for commencing work. A special fund was raised by some brethren in Iowa to send W. L. Crowe into new fields.

The Resolution Committee reported as follows:

Whereas, we the members of the Iowa conference have been blessed with health and prosperity in such a degree to enable us to meet together at this time, Be it resolved that we give thanks to Giver of all things, and that we endeavor to keep in mind the coming year the goodness and mercy of God. We record with deep sorrow the loss by death of several members of the household of faith and express our approval of their Christian life, and mourn the loss of their fellowship, but are happy in the hope of meeting them in the morning of the resurrection.

We welcome into Christian fellowship those who have repented and yielded obedience to the gospel during the year.

Whereas, a number of our company have given their time and efforts to fixing up the grounds arranging for our food, supplying flowers for decorations, and done many other things for our comfort and pleasure; therefore, be it resolved that we as a body all express our gratitude for these favors.

Whereas, the Bible furnishes us thoroughly to all good works; therefore be it resolved that we favor the Bible plan of church conference organization.

SUSIE TODD,
JOSEPH WILLIAMS,
Dr. J. M. PRIME, Comm.

An hour was given in which memorial services were held for those who had died during the year conducted by Bro. A. J. Eychaner. Many words of love and commendation were spoken by the friends of those who were gone, but while regret, and sorrow, and loss were expressed yet faith in God and our Lord Jesus Christ was so strong that we sorrowed not as others who have no hope of the near coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. What a blessed faith we have, and how thankful we should be to our Heavenly Father for this comfort and hope. It is worth more than all the treasures of the world.

Letters were read from Leo Rock, Mr. and Mrs. Lucas and Mrs. J. Robinson.

EVA L. STEARNS, Sec.

REPORT OF THE SISTERS' MEETING of the CHURCH of GOD, of CLEVELAND, O., Read at the Conference at Salem, August 23, 1912.

Since our meeting at the conference last year, August 18, 1911, we have held twenty-four meetings, having an average attendance of twelve members, and twenty visitors.

The past few months we have taken for our lessons, the book of Exodus. We found it a very interesting study, from which we have received many practical lessons. We still continue the good work of visiting the sick, taking fruit of flowers. Letters were written to those not able to attend our meetings and others.

This year we sent three, one brother and two sisters, to conference.

As there had been many calls for help during the winter months Sister Sanford suggested we send $3.00 to the Associated Charities, which sum was thankfully received by them.

We also sent $10.00 to the secretary of the organization of the Isolated Members of the Church of God. This amount to assist in the fund being raised to send ministers where needed.

We received a very nice letter in answer, thanking us for the money and expressing good wishes.

Our treasurer's report is as follows:

Total collection	$60.85
Total donations	$19.72
Total	$80.57
Cash on hand last Con....	2.57
Total cash	$83.14
Disbursed	$79.55
Bal. in treasury	3.59

NELLIE M. PATE, treas.

Although our treasurer's report does not show as much collected as last year by $9.00, we feel that we have made good, as there has been many calls for money for other purposes.

HATTIE C. GOSS, Sec.

WHERE ARE THE DEAD?

John Remer

This question should interest Bible students, for I think there is a misleading theory among even so-called Christians. If people would lay aside pet theories, take the Bible only, and let it tell them the condition of the dead, there would not be such a medley about this subject.

Not long since I made a little talk at the cemetery I used the words of the Lord in John 11:25, Jesus said. He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." I also linked to this statement Paul's statement in 1 Cor. 15:22, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." I showed also that we were a people that believe in a resurrection from the dead to actual life again, and not a coming back from some far off country which so many call heaven or hell. I also showed that if a man lived a life worthy of immortality, which is eternal life, would get it, for Paul says it is to be obtained by a patient continuance well doing (Rom. 2:7).

I also showed that every man would be rewarded according to his works (Rom. 20:12-13). "I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the book was opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works." If a man is judged according to his works, he will also he rewarded according to his works. One more passage I call attention to in Rev. 22:12, "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his works shall be." So you see that this is all to occur after the resurrection takes place and that does not take place until the Lord comes.

Well, where are the dead between death and resurrection? I told my hearers at this funeral, which I have told about in this article, that some people were offended at me because I call death a sleep. But I said when we consult the Bible on death it terms death a sleep. Let us have a few quotations for proof, Deut. 31:16, "Behold, thou shalt sleep with thy fathers;" I. Kings, 2:10, "So David slept with his fathers and was buried;" I. Kings 14:31," Jeroboam slept with his fathers and was buried;" I.Kings 16:28, "Omri slept with his fathers and was buried;" Matt. 9:24, "Give place, the maid is not dead, but sleepeth;" John 11:11, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth;" Acts 7:60,"Stephen fell asleep." Acts 13:36, "David fell on sleep, and saw corruption." We can truthfully say that David has fallen asleep, if Christ never comes he will remain in this condition. John 14:21, Job here, in speaking of the condition of man in death says, "His sons come to honor him and he knoweth it not." Psa. 6-5, For in death there is no remembrance of thee." Psa. 88:10, "Shall the dead rise and praise thee?" Not before Christ comes. Psa. 88:12, here David describes the death state as a land of forgetfulness, "Shall thy wonders be known in the land of forgetfulness?" Psa. 146:4 "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that every day his thoughts perish." The death state is an unconscious state—that is why death is termed a sleep. Man don't know anything while he sleeps. Eccl. 9:5, "The living know that they must die, but the dead know not anything." Eccl. 9:10, "There is no work nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest." Dan. 12:2, "Many of them that sleep in the dust shall awake." John 5:27-29, "The hour is coming in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth." You see that it is not hard to locate the dead if we lay everything else aside and let the Bible do the locating.

"Well, some say the body is in the grave, but the soul alive somewhere. John 33:22. "His soul draweth near unto the grave." Psa. 16:10, "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell (sheol, grave) Jer. 18:20. They have digged a pit (grave) for my soul." The foregoing ought to be enough to convince any unprejudiced man or woman where the dead are.

THAT HAPPY LAND

Sister Eldemiller

Dear ones, we as a little band,
Have started for the kingdom,
Shall we ever enter that happy land?

Yes, if we take the Bible,
Guide book in hand, and
Strictly obey the command;
It will lead us to the happy land.

If by chance we shall meet.
Some lonely pilgrim with weary heart,
Take him by the hand and
Kindly teach him the way to the happy land.

As we journey on our way
We may chance to meet a friend,
Who may say, "There is such a little flock:
Are you not discouraged traveling this way?"

But we rejoice and as a little band
Clasp hand in hand,
And travel on toward the happy land.

A weak mind sinks under prosperity as under adversity. A strong mind has two tides—when the moon is at the full and when there is no moon.

Many a man can say: "For years I have driven my business at the highest speed; now it has turned the tables and is driving me at the same rate."

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with uestions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear breathren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST

A sermon by the Editor of The Restitution. If you have friends who have immortal souls, present them with a copy of this sermon, and it will cast out the unclean spirit. One copy, 3 cents; two copies, 5 cents; twelve copies, 25 cents. Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, O.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

SPECIAL MEETING

The Editor of The Restitution will hold a series of meetings with the Church of God at Moriah, near Casey, Ill., beginning October 19, 1912. A limited number of churches near his line of travel may be visited just before or after our meeting, if their requests are sent in immediately. All who desire to be with us at our meeting will be cordially entertained. Intending visitors should notify the secretary.

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16. Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38; 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or quit the pulpit.

Teach the Scriptures, not foolishness. Honor God and the Savior.—B. S. Driggs.

Great Combination Offer

OF "THE RESTITUTION"

GET THESE Money-making Secrets WITH Farm Journal

It tells each property holder "Poultry Secrets" tells how to carry fowls, and many other secrets for more profit.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says ROY CRANEY, Illinois. "What it tells would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes F. J. DUNLOP, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 300 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck-raising," says P. M. WARNOCK, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-Book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says F. W. MANSFIELD, New York.

T. F. MCCREA, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden this summer. I lost my health in the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting near to the soil. After a long talk with the Chinese language and mission problems, it is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, fruit, chickens, etc. I am saving money and regaining my health. My wife and I both find FARM JOURNAL indispensable."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. POTTER, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. GLADWIN, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes MRS. JOE LAWRENCE, Saskatchewan. "I was never successful in growing cabbage until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes DR. WILLIAM DAVIS, New Jersey. When the first copy came it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want some to greet like home. When it arrives, I feel the gladness jump right into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until bed-time, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. I. STOAR, a Virginia truck clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL, I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. WITMER, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."

These booklets are 6 by 9 inches, all profusely illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of discoveries and methods of successful poultrymen, long jealously guarded. It gives Felch's famous trapping chart, the Curtiss method of getting one-half more pullets than cockerels, Bogart's method of detecting fertility, which prevents sitting on rotten eggs, breeding, feeding, how to produce winter eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "blocping," "shoeing," roaring and gasoline doping, and other tricks of "sport" and swindlers, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse. It also gives many valuable training, feeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $18,000 a year, mainly from eggs. All back-yard chicken-raisers should learn about the "Kangaroo trick" and how Foster FEEDS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest fall-bearing strawberries almost until snow flies. It gives you the fruits of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and blossom-tampering to produce berries in the fall, tells inside facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how one grower gets 10,000 quarts an acre and nets 15 cents a quart, etc. L. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who can grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Prof. Holden, the "Corn King," tells how to get ten to twenty bushels more per acre of corn, rich in protein and the best stock-feeding elements. Pictures make every process plain.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of seven cows that produced half a ton of butter each per year (140 pounds is the average). An eye-opener for dairymen. Get it, weed out your poor cows, and turn your feed into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your back-yard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck-farm near Boston makes every year 50 cents each on 60,000 ducklings. It tells why ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW they do everything.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Horace Vose, the famous Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to mate, to set eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey-ranch PAY.

THE GOLDEN ALTAR

H. V. Reed

That was a most impressive picture that Noah made of the Altar of sacrifice after the deluge. The old world had passed away. The ark rested upon the mountain and the whole heaven above was calm and serene, the surging waters were now still, and the judgments of God had been executed upon an earth that had been filled with violence. Only one family passed over to the new world.

The bow of promise gleamed in brightness on this side of the receding clouds, the preacher of righteousness gathered his little group around the altar where he made his first offering. The Lord accepted his sacrifice and made the covenant, that the waters should never again deluge the world. The bow yet gleams in the heavens and the clouds still float away after the storm.

Another altar was executed on a mountain between Hai and Bethel. It was here that Abraham invoked the name of Jehovah. Dearest memories cluster around the altar where Abraham made his offerings and received the promises. The loyal patriarch, did not, in his lifetime, receive the fruition of the promise, but he saw it afar off, even beyond the age of the law, and still, it was then only in the dawn, when the true seed came. "For to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ" Gal 3:14). The altars, the offerings, the sacrifices and the types, foreshadowed the appearing and glory of the Messiah. Abraham rejoiced to see the day of the Son of Man. That day will witness the reality of the blessed promise. "In thee and in thy seed shall all nations of the earth be blessed." This holy promise yet awaits the completion of the heirship, even as stated by the apostle to the Galatians.

"And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise" (Gal. 3:29). The heirship and the promise must await the completion of the high calling in Christ Jesus." Till we all come into the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ" (Eph. 4:13).

Yes, when the "new man" is made complete, and the "joint heirs with Christ," who also are the heirs of promise" (Heb. 6:17) Then, will come to pass that sublime promise of the Son of God. "That many shall come from the east and west and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven" (Math. 8:11). Isaac built his altar under the same promise. Jacob went to the same place, where Abraham had erected an altar unto Jehovah—Bethel became a sacred spot to Jacob where the angel gave him the prevailing name of Israel! Indeed, divine worship everywhere had an altar of sacrifice and adoration to our Lord.

But the old temple and sanctuary are now strangled down and Israel is driven from his land and city. No longer does the incense float from the Holy City of Jerusalem to the throne of Jehovah. The exiles still hold their altar worship in sad memory of their former glory. The time came when neither at the mountain, where Jacob watered his flock, not yet at Jerusalem, could men worship the Father, hence the apostle assures us that "We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat which serve the tabernacle" (Heb. 13:10). Israel's city, sanctuary, and altar are under the dominion of the desolator and will so remain until the times of the Messiah. During his ministry under the melchisedec order we are to worship in his name and all who become heirs will share in his coming glory.

The golden altar is brought to view under the opening of the seventh seal in the Apocalypse, which brings to light the closing scenes of Gentile times, and the final answer to the prayers of all saints.

The golden censer contains the united prayers of all who have become heirs with Christ to the kingdom and the glory of his blessed reign.

The incense offered in the ancient tabernacle, on the great day of atonement, finds its fulfillment in the closing scenes of the time of the end and the resurrection of the holy dead. The song of all the redeemed, brings before us a most vivid picture of the final anthem which reaches back over the ages gone, and proclaims the impending victories and blessings of redemption through the blood of the Everlasting Covenant.

Harps and Golden Vials

And the four living beings and the four and twenty ancient ones fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them, harp and golden vials, full of incense which are the prayers of saints. And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seeds thereof, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue and people and nation; and hast made us unto our God, kings and priests: (Rev. 5: 8-10). and we shall reign on the earth.

In the above we have the song of the harpers, the prayers of incense and the redemption by the blood of the Lamb. The book is opened wide, and on its pages is written the wonderful results of our blessed Lord's work of Redemption. Then comes the final rapture in the song of the angels. Everything above in heaven and on the earth, and under the earth and all that are in the sea send forth the joyous news of our Lord's great victory.

The prophet points to the final scene beyond the lake of fire, beyond the pain and the sorr And He that sat upon the throne, said Behold I make all things new. Blessed consummation. Happy is he whose name is written in the Book of Life. For he "shall not be hurt of the second death."

PINE WOODS BIBLE CLASS

W. H. Wilson

Leader—The topic for our study tonight is:

Gentiles are not required to keep the seventh day Sabbath.

I trust that this will be a profitable study for all. And I want you to answer this question: Please show what people were obliged to observe the Seventh Day Sabbath?

A.—I find that the Sabbath was given specially to Israel, and to no other people.

Q.—What scripture proof have you?

A.—I call attention to the giving of the ten commandments, as recorded in Deut. 5. Verse 15 reads: "And remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee (the people delivered from Egyptian bondage) out thence through a mighty hand, and by a stretched out arm: therefore (for this reason) the Lord thy God commanded thee to keep the Sabbath day." Hence, all candid minds must admit that the above Sabbath day commandment was given only to Israel, as a memorial of their deliverance from Egypt.

Q.—There must be a time when the Sabbath law was first promulgated or made known, that the people to whom it was given may obey it. To what people was it first made known?

A.—See Neh. 9:14: "And madest known unto them (Israel) thy holy Sabbath." Exod. 16:29: "See for the Lord hath given you the Sabbath."

God never addressed language like the above to any other nation.

Leader—I will ask Ella to give a special reason why God gave the Sabbath day to be observed only by Israel?

Ella—It was given as a "sign" between God and Israel and no other nation. Read Exod. 31:13: "Verily my Sabbath ye shall keep, for it is a sign between you and me." See also verse 17: "It is a sign between me and the children of Israel forever." If all mankind were required to keep the Sabbath should it not have read: "It is a sign between me and all nations." Again, see Ezek. 20:12, 13: "I gave them (the people of Israel) my Sabbath to be a sign between me and them, that they might know that I am the Lord that sanctify them."

It certainly is a piece of presumption for other nations to appropriate a sign that was never given to them. God will never recognize their self-appropriated sign.

Israel failed to keep the sign between them and God; hence God then determined to cause the Sabbath to cease. See Amos. 2:13: "I will, cause all her mirth to cease, her feast days her new moons and her Sabbaths."

What do you think of Gentile observing Sabbaths that was never given them to observe and especially after God caused them to "cease," according to his word.

Leader, when were they to cease?

Lucy. Read Gal. 3:17: "Wherefore serveth the law? It was added because of transgression, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made." See also verses 23 to 25: "Before faith came we were kept under the law, shut up unto the faith which should afterwards be revealed. Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith has come, we are no longer under the schoolmaster."

Q. Have we not some Gentiles who appropriate to themselves a part of the law, even that written upon the tables of stone?

A. Yes, sir; they are trying to carry self-appointed burden, and they make a failure of it every time. Is it not strange how some people atempt to do impossible things?

Q. What kind of a ministration did Paul regard that written upon tables of stone?

A. Read II. Cor. 3:7: "If the ministration of death written and engraven in stone was glorious so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance, which was to be done away." See also verse 11: "For if that done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious." I think it would be a part of wisdom to exchange the "ministration of death," for the ministration of life. The ministration of death will not blend harmoniously with the ministration of life. As long as the schoolmaster is dismissed, let him stay dismissed; don't try to keep him.

Leader. Did each of the ten commandments contain a moral precept, as for instance, "Thou shalt not steal," etc.?

A. All the commandments which did have a moral precept are re-affirmed in the Christian system, but not as preserving the law of commandments, but as part of a new order of things. The fourth commandment contains no moral precept whatever, but is an arbitrary command to observe a certain day as directed under penalty of death. This is not found in the Christian system at all. In that system there is no command to keep holy the seventh day, and no penalty given for not keeping it, and no divine reproof for breaking it. The Jews found fault with Jesus for breaking the Sabbath.

Q. Will you please give an instance of that?

A. Yes, sir; read John 5:10 to 17: "The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, it is the Sabbath day; it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed. He answered them, "He that made me, whole the same said unto me, Take up thy bed and walk."

When the Jews found that Jesus had healed the man on the Sabbath day, and had also directed him to take up his bed and walk, therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the Sabbath day."

Leader. Did Jesus deny that he had broken the Sabbath?

A. No, sir; he simply called their attention to the fact that his father worked on that day, and that he followed his example. See verse 17: "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." Then, we must also remember that the authority of the schoolmaster ceased when the seed came.

Q. Did Paul regard the keeping of the Sabbath days, months and years, as the proper thing to do after the schoolmaster had been dismissed?

A. No, sir; see Gal. 4:10, 11: "Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years (read right here Amos 2:11). I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain."

Q. In point of fact, what were these Sabbaths?

A. Nothing more substantial than shadows. Col. 2:16, 17: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holy day (when in force they were judged worthy of death), or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath days (not in the original); which are a shadow of things to come." It would be far more sensible to grasp the substance and to cease chasing after shadows.

Leader. When Jesus said, "The Sabbath was made for man," are we to understand that he intended to use the word "man" in a special or an unlimited sense?

Carrie. The Bible uses the noun "man," in both ways. I will quote two instances where it is used with regard to one nation: First in Deut. 5, after the ten commandments had been given we read in verse 24: "We have heard his voice out of the midst of the fire: We have seen this day that God doth talk with man, and he liveth." This was the occasion of the giving of "the Sabbath to man," and the men he gave it to were Israelites exclusively; Second. Psa. 78:24, 25: "And had rained down manna upon them to eat, and had given them the corn of heaven. Man (Israelitishmen) did eat angel's food, he sent them meat to the full." Hence we must see that the Sabbath was never given to mankind in general, but exclusively to Israel. From creation down to the exodus of Israel, the Bible is as silent as the grave about any man being required to observe the Sabbath.

The issue before us is indeed a plain one, Is any one day of the seven to be regarded as more holy than another? With regard to the seventh day, previous to the coming of the seed, and the passing of the schoolmaster, as far as Israel is concerned, the Sabbath could not be ignored under penalty of death. But now Paul in Rom. 14:4 to 6 shows that every day, when placed in contrast with one day is alike. Paul at Colosse saw that the church was being troubled with some Sabbatarians, and in order to settle that matter said: "Let no man therefore (for this reason) judge you in meats, drinks, holy days, new moon, or the Sabbath." You must observe that the sixteenth verse is a conclusion which is drawn from the fourteenth verse. The hand-writing of ordinances had been nailed to the cross and removed.

In place of the Sabbath being binding upon all nations, scripture evidence is conclusive, that it was in ordinance binding upon Israel and the reasons given for its observance is also exclusively Israelitish.

Leader. It is now time to adjourn our session, and I trust that we have all thrown off the yoke of boudage, and are freemen in Christ.

HOW GOES THE WORLD?

Newspaper Clipping Sent by Mr. Adams.

As "Billy" Sunday, the baseball evangelist would express it, we have decided to let two of the gentler sex "go to bat" first in this "innings."

Please remember that what is known as "Question (1)" is: "Do you understand Scripture to teach that the world (people) will grow better until all will become Christians, and then Christ will come to reign, or how?" This question was propounded to Rev. Alice Ruth Palmer, pastor of the Congregational church at Grant, Neb. She replied: "Paul said, 'the world shall wax worse and worse.' He meant the Roman Empire then in power. It did. If Paul was mistaken as to the time of the second coming of Christ—and he was—the rest of us would better keep silent about what we don't know. I hate to see the Scripture made a foot ball, to be used to try to prove whatever any sort of crank takes a prejudice to have it prove."

Mrs. E. A. Sexton, editor and publisher of a religious paper at Atlanta, Georgia, answers the same question: "The world will grow worse as we near the close of this dispensation. II. Tim 3:13. Apostasy has already set in in some of the churches, indicating that we are in the Laodicean age of the churches. Jas. 5:1 to 7; Matt. 24; Rev. 3:16 to 21." (Note: Webster defines "Apostasy" as "an abandonment of what one has voluntarily professed; a total desertion or departure from one's faith, principles or party.") Question (2) was: "Are churchmembers as a whole more spiritual, more loyal and more opposed to worldly amusements than formerly?" Miss Palmer: "I have had no experience with church members of former generations, nor with those to come. There are some very Godly people in this town. I should rather follow their example and that of their Master than to be getting up a "grouch' against the church and its members." Mrs. Sexton: "'Church-members' may not be, but God has always had a faithful 'little flock' and he has those today who will be faithful unto the end. Little opposition is met with in many of the churches on the worldly amusement question, compared to former years."

No. (3) "Are these insisted upon more than formerly: Genuine conversion and the Pentecostal experience, and is this experience necessary?" Miss Palmer: "You will have to try people before you know if they are really converted. 'By their fruits ye shall know them.' Can you tell me what the Pentecostal experience is? Christ sends the 'Comforter' to guide his followers, I don't see how we can go right without this leading." Mrs. Sexton: "It is my conviction that comparatively few preachers in the large city churches insist much upon conversion (the new birth). 'Ichabod' is written over such church doors. The Pentecostal experience is holy power; it is real, supernatural and from on high. Many try to explain it away. Some preachers even deny Scripture. 'New Theology' is being received. R. J. Campbell, leading spirit in this teaching, was welcomed by preachers of different denominations while visiting in America. This class of so-called Christians may have a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away. II. Tim. 3:5. But thank God there are more than 7,000 who are still contending for 'the faith once delivered to the saints.'" (Note: For the benefit of those who have not yet found their bibles: "Ichabod" means "Where is the glory?" or "there is no glory." I. Sam. 4:21 and margin.)

Rev. J. W. Jennings of Jennings & Graham, managers of the Methodist publishing houses at Chicago, Kansas City, Cincinnati and other cities, replied from the General Conference at Minneapolis as follows: (1) "I believe in the final triumph of Christ throughout the world." (2) Does the M. E. church hold to the teachings of Wesley in theory and practice as closely as formerly? Reply: "On this there are divergent views, but they hold to the spirit of his teachings." (3) Is there a tendency among the Protestant churches to "let down the bars" on dancing, card playing, etc., more than formerly? Reply: "The prayer meeting crowd, which is the heart life of the church and which has no use for such things, shows no tendency that way."

Rev. C. F. Luscher, pastor of the M. E. church at Maywood replies to question (1) "No, I do not understand the Scripture so to teach." (2) "I do not think so." (3) "No."

Rev. D. W. Parker, pastor of M. E. church at Farnam, Neb., replies: (1) Evil men and seducers shall become worse and worse Tim 3:13. We infer from Christ's words (Luke 17:26-30) that the world will be as in the days of Noah." (2) "If we compare the interest manifested in religious services such as the class or prayer meeting, to the interest shown in temporal things we would say that they are not so spiritual as formerly. The church work is frequently supplanted by lodge affairs and other human organizations, until they are not as loyal as formerly. Many seem to have gone mad on amusements until they show little discretion in the matter." (3) A tendency toward so-called eloquent preaching often rules out the insistence on real heart experience. Let us not go beyond the Master's direction when he insisted on the new birth, Jno. 3:3. We question if the Pentecost experience is taught as much as formerly. We would do well to accept the teachings in Rom. 12:1; Heb. 6:1; Heb. 12:14; John 17:17, 19."

Rev. Henry Zinnecker, pastor of the Methodist church, Curtis, Neb., replies (1) "Our command is to 'preach the gospel,' not to convert the world. Mark 16:15, 16. Christ will not come except there be a falling away. II. Thes. 2:3. Condition of world must be as in days of Noah. Luke 17:25, 30. See II. Peter 3:5-7; II. Peter 2:2-6, world is to be burned, not saved. (2) In Matt. 24:12 worldliness in church is prophesied.

GOLD DUST

A true man of God will always deliver God's message whatever the consequences.

We should not yield to the temptation to doubt any more than the temptation to steal.

To be a strong hand in the dark to another in the time of need, to be a cup of strength to a human soul in a crisis of weakness is to know the glory of life.

The proof of our understanding the things of Christ is given by our doing them. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them (Jno. 13:17).

When the good seed is received into the good soil of a sincere heart, the fruits of the spirit will shortly manifest themselves in the life.

Ready-implies something of preparation—not taken by surprise. So let us ask him to prepare us for all that he is preparing for us.

THE HOUSE BEAUTIFUL.

Viola Gazely.

Where there is faith there is love,
Where there is love, there is peace
Where there is peace there is God,
Where there is God, there is no need.

Such are the conditions existing in the house of the Lord. Let us all pray as David did; for the divine favor, presence and light of his countenance: "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord;" "for a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness."

If one day in the courts of the Lord is better than a thousand elsewhere, and if it is better to occupy the lowest position in the house of God than to enjoy all the immunities of a dwelling in the tents of wickedness, I can tell you my friends, it is worth while striving for a place in his house.

There are superior advantages of the house of God over all other places and objects. Take the brightest days that ever dawned on those who wander from God; one day in his courts is better than their thousands, though it be one of the darkest. The house of God is where he is worshiped, and his power made known. Jacob called it the house of God and the gate of heaven, where he had only a stone for his pillow, and the curtains of the sky for his covering. This proves that it is not the place, not the material building that constitutes the house of God, but the divine presence.

The dance hall, the gambling den, the theater; any place where sinners resort for entertainment are tents of wickedness. They are many, but the house of God is one, and offers higher interests and more and deeper pleasures than all the tents of wickedness. All forms of worldly pleasure combined falls short of the glories of the sanctuary. How mistaken are those who regard the pleasures of this sinful world as their chief delight and neglect the house of God. They choose and pursue after pleasures in a path that will surely end in darkness, sorrow and death. How vain are the things of this world! One writer has said, "A stream cannot rise above its fountain; hence all worldly pleasures die in earth where they rise." Let us strive for things which do not perish. In the house of God are pure and living joys, of which he is the source.

On the part of most there is too little attachment to the house. Some are so inattentive that one writer has said, "To keep some persons awake in the sanctuary would require a prelude, and an interlude, and a finale, made up of an earthquake or a thunderstorm." This earth would certainly be a comparative hden, if the house of God was a cynosure to the people and a place of resort in every community. Why do people refuse the invitation, when "the happy gates of gospel grace stand open night and day?"

When Christ comes he will bring with him the place which he is preparing for us, and this will be the house beautiful. He says, "in my father's house are many mansions." Isaiah calls the Lord's house "holy and beautiful." If we keep ourselves pure from the pollutions of this evil world and receive the white garment and an entrance into the house of God, we will be those "which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and throne shall dwell among them. serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the the throne shall dwell among them.

They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes." May we all share in that "House Beautiful," is my prayer.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The pleasant hours which I spent at the Ohio Conference this year are precious links in my chain of golden memories. Every time I do something for Christ, or in acordance with his will, I feel that a new link has been added to my chain. Sometimes when I stop and look back, I find that my chain is not increasing and that it is dull and needs polishing; then I feel that it is time to work; for what I am striving for is a bright and endless chain, and one that leads to Christ.

The good thoughts and suggestions which I heard at the conference, have been added to my chain as bright and shinging links. There was such comfort, peace and holiness manifested there that it seemed as though we were at the very door of the kingdom itself. When separated from those of like precious faith we come in contact with trials and temptations of this present age; but when we gather together in his name,

These elements of earthly strife
Are brushed aside awhile;
It's tears and sobs are hushed to rest
Beneath God's gracious smile.

His word in all its beauty shines
Like drops of pearly dew;
It sparkles with celestial light
And rainbow's richest hue.

It falls with gracious tenderness
Upon the human breast;
Distils in soft and gentle showers
And lulls our cares to rest.

We are living with a hope in view of a great and glorious day that is coming; a day that shall never end. I pray God, that this day may soon come, and come with all its brightness and splendor. Isaiah says, "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isaiah 35:10). Just think how grand it will be when we can really see the "gleams of of the golden morning, bursting through the night of gloom!" I long for that blessed day.

When we consider the marvelous works of the creator, this earth is beautiful; but I wonder what it will be like when the curse is removed.

That time will be glorious;
When all the earth is jo
The sea lifts up its voice,
The hills break forth in singing,
And all the trees rejoice,
The earth at that time will be
Eden restored. Let us, dear ones, all strive to enter into this Eden; for
"The Master's gardens are many,
And very fair;
And nothing that blights or sullies
Can enter there;
And the river of life flows through them,
With shining tide,
And all who walk in those gardens
Are satisfied.

For never their feet grow tired,
Or eyes grow dim,
And oft in the pleasant pathways
They meet with him.
And the air grows purer and sweeter
As incense flows,
In the light of his tender smiling
From lily and rose."

THE ART OF TALKING

If we notice closely we shall find that the people who are most esteemed in social life are those who understand not only how to talk themselves, but how to make others talk. This is a very valuable gift. To be able so to direct conversation as to draw out the opinions and quicken the thoughts of those with whom you talk—this is an accomplishment indeed. It makes each a contributor to the enjoyment of all, and it leaves with each a pleasant sense of having said something which others were glad to hear.

There is a good deal of this sort of conversational missionary work waiting to be done, and the time which we spend in chattering about the weather might be very profitably devoted to it. It should be borne in mind that there is scarcely any one of average intelligence who cannot, if he is drawn out, talk interestingly and instructively about at least one thing, the thing with which he is practically most familiar, or which is connected wth his regular labor. Who ever talks much thus with specialists upon their chosen department of labor or thought, will get together a fund of valuable information not to be learned from books.—Boston Journal.

AN UNSUSPECTING VICTIM

An old man once said he had seen many troubles, but the worst of them never happened. Many a person begins to learn only in later life that anticipated troubles rarely afflict one, while real troubles come unexpectedly. Such was the experience of Mrs. Bennett:

Mrs. Silas Bennett was a philosopher. On a certain dismal occasion some of the neighboring women were condoling with her. With commendable cheerfulness she replied:

"I've raised four girls an' three boys, expectin' every time they'd be twins and red headed like their Grandpa Bennett, and yet they ain't.

"An' I've worried consid'ble over smallpox breakin' out in my big family. So fer, 'tain't.

"Last summer, durin' July an' August, an' mebbe part of September, I was real melancholic, fearin' I'd got an appendix; but I guess I ain't.

"An' through it all, it never once occurred to me that I'd be the one to fall through them rotten old meetin' house steps an' break my leg in two places, but I be."

SELF-JUSTIFICATION

"All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes; but the Lord weigheth the spirits" (Prov. xvi. 2).

Since and for a long while before the Pharisee went up to the temple to pat himself on the back with prayer and tell God how good he was, mankind have been given to magnifying their virtues and what few good deeds they have done until this is all they can see above the horizon in their little sphere and the sky of their own imagination. Their goodness is expressed in crecendo, and that of other folks in diminuendo, "I am not as other men are."

This state of things comes by thinking with one's conscience, until the thing does not work and has to be pushed by hand. You let a small boy have the best watch in the world to amuse himself with, and what he does not know about the interior of it is not to be measured by his lack of probing and experiment. Most people's consciences are better and more reliable than the best watch if left alone by bungling hands, or by hands who design to put them purposely out of order, and given into the care of Him who made them, whether they need putting in order or just require lubrication.

"The Lord weighs the spirits." Man is not very busy when he is weighing his own piety, but he is when he is weighing the other fellow's. He closes his eyes to some things and opens them to others; he winks at his vices and stares at his virtues. When a man's eyes are filthy—"full of adultry" as the apostle expressed it, it is not at all likely he will see his moral and spiritual picture as he ought to see it. But the apostle Jude has his photograph. Look at it; it may resemble you.

The prelude to the parable of the good Samaritan was the characteristic attitude of the lawyer who undertook to cross-examine Jesus in the spirit of self-justification. The "holier-than-thou" priest and Levite looked at him who had fallen among thieves, and "passed by on the other side," at a safe distance from contamination. They would have needed tongs to have done anything for the poor, suffering man. But a certain Samaritan "came where he was," and "had compassion on him and went to him" and did things for his relief. Self-examination is a good thing, if one profits by it; but self-commendation is a bad thing. This Samaritan's piety was not of the introspective or perspective variety, nor even of the contemplative sort, but of that kind that gets there with the help in time of need. He was a good neighbor—just the sort to be settled among. He had no flaws to pick with criticism, but some wounds to heal with balm. He got at them while doubtless the priest and Levite went on down the street descanting on the meanness of the poor man and his low down life, to have been caught in such a scrape.

The fact is if God was anything like what lot of men are He never would have "so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life." They who live best live mostly out of self and in the lives of others to help them in time of need. Let us not be like the lawyer who was "willing to justify himself," but like the good Samaritan who gave himself and what he had for the good of suffering humanity. Let us quit knocking other folks' religion, and keep our own bodies under subjection—"bruises them, if need be"—lest we ourselves become castaways (1 Cor. ix. 27).—C. E. Copp.

STRAIGHT FORWARD

The call of God to His servants is a call to service and to progress. They are to "go forward," they are to "run," they are to press their way on, they are to "strive to enter in at the strait gate." Their adversary will seek to turn them aside, there will be enemies to assail ,there will be obstacles to overcome, there will be blandishments to allure, and there will be many things to divert the mind of the child of God from the service to which he is divinely called and divinely appointed. What, then, must he do? He must go straight forward. The call of God has reached his ear, the grace of God has brought to him salvation the Spirit of God has touched his heart, and he is a child of God, a servant of God; and the man of God must not be hindered in his work. The world lies around him full of wickedness and sin; temptations beset him, a thousand charms and allurements divert his soul, but, like the apostle, he should say, "This one thing I do, forgetting the things that are behind, and reaching forward to those that are before. I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Straight forward leads the path of everlasting life. Straight forward lies the track to the great Captain of our salvation. Straight forward is the road which may lead you through difficulties and dangers, but which will eventually carry you out of the range of lying tongues and envious eye, and into the glad glory of the great beyond.

What has the world to offer to turn you aside? Again and again you have proved its pretences to be empty and vain; again and again you have found that its roses and thorns, that its fruit were apples of Sodom.

That its mirth was madness, that its joy was a delusion and a snare. It will be so again if you are deluded by the world's pretence; and its frowns are as empty as its smiles. The lions may roar and enemies may alarm, but it is your privilege, like Hezekiah, to spread their insulting and impious letter before the Lord; it is your privilege, like the apostles, to say, "And now, Lord, behold their threatenings, and grant unto thy servants that with all boldness they may speak thy Word." Doubtless there are lions in the way, but they are chained lions; doubtless there are enemies who threaten, but when they have threatened what more is there that they can do? The Lord cannot only deliver men from dangers, but from fears, and He has bid His servants "Say to them that are of a fearful heart, "Be strong." He calls us to stand fast in the faith, to be of good courage, and to wait on the Lord who shall strengthen our hearts. And if we will heed the exhortations of His Word, He will make us mighty through God, and will never leave us nor forsake us. To Moses He said, "Speak to Israel that they go forward," and this encouraging and cheering word He has uttered in the ears of His Church again and again. Let us be strong in God; hold fast the beginning of our confidence even to the end; and, pressing onward to our final goal, be found of him in peace, "without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing.—Sel.

THE FAITH OF A PESSIMIST

George Aldridge

It is no uncommon thing for us to call attention to the events occurring in every day experience which amply testify that the popular view regarding world-betterment in the present is nothing but a delusion; that the facts tell clearly that human affairs are steadily growing worse; and that no hope can be grounded upon the plans and doings of man to improve himself. Such views are not acceptable to the many, and lay us open to the charge of being pessimists. We are quite agreed that no such views can be held without the realization of a feeling of sadness in consequence. We do not emphasize such matters because we constitutionally take a gloomy view of things, but because the facts demand that faithful testimony shall be borne, and so we collate the facts and present them on behalf of those who perhaps would not devote the time and thought to such an end. It is undoubtedly sad that such work has to be done, and such addresses have to be given, but it is more sad that the facts exist which so fully warrant, nay, demand, that the effort should be made.

It is certainly no very pleasant thing to lie under the charge of being a pessimist, but if fidelity to truth puts us there, then the burden must be borne. A pessimist, according to the dictionary, is "one given to desponding views one who habitually exaggerates evil." But, if that definition is to stand, then those who attend this place know perfectly well that to say that we hold desponding views only is not altogether true, and it is, we believe, impossible to accuse us of exaggerating evil. But if the name be held to connote one who believes, according to the teaching of the Word, that the present is "an evil age," and that human effort cannot permanently improve it, then we are pessimistic in reality, and for the purpose of this address that position is taken.

Let us say, then, that we are pessimists because we are believers in the Word of God. That remark will seem to place us outside the ranks of the modern intellectual boasters, but that need not trouble us. On the subjects dealt with by the Bible it is the final authority, and it is the highest folly for men to guess and speculate upon themes on which it has given its declaration. He who believes that God has spoken knows or may know, exactly what is said and where what is said bears upon the world that now is, the humble believer may be possessed of a certainty sought in vain by the merely human philosopher.

Be it noted that the Book does not represent a state of things which has no existence. Its marvel is that it mirrors with perfect fidelity the things that are as clearly as it has depicted the course of past history, and it as unhesitatingly avers that the future will know no improvement so long as man makes his attempts to secure it. It declares that "in the last days perilous times shall come," and into the picture of those times it has woven the very characteristics which so markedly belong to the present day. If, therefore, we clearly see this present reflection existence of things written so long ago, how is it possible to avoid being pessimistic?

In believing that no good thing can come out of the world, all the saints of God have been pessimists. They have never cherished any hope that the world would advance to permanent goodness and betterment by human effort. Bible historians always mark declension. As in the age from Adam to Noah; as in the story of the failure of Israel, so also the present dispensation, as described in the New Testament, bears the marks of deterioration. Thus we are in step with the long line of Bible witnesses who, to the extent admitted, are pessimists as regards this world and its boasted advances.

But it should be carefully noted that the Bible writers do not leave the matter there. They do not lower a dark curtain and supply nothing else to look upon. Let it be conceded that they are truly pessimistic to the extent named, but if we would do them justice we have to add that they are optimists of the highest order—optimists whose like cannot be found outside the ranks of Bible believers. They are thus, not because of any theory of human philosophy, but because the same book which leads them to see that there is no hope in man carries them forward to a view of Divine intervention which more than fills the purest and best of human desires.

Note the language of Peter who has no mistaken notion about the world of his time. To his own countrymen he says regarding Jesus of Nazareth, "a man approved of God, whom ye by the hand of lawless men did crucify and slay." And his appeal to them is that they "Save themselves from this crooked generation." And yet he holds a high optimistic hope, as witness his language in Acts iii. 19-21:

"Repent ye, therefore, and turn again, that your sins may be blotted out, that so there may come seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. and that he may send the Christ who hath been appointed for you even Jesus whom the heaven must receive until the times of restoration of all things, whereof God spake by the mouth of His holy prophets which have been since the world began."

Thus he cherishes the hope of restitution "spoken of by the prophets," and whilst seeing only gloom and disappointment when viewing the merely human side, he looks to the future and sees it bright with the glory of assured realization.

Notice closely his expression, "Seasons of refreshing." The word "refreshing" properly signifies regaining one's breath after it has been interrupted; a breathing time from some labor, a deliverance, relief from trouble. How easily it fits to the view which looks upon this age as evil, in which life is under stress and trial. Conflict and distress are the present marks, visible on every hand, but this age shall be followed by the kingdom of the Messiah, in which all storms shall end and conflicts shall be over.

That "season of refreshing" is linked in Scripture with the presence of a Person, "the Christ," whom God "will send." He is the Refresher, the Reanimator, the Restorer, the Deliverer. Before restitution comes Jesus must come. That is the Divine order of things. Now in the hearts of His people the love and the grace of God are operating, and these are working marvels in human lives, but there is no testimony that they now work to remove the curse, to renew the earth, or to restore a single forfeited blessing. Sorrow, sickness, pain, and death are still in the world, and whilst these remain the blight rests that no human skill can cope with, that grace does not now take away, and that only Divine power can fully abolish.

This faith we hold. We believe in a good time coming, and it is sure, for God has promised it, and has paid down pledges which give it unfailing certainty.

But it is well that we take a full grip of all that is here said. Observe this phrase is plural, "Seasons of refreshing." Here are seasons in succession, in which there shall be delightful refreshing for this earth and its inhabitants. Season will follow season, successive eras, economies, epochs of glory, beginning with the promised advent of the Messiah. This will inaugurate the overthrow of evil, and introduce the Millennial period, and dispensation of blessing will confer benefits upon the sons of men. What a vista of unspeakable glories opens before us as we try to peer into the depths of this phrase which holds within itself the assurance that all the disorders introduced by human sin, and marking the line of human failure, shall be wholly done away. Think of that array of events which is to come to pass—the advent of Christ; the resurrection and translation of the Church; the gift of eternal life; the restoration of Israel to her own land; the establishment of the nation never more to be dispersed; the setting up of the kingdom of God; the submission of all nations; the "regeneration" spoken of by the Savior, and the deliverance of creation. Such are some of the things which lie in this pregnant phrase of Peter's addressed to his countrymen.

Can it not now be asked, where, outside the Christian Church, can there be found such high and noble views of the future? If we are compelled to say that the things that are amongst the sons of men afford no ground for hope that the world will be able to free itself from the evils which obtain, we can yet also say, that this does not mean that we are bankrupt in hope. We help, to the best of our ability, in the cause for present righteousness, but we do so not blinded to the evils that exist that the best intentioned men, if they could obtain the power could not remove. Present day tendencies show that the best efforts are opposed by the majority who seek for material comfort and an easy time in which to minister to their own desires without the restraint of goodness. The "blessed hope" set before us in the Gospel gives firmness and steadiness of heart. The continual turmoil and struggle of every day life does not remove our feet from this rock, and the repeated failures of the best human schemes do not destroy our hope, for we are sure that the God provided happiness must come, and he whose hopes are thus fixed will have a present happiness as a prelude to that which is yet to be.

Thus, though deemed pessimists, by the world, which is blinded by the belief that it can cure the incurable, we are the true optimists and that our warranty for that attitude of mind and heart is found in the unfailing Word of the Living God.

REPENTANCE.

A Sermon by the late Brother Joblin

It may be regarded as entirely superfluous to add anything to the subject of Repentance. Every one thinks he understands it. It is taken for granted that it is the very simplest kind of a subject. But in the face of all this we come before you this evening claiming that as yet not one in ten thousand understands the Bible view of the subject.

The English word repent, used in the 38th verse of Acts 2, "Repent and be baptized," etc., and generally where the word occurs in our translation, is from the Greek word Metanoeo, meaning: "To make a change of principal and practice, to reform, a change of mode of thought or feeling, a reversal of the past! A reformation of life." Hoping you will bear in mind these definitions of Green and Greenfield, we proceed to inquire:

What passes amongst the religionists of the day for repentance?

Professor Buck says: Repentance in general is sorrow for anything past, and after defining several kind, he remarks: A legal and evangelical repentance are distinguished thus: A legal repentence flows only from a sense of danger and fear of wrath, but evangelical repentance is a true mourning for sin, and an earnest desire of deliverance from it. Again, under the head of faith, he says: "Repentance is an afterthought, or sorrowing for sin, the evil nature which faith perceives and immediately follows faith." The confession of faith (page 33) has the following: "He that scandalizes his brother or the Church of Christ, ought to be willing, by a private or public confession and sorrow for sin, to declare his repentance." Dr. A. Clark in his notes on the words, "Peter said unto them, Repent," adds this language: "Humble yourselves before God, and deeply deplore the sins you have committed, pray earnestly for mercy, and deprecate the displeasure of incensed justice."

Now we wish to impress upon every mind the fact, that the authors quoted from make repentance to consist in feelings; and we take it that this is the popular view among Protestants. We have illustrations of the fact among Protestants at their so-called revival meetings. A man goes to an evening meeting careless and indifferent. He listens to a discourse after which an invitation is given for mourners to come forward for prayers. He takes the anxious seat and begins to feel bad, and manifests what is called "sorrow for sin." After a few prayers for his deliverance from his guilt, and that his sins may be forgiven; the man rises and shouts, "Glory to God," tells the congregation that his burden is gone, and he feels to rejoice in God, that he believes God has, for Christ's sake, forgiven his sins. From that time he is considered a Christian; and to question his repentance would be regarded by Protestants as scepticism or infidelity. The whole process has been worked off within two or three hours.

Now, with all deference to Drs. Buck and Clark and other gentlemen who have, by their renown for learning and piety, led a multitude after them in this matter, we are bound to take a stand against them, and with the aid of just one book hope to prove beyond cavil that their view of repentance is wide of the truth!

In the first place, repentance is attributed to God in numerous instances in the scriptures. Now to say that God had sorrow or mourned for what he had done, that he deeply deplored it and felt bad, would be absolutely absurd, if not blasphmous!

Secondly, Paul says: "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of, but the sorrow of the word worketh death" (II Cor. 7:10). If Paul knew what he was talking about then Godly sorrow is one thing, and repentence another! Yet in spite of all this, how often is it taught that Godly sorrow for sin is repentance; we may just as well say that the sorrow of the world is death, instead of "worketh death," but the truth lies here, Godly sorrow may possibly lead to repentance—the sorrow of the world may lead to death!

"Oh! ha," says one, "so you are obliged to turn and twist a little to make it fit, are you?" Why no, friend; what makes you think so? Because it reads: "Godly sorrow worketh repentance"—no may about it! And if you were as honest as you pretended to be, you would let well enough alone!

We trust you will not call our honesty in question until you have learned how we arrive at this decision. We would just enquire from you, whether or no every one without any exception, who manifested what you considered to be Godly sorrow, became soundly converted, or whether some, at least, did not soon again relax into an utter careless mood? Well, I must say that the goodness of some was like the morning cloud or early dew, which soon vanishes away! We thought so; and we are by your own admission driven irresistibly to one of these conclusions that the parties concerned either did not have any sorrow for sin at all—were imposing on the credulity of others—or, that it did not last long enough to produce a reformation of life. Now we believe that the story ground bearers of the gospel that Jesus speaks of, apply exactly to this case. They do feel remorse for sin, but it is short lived soon dies away—does not last long enough to bear fruit! It is true, then, that there can be no repentance without Godly sorrow, but many who manifest some degree of Godly sorrow lose the same before it produces repentance!

We will now briefly review the matter thus far brought out; a few sentences will suffice! It is conceded by all that Godly sorrow is repentance! Godly sorrow is to humble one's self, and deeply deplore the doings of the past! Very well now, Repentance is attributed to God!

God never has done, or can do wrong; therefore he cannot deplore his past conduct and hence sorrow for sin is not repentance!

You are doubtless growing anxious to hear the Bible view of the matter. Repentance, what is it? In one word, it is doing—instead of feeling. And so well persuaded are we that we have the unadulterated truth on this subject, that we would just as soon expect that a man could lie in his bed and steal a horse,as that a man could sit on an anxious seat and repent! The objector will say that the man's mind is the cause of the theft! Very true, but then, when a man proposes to steal he has to go and do it, and its the same with repentance!

You will please turn with me to Luke 11:32, and see what Jesus said about repenting: "The men of Nineveh shall rise in the judgment with the generation, and shall condemn it; for they repented at the preaching of Jonas, and behold a greater than Jonas is here! Now of course nothing could possibly be of more service to us in this matter than to learn exactly what the men of Nineveh did that Jesus calls repentance.

Read Jonah 3:4-10. Now friends be sure and not forget this text! The Ninevites believed God's testimony and set about works, and Jesus calls this repentance!

Turn now to Matt. 3:8, Here fruits seem synonymous with works, and if you take the marginal reading this idea will be confirmed. "Bring forth therefore fruits answerable to an amendment of life." Acts 26:20, Paul in his answer before Agrippa, says that he "showed first unto them at Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coast of Judea ,and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance;" that is, fit, or becoming repentance.

In this case, too, repentance is made to consist of doing works.

We now propose to see more extensively the manner in which repentance is attributed to God. Turn if you please to Samuel 15:35: "Nevertheless, Samuel mourned for Saul; and the Lord repented that he had made Saul King over Israel." We cannot deny the fact, then, that God repents. And every one who has defended the Bible against the attacks of infidelity knows full well to what purpose this passage is perverted. But pray whence arises the ground for any argument on their side of the question? We apprehend it is from an erroneous conception of what repentance is! And not from the facts indicated by the expression. To make this matter plain to all we will try to illustrate. They open the Bible and read Gen. 6:6, "And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth." Now they know that other parts of the scripture represent him as an unchangable being, possessed of all knowledge, and wisdom, and judging of the passage in the lights of the theory that repentance is sorrow for sin, or for any thing past, you observe that they discover a palpable incongruity in the ideas thus obtained, just as though God had become dissatisfied with his own effort to people the earth and was sorry he had undertaken it! Now we want to know where infidelity received such an idea of repentance? They derive it from the popular exponders or teachers of the day—the orthodoxy of the times! Now will orthodoxy please help the poor infidels out of this dilemma that they helped him into? It would be real mean to get them into trouble and not try to help them out.

But friends, mark this; we have demanded a work of them that they cannot perform! There is a break in their chain of divinity—there is a flaw in their theory! Their God-dishonoring doctrine has induced thinking men to discard the book of God because of supposed contradictions, and are left without a single, sensible solution of the problem? Oh! orthodoxy, hide thy hideous head! Mark, it is measures, or doctrines, not men, we oppose! We would hope to close the ears of none against the truth—we are prepared to prove all we say from the plain word of God, as well as by sound reason, but it is almost impossible not to use strong expressions of disapprobation when we see the God of the Bible misrepresented! People may twitch and squirm and shrug as we often see them, but we tell you the truth has to be told—we make no compromise! The standard of truth shall not be lowered, please or displease man!

We then must now attempt what, to say the best, has been very bunglingly done by the learned, why? Not for want of learning or ability, certainly, but simply because they held a theory that just shuts out the truth! That theory was, that repentance was Godly sorrow!

Look to the text again: "And the Lord repented that he had made Saul King over Israel" Now how shall we proceed? Why we conceive, in the first place, it is necessary to ascertain if possible, the principle by which God is governed in his administration over the affairs of men. Let us look for a moment at Jer. 18:7-10: "At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to pluck up and to pull down and to destroy it; if that nation against whom I have pronounced, turn from their evil, I will repent of the evil that I thought to do unto them. And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom to build and to plant it, if it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them."

Now we inquire is this a declaration of Jehovah's principle of governing the nation of earth—or, in more familiar phraseology: Is this a revelation to man of God's policy in rewarding or punishing nations? yes; then can any object to an application of a plainly revealed principle? No; to be sure not! Then we apply that principle right here: The Lord elected Saul the first King of Israel, and during the early part of his reign favored him in a remarkable degree. When he went out among the Amomites and scattered them so that two of them were not together, Saul said "Today the Lord hath wrought salvation in Israel." When the Philistines gathered themselves together to fight against Israel with 30,000 chariots, and 6,000 horsemen, and people as the sand upon the sea short in multitude, Saul and Israel triumphed, and there was a very great discomfiture." Thus while he obeyed the voice of the Lord he prospered in the kingdom, but finally the Lord directed him to go and "Smite Amelek and utterly destroy all that they have and spare not." He went, but did evil, in that he saved Agay, the king alive, and spared the best of the sheep, oxen, fatting, etc., and would not destroy them; then came the word of the Lord to Samuel saying, "It repenteth me that I have set up Saul to be king; for he has turned back from following me, and hath not performed my commandments." Samuel then went to Saul and reproved his disobedience and told him the consequences. Saul seemed to be contrite, and requested the prophet to turn with him that he might worship the Lord. And Samuel said, "I will not return with thee, for thou hast rejected the word of the Lord and the Lord hath rejected thee from being king over Israel." Now this, to our mind, clearly explains the repentance spoken of, for on the principle already pointed out, the Lord changed his purpose of benefitting Saul in the kingdom of Israel, and at the same time raised up David to be king in his stead, and we understand that if we say the Lord changed his dealings with Saul it is of the same import precisely, as that he repented of the good wherewith he said he would benefit him.

If the Lord's doings, instead of bad feelings, is what constitutes repentance in this instance, then surely there is no room for cavilling with the idea that God repents.

The examples we have brought then amount to just this, Jonah warned the city of an approaching judgment, but God, by a plainly stated principle of governing, turned from the evil that he thought to bring upon them, because they turned from their evil ways and from the violence that was in their hands. The change of his purpose in relation to the overthrow of the city was not the result of repentance but repentance itself. He was not sorry he had threatened them; but as the preaching of Jonah answered the purpose for which it was intended, God just carried out in his doings the published principles of his government. (See Jer. 15:7-10) And if you wish to see how God justified himself in the matter and also see the character of God placed side by side with poor, proud humanity, read the 4th of Jonah!

The earnest appeals made by the apostles for men to repent are just as applicable today as they ever were. We see that repentance is a change—a reformation is a change—a reformation—produced by Godly sorrow. Teachers are very apt to overlook repentance and emphasize belief and baptism. But as a means of salvation repentance is of paramount importance without it faith and baptisms are of no avail whatever. And, dear brothers and sisters the great question for us at this moment is, Have we turned away from evil? Have we departed from iniquity? One great poet in advance of nearly all the rest, has said:

Repentance is to leave the sin we loved before,
And show that we in earnest grieve,
By doing so no more.

The master of assemblies will be here in a short time; he is coming to take to himself a purified people. Those who have taken God at his word—who have consented to suffer affliction with his people here on earth—that here too he may be glorified and reign

We often hear that Jesus is coming—that this dispensation will soon close, but do we actually realize it? Do we put the day far away in the future, or do we really look and long for him? Oh! think of it! It is the same Jesus that lived and suffered, and wept—it is the same Jesus who died—He says, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and am alive forevermore, and have the key of death." Blessed be his holy name forever; he has not left us without assurance of his coming again, for from the Isle of Patmos the voice of Jesus is heard, through all the 2000 year nights of sin, saying, "Surely I come quickly."

Do your hearts say amen? If they do not, you have not part or lot with him; you have not repented. You are in the gall of bitterness and bonds of iniquity. May we who have named the name of Christ so live and act, that our language may ever be, How long, O, Lord, how long? Oh! Let thy kingdom come. Thy desolate bride says, Come, for the spirit within her saith, Come!

Are there those here who know they have not repented, who know and acknowledge that all the blessing of the Gospel are not enough to induce them to turn from evil and live Godly? What a poor fanatic! What a mad man! Standing on the very brink of Gentile times, when the woe trumpet's dreadful blast is trembling on the lips of the angel! When the cry will soon be made, "The harvest is past—the summer is ended— and I am not saved!" My God, will any here slight the great salvation? Oh that we could, by all the earnestness this awful subject is worthy of, so exhibit the love of our God in calling us to a reformation of life here, that we may live forever and ever in his everlasting kingdom.

Fearful as the position of an utterly unrepentant is, we are compelled to say there is another class more fearful yet.

They are those who have to some extent felt Godly sorrow—who have had some desire to share the glories of God's everlasting kingdom—who cannot keep away from those who are looking for that blessed hope, and yet for all this hold on with one hand to the world. They would like to have a full hope of life through Jesus, but the trial is a little too great. Others that we know and are convinced of the truth, and know they cannot be saved without it, dare not go without the camp and bear the reproach of Christ. They want all the popular associations to take off the edge of reproach and persecution. Others are afraid they could not sustain the Christian character; but friends, this is only saying in other words that there is not motive enough in the promises of the gospel to enable them to deny ungodliness! When will such decide for God and his truth? When will they walk out on the platform of God's eternal truth and trust him for the consequences?

Depend upon it, that the day which will reveal every man's works of what sort it is will burn all who are found in this condition as unfit for life, because they have not done works meet for repentance. No matter how long they have cherished good desires, if they have not put them into practice, he will confess he never knew them. He will says, Depart from me, ye have been ashamed of me and my Father before men, and now I am ashamed of you!

Is there one here whose privilege it is to hear a word of exhortations today that will not enter into life? May the awful question be considered by each one of us. Good Lord, is it I?

When thou my righteous judge shalt come.

To call thy ransomed people home,

Shall I among them stand?

Shall such a worthless worm as I,

Who sometimes am afraid to die.

Brethren, let us lay hold in eternal life; let us fight the good fight; let us stem the storm that rages all around; let us bid defiance to all opposers, for God is true; let us be strong in God, the rock of our salvation, and when the bright orb of everlasting day shall dawn, we shall be lifted right up to immortality, and mingle our voices with that glad company who will sing of blessing, and honor and glory and power to him that sitteth upon the throne and the lamb.

FAITH

Sister Lang

From the "things most surely believed among us," we take up the subject of faith. This is just as important a factor in things natural as in things spiritual, but it is of spiritual faith we want to talk today. One writer defines it as a "system of revealed truth received by Christians," which constitutes the One faith, Paul tells us of in Ephesians.

The word Faith comes from the Greek word pistis, which stands for belief, trust, confidence and occurs 244 times, and the verb pisteno, which means I believe, occurs 246 times. So we see the faith takes in a great many truths.

The simple meaning of the word faith is, the conviction that the testimony is true. Hence Paul defines it to be "the confidence of things hoped for, the conviction of things not seen." This shows us that in order to have faith we must exercise our minds, must study the word to see what God's will is, before we can believe it.

We read "that without faith it is impossible to please God," that is, without a belief of those things which he has made known for salvation.

How can we get faith? (Rom. 10:17).

What does the Word teach? (Acts 8:12).

Who are we to have faith in? (Mk. 11:22).

Why? (Rom. 4:21).

How is faith rewarded? (Rom. 4: 3, 23, 24).

How faith affects us? (Rom. 5:1).

How are we blessed? (Gal. 3: 3: 26; John 1: 12).

What does this make us? (Gal. 3: 26; John 1: 12).

How will this affect our lives? (Gal. 3:11; Col. 1: 23).

What work have we to do? (1 Tim. 6:12; Heb. 10:23; Jude 3)

Those who have searched these scriptures and made themselves familiar with them, are persuaded that he is indeed "the faithful God," and "that with him there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." Since he is faithful, faith is engendered in those who know him, they know he can be trusted, and therefore put implicit confidence in him.

Oh, for a faith that will not shrink
Though pressed by many a foe;
That will not slumber on the brink
Of poverty and woe:

That will not murmur nor complain,
Beneath the chastening rod,
But in the hour of grief or pain
Can lean upon its God:

A faith that shines more bright and clear
When tempests rage without;
That when in danger knows no fear,
In darkness feels no doubt;

A faith that keeps the narrow way,
By love restrained and led,
And with a pure and heavenly ray,
Lights up a dying bed.

HONORABLE MENTION

S. H. Thomas

As our old warriors who have so faithfully upheld the gospel banner in the years that are gone drop out one by one, we wonder what new timber will rise up to take their place. Over a year ago I noticed a splendid article in The Restitution written by Sterling P. Groves. I have since been told that Bro. Groves is quite a young man. His article was convincing and most readable, and we have anxiously watched for more from the same author. It is a pity that so able a pen should be idle. Bro. Groves, where are you? Please come again, we need you.

We have missed "Gold Dust" in the last few papers, and earnestly hope that the mine which has furnished it so richly in the past is not becoming exhausted. In our judgment, no other writer has furnished more able contributions for our paper than Sister Anna Drew. Her "Gold Dust" has for years been one of its choicest features. Brief and pointed, every grain of this "dust" is a gem of rare value, and if collected and printed in book form would be worthy a place in every home in the land. I trust that Sister Drew has preserved copy and that steps may be taken to have it published. I feel sure it would sell readily, not among our people only, but it seems to me all who admire high and noble thought briefly and pointedly expressed, would want a copy of "Gold Dust." God bless Sister Drew. In a quiet and modest way of her own she has done a great work for Jesus. She will surely reap a rich reward in the age to come.

We have also read with great interest "May we Know," by Sister Flora A. Wood. This article is ably and splendidly written. Sister Wood has the rare faculty of compelling the attention of her readers and of holding them to the end of her writings. Come often, Sister Wood; The Restitution family need you. There are others who merit honorable mention. Let all continue the good work, laboring in unison and harmony with Brother Huggins, and so hold up and maintain the standard of our paper.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with uestions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear breathren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16. Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38; 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or quit the pulpit.

Teach the Scriptures, not foolishness, Honor God and the Savior.—B. S. Driggs.

Great Combination Offer
OF "THE RESTITUTION"
GET THESE Money-making Secrets WITH Farm Journal

In this one booklet, called "Poultry Secrets," tells how to carry lowers, and many other secrets far more important.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says ROY CRANEY, Illinois. "What it tells would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes F. J. DICKSON, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 100 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck-raising," says F. M. WARNOCK, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says C. W. MANSFIELD, New York.

T. F. MCCREA, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden this summer. I got my health in the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting near to the soil. After a long travels with the Chinese language and mission problems. It is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, peas, chickens, etc., I am saving money and regaining my health. My wife and I both find FARM JOURNAL indispensable."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. POTTER, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. GLADWIN, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes Mrs. JOE LAWRENCE, Saskatchewan. "I was never successful in growing cabbages until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes Dr. WILLIAM DAVIS, New Jersey. "When the first copy came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to seem like home. When it arrives, I feel the gladness jump right into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until half-past ten, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. L. SLOAT, a Virginia ex-clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL, I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. WHITTEN, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."
These booklets are 6 by 9 inches, all profusely illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of discoveries and methods of successful poultrymen, long jealously guarded. It gives Petrie's famous mating chart, the Curtis method of getting one-half more pullets than cockerels, Boyer's method of insuring fertility, with priceless secrets of mating, breeding, feed and feeding, how to produce winter eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "doctoring," "ringing," coaling and passing dopings, and other tricks of "sport" and peddlers, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse. It also gives many valuable training, feeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $10,000 a year, mainly from eggs. All back-yard chicken-raisers should learn about the "Rancocas Unit," and how Foster FEEDS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest fall bearing strawberries almost until snow flies. Harvest you the fruits of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and pest-removing to produce berries in the fall, tells inside facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how one grower gets 10,000 quarts an acre and sells at 25 cents a quart, etc. L. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who can grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Prof. Holden, the "Corn Man," tells how to get ten to twenty bushels more per acre of corn rich in protein and the best stock-fattening elements. Pictures on every process plate.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of farms where that produced half a ton of butter each per year (140 pounds is the average). An eye-opener for dairymen. Get it, weed out your poor cows, and turn good ones into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your back-yard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck-farm near Boston makes every year 50 cents each on 40,000 ducklings. Tells why ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW they do everything.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Horace Vose, the famous Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to mate, to get eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey-ranch PAY.

EVERY live farmer knows the FARM JOURNAL, for it is famous everywhere as the leading farm and home paper. It is thirty-five years old, and has the largest circulation of any farm paper in the world. It has always stood up for the right of farmers to "sit at the first table," and is one of the great forces that have made the American farmer prosperous.

To interest NEW readers in The Restitution, and increase its circulation and usefulness in every corner of its field, we have made an arrangement with the publishers of the Farm Journal by which subscribers to The Restitution can, for a short time, get both papers and any one of the booklets for little more than the cost of the Farm Journal alone, although in spite of its excellence it is one of the cheapest papers published.

The regular price of The Restitution is $1.50 a year.
The regular price of the Farm Journal is $1.00 for five years.
The regular price of the booklets to old subscribers 25c each.
The regular price of two copies "A Letter to a Friend," 20c.

Here is Our Offer--$2.70 Value for $1.50

By special arrangement with the publishers we are able to offer to new subscribers the Farm Journal four full years with choice of any one of the advertised booklets, "Money Making Secrets and two copies of a "Letter to a Friend" and The Restitution for one year, all for $1.50.

LIFE.

Selected by Mrs. B. H. Lang.

Life is short! yea, life is fleeting,
Swiftly doth it pass away;
Once the heart but stays its beating,
Man descendeth to the clay.

Why then cherish idle rancours
Deep within thy mortal breast?
Why give place to that which cankers?
Better let thy spirit rest!

Life is short! no time for nursing
Wrongs and strifes within thy heart,
Life is short! no time for cursing,
Man must soon with mankind part!

If thou'rt wrongst, then one will right thee
In that glorious latter day;
If thy brethren all do slight thee
One shall wipe thy tears away.

All have faults, yet, all have failings,
Sin and death still hold full sway,
But the time will come when wailings
Wrongs and strifes, shall pass away.

Sin and death will yet be banished,
Man will yet immortal stand;
Strife forever will have vanished,
All shall journey hand in hand.

HEARING GOD'S WORD

Sister Groves.

I have chosen for a few remarks the 8th chapter of Luke and the 8th verse: "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." Jesus tells us in this same chapter and the 18th verse to "take heed how we hear!"

Let us remember who caused the word to be written, and it will perhaps help us to hear as he would have us. It was the mighty God, the everlasting Father, our creator and preserver, upon whom all our hopes depend.

In this beautiful parable where Jesus is trying to open the eyes of the common people, who, by the way, were ever his best listeners, Jesus likens the people to the soil: So to each of us must come the thought, 'Am I so directing my life that the word of God may find in me a dwelling place? Am I the good ground? If I am then I am ready to hear and understand the truth of the gospel and bring forth much fruit.

In praying to the Father in behalf of his loved ones, Jesus says, "For I have given unto them the words which thou gavest me; and they have received them." Jesus says also in John 6:63, "The words which I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." Oh the precious words of Jesus! Let us take care how we hear them.

Judging from the way in which the disciples let their light shine, we can feel sure that they had ears to hear and that they had fruit an hundred fold. Oh that the world may see by our walk and conversation that we have been sitting at the feet of Jesus and learning of him as did Mary!

Jesus is the same yesterday, today and forever, and if we listen with attention we can hear him say, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock, if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in unto him and will sup with him and he with me." God not only speaks to us by his beautiful book, but in all his handiwork. The trees and gentle streams murmur his name, while the birds sing praises unto their creator. Let us listen to his voice in all of natures beauty, and bow in true humbleness before him. The Father would draw us to himself, and would that we should work and win in the great battle of life.

First, let us hear with attention as did Lydia, because there are hidden jewels in the words which drop from his lips; and if we are not very attentive we may lose something of great price. Through Lydia's attention to the word she not only saved herself, but was the instrument in God's hands of saving all her house.

Second, with reverence, as the Jews in Neh. 8:5, who, when they heard the word, all stood up. Let us remember it is God's word and we shall surely listen with all reverence. Do we need to be told to hear God's wonderful words of life reverently, dear ones? Ah, we surely cannot hear them any other way if we realize the truth of the gospel and who it is that speaks to us!

Do you remember when God was speaking to Moses out of the burning bush; even this chosen vessel of the Lord was commanded to take the shoes off his feet, for the place where he stood was holy ground.

Third, with humility. We never can get the true essence of the gospel unless we are clothed with humility. Think you not that the heart of the publican was in a better condition to catch the slightest whisper from the still small voice, rather than that of the Pharisees? Lord, teach me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is that I may know how frail I am. Can we, as children of God, study the life of our Master and not learn the lesson of humility?

Fourth, with the tenderness as Josiah (2 Chron. 34:27) "Because thine heart was tender, and thou didst humble thyself before God when thou heard his words against this place, and against the inhabitants thereof, and humblest thyself before me, and didst rend thy clothes and weep before me; I have even heard thee also Saith the Lord." the voice of a loved one passed and gone always vibrates with a tender chord in our hearts, even if it be a sharp but loving reproof. Jesus' voice is always tender, and if we listen we can almost hear him say, I gave my life for thee; what hast thou given for me?

Fifth, with readiness and diligence, "Therefore my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, and slow to wrath.

Sixth, with simplicity, as the Thessalonians, who, when they heard the word, received it, not as the word of men, but as it is the truth. the word of God. Our hearts, when listening to God's word, must be as the little child's when listening to the teaching of its mother; ready to cast off all but what mother says; or as the tender plant drinking in the dew from heaven.

Seventh, with self-application as the first converts. Yes, let us, when we hear the word, apply it to our own lives and say, as they, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Let us not turn aside with a sad heart, as the rich young man who came to Jesus to see what he lacked, but let us gladly do his bidding, even tho it cost us our heart's blood.

Eighth, with hungering. It is only when we are hungering after righteousness that we can receive the full benefit of the spiritual food promised by Christ. There are a great many things in natural diet that we have to acquire a taste for, but if we keep on learning to like them, after a while our appetite for them becomes so strong that they become a chief factor in our diet. Strange as it may seem, it is even so with spiritual food; we must acquire a taste for it, and the only way to do this is to make the word a daily part of our diet, and after a while things foreign to this will not agree with the appetite. We will hunger and thirst after righteousness.

Ninth, with obedience. Faith without works is dead. "Whatever he says unto you, do it,' and we will surely know the love of God. Oh that it may be said of each of us, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see, and your ears for they hear." The fruit of such hearing will be the fruits of the spirit: Love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, etc. What a God illumined list when we have got them all!

"He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the spirit saith unto the churches: To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God."

THE BANNER

In one of the cities of the east which are governed by the Turks, a poor man was once cruelly pursued by a party of the governor's soldiers, on some false accusation and threatened with imprisonment and public beating. As they were dragging him along, his eye caught, at the end of one of the streets, the sight of the British flag, planted before the door of the house where the British consul, who represented that government, lived. He knew that if he could but put himself under the consul's protection, he could not be seized uncondemned. With a sudden effort he sprang from the grasp of his enemies, darted down the street, and trembling and panting for breath reached the flag-staff, and threw his arms around it just before his pursuers reached him. He was safe! No one could touch him now. And with what joy he must have looked up at the banner waving over his head, and hailed it as a sign he had reached the place of refuge.

There is a lesson for us all in this story. We are all more like this poor man than we are apt to think. We were all once, and many of us are still, in the power of a tyrant more cruel than that eastern governor or his soldiers. Like this poor man, we are pursued by enemies who wish to do us harm; and, like him, we have ONE place within our reach, where we should be safe from our enemies, if we would but at once flee to that refuge.

What do we mean when we speak of being "safe at the foot of the cross?" Not that the shape or picture of a cross could save us. What we mean is, that the death of Christ for us, is our only way of being saved from our sins. We all deserved to die; there was no escape for us; but God, out of his great love for us, sent his only son in the form of a man, and to take on himself the punishment that we all deserved for our sins.

If he had ever committed a single sin, in thought, word or deed, he could not have save others; for he would have needed to be saved himself. But he was perfectly holy and pure. He was the only being who ever lived on earth who kept God's law in every point—the only one who ever lived who did not deserve death; and thus he was able to save us. He, who was without sin, took sin upon himself, and was punished as a sinner, and bore the death of the cross, that all who believe in him might be saved from the punishment they deserved. So, if we would "flee from the wrath to come," we must look to Jesus. We must put our trust in him, and him alone, and put ourselves as if were, in his hands to save us. This is called, in some places, "coming to him." As the poor man fled from his enemies, and took refuge beneath the flag, so should we fly to take refuge beneath the cross. Under its protection, no harm can come to us; our souls are safe forever.

Many people say, "I am afraid to go to Christ as I am; I must first try to lead a holy life, and please God, and then I will go." Now, if they are to wait to go to Christ till they can make themselves holy, they will wait forever. We cannot do things really pleasing in God's sight, until we have come to Jesus. While we are waiting, and trying first to save ourselves, our souls are in the power of our enemy, just as the poor man would have been if he had waited till he could do something to deserve the favor of the British consul, before he ran to claim his protection. Like him, we must run to our place of refuge, just as we are, or we shall never go at all.

But what should we have thought of him, if, when he had safely reached the friendly flag of refuge, he had said, "Well, now, I hope I shall be safe some time or other, though I must not call myself safe yet; I am still in danger." Would not this have sounded very foolish? Would it not have been putting dishonor upon the British flag? If he had reached the place of refuge, what enemy could touch him?

And yet, we often see something like this. We hear people say, "Oh, I believe in Christ. I trust in no one else; but I can't be sure my sins are forgiven. I hope they will be, sometime or other; but I would not be so presumptuous as to be certain." If you really have come to Christ, or, in other words, if you really believe on Him as your Saviour, your sins are forgiven. Forgiveness is not a future but a present thing. As soon as the sinner truly puts his whole trust in Jesus Christ, he is "justified by faith," and has (not shall have, may have but has) "peace with God." (Rom. v. 1). God has said this. There can be no presumption in taking him at his word. The presumption is in not believing what he tells us.

But the true cause why people so often say this is that at the bottom of their hearts they feel they have never really trusted in Christ, though they can talk about it. They still love sin, and are not willing to give it up; and as long as any one goes on loving sin and persisting in it, he cannot have come to Jesus. It is not that we must become holy first, and then come to Jesus afterwards; but coming to him, and giving ourselves to him, will make us holy; and if we have no love of holiness or hatred of sin, we cannot really have given ourselves to him.

And here we come to the last point. The great difference between the case of the poor man we were speaking of, and our own is that he really dreaded his enemies, and wished to fly to the refuge before him. Now, too often, we do not really fear punishment, or hate sin, or wish to go to Jesus for safety. Many people assent to these things with their understandings, but they do not believe them with their hearts; that is, they do not really believe them at all. And what can make us believe? Nothing but the word of God. It shows us we are sinners. It draws us to Jesus. May it open your heart, and lead you to the cross of Christ, the true banner of safety; and when you are there you will feel and know that "His banner over you is love" (Cant. ii:4).

"Here at thy cross, my dying Lord,
I lay my soul beneath thy love,
Beneath the droppings of thy blood,
Jesus! nor shall it ne'er remove.

"Should worlds conspire to drive me thence,
Moveless and firm this heart should lie;
Resolved, (for that's my last defense),
If I must perish, there to die."

—Olive Leaves.

THE BLOOD OF CHRIST

"The Life of the flesh is in the Blood; and I have given it to you upon the altar, to make an atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that maketh atonement for the soul." (Levit. xvii. 11.)

Hence we have Through Faith

1. Redemption—"Feed the church of God which he hath purchased with his own blood" (Acts xx. 28). "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation" (Rev. v. 9). "Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation, received by tradition from your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot" (1 Peter i. 18-18).

2. Forgiveness—"This is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins" (Matt. xxvi. 28). "Whom God has sent forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past" (Rom. iii. 25). "Without shedding of blood is no remission" (Heb. ix. 22).

3. Justification—"being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from the wrath through him" (Rom. v. 9).

4. Peace—"Having made peace through the blood of his cross" (Col. i. 20).

5. Cleansing from sin, both as to the person and the conscience.—"The blood of Jesus Christ his son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John i. 7). "How much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal spirit offered without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God" (Heb. ix: 14). "These are they which came out of great tribulation and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb" (Rev. vii. 14). "Unto him that loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever" (Rev. i. 5, 6).

6. Nearness to God—"Now, in Christ Jesus, ye who sometimes were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ" (Eph. ii. 13). "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus" (Heb. x. 19).

7. Sanctification— "Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate" (Heb. xiii. 12). Through sanctification of the spirit, unto obedience, and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ" (1 Peter i, 2).

8. Perfection—"Now the God of Peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ" (Heb. xiii. 20-21.

9. Victory—"They overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony" (Rev. xii. 11).

10. Eternal Life—"Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood hath eternal life" (John 53, 54).

Reader, we have set before you God's thoughts about the value and virtue of the blood of Christ; and we have done so, not in the words which man's wisdom teacheth, but which the Holy Spirit has inspired.

How blessed and glorious to those who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, are these results of the shedding of his blood! Do you ask why? Because Jesus was God's own son. We had forfeited life, and therefore he gave up his life for us. We had incurred the penalty of death, and therefore he suffered it for us. He shed his blood for us, giving his life for our life; for "the life is in the blood," and the "blood maketh atonement." Thus he showed forth God's love and God's righteousness, in bearing wrath for sinners, and suffering death which we deserve.

And now, reader, what do you think about the blood of Christ? You see what God says about it. You see, if we receive Jesus as our Saviour—if we give him this glory—if we value his blood as God values it, then, according to God's grace, all that is due to him is freely given to us. All the infinite blessings which the word of God speaks of, thus become ours. And receiving them as a free gift, it should be our desire every moment of our lives to glorify God our Saviour.

Let us then show by our lives of constant, joyful service, that we realize the price which was paid for us by our Lord. We are not our own—we are brought with a price. Everything we have belongs to him who hath purchased our souls with such a mighty ransom. O can we be grudging and selfish in our service due to Christ who has loved us more than he does his own life? Beloved, if we in truth do know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, we shall follow in his steps, and resist even unto blood, or at the peril of our lives, striving against sin.

Let us also learn to love as Jesus loved, to pity as he pitied, and to seek as he sought, the perishing and the lost. Surely that which Jesus purchased with his blood is worth all our exertions and endeavors. Let us labor to save those for whom Jesus died; and may God help us in the work, and make us partakers of his endless glory, with the blood-washed multitude of the redeemed.

NOT SENT TO BAPTIZE.

It is passing strange that any human being could be led away from the plain duty of being baptized, by people who quote 1 Cor. 1:17. Let us read it: "Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach," etc.

But hold! Weren't the Corinthians baptized in the name of Paul?" Surely they were baptized.

Instead of blind leaders leading the blind away from the ordinances of baptism by referring to 1 Cor. 1:17. Paul teaches us that baptism is SO IMPORTANT that the obligations assumed when being baptized were not assumed and avowed to follow MAN, but Jesus Christ, in whose name they were immersed.

Paul feared they would think he set himself up as a leader to enroll converts under his name. So he said: "Was Paul crucified for you?" This question has the same thought in it, viz., that Paul wanted to get their minds off him and rivet them on Christ. Had Paul been crucified for them he would have become their Saviour; if they had been baptized in Paul's name, this would have eclipsed the name and personality of Jesus—the very thing Paul warned them against.

Paul preached in the demonstration of the "Spirit," and could trust no others with what preaching he must do. He spoke by inspiration. However in baptism, the case was different; he could appoint others to do the baptizing.

His special mission was to "preach," not to baptize. But he DID baptize and committed no sin in so doing (1 Cor. 1:14-17). His statement in 1 Cor. 1:17 does not have even the semblance of evidence that baptism is useless.

THE TALLY.

It isn't the job we intend to do,
Or the labor we've just begun,
That puts us right on the ledger sheet;
It's the work we have really done.

Our credit is built upon things we do,
Our debit on things we shirk;
The man who totals the biggest plus
Is the man who completes his work.

Good intentions do not pay bills;
It is easy enough to plan;
To wish is the play of an office boy:
To do is the job of a man.

EDITORIAL

A letter from Bro. Daniel, states that he is ill; and confined to his bed. He also encloses a M.S. which we hope to use soon.

There are many writers whose articles have been held over till next issue. The Editor is still away from home, which explains the delay in the publication of Mss.

COMMUNICATIONS.

We are sure the brethren will all be glad to hear of the good meetings we have had and the interest which has been manifested. Brother Huggins and Brother Maple held a series of meetings in Jacksonville, near our home, beginning September 11 and lasting until the 22 inclusive. We had the pleasure of having Sister Neill from Salem, O. with us one week, leading the singing and helping the meeting in a general way. When she left, Brother Huggins came, arousing new interest and enthusiasm. We surely were strengthened and wish that we could often have such good meetings, when we have such able teachers as Brother Huggins and Brother Maple expounding the Scriptures in their simplicity, teaching how to rightly divide the word of truth (II. Tim. 2:15), and to come unto the knowledge of the truth by searching the Scripture daily for no scripture is of private interpretation John 5:39 says, "Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they that testify of me. We feel that the good seed has been sown; and we hope some has fallen on good soil. We trust those who understand may soon obey God's commands, for the eyes of the Lord are on the righteous, and who is he that will harm you, if ye be followers of that which is good. If ye suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye; for it is better that ye suffer for well doing than for evil doing. For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, that he might bring us to God; so if we suffer as a Christian we need not be ashamed, but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy. When the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory, that fadeth not away (I. Pet. 5:4).

I must not forget to tell about our meeting Sunday, September 15, Brother Maple and Sister Neill being here, we invited the Springfield and Brush Creek ecclesias here to our home, and despite the inclement weather there were thirty-two brethren present. After a short address by Brother Maple, we all took part in a social meeting before the breaking of bread. After dinner we all went to the schoolhouse, where we have a Sunday School, after which we listened to a sermon by Bro. Maple. All were benefited and well repaid for coming, and feel that God hath given us an understanding that we may know him that is true, and we are in him, that is true, even in his son Jesus Christ; this is the eternal life (I. John 5:20).

Therefore brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure. Be patient unto the coming of the Lord.

Your sister in Christ,
MRS. A. E. OVERHOLSER.

To The Restitution:

I thought it might be of interest to the brothers and sisters to learn of the meetings we have been having at Freedom. Bro. Adams came here September 1st, holding meeting at 11 o'clock that day. The crowd attending were invited to the home of Bro. and Sister Hammond. In the afternoon we had a question box, each question being almost a sermon in itself.

Meetings were continued through the week with good attendance, considering the busy time. Although Bro. Adams' sermons are always good, they seemed to us better than usual. They taught us our duty and at the same time gave prominence to our doctrine.

On September 8th we again enjoyed being together. After the forenoon meeting we went to the home of Sister May Moore. The day was greatly enjoyed, and especially the question box. Our meeting closed that evening leaving us refreshed in mind. It also left some interested ones who are thinking of taking a stand for the truth. Bro. Adams left us for other fields, but we are looking forward to the time when he will again be with us, and to a better time when there will be no more parting.

Your Sister,
LULU PICKERING.

TO THE ISOLATED MEMBERS THROUGHOUT U. S. AND CANADA.

In June, 1912 an article explaining an organization for the benefit of our isolated members was published in our paper.

Since the organization some of our isolated members have responded, but there are some from whom we have received no reply. Some have misunderstood it, thinking it meant only the East. This organization is for YOU, and includes every member from ocean to ocean, and from the gulf to all parts of Canada. One of us cannot do much but in union there is strength, so let us co-operate and get this organization in a position to keep an evangelist in the field constantly.

Let me hear from you, and if there is anything that is not clear I will be glad to enlighten you.

Your sister in Christ,
Miss Lenta B. Hanson,
3609 McDonald Ave.
St. Louis, Mo.

AMONG THE BRETHERN.

Charles Clifford Maple

Our meting at Jacksonville near the city of Springfield, O., closed on Sunday evening, September 22. The interest was the best of any meeting we have been in for some time, and continued until the end. Several of the leading families of the community are taking up the study of the word, and several are ready to obey the truth.

Three emphatic diaglotts were sold and several subscriptions to The Restitution were taken. The number attending was the largest and most regular of any meetings ever held in the neighborhood, our congregation numbering as high as seventy, and not any might less than thirty-six.

Sister Mattie Neill pastor of our Salem church, rendered us valuable assistance during the first week of the meeting by leading the song services and calling among the people. Sister Neill preached two very interesting and instructive sermons on the "Kingdom of God," and "The Resurrection." Elder Huggins came to assist during the last week, and delivered some inspiring messages. We expect to return at a later date to continue the work.

On first day morning, September 22, we had the pleasure of speaking to the brethern at Springfield. We found the "little flock" still faithful. They meet in an upper room, and break bread as did the early church. Bro. David Hoek has charge of the work at this place.

We have had some very interesting experiences in canvassing for The Restitution, and in distributing tracts. Elder Huggins spent one morning in Springfield selling his sermon on "The Death of Christ." While this was among a class of people who were strangers to the truth, yet every family with the exception of two, purchased sermons. This leads me to suggest to those who would distribute our sermons and tracts, I believe that you will get better results if you will sell the literature than if you give it away free of charge.

Many times tracts or sermons handed out free, simply find their way into the fire, but if one pays for them, they will read them, and they may then become interested. If the price is made at a low figure, no one will object to buying them. I have taken a number out with me each day, and have sold at each place where I have presented same.

We came to Mount Liberty, Knox county, on Monday, September 23. There is here a church of Advent Christian people. Elder and Mrs. Robinson held a meeting for a few days last fall, and the people appreciated the sermons very much. Here we met Elder Kerr, of the A. C. church, who has a brother in the truth at Buffalo, N. Y. We shall continue here some days.

Thursday, September 26, we spent among the Saints at Mt. Vernon. We now have three in that town who stand for the truth, others whom we hope to interest.

Brethern, do not fail to order a good supply of Bro. Huggins' sermon on "The Death of Christ," and sell them, (do not give them away), and get your friends reading a message that will [illegible] them thinking.

Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

OBITUARY

Harriet White Fish

Hariet White was born in Bartholomew county, Indiana, Aug. 15, 1839. She was married to Jos. Fish, February 14th, 1856; died at their home near Colo, Ia., Sep. 5th, 1912, of that dread disease, cancer of the liver. To this union was born nine children—six boys and three girls. Three children preceded her, leaving five sons and one daughter. She was a daughter of Dr. J. F. White, a former minister of the Church of God in Indiana. Her five stalwart sons and son-in-law acted as pall bearers. A mother in Israel has fallen. Few indeed are the mothers possessing the force of character, rooted and grounded in the faith once delivered to the saints as aunt Harriet, as she was familiarly known by that name. She surely fulfilled Rev. 14:13: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord from henceforth, yea, saith the spirit that they may rest from their labors," and their works do follow them. Yes indeed, she rests from her labors, and her works follow her. Her sons are doing their best to bring up their families as she has, "in the nuture and admonition of the Lord." What more could a woman do? Bringing to her posterity strong minds, healthy and unusually strong physical bodies, and a life of godly example. In the words of the Master, "She has done what she could."

After a short service at the home by the writer on the subject of the resurrection, we laid her to sleep in the beautiful cemetery at Nevada, to await the call of the Master. "Well done, good and faithful servant." May God enable her children to always remember the example she has set for them and their children. May the Lord soon come and gather us all an unbroken family, to share the blessings of his Kingdom.

O. J. ALLARD.

OWEN R. L. CROZIER

Owen Russell Loomis Crozier, the subject of this notice, was born in Chapinville, N. Y., February 2nd, 1820, and died at his residence in Grand Rapids, Mich., Sunday morning, September 15, 1912, thus marking the close of a long and useful pilgrimage.

The story of this brother's life is more than ordinarily interesting, but space forbids us making more than passing mention of some of the more important events. He was left an orphan at the tender age of two years, being very soon adopted into the family of a frugal farmer where he remained until about fourteen years of age. Being an industrious lad and studious, he made good use of the few educational advantages to be had in those days. He finally worked his way through the Lima Seminary, Lima, N. Y. He taught school winters and attended school summers. His early Christian experience was in being identified with the Methodist church, but when only about twenty-two years of age had studied himself into the then comparatively new Advent faith, of which faith he has been an ardent supporter and defender for nearly three-fourths of a century—until the enemy of all mankind overcame in the struggle for life.

Bro. Crozier was connected with two or three Christian publications for several years, and did considerable preaching and debating, being zealous of spreading the news of the gospel of the Kingdom. Moving to Michigan at about the close of the Civil War, he has since lived and labored in this state. Was one of the first few in this state to preach and "earnestly contend for the faith," being identified for several years with Brothers Miller, Hoyt, and Simmonds in preaching Adventism.

In 1853 he was married to Miss Polly Maria Alger, who died in January of this year. Five sons and two daughters survive them, Ernest A. Crozier, of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Alfred O. Crozier, Cincinnati, O.; Hubert R. Crozier and Charles E. Crozier, Colinga, Cal.; Galen G. Crozier, missionary in Tura Assam, India; Mrs. John H. Wood, Winder, Ga.; and Dr. Jennie E. Crozier of Mudhu Hanipur district, India, the latter returning several months ago to care for her parents, and which she did so faithfully.

It was the very pleasing privilege of the undersigned, and his family to become acquainted with and often to visit in the home of these dear ones of like precious faith. To know them was to love them, and with their long and eventful lives, rich in usefulness and experiences, made them interesting and profitable companions. What was our experience, was also that of many others, who feel the loss so much a personal one.

The undersigned was asked and performed the last sad rites, the services being held from their residence in Grand Rapids, Mich.

How we long for the glad day to arrive when our King and Redeemer shall come and destroy the power of the enemy! We shall not then be called upon to give up our dear ones into his power. We can but exclaim, "Even so, come quickly." May we each be faithful unto death, that we may be called unto life eternal with all the faithful.

CONFERENCE REPORT

The annual conference of the Church of God in Indiana convened September 19 to 22, 1912, with the Hillisburg church. The different churches of the state were well represented, and much interest and good will were manifested and all felt spiritually benefited from having associated together. The Hillisburg church has a large membership, and judging from the loyal hospitality extended to its guests, it has a large heart also.

Most excellent sermons were given by Bros. D. C. Robinson, of Ohio; G. Eldred Marsh, of Ill.; Jos. Williams and David Van Vactor was unable to attend, but his place was very ably filled by his wife, who read his discourse. Letters were read from Bros. Halstead and Wagoner, who were physically unable to be present. Sister Robinson was also ill and could not come.

A Berean meeting was held on Saturday evening, led by Emma Railsback, the president of the society in Indiana. A question box occupied on afternoon session. On Sunday afternoon two expressed a desire to be baptized; they were Mrs. Bennett Boggs and Miss Esther Maroney.

Two business sessions were held during the conference, presided over by the president, F. M. McCrory. The annual reports of various work done were read and accepted. New committees were appointed.

Since it was deemed advisable by many to hold only one business conference a year, it was moved that Sec. 9 of the constitution be made to read: "This conference shall meet not less than one nor more than two times a year, for the transaction of business," etc. This was voted upon and carried.

The following is a report of the committee on resolutions: Whereas we have been blessed with life and a reasonable degree of health whereby we are enabled to meet again in conference assembled for the continuance of the work of the Master.

Be it resolved, that we give thanks to the giver of all good for a manifestation of those blessings. And whereas there are those who because of sickness and other causes are prevented from being with us.

Be it resolved, that we express our sorrow and disappointment because of their absence, and that we extend to them our sympathy, and whereas the officers of this conference having labored so earnestly and zealously in the discharge of their official duties and certain of the brothers and sisters loyal to a sense of duty have endeavored to make all necessary arrangements to the accommodation and entertainment of the members of the conference, therefore be it further resolved, that we extend to them our sincere thanks and express our appreciation of duties so faithfully performed and work so nobly done.

J. J. SNODGRASS,
EMMA RAILSBACK
FLORA HARRIS,
Committee.

Following is the report on finance: We the undersigned committee on finance for conference work in the state of Indiana, recommend a free will offering of 50 cents from each brther, and 25 cents from each sister, payable annually for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the annual conference. The secretary of each local church to receive such funds, and turn them over to the state treasurer, and report to the state secretary the amount. These funds to be in the hands of the state treasurer on or before April 1 of each year.

WM. HUFFER,
BENNETT BOGGS,
EZRA RAILSBACK,
Committee.

The auditing committee consisting of George Finney, Rosa Rouse and Mrs. Himmelright examined the treasurer's and secretary's books and found them correct. The financial books at the close of the conference show the following in brief:

All collections at Hillisburg conference	$87.00
Expenses	83.80
Amount above expenses	$ 3.20
Cash on hand	35.12
Individual con, tax	.50
Total	$38.82

The nominating committee were Wm. Huffer, B. Boggs and Richard Railsback.

The following officers were retained for the ensuing year:

President, F. M. McCrory; First Vice President, O. A. Roose; Second Vice President, Laurence Howell; Secretary, Flora Harris; Treasurer, Ezra Railsback.

The Bible school board and Mrs. F. M. McCrory, Myrtle Stauffer, O. A. Roose.

Conference adjourned.

FLORA HARRIS,
Secretary.

FACTS FOR THINKERS

Man is called immortal in the Bible—not once.

He is said to have an immortal soul in the Bible—not once.

The words "immortal soul," "undying soul," "deathless spirit," "immortal spirit" occur in the Bible—not once.

The words "endless pain," "eternal torture," "everlasting sorrow," "everlasting misery," "eternal hell" and words and phrases of like import occur in the Bible—not once.

The wicked are said to have eternal or everlasting life in the Bible—not once.

The righteous are said to go at death, to heaven, in the Bible—not once.

It is declared in the Bible that the righteous when dead praise God—not once.

Death is spoken of in the Bible as an inferior sort of life—not once.

Life is represented in the Bible as contingous and uninterrupted for all mankind—not once.

The word immortal occurs in the Bible but once and is then applied to the great God alone (I Tim. 1:17), "The King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God," etc.

The word immortality occurs in the Bible but five times, all in the epistles of St. Paul.

First, it is said that God alone possesses it (I Tim. vi:16), second, that Christ brought it to light by the gospel (I Tim. i:16), Third, that to obtain it we must earnestly seek for it (Rom. ii:7). Fourth, that this mortal must put it on at the future resurrection of the dead (I. Cor. xv: 53, 54).

The Bible declares of man what not only the plainest testimony of our senses confirms, but what the profound researches of science have demonstrated, "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return" (Gen. iii: 19; Ps. cxlvi. 4). "The dead know not anything" (Eccl. ix:5). "The dead praise not the Lord" (Ps. cxv: 7). "In death there is no remembrance of thee" (God) (Ps. vi:5). That man and beast die alike, all have one breath and all go to the same place—all are of the dust and all turn to dust again (Eccl. iii:19, 20). That there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whether all go (Eccl. ix: 10).

And finally, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust, without which even the righteous have perished (Acts, xxiv: 15).

Which will you believe, man's traditions or God's word?—Selected from Words of Life, by Brother Heacock.

TO INTERPRET AND STUDY THE SCRIPTURES.

1. Let the Bible define and explain its own terms, figures and symbols.

2. Give every passage a literal construction, unless its own connection and phraseology render such a course absurd, by bringing it into collision with truths elsewhere established by positive language.

3. The proper connection of any given passage is not always that with which it stands immediately connected, but those bearing on the same subject found recorded anywhere in the Scriptures. Select all these texts from where they stand, put them together and you will have all the truth revealed on that subject.

4. All passages belonging to any particular subject must connect one or more of the particular features of that subject, by which it may be identified as belonging to that subject.

5. The truth in relation to any doctrine must be established by those passages which speak of it in positive and unequivocal language, and these texts belonging to the same subject but which only admit of inferential testimony, no inference should be drawn from them at variance with the truths already established by positive texts.

6. No doctrine should be predicated upon mere inference, neither upon one isolated text of Scripture. Any true doctrine will be found interspersed through the whole Bible.

7. In any doctrine taught by types or shadows, the anti-type must always correspond with the type, and the shadow with the substance.

8. In studying the Scriptures, consider that the New Testament is a commentary on the Old.

9. Never be afraid of results to which you may be driven by your investigations, as this will inevitably bias your mind and disqualify you to arrive at ultimate truth.

10. Investigate everything you believe; if it is the truth, it cannot be injured thereby; if error the sooner it is corrected the better.

11. Pursue this course with as much independence as if you were the only one concerned.

12. Rely on no authority less than divine in so momentous an undertaking.

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

DEMON SPIRITS' DOCTRINE OF RUSSELL IS REBUKED.

Rev. P. H. Clifford Calls it "Foolish, Wicked, Soul-Damning Perversion of Scripture.

Attack it in Pamphlet

Reviews at Length "Pastor's" Arguments—Quotes From Watch Tower. Queer Australian Story.

The Rev. P. H. Clifford of Bethany Reformed church, 182 Clermont avenue, has written a pamphlet, in which he vigorously comments on an interesting phase of "Pastor" Russell's doctrine of demon spirits. The Rev. Mr. Clifford says:

"Whenever one can hinder the leaven of false teaching he owes it as a duty to society and truth to do so. To witness in silence C. T. Russell's efforts to ruin the confidence of church members and dope an innocent public with his foolish, wicked, soul-damning, self-centered, perverted views of Scripture is to become a partaker of his evil.

"I have no desire to hurt the man nor to put a straw in his way of seeking to do good. It is because I am convinced by clear evidence of his dishonest methods and studied submission of Bible statement that I write hoping to hinder his falsely preying upon true people of God.

"Let me call attention to one line of belief Mr. Russell advocates. It is more like describing the ideas of a raw heathen African chief or witch doctor. I find it hard to credit that in Brooklyn, the City of Churches, such a dangerous and destructive belief is being promulgated and tolerated.

"In the Watch Tower, vol. 32, No. 1, 1 January, 1911 issue, p. 5, which paper is Mr. C. T. Russell's official organ, we find advocated the belief that fallen angels, or demons, materialize and personate some of the Lord's people, then commit some flagrant crime, after which they dematerialize, vanishing to leave the nonguilty or innocent person to face the righteous indignation aroused by the crime. In this same article Russellism blasphemously suggests that divine providence permits such things to be done by these fallen angels or demon spirits so that a great persecution as unjust as that which came upon our Lord Jesus Christ eighteen centuries ago might come upon us today. When the writer above says 'come upon us' he means Mr. C. T. Russell. I gather this from the fact that he follows up the statement with the following illustration:

"Brother Nicholson of the Australian branch of Russellism writes us of an astounding circumstance: 'One of the Australian brethren has a wife who is neither for nor against the truth, and who professes no sympathy for spiritism. Quite recently the brother, returning home, had a harrowing tale related by his wife. She declared that brother Mr. C. T. Russell made improper proposals to which she yielded.'

At such a distance it is easy to prove an alibi; to prove that the editor, Mr. C. T. Russell was not there. But suppose the materialization in all of its particulars had transpired in Brooklyn, or in the Bethel home, or in any of the various cities which the editor, Mr. C. T. Russell, visits, or in a Pullman sleeping car, in which he, Mr. C. T. Russell frequently travels, it is easily seen that an alibi might be very difficult to prove in such cases. If such matters as this shall form any part of the church's experiences during the year 1911, it will mean very stirring times indeed, and that some of us wholly innocent may have opportunity of dying cruel and very ignominious deaths after the manner of the Master."

"What conscience other than a troubled one would advocate such theories as the above, which are quoted from Mr. C. T. Russell's own official organ, the Watch Tower? A guilty conscience, of course, would do anything to justify itself. A troubled conscience would be capable of foisting such a belief upon the public so as to prepare for an expected attack. But a conscience pure as the frosty stars and free from questionable guilt could never think, alone stoop, to advocate such a belief. Thinking is creating. If we think with the forces of evil we creat evil. If we think with God we create God. Mr. C. T. Russell nor his followers were thinking with God when they concocted such a belief for the present times.

"In dark Africa they may hold such theories, but with such a belief they also teach that the person whom the forces of evil impersonate is evil, otherwise the evil spirit would not impersonate him.

"In the whole article from which I have quoted there is every encouragement to believe Mr. C. T. Russell or any other Russellite to be innocent of any crime with which he might be charged and to credit such to some fallen angel or demon spirit should a case develop in which he, Mr. C. T. Russell, could not prove an alibi.

"Of course, Mr. Russell quotes Scripture to justify his advocacy of such a belief.

"The Epistle of Jude, the sixth verse, distinctly tells how God has made it impossible for fallen angels to do what Mr. Russell would like people to believe, especially should he himself be charged with any crime. There is one other strong verse of Scripture, Ephesians vi:12, which Mr. Russell might twist and turn and subvert to teaching his devilish doctrine of spirit beings personating the Lord's people and committing crimes. But let any honest mind read the chapter and it will be perfectly plain how impossible and absurd and devilish is Mr. Russell's views.

"Again let me urge the Russellites to throw Russell's books aside and read the Bible apart from Russellism, and they will be delivered from its gross errors.

"Just think how it would sound to read that Mr. Russell committed a crime of this, that or the other thing, and that he pleaded not guilty, but could not prove an alibi. His only explanation of his innocence would be that some fallen angel or spirit being impersonated him which happened once before in Australia. In the Australian case he was able to prove an alibi, being here in Brooklyn at the time.

"To permit Mr. Russell's official organ to favorably advocate such doctrines and use the United States mails for the purpose, is in my judgment, worse than to allow impure men to send obscene pictures through the mails.—Daily Eagle, Dec. 4, 1911.

WHAT RUSSELLISM IS.

How Money is Pouring Into the "Pastor's" Coffers.

That the world as it is now constituted will come to an end in October, 1914, is the central tenet of Russellism. Believing that the end of the material world is near and that only through "sacrifice" of their material substance they can become of the "elect" under the New Dispensation, hundreds of Russell's followers are turning their property over to him in preparation for the end.

Many of them give it outright and in that case he sometimes assures the man annuity as long as they live. Others deed it to him in their wills. As October, 1914, the time Russell fixes as marking the end of "Gentile times" approaches, the number of donations is increasing, and there is every prospect that Russell will soon be many times a millionaire.

In all his books and early writings, Russell fixed the inauguration of Messiah's Kingdom definitely for October, 1914. He has taken the prophecies of Daniel, foretelling a time of trouble, and every time there is a strike or a revolution "Pastor" Russell points out to his followers that this goes to show our near approach to the Millennial Dawn.

In the Watch Tower of January 1, of this year, of which thirty thousand copies were printed and scattered everywhere, he declares that "strife, lock-outs, panics, etc.—will be prominent factors in the precipitation of the anarchy which all so justly dread.

"While the world is outwardly at peace there is great unrest in the hearts of humanity . . . Only the Lord knows to what extent and how long the winds of strife will be held, as pictorially set forth in the Revelation."

In "The Studies in the Scriptures" Russell explains a carefully worked-out chronological system which Russellites declare to be infallible and according to which the present world must end in October, 1914. Having established this idea, Russell proceeds to glorify "sacrifice" as the best way of becoming a member of the "elect" who will enjoy ground floor privileges in the New Dispensation. His followers are urged to give up their money to spread the "Glad Tidings," for "The heavenly things are to be attained only by those who sacrifice earthly things. (Watch Tower, October 15, 1911, page 392).

"Pastor" Russell has found this prognostication of the end of all things particularly effective with persons in whose family there has recently been a death. In small towns throughout New York, Pennsylvania, and other states, Russell's agents make it a practice to attend funeral services, where they warn people that "the age of wrath is at hand," and distribute the Russell literature. Relatives are urged to make a contribution for spreading the "Glad Tidings" as a memorial to the dead, and frequently do so.

In his last annual report Russell admitted receipts for the year of $148,777.10, but this is not nearly everything that he received. Russell runs his business so that no single man except himself knows much about it.

Much of the money that comes in Russell invests in real estate, mining stocks, and various speculative enterprises, making the investments in the names of such dummy corporations as the United States Investment Company. According to a review of testimony contained in a brief presented to the Pennsylvania courts in connection with his wife's alimony proceedings his income has increased at an enormous rate. The brief says:

"His net income prior to 1898 must have been about $200,000, or an average of about $20,000 a year over and above donations, which he says were numerous during that period.

"Since early in 1898 he has been transacting the great bulk of his business under cover of the society, and in its name, and according to his own testimony, said business has expanded to an extent that is little less than marvelous, and shows clearly the enormous earning power of this extraordinary business preacher. At page 206, he says that the increase of the business of the society since his wife had cognizance of it, has probably been tenfold. Then, to-wit, the office force was five or six while in 1906 it was thirty-four."

The same proportionate increase has continued since the "Pastor" has resided in Brooklyn. Because no one has endeavored to interfere with his practices he has extended his operations until they cover every state in the union as well as most countries in Europe. His employees are now numbered by the hundred and the output of his advertising plant on Hicks street exceeds that of the largest business institution in Brooklyn. A total of 144,311 cards and letters went out from the correspondence department last year; 600,157 "Scripture Studies," foretelling the end of the world, were put into circulation. By circulating Russell's predictions about the forthcoming catastrophe, "the Lord's people, poor or rich, have opportunity for service. They are realizing this more and more As this consecration and zeal deepen they send us money for the printing and assist in the circulation."—"Pastor" Russell writing in the Watch Tower on the annual report for 1910.—Eagle, Nov. 11, 1911.

THOUGHTS FOR THE THOUGHTFUL.

"The Kingdom of God shall be taken away from you, and shall be given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matt. xxi. 43.

We have not finished discussing the Bible significance of the phrase, "The Kingdom of God." Here we have a remarkable passage which demands investigation. What are we to understand by these words?

There is no reference here to any gentile nation. The Kingdom of God has never been offered to a gentile nation. It is a righteous nation to whom it shall be given. Which of the gentiles is a righteous nation—righteous according to God's estimate of righteousness? Certainly not England which spends many millions of pounds each year on strong drink, a very small percentage of whose population ever attends any place of public worship, and who year by year seems to be growing more pleasure-loving and less God-seeking.

There is no reference here to the Christian church—which is never called "a nation" (indeed, it is composed of persons of every nation). The church of Christ is not the Kingdom of God. It is not only improbable, but impossible, that the scattered churches, comparatively few in number and insignificant in membership (as compared with the vast and overwhelming mass of unbelievers), can be God's kingdom on earth. Read 2 Thess. i 4; ii. 1-12; 1 Tim. iv. 1-3; 2 Tim. iii. 1-3; iv. 1-18; and see what Paul prognosticated concerning the latter end of the Christian church as an outward organization?

Who, then, is the nation here referred to? It is none other than the Hebrew nation reconstituted and regenerate.

Is it objected that this is but a continuation of the old Israelitish nation whom Christ was then rejecting? I reply that there is no force in that objection. Hear what God said to Moses when Israel in the wilderness turned to worship a golden calf: "I have seen this people, and behold it is a stiff-necked people: let me alone that I may destroy them and blot out their name from under heaven; and I will make of thee a nation mightier and greater than they (Deut. ix. 13, 14). Had this destruction and substitution taken place there would still have been a nation of Israel, yet a new nation shall spring from the loins of Moses, a lineal descendent of Jacob. The rejected Messiah pronounced his sentence of doom upon the Jewish nation of his day, which has rested upon them to this hour, and will continue till the great tribulation of the latter day, which will be so severe no (Israelitish) flesh would be saved; but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened" (Matt. xxiv. 21, 22). That is to say, the Jewish race would be exterminated but for God's mercy on behalf of certain elect (chosen) ones. Who are these elect ones? Elect members of the Hebrew race—a remnant reserved and preserved—from whom shall spring the new nation to whom the authority and glory of the kingdom of God shall be given. As Moses would have been responsible for the new nation in his days, so the Lord Jesus will be the originator of the righteous nation at a future day. Without him the new nation cannot be called into being. The circumstances of its birth are depicted in Zech xii. 10, "I will pour upon the inhabitants (only a remnant) of Jerusalem the spirit of grace and supplication, and they shall look unto me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn." "And in that day I will cause the unclean spirit to pass out of the land" (xiii. 1-2). The new nation will be intimately connected with the once rejected Jesus; indeed, they will owe their very existence to him, he will be the Father of the newly-constituted Israel, and so shall come to pass the saying that is written, "He shall see his seed, he shall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied" (Is. liii. 10). With this agree the words of Paul "That which Israel seeketh for, that he obtained not; but the election of grace." "Though the number of Israel be as the sand of the sea, it is the remnant that shall be saved" (Rom. xi. 5; ix. 27).

This "remnant" of Israel hold in Scripture a most important place. Isaiah says, "Except the Lord had left unto us a very small remnant we should have been as Sodom" (i. 9). "The remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall again take root downward, and bear fruit upward" (xxxvii. 31-32). In Jeremiah we read how the people besought the prophet, "Pray for us, even for this remnant, for we are left but a few of many" (xlii. 2). Now as to the future, Isaiah instructs us, "In that day the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people" (xi. 11). Micah in God's name promised, "I will surely gather the remnant of Israel" (ii. 12). "The remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many peoples as dew from the Lord" (v. v). "Who is a God like thee that passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage" (vii. 18)? Zechariah declares that God "will cause the remnant of this people to inherit all these things" (viii: 12). And Zephaniah testifies as to the character of the nucleus of the new nation to whom the kingdom of God shall come, "The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity, nor speak lies, nor shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth" (iii. 13). What more need be said? Here, indeed, is the germ of a nation reconstituted and regenerate; to use the words of Isaiah, "The people shall be all righteous, and the little one (the remnant) shall become a thousand, and the small one a strong nation" (Is. lx. 21-22). And it is of this nation that God spoke through the prophet Jeremiah, "Behold the days come that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and house of Judah. This is the covenant that I will make after those days saith the Lord; I will put my law in their inward parts and in their heart will I write it" (Jer. xxxi. 32). Will our readers kindly turn to and carefully note the marvelous prophecy as recorded in chapters thirty and thirty-one concerning the re-creation and consecration of this latter-day Israel, who will thus be a nation such as the world has never yet seen; the nation which shall be invested with the rich privilege and high honor of being entrusted with "the kingdom of God," and shall bring forth fruits of righteousness, so that the land shall be called "a habitation of justice, a mountain of holiness" (Jer. xxxi. 23).

This righteous nation is also spoken of in Isaiah xxvi. 1-2, where we read, "In that day this song shall be sung in the land of Judah: "Open ye the gates that the righteous nation which keepeth truth may enter in." When shall this song be sung? "In that day." What day? Isaiah tells us in chap. xxv. 9. It shall be in the day that the nation shall "rejoice in his salvation," and when the Lord shall arise and his glory be seen upon them, and Jerusalem shall be called "the city of the Lord, the Zion of the holy one of Israel" (ix. 2-14). Furthermore Isaiah, referring to the sad apostacy of Israel in his day, wrote "Destroy it not, for a blessing is in it. I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains, and my chosen shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there" (lxv. 8-10). "And he shall call his servants by another name" (ver. 15). "Be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create, for behold I create Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people a joy" (ver. 18). "Who hath seen such a thing? Shall a land be born in one day? Shall a nation be brought forth at once? for as soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children" (lxvi. 7-8). Unexpected, sudden, rapid, astonishing to the world will be the rise and permanent settlement of this new nation. Indeed, the change that will take place when this new and righteous nation is born, and the kingdom of heaven established in its midst, is so overwhelmingly great and wonderful that God, speaking of it, says: "Behold I create a new earth" (lxv. 17).

And thus from the "small remnant" that shall survive the great tribulation of the last days will spring a godly seed who shall be "the nation bringing forth the fruits thereof" of which Jesus spake.

ARISE AND BE BAPTIZED

Acts 22:16.

Upon whom is baptism enjoined? Upon those who enjoy what God says. "Then they that gladly received his word were baptized" (Acts 2:41). Upon those who heartily obey the Lord's word. Lydia, "whose heart the Lord opened to attend unto the things spoken by Paul, was baptized" (Acts 6:14). Upon penitent believers. "Repent and be baptized every one of you," said Peter" (Acts 2:38). Upon those who have received the holy Spirit. "Can any man forbid water that these should not be baptized which have received the Holy Spirit as well as we?" (Acts 10:47). The baptism of the Holy Spirit did not take the place of water baptism, but sometimes preceded it, and sometimes followed it (Acts 2:38). Infants are not subjects for baptism, as they are incapable of believing and repenting and do not receive the Holy Spirit by believing. Parents may dedicate their children to God but should not call it baptism.

The Greek word "baptizo" which signifies to baptize, occurs 80 times in the New Testament, but is never translated to sprinkle. The original word for sprinkling is never translated baptism. In Lev. 14:15, 16 we have "pour," "dip" and "sprinkle," but each is translated from a distinct Greek verb in the Septuagint. Sprinkling in the Bible refers to the application of Christ's blood by faith and to its cleansing power (Heb. 9:19, 20, 23, 24). Baptism signifies the resurrection from the dead which is the purchase of that blood. Hence the sprinkling of the blood by faith precedes baptism (Heb. 10:22).

Apostolic administration of baptism never suggested sprinkling. They went where there was "much water" (John 2:23), and "they went down into the water" and came "up out of the water." Some one has suggested that "into" simply means "near to", "close by." Let us see how this will work. Noah entered "into the ark." "Near to" would hardly have answered his purpose. Daniel was cast into the den of lions. If only "close by" the king might have saved himself from fasting and a sleepless, anxious night. Saints have the promise of entering at Jesus coming "into the city," the New Jerusalem. Will they be satisfied to stay outside "near to"? The wicked are to be cast "into the lake of fire." If "into" could only mean "near to" what a comfort to the lost! It does better to let "into" mean "unto," and when we baptize a person do as Phillip and the Ethiopian did when "they went down both into the water." Well did John Wesley say, "Primitive baptism was by immersion." The figure used by the apostles point only to immersion. The baptized are said to have been "planted in the likeness of his (Christ's) death." When we plant we cover. Again, they are said to be "buried with him" (Rom. 6:4, 5). Immersed is indeed a burial in the likeness of Christ's death and resurrection, to faith in which it testifies. Dan Stanly, the queen's preacher, well said in 1879: "The change from immersion to sprinkling has set aside the larger part of apostolic language regarding baptism, and has altered the very meaning of the word." We may ask if it is a safe thing to do to "set aside the larger part of apostolic language" and alter the meaning of God's word? Conybeare and Howson testify that "immersion was religiously observed for thirteen centuries."

Christ and his apostles considered baptism very essential. Christ connects salvation with it. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16). They baptized immediately upon repentance and faith, even the same day or night. Saul hesitated about it, but Ananias hastened him to it, saying, "Why tarriest thou?" It saves because it is a test of submission to Christ's authority. Gal. 3:27. It saves as every act of obedience saves. Christ can save only those who obey him. Heb 5:9. It saves because it answers a good conscience. 1. Peter 3:21. It is called by Paul the birth-bath or "washing of regeneration." Titus 3:5. Who would leave a new-born babe unwashed? Baptism is essential, therefore. It is not a door into a church, but "into Christ." As many of you as have been baptized into Christ," writes Paul. Not all immersed ones get into Christ. Simon, the sorcerer did not. Conditions must be met. The eunich, baptized by Phillip, got into Christ, but did not stop to join a church but went home and raised up Christian churches. Baptism is indeed a form, but divinely-given ceremonies are essential. Dipping seven times in Jordan was essential to Naaman. Tramping around Jericho was essential though but a form. The sprinkling of blood upon the door posts, Moses holding up his hand while Joshua fought, holding up his spear by Joshua, looking upon the uplifted brazen serpent were all forms, but essential.

Baptism is not a confession of our own righteousness, but the opposite. It confesses that we deserve death, which is typified in our baptismal burial, but by the death and resurrection of Christ we hope for life. 2 Cor. 4:14. 15. Have we fled for refuge to lay hold of the hope set before us? Do we heartily believe in Christ as the "only name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved?" Do we sincerely repent of our sins? Why tarriest thou? Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord. Christ washes us from our sins in his own blood, but only faith and perfect submission can secure that washing.

"I'm Pretty Little, But I'll Try."

She was only seven years old, Eileen Martin, the section foreman's daughter, as she stood reaching up to a telephone at the little town of Alta, Cal., one Saturday, telling the agent at the nearest station that a rail was broken. Childlike, she knew the semaphore signals, had come to the track to see the Overland Limited whirl by, and had watched the long finger drop, letting the train into the block, says the Philadelphia Press.

"I'm pretty little, but I'll try," she said, when the station agent asked her if she could not stop the train that was past him, and started out with her sister of fourteen who had just appeared. They ran down the track, stopped the train, and saved a wreck. The alert attention which knew the semaphore signal, the quick wit which understood what a broken rail meant, the decision and initiative which alone sought the telephone, the courage with which she and her sister started up the track, waving their aprons to stop the big Overland Limited as it bore down upon them—these are the qualities which through life bring self-help, help for others, success and happiness.

And she was only seven years old, "pretty little," but ready to "try."—Sel.

God's kingdom grows not by multiplication, but by addition, here one, and there one.

When we look into the long avenue of the future and see what good there is for each one of us to do, we realize after all, what a beautiful thing it is to work, and to live, and be happy.—Stevenson.

Religion provides for all human needs. The man who becomes a Christian should have a clearer brain and a healthier body, as well as a cleaner spirit.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

To the brethren scattered abroad:

I will make engagements to preach anywhere (U. V.), beginning in Nov. to March. I have been laboring for over fifty years to make people better acquainted with the teachings of the Scriptures in many parts of the world. I will speak every night when it is desirable to do so.

Address Dr. H. Wallace Mason, Box 239 St. Catherines, Ont. Can.

NEW SONGS OF THE KINGDOM

New edition just out, 141 pages, words and music, flexible cloth covers. Price 25c each, $2 per doz, postpaid. The only song book for those of Restitution faith. Recommended by all our preachers. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Nebraska.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more 90c each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

SPECIAL MEETING

The Editor of The Restitution will hold a series of meetings with the Church of God at Moriah, near Casey, Ill., beginning October 19, 1912. A limited number of churches near his line of travel may be visited just before or after our meeting, if their requests are sent in immediately. All who desire to be with us at our meeting will be cordially entertained. Intending visitors should notify the secretary.

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16. Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38; 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or quit the pulpit.

Teach the Scriptures, not foolishness. Honor God and the Savior.—B. S. Driggs.

OF "THE RESTITUTION"

GET THESE Money-making Secrets WITH Farm Journal

Is this cock properly held? "Poultry Secrets" tells how to carry fowls, and many other secrets far more important.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 85 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says ROY CHANEY, Illinois. "What it tells would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes F. J. DICKSON, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 300 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck-raising," says P. S. WARNOCK, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says F. W. MANSFIELD, New York.

T. F. MCCREA, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden this summer. I lost my health in the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by putting near to the soil. After a long tussle with the Chinese language and mission problems, it is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, fruit, chickens, etc. I am surely sweet and, regaining my health. My wife and I both find FARM JOURNAL indispensable."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. PORTER, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. ELSWORTH, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes MRS. JOE LAWRENCE, Saskatchewan. "I was never successful in growing cabbage until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes DR. WILLIAM DAVIS, New Jersey. "When the first copy came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to seem like home. When it arrives, I let the children jump right into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until half-past ten, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. I. BLOAT, a Virginia bank clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL, I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. WETZEL, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."
These booklets are 6 by 9 inches, all profusely illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of discoveries and methods of successful poultry men, long jealously guarded. It gives Peter's famous mating chart, the Easton method of getting one half more pullets than cockerels, Berry's method of insuring fertility, with priceless secrets of mating, breeding, feed and feeding, how to produce winter eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "ringboning," "pigeoning," cocaine and nasilian doping, and other tricks of "gyps" and peddlers, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse, It also gives many valuable training, feeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $10,000 a year, mainly from eggs. All back-yard chicken-growers know about the "Rancocas Ugly," and how Foster PEARS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest full-bearing strawberries almost until snow flies. It gives you the fruits of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and blossom-removing to produce berries in the fall, tells inside facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how some growers get 10,000 quarts an acre and sell at 25 cents a quart, etc. L. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who can grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Prof. Holden, the "Corn King," tells how to get ten to twenty bushels more per acre of corn rich in protein and the best stock-feeding elements. Pictures make every process plain.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of seven cows that produced half a ton of butter-fat per year (140 pounds is the average). An eye-opener for dairymen. Get it, weed out your poor cows, and turn good ones into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your backyard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck-farm near Boston makes every year 50 cents each on 40,000 ducklings. Tells why ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW they do everything.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Horace Vose, the famous Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to mate, to set eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey earn PAY.

EVERY live farmer knows the FARM JOURNAL, for it is famous everywhere as the leading farm and home paper. It is thirty-five years old, and has the largest circulation of any farm paper in the world. It has always stood up for the right of farmers to "sit at the first table," and is one of the great forces that have made the American farmer prosperous.

To interest NEW readers in The Restitution, and increase its circulation and usefulness in every corner of its field, we have made an arrangement with the publishers of the Farm Journal by which subscribers to The Restitution can, for a short time, get both papers and any one of the booklets for little more than the cost of the Farm Journal alone, although in spite of its excellence it is one of the cheapest papers published.

The regular price of The Restitution is $1.50 a year.
The regular price of the Farm Journal is $1.00 for five years.
The regular price of the booklets to old subscribers 25c each.
The regular price of two copies "A Letter to a Friend," 20c.

Here is Our Offer--$2.70 Value for $1.50

By special arrangement with the publishers we are able to offer to new subscribers the Farm Journal four full years with choice of any one of the advertised booklets, Money Making Secrets and two copies of a "Letter to a Friend" and The Restitution for one year, all for $1.50.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 17) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 18:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20)? and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." THE MODERN BELSHAZZER

Selected by Sister Georgia Phelps

Where the sullen, dark Euphrates
Wonders through a dreary plain,
In the city of the Persians,
King Belshazzer once held reign.

And the king with pomp and glory,
Called a thousand of his lords,
And in drunken rout and revel,
Drank the wine from off his boards.

When the mirth and shouts were loudest,
There appeared before them all,
Like a strange mysterious portent
A hand writing on the wall.

Then the king was wan with terror,
Trembling, faint, and near to fall,
Weak because he saw the vision,
Of the writing on the wall.

Mene, mene, tekel, peres;
Like the words of doom they call;
Numbered, numbered, weighed, divided,
Says the writing on the wall.

When the morning flushed the city,
Lighting all Chaldean's plain,
It revealed the drunken monarch
Lying there among the slain.

There's another great Belshazzer
Who has feasted all his lords,
Who profane the holy vessels,
[illegible]
words.

He has worshiped gold and silver,
He has cursed Jehovah's name;
Human blood flows from his altars,
Death and hell are in his train.

Now this modern King Belshazzer
Sees a cloud rise like a pall,
See another gloomy portent
God's writing on the wall.

He has seen it in the southland,
He has seen it in the north,
In a thousand notes and speeches
God has sent his message forth.

Needs no prophet great like Daniel,
Even he who runs may read,
Plainly all the warning message,
Even children would take heed.

Mene, numbered are your evils:
Measured is the blood you shed,
Numbered are the tears and sorrows;
Numbered are ranks of dead.

Mene: numbered days are left you;
All thy gold will be in vain,
Thou must soon depart forever,
And a better king shall reign.

Tekel: Weighed are all thy actions,
All thy sins and all thy crime,
Weighed, and now art thou found wanting
For eternity and time.

Peres: All shall be divided;
All thy rule and all thy gain;
Gone forever is thy kingdom,
Christ and truth alone shall reign.

And as King Darius entered Into Babylon of old,
Coming up the water channel
Ere the banquet hall was cold.

So the king of righteous dealing
Soon must come into his own,
Casting down false gods before him,
Sit securely on his throne.

True glory consists in doing what deserves to be written, in writing what deserves to be read, and in so living as to make the world happier and better for our living in it.—Pliny.

WHAT DO THE SCRIPTURES SAY?

Reflections on Prayer

Flora A. Wood

Much has been published lately in The Restitution on the subject of prayer, which I think has caused us all to study the word more closely for the teaching on this subject.

The first thing naturally we turn to is our Lord's instruction to his disciples found in Matthew 6:5, 6. I think we have in the past read this passage something like this: Do not let men hear you pray, whereas our Lord only says in the fifth verse that the hypocrite prayed only to be seen of men, and in the sixth verse he exhorts us to pray only that our Father may hear. We cannot take this passage as a cast iron rule, for if we do, many saints have transgressed it. Look at Paul and Silas! They prayed in the jail at midnight, and what was the result? The prison doors were opened, and the jailer and his family were converted to the truth. Me thinks if Paul had waited until he could get out of prison and into the privacy of his own room, these grand results would not have followed.

We find recorded in the seventh chapter of Acts, sixtieth verse, that another disciple, Stephen the first martyr for the cause of truth, prayed in public with a loud voice. Now it has been said that only once did our Lord pray before a multitude and that time is recorded in John 11:41-42. What did Jesus say? His sixteenth thanks to the Father for hearing him. If the reader will turn to John 6:10-11, he will find that Jesus returned thanks to the Father in the presence of five thousand at another time; and at still another in the presence of three thousand and he address the Father—and on these occasions this was for the very same purpose as at the grave of Lazarus: That those seeing and hearing might believe that Jesus was the Messiah, the one who was to come, the Son of God.

Now, many will say that all the passages quoted show that these were peculiar times, and that the prayers were made under peculiar circumstances and with a certain end in view.

Well, granting all this to be true does it not show that Christs' words to his disciples recorded in Matthew 6:6 was not a cast iron command which could never be deviated from; and are not saints even now to be guided by the circumstances which surround them as to the best way to glorify God?

We should never come to the scriptures with pre-conceived opinions, and then warp and bend God's word to suit our ideas, but we should use our God-given reasoning faculties in the study of truth the same as in that of other subjects.

It seems to me in this age there are times when a few words spoken to the Deity before a body of listeners would be for God's glory. I have heard people say of those believing the things of the kingdom and the name of Jesus, "Why, those people do not believe in prayer: I have been to their meetings and they never prayed." Now if some one "set for the defense of the gospel" was to speak to an audience I think it would be pleasing to our God if the speaker would say, "Friends, let us stand while we address the Creator of all things," and then in reverence speak to our Father briefly.

It would disarm prejudice at the beginning. I am not contending for public prayer as a rule, but only that we have no set command and should be governed by the circumstances in which we are placed as to the best way to glorify God.

Before leaving this part of the subject, I wish to make two quotations which greatly impressed me when studying this matter. They are as follows: "If God is not ashamed to be called our God his children certainly should not be ashamed to call him Father, in public as well as in private." "If our dear Master is a safe pattern to copy, and He prayed, remember, on the cross, right in the presence of and for the motley crowd who murdered him, surely it is proper and right for the spirit of his Son in our hearts to utter supplications, entreaties, and prayers in the same way, and manner."

As to position or posture when approaching the throne of grace, it is like that of prayer, according to condition and surroundings.

Brethren, I doubt not we all feel at times that, like our Redeemer, we would withdraw a little from all the world and fall on our face with strong crying and tears, beseech our Heavenly Father to pardon our sins, and heal our backslidings. It has never been my privilege to meet with brethren in a prayer meeting, but it seems to me naturally brethren would bow together before Jehovah when praying with and for one another. Certainly it would seem proper and convenient for a large or mixed congregation to stand while prayer was made. And as has been so ably shown, the scriptures warrant all these positions in prayer.

I think as a people that seeing the unholy woman on the scarlet colored beast dealing out to those who know not the truth, nor the way of salvation, as a brother aptly puts it, "her twaddling [illegible] and religious [illegible] consolation, which [illegible] spiritual things," we [illegible] gone somewhat to an [illegible] I do not think we speak often enough of these things to each other. I do not think we confess our faults often enough to each other. I do not think we draw near to each other in the bonds of love and the unity of the faith as we should.

It is often difficult to speak of our deepest, most sacred thoughts, but we should be so much members of Christ and of one another that we fulfill the prophecy of Malachi in that we speak often one to another, and exhort one another to love and good works, and so much the more as we see the day approaching.

If we fail of this, as was said in the editorial columns of The Restitution, "We rob ourselves of one of the chief sources of strength." May our Heavenly Father grant that we love one another with a pure heart so fervently that all men may know we are his disciples.

May we ever in honor prefer one another. May we strive earnestly to build one another up in the faith once delivered to the saints. Finally, may we come out entirely from this age that we may shine forth in the kingdom of God in the age to come.

"PASTOR" RUSSELL'S IMAGINARY SERMONS

Printed Reports of Addresses in Foreign Lands That He Never Made.

ONE IN HAWAII A SAMPLE

World Tour "A Huge Advertising Scheme," says Japanese Paper of Expedition

"Pastor" Russell who has found the atmosphere of Brooklyn uncongenial ever since The Eagle published the facts concerning his methods and morals, is making some new records in the far parts of the world. He is delivering sermons to imaginary audiences on tropical islands and is completing "searching investigation" into the missions in China and Japan by spending a few hours in each country.

Following The Eagle's exposure of "Pastor" Russell's Miracle Wheat enterprise and the publication of the testimony on the basis of which Mrs. Russell obtained a separation and alimony the "Pastor" developed the "world tour" idea. He set his printing plant to work to get out advance literature, huge bundles of which were sent to every place where he intended to appear. Then he contracted for advertising space in many American newspapers to print his imaginary sermons.

His first stop after sailing from the Pacific coast was Honolulu. And presto! The newspapers in which advertising space had been engaged print long "cable dispatches" which present the "Pastor's" discourses. In one paper which printed the advertisement the opening sentences read: "Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands—The International Bible Students committee of foreign missions investigation stopped at Honolulu and made observations. Pastor Russell, chairman of the committee, delivered a public address. He had a large audience and attentive hearing." Then follows the sermon, full of local color and allusions to the "Paradise of the Pacific."

"I can now well understand," the printed report makes the Pastor" say, "why your beautiful island has been described as the "Paradise of the Pacific." I note your wonderful climate and everything which contributes to bring about this Paradise likeness." And so on for two columns.

Did Not Deliver Address at Hawaii at All.

It has long been known that Pastor" Russell has a strong [illegible] but it now appears that [illegible] never spoke in Honolulu during the few hours that his ship stopped there to take on coal. In the hope of securing an accurate report of his sermon The Eagle wrote to the editor of the Hawaiian Star, which is published at Honolulu. His reply reads as follows:

In answer to your inquiry of December 19, concerning Pastor Russell, I would say that he was here for a few hours with a Bible students committee of foreign missions investigation, but did not make a public address as was anticipated.

Walter G Smith, Editor,
The Star.

As to the "Pastor's" methods in carrying Russellism to the heathen and the speed with which his "searching investigation into the missions of the world" is being conducted, the Japan Weekly Chronicle of January 11 supplies some interesting information. After explaining how the office of the paper had for weeks been bombarded with Russell literature and advance agents with contracts "just as if the reverend gentleman was an unregenerate theatrical company," the Chronicle says:

"These gentlemen arrived in Japan on Saturday, the 30th of December. On the following day "Pastor" Russell delivered a sermon in Tokyo entitled, "Where are the Dead?" which though the title is a little ambiguous, does not seem to have had any special connection with mission work. On Monday it is to be assumed that the investigation into missionary work in Japan was begun and finished for the next day seems to have been devoted to traveling, and on Wednesday "Pastor" Russell and his coadjutors left Kobe for China in the same vessel in which they had arrived in Yokohama. In this vessel, it seems, they are to proceed to Hongkong, staying a few hours in Shanghai, and from Hongkong the party goes on to the Philippines. It does not appear that more than a few hours are to be given by the committee of investigation to China proper. How much time is to be devoted to the Philippines, to Siam, India, Arabia and the other places we cannot say. * * * The truth is that the expedition is merely a huge advertising scheme."

The "Pastor" has progressed since the above was published. The last "sermon" reported here was delivered at Madras, India, on February 11. While waiting for their shepherd to return the Brooklyn flock is busily stuffing copies of the People's Pulpit into the mail boxes of local residents. —Brooklyn Eagle, Nov. 19, 1912.

LOOK NOT BEHIND YOU

S. Roxann Wince

We are prone to do this; our sins have been so many and so flagrant, that it seems as if we could never blot them from memory or cease weeping over them. But are we not like Lot's wife when we turn to look back?

God has set our feet in the way of escape and there is no time nor room for halting. We have repented; we have come to the cross; we have been forgiven; our sins are remembered no more; henceforth we are to go forward, trusting in Christ and in his power to save. We are safe because we are "in him." Death cannot seize and claim us forever, because the blood of Jesus has been given to us and put on the altar to make an atonement for our souls. If we doubt our forgiveness we doubt the word of the Lord, and will fall in the wilderness, just as did the unbelieving Israelites. Unbelievers will never reach "the rest" promised the children of God. We may feel like Paul, that we are "the chief of sinners," and may bemoan as he did, that "when we would do good evil is present with us," but not with any doubts as to the [illegible] of our [illegible] of present [illegible] [illegible] fare against sin. For God through Christ is able to deliver us "from the body of this death"—this dead man of sin that is still struggling to regain his power over us, and to make us come off more than conquerors, who "walk not after the flesh but after the spirit."

Our faith receives a righteous
That makes the sinner just.

Whom he called them also justified." We have been made "free from sin," free from the law of sin and of death, and, married to Christ, have become servants of God, have our fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life. Is this not enough? When God says we are free, it is not so? When he promises will he not perform?

There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus—providing the walk is right. Let there be no sinful looking back, but a constant pressing forward toward the mark of the prize of the high calling that is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

GOLD DUST.

God never fails those who wait for him, nor forsakes those who work for him.

We are too much in the habit of thinking of God as if he were very far off, and having little to do with our humble daily affairs on earth. We forget that in him we live and move, and have being. That he is near enough to help us in our perplexities as well as in our temptations, if we will only ask him.

We may be quite sure of three things—first, that whatsoever our Lord commands us, he really means us to do; secondly, that whatever he commands us is for our good always; and thirdly, that whatsoever he commands us, he is able and willing to enable us to do, for all God's biddings are enablings.

Unkind words are sharper than swords. If you cut your finger there is but temporary pain. If your heart is hurt with sarcasm or brutal speech, the suffering continues as long as your memory is working. Since we all know the agony of injured feelings, it certainly behooves us to be sparing with stinging conversation.

AMONG THE BRETHERN.

Charles Clifford Maple.

Bro. James T. Auld who resides in the city of Ulrichsville, this state, and who has shown much interest in the cause of truth, has invited Bro. Huggins and myself to visit that city when we can so arrange our dates, and deliver a series of Bible lectures in the city hall.

We hope to comply with Bro. Auld's request and accept his kind invitation and spend a week in his city. We hope much good may result from the effort.

There are many open doors where we can preach the word. Pray for us, brethren, that we may find time and have strength to spread the gospel of the kingdom in many of these places during the coming months. Let me say to those who have written us that all calls will be answered D. V. as soon as we can so plan our work.

At this writing we are home planning for another trip through the state in the interests of the work. Address me at North Ridgeville, O.

EDITORIAL

It is often more difficult to be silent than to speak; but silence is often the best answer.

Love and honesty are things to be seen rather than protested. When a man professes them much it is likely he is trying to create a credit which his life would not produce.

On account of the inaccuracy of most men's perceptions and the malice of most men's minds, rumor is rarely truth. Hearsay is always half falsehood—sometimes wholly so.

Always do a good turn when possible. It will be of benefit to you some day. Even if it does not no evil can come of it, and it is always a satisfaction in the darkness of brief mortal life to strike a light when you can.

External ornament has its place for God is the maker of flowers, humming birds and peacocks. But the place is low in the scale of being. Highly ornamented human beings are lacking as a rule in those mental qualities that constitute the true grace of man or woman.

It is easier to destroy than to make. It is easier to find fault than to be correct. The censorious are rarely faultless; and in the history of the world, the men who have lived to any purpose are those who have looked pitifully on weakness and been severest on their own shortcomings.

A slanderer thinks not of the mischief he does. He speaks for the pleasure it affords to his own vindictive feeling. He is a brother to the "busybody in other men's matters." Both are avoided at last, except by fellow scorpions. Good men are contented to bless others, and are silent on the evil even concerning their enemies.

Declaring that his visit to the Ohio State Conference was the "best time of his life," Brother J. H. Anderson continues his letter by saying: "On the evening of October 17th, I am to meet the pastor of the First Baptist church of Pelzer, S. C., in public discussion on the punishment of the wicked, and ask the prayers of yourself and church that the truth may triumph. I am sending today four new subscribers to The Restitution; have already sent five." The Lord bless our Brother in his contention for the faith, his efforts to extend the influence and circulation of The Restitution, and his every effort to serve the Lord and his truth. He has our prayers.

Four Immovable Pillars—There are four grand arguments for the truth of the Bible. The first the miracles on record; the second the prophecies; the third the goodness of the doctrine; and the fourth the moral character of the penman. The miracles flow from the divine power; the prophecies from the divine understanding; the excellencies of the doctrine from the divine goodness; the characters of the writers from moral purity. Thus Christianity is built upon these four immovable pillars—the power, the understanding, the goodness and the purity of God.

Inspiration—Festus was not an inspired man, and, therefore, what he said to Paul was not the language of inspiration, but the writing that tells us what he said is the writing of inspiration. No man, speaking by inspiration, would have said to the apostle of the Gentiles "Paul thou art beside thyself, much learning doth make thee mad" (Acts xxvi:24). The case is exactly as you suppose—a case in which, what uninspired Festus said, has found a place in the inspired records of events; just as the speech of Gamaliel (Acts v:35-39); the cry of the Jews when they found Paul in the temple (Acts xxi:28); or the question afterwards put to the apostle by the chief captain (xxi:38); or what the scribes, Pharisees, lawyers, Sadducees, and chief priests said upon so many occasions in the course of Christ's ministry of the Word of the kingdom; or what the serpent said to Eve; or the message of Sanballat to Nehemiah; or the blasphemous speech of Sennacherib, before the walls of Jerusalem, etc., etc.; all of which, being thus incorporated with the Scripture, constitute elements of the inspired record; for, what inspiration did not originate (as in these instances), it has at least had to do with recording; for, even when the apostles were put upon their defence before the authorities, they were under no necessity to take the least thought about what they were going to say; whatever might be necessary was given to them by the Spirit in the very hour of their need; for, says Christ, "it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Spirit" (Mark xiii:11)—"not ye that speak but the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you" (Matt. x:19-20). If the apostles were not fit to be left to themselves, in the mere matter of giving evidence in their own defence, how much less fit they must have been given such an ample account of the whole matter, as we have in the New Testament. What to leave out, and what to include, in this permanent record of so many sayings and doings, it was only possible for the Spirit to decide.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

I am sending 25 cents in stamps for which please mail to my address twelve copies of your sermon, "The Death of Christ." I read it in The Restitution, and thought it simply grand. I want others to see it and be benefited by it.

Sincerely,
MRS CHAS. C. EZELL.

THE COMING OF ELIJAH

A Sermon by the Editor of The Restitution, delivered at Salem, O., before the Ohio Conference, August 25, 1912, and stenographically reported by Sister Gertrude Nutt.

Text:—"Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse" (Malachi 4:4-6).

Brethren, Sister and Friends:

It is sometimes the case, indeed it is often the case, that a text of Scripture cannot be correctly read or expounded without taking into consideration the modifying and amplifying influence of the entire chapter where it occurs. Such a text is the one today about the sending of Elijah the prophet, and the work he is to do after he comes. That we may have the benefit of the context and all that is contained about the subject in the chapter, I will give you

I. An Analysis of the Chapter.

First, the coming of Jesus Christ is expressed in the second verse as the "Sun of righteousness rising with healing in his wings." Secondly, a great burning day that "shall burn as an oven" and which will be introduced into the world by the sun of righteousness. His rays will go forth in resurrection power and bring from the dead, not only the just, but also the unjust. In Matt. 13:38 Christ speaks of the wicked as seed; so when the Son of Man arises with healing in his wings, the beams of light from his divine presence strikes down into the grave and brings to life the ungodly, or they could not be burned up "root and branch" as the first verse declares. I will say here in passing, that the resurrection of the unjust is simultaneous with the resurrection of the just; bad seed come up as quickly under the laws of nature as good seed; weeds as soon as corn. The "sun of righteousness" will not have to shine a thousand years before the wicked come to life.

Thirdly, the resurrection of the saints. When the sun of righteousness shines out and quickens into life the ungodly, the beams of light flashing out of his sides (Hab. 3:4) will have a healing effect upon the saints, for the dead "grow up" from their graves like seed, and "go forth" with the living to tread down the ungodly.

Fourthly, the coming of Elijah. The prophet takes the trouble in the latter part of the chapter to give the name of one by way of preeminence among the risen ones namely, Elijah the prophet, and then dilates upon his work subsequent to "this great dreadful day of the Lord," stating that it will be Israelitish in its nature: "He will turn the hearts of the fathers to the children," and thus do a great work of righteousness in the earth.

Now we want to study for a while the remarkable prophecy, "I will send you Elijah the prophet before the great day of the Lord comes." Many simple things in the Bible have been made the most difficult. Truth is not difficult, but perversions of the truth have mystified the people, and the result is we have this beclouding theory in regard to the coming of Elijah; Elijah by some process of transmigration comes to be somebody else! It is a popular belief that Elijah somehow managed to turn into John the Baptist. Wonderful process. A few years since we had in Chicago a man called John Alexander Dowie, and he claimed to be Elijah the Third. The text says that Elijah the prophet is to come, but somehow or other we have discovered that he cannot come; that a prophecy about Elijah must not be a personal prophecy. We are told that John the Baptist is meant, John Dowie, and so on and so on. But

II. John the Baptist and Elijah are subjects of separate prophecies. "I will send you Elijah the prophet" Mal. 4:5). Here is a prophecy that declares Elijah will be sent. Here is one distinct prophecy about Elijah, and there are other prophecies about John the Baptist. One is found in Malachi 3:1, which reads, "I will send my messenger." Another is in Isaiah 40:3, "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." Here are prophecies about John the Baptist; they are the prophecies that the New Testament quotes and applies to John. Nowhere in the New Testament is there a quotation of the prophecy of the coming of Elijah applied to John the Baptist. To show you that this is correct, let me read Matt. 3:3, "For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight," quoted from Isaiah 40:3. "The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord, make straight in the desert a highway for our God." Mark 1:2, "As it is written in the prophets, behold I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee," quoted from Malachi 3:1, "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts." And in the third chapter of Luke 3:3, "And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins; as it is written in the book of Esaias the prophet, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. Every valley shall be exalted and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth."

In John 1:23 John was asked who he was and he says, "I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord, as said the prophet Esaias." In the Old Testament we have a prophecy about the coming of Elijah, also prophecies about the coming of John the Baptist. We have these two men; we have two distinct lines of prophecy concerning them, and therefore ltm ust necessarily be that they must have a separate and u personal fulfillment.

In harmony with this thought we find that the Jews in Christ's day expected a literal and personal fulfillment of the prophecy about Elijah's coming.

In the 16th chapter of Matthew we have in the 14th verse the statement, "Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some, Elias, and others Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Here we find, then, an expectation on the part of Christ's contemporaries that Elias and Jeremias and other prophets would apper again. We find in Matt. 17:10-12, "And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come? And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall come, and restore all things. But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise shall also the Son of Man suffer of them." Notice, John the Baptist had already come when Jesus was talking in this interview, and yet after his appearance the Savior says that Elijah must come.

John's coming did not, from the Lord's standpoint, fulfill the prophecy of Elijah's coming. Confirmation of this explanation is found in John 1:19, "And this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, Who art thou? And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ. And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No." John denied being Christ; he denied being Elijah as emphatically as he did being the Messiah; therefore it is impossible that John the Baptist could have fulfilled the prophecy about the coming of Elijah.

Before leaving this part of my subject, however, let me observe that there were similarities between Elijah and John; they were not identical as persons, but there were similarities between them; which accounts for the statement in Matt. 17:11-12. The reason the Savior could say that "Elijah is come already," is given in Matt. 11:11-15 where we read "Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist: notwithstanding, he that is least of the kingdom of heaven is greater than he. And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

For all the prophets and the law prophesied unto John. And if ye will receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come. He hath ears to hear let him hear" In Luke 1:17 we have this further explanation given, "And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just; to make ready a people prepared for the Lord."

In II Kings we have the statement that when the King of Moab sent messengers to Elijah he called down fire from heaven and they were burned up. And in 2nd Kings 2:9-16 a whirlwind carried him up into heaven, and as he went up Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me. The spirit and power of Elijah passed on to Elias, and on to John the Baptist; and I may go farther and say that upon every true Christian there rests "the spirit and power of Elijah" to some extent.

For in James 5:16, when he is exhorting the brethren to confess their faults one to another, and to pray one for another that they may be healed, the apostle says that the fervent prayer of a right eous man availeth much, and then declares, "Elijah prayed that it might not rain, and it rained not on the earth for three years and six months. And he prayed again and the heaven gave rain, and the earth brought forth her fruit."

Here the power of Elijah's spirit and the efficacy of his prayers, thank God, are possible actualities for all the people of God. No wonder then "the Spirit and power of Elijah" were transmitted to John the Baptist: they are for all followers of Jesus Christ.

Turning again to our text, it distinctly says that when the great and terrible day of the Lord comes, there shall come out of his sides bright gleams of light (Heb. 3:4, mar.); they go down into the darkness of hades. It says distinctly that simultaneously with this great day, or at least in quick succession with it, Elijah the prophet is to appear again. Elijah the prophet does not mean John the Baptist, John Alexander Dowie, or anybody else; it means Elijah the prophet.

III. There is nothing incongruous about Elijah's reappearance and the assumption of his prophetic office in the earth: all of God's saints will grow up out of their graves and will go forth with the living saints at the resurrection, immortal governors of the earth and coadjutors of Jesus Christ in the administration of his kingdom. To show you that this proposition is God's truth, let me invite your attention to Isaiah 32:1, "Behold a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment." All agree that the King that is to reign is Jesus Christ; but this text shows that there is associated with Christ "princes" in the administration of the government. There are to be princedoms in the kingdom of God. Who are these princes?

In Jeremiah 3:15 we read, "And I will give you pastors according to mine heart, which shall feed you with knowledge and understanding." When is he going to give these pastors? In the 17th verse we read, "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem: neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil heart." When Christ returns and becomes the King of all the earth; when Jerusalem becomes the throne of the Lord, his saints are princes—they are pastors after his own heart, they feed the people with knowledge and with understanding; and the blessed result is they turn away from the imagination of their evil hearts.

I find in Jer. 23:3-8 an amplification of this thought, "And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds, and they shall be fruitful and increase. And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them: and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking, saith the Lord. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a righteous branch, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness. Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt, but, the Lord liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land." Jerusalem shall be saved, and the branch and king associates with himself in this grand work princes, pastors and rulers. Is it strange, then, that Elijah should reappar at such a time to assist in the work?

While I have been reading to you some scriptures of prophecy which are general, let us become particular and show that God has actually mentioned certain saints by name as participants with him in kingly honor. Let me have your attention now to Ezekiel 34:23-24, which reads, I will set 1 shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I the Lord will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; I the Lord have spoken it." Here he specifically states that David is to be one of the princes, shepherds and pastors, while in Ezek. 37:22 he says, "And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one King shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all." "And," continues verse 24, "David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes and do them." Now David had died a long time before this promise was made. How is it possible then for him to reappear and be a shepherd over the Israelitish people? People say, "I thought David had died and gone to heaven and was praising God there on a harp; it sounds ridiculous that a time is coming when David is coming back to earth again to be a shepherd and King in Israel."

Well, friends, I find in Jeremiah 30: 7-9 inclusive these words, "Alas! for that day is great, so that none is like it; it is even the time of Jacob's trouble; but he shall be saved out of it. For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck, and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves of him: but they shall serve the Lord their God, and David their king, whom I will raise up unto them." Oh I see now: David must he "raised up unto them." The dead saints of God must he raised from the dead and associated with Christ in the official capacity of kings and rulers. In the third chapter of Hosea we have this declaration made at the 4th and 5th verses, "For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim: afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days." David was a type of Christ but here after the Lord their God, is mentioned, David, their king comes in for special and additional emphasis, which means Jesus Christ is coming back, David and all the saints of God will be raised up, and as God's princes and pastors in the earth they will formulate laws from Jerusalem, the capital city, that will rule the world in righteousness.

That we make no mistake in regard to our position in this matter we will turn to the New Testament for corroborative testimony. In Matt. 19:28, 29, the Savior in addressing his disciples, said, "Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.

And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold and shall inherit everlasting life." Peter had asked Christ what reward they were to have for the sacrifice they had made. Now was the time to say, "You will go to heaven when you die" if that were true; now is the time for him to say, "You will go to the celestial city." If that is so; now is the time for him to say, "You will go up in the clouds and play harps." If that is so; but instead of saying anything like this he says, "Your which have followed me in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, you also shall sit upon twelve thrones, ruling the twelve tribes of Israel," and adds in the concluding verse of the chapter that those who forsake everything for his name's sake shall receive, in the world to come, "eternal life." The reward, then, that the New Testament holds up to us eternal life and a position described as rulership over the twelve tribes of Israel.

In Matt. 8:11 we read that many shall come from the north, and from the south, and from the east, and from the west, and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob, in the Kingdom of God. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are dead.

Believers are few now, but brethren and sisters, when these few are gathered up from Abel down through the centuries; when they come from the north, and from the south, and from the east, and from the west and sit down in the Kingdom of God in royal repose, we will be a very respectable company, numerous beyond computation (Rev. 7:9). We will not only be numerous, but as kings and priests we are going to make trouble on the earth for somebody!

In Luke 13:28 Abraham, Isaac and Jacob appear in the kingdom of God. These dead men are not only going to reappear and take position of power, but are going to administrate power in a very effectual way, as appears from Luke 22:29-30, "And I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me; that ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and sit on thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." It is comforting to me to think that we will be somebody there; that we will "eat and drink," that we will enjoy ourselves; that we will not be ghosts. He says we will eat and drink in the kingdom, and sit on thrones and judge the twelve tribes of Israel. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Elijah—these men of pre-eminent piety—are, singled out by name and personally mentioned as being in the kingdom of God as administrators of its laws. What is the use of trying to transmute the soul of Elijah into John the Baptists, John Alexander Dowie, or anybody else when the prophet himself will be there shining like the sun in the kingdom of the Father? Oh, the simplicity of the truth and its marvelous reality!

In Rev. 2:26 Christ makes this promise, "And he that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him I give power over the nations." Overcomers, he says, are to have "power over the nations,' and rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers; even as I received of my Father. When Christ was born it was said Luke 1:51-53, "He hath showed strength with his arm; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree. He hath filled the hungry with good things, and the rich he hath sent empty away. He hath helped his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy."

When Elijah appears on the scene; when Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the saints of God come to hold the reigns of government, and send Rockefeller and Morgan and all the millionaires empty away, and fill the purses of the poor, they will know we are somebody; they will know that these prophecies are not mere dreams and delusions, but wonderful realities. In Rev. 10:11 we have this statement made to John the seer, "Thou must prophesy again before many peoples, and nations, and tongues, and kings." He was only permitted to come back from exile for a brief time before his death, but God has promised to him through Jesus Christ that he will "prophesy again before many peoples and tongues, and nations." He died without realizing the fulfillment of promise, therefore he must be raised from the dead and resume his office of teaching in order to its accomplishment.

He will then prophecy again to the nations that are angry, and Gods wrath will have come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great; and should est destroy them which destroy the earth.

When this grand day in the world's history comes, all the dead, from Abel down, will be rewarded —the least to the greatest are to be rewarded and glorified together.

This leads me to say that in Matthew 16 God in advance of the kingdom defacto has given us a picture of it. You know when we are talking to children about a subject that is difficult for their feeble minds to grasp, we use pictures, we give them illustrations of the grand reality so they can form at least some conception of its grandeur, So God has promised us the kingdom of God, rulership in the earth, the administration of divine laws. But finite minds cannot take hold of the grandeur of all this promise, so he comes to us in advance of the reality and gives it to us in minature. In Matt. 16: 27 he says, "For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." Then follows the glories of the mount of transfiguration.

Peter, James and John represent those who are alive when the Savior comes, and Moses and Elias, one representing the law and the other the prophetic age, represent the dead of past ages. When the Savior comes in his glory, he is resplendent with the brightness of his Father's image and the first thing he does is to "touch" those who are alive and change them in a moment into incorruption, the nature in which the dead have been raised. The living and the dead are glorified together.

We have here, then, a picture of the Kingdom of God as it will appear when the Savior comes; and brethren and sisters we are to come from the north, and from the south and from the east, and from the west, and with all the prophets, shine out with the majesty and glory of the mount of transfiguration. Oh, there will go out from the sun of righteousness "wings" of healing that will go down into the grave and bring all the saints to life; and then he will "touch" the living into the immortal nature. Then Brother Neill, the simple man, the humble man, will come to life; and Brother Anderson, the eloquent man, the mighty man of God, whose voice has been stilled for years, will stand up in the might of his strength and resume his work. We will have the grandest fraternal gathering in all the world, and one that will last through the ages! The Lord bless us and bring us to this glad time, is my prayer.

OBITUARY

R. B. Prutzman

Ralph Buker Prutman, son of Brother and Sister Dan Prutzman, of Nashville, Oregon, was born December 19, 1910, and died September 23, 1912.

Little Ralph was never a very strong child and died very suddenly of pneumonia. We buried him in the Summit Cemetery.

A. W. DARBY.

M. S. Darby

Marcus S. Darby, born in Doniphan county, Kansas, May 10th, 1869, died at Corvallis, Oregon, September 25, 1912, aged 43 years, 4 months and 15 days.

At the age of thirteen he moved with his parents from Doniphan county to Andersen county, where the family resided four years. In 1886 they went to Grant county, remaining there three years; then they moved to Harper county, where they lived until 1892, at which time the opening up of the Cherokee Strip in Oklahoma took place. Marcus, having reached maturity, seized this opportunity and secured a homestead. In 1896 he entered the service of the bridge and building department of the S. F. R. R. Co. He remained with this company nine years, during which time he became a foreman. On application the Sante Fe Company permitted him to enter the train service as brakeman, which position he held for two years.

In 1909 Marcus came to Corvallis, and on July 1 of that year was united in marriage to Mrs. Alice Marhofer. Soon after he entered the service of the C. & E. R. R. Co. and again became a brakeman on a Corvallis passenger train. On September 25, 1912, he was suddenly killed while in the act of switching a moving car. He leaves a wife, a mother, five brothers, two sisters and many relatives and friends to mourn his loss. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer.

Oh why should he be dead? we sadly ask,
While other men still live and labor here;
Why should he die with uncompleted task
And leave his home so desolate and drear?
In vain we will recall the words he spoke
And hold them sacred in our memory,
Day after day, night after night, awake
To find him not where once he use to be,
How often in life's journey it is thus:
We meet with those we love and part again
And do not realize their worth to us
'Til they are not and we alone remain.

Perry Lankston

Perry Lankston was born near Palestine, Ill., November 8, 1866, died September 15, 1912, aged 45 years, 7 months, and 28 days. He was married in 1892 to Miss Joanna Mackey. To this union six children were born, of which four with the wife and two half- brothers and one sister, are left to mourn. Mr. Lankston joined the Christian Church in Illinois, but upon hearing the gospel in truth, soon became a believer, never saw the importance of being reimmersed. He was a man of fine character, having no enemies, but a host of friends, as the large attendance at the funeral attested. The writer spoke to this large crowd on the only hope of the dead, the resurrection. We were neighbors of Mr. Lankston for a number of years and feel keenly the loss of a true friend. He left to his family that legacy that is above rubies or gold—a good name.

THE PARABLE OF THE TEN VIRGINS AND ITS LESSON

(Concluded)

To enforce this lesson, the parable of the ten virgins was spoken. Such being the case, the point of significance is not the circumstance that virgins are introduced or that their number was ten. These are only the details of the picture. The point of significance in the parable is, that when the cry was raised "Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," the wise virgins were ready to enter along with the bridegroom into the marriage, while the others, in consequence of not being ready at the proper time, arrived too late, and "the door was shut."

The lesson of the parable is a solemn and important one to all who profess to be looking for the return of the Lord from heaven. 'The Lord is coming!" we say and sing. Were he to come now, are we ready to meet him, and to enter in with him into his joy?

To aid in our self examination, notice the reason why the foolish virgins were excluded.

1. That reason was not their being asleep when the approach of the bridegroom was announced. "They all slumbered and slept," yet five of them were ready to enter the banqueting hall at the proper time; and did enter with the bridegroom into the marriage. Had they all been ready to meet the bridegroom when he came, the circumstance of their having fallen asleep would not have hindered any of them from entering along with him. But these five found their lamps were going out; and while they went to buy oil, the bridegroom came, and before they returned, "the door was shut."

2. The cause of the exclusion was not that they did not believe that the bridegroom was coming. They all "took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom" (v. 1).

I call attention to this, because the counterpart of the foolish virgins is sometimes alleged to be those who deny the Lord's premillennial advent. A very serious error indeed; but whatever may be the fate of such, when the Lord does come, they are not among the parties represented in this parable, and, so far as believing is concerned the virgins are alike.

3. Neither was the lack of knowledge the cause of their exclusion. It has sometimes been said that the oil represents knowledge; but that must be a mistake, for the communication of knowledge does not diminish it; and the reasons which the wise virgins gave for not giving some of their oil to those whose lamps were going out, was: "Lest there be not enough for us and you." If the oil represents anything, it must be something that one cannot spare to another—something the whole of which one needs for himself.

4. The cause of the exclusion was their not being ready—ready to enter into the marriage-chamber when the bridegroom came; and the lesson of the parable to us is, that, if we are not in a condition of readiness when the Lord comes, it will be too late for us to prepare then.

But what are we to understand by readiness? "Who shall abide the day of his coming? Who shall stand when he appeareth?" Need I say that the readiness referred to is personal character? "Living soberly, righteously and godly." Doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly with our God. Denying ourselves to all ungodliness and worldly desires. Abstaining from all appearance of evil. Only those so living shall be ready to enter into the joy of the Lord at his coming, and be found of him in peace.

True it is written that, "Unto them who look for him, will he appear unto salvation;" but this promise like many others, is conditional. It assumes that those who look for him, are also ready, prepared to enter with him into the marriage. Doing his will, and carefully avoiding whatever is offensive in his sight.

Most heartily do I believe that we are saved by grace that nothing we can do, however good in itself, can form the ground of a sinner's acceptance with God; but it is also true that, if we live after the flesh we shall die. Most emphatically does the apostle Paul, after naming a catalogue of evil practices, affirm that, "they who do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap. He that soweth to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the spirit shall of the spirit reap life everlasting."

Unless ready in this sense when the Lord comes, we shall find ourselves in a position corresponding to that of the foolish virgins, when "the door was shut."

I find some commentators on this parable, holding out the idea that the case of those foolish virgins, and, by consequence, those who will correspond to them at the coming of the Lord, is not hopeless. And this idea is based on the fact that their lamps had not gone, but were going out, according to the revised New Testament. But surely this is no part of the Lord's teaching in the parable before us. Whether their lamps had gone, or were merely going out, the result was the same. In either case they were unprepared to enter with the bridegroom; and though they tried to prepare themselves then, it was too late. "The door was shut," and knocking and pleading were unavailing. Let us, therefore be ready—ready now, "for we know neither the day nor the hour when the Son of Man cometh!"

So far, my words have been words of warning to those who are looking for the return of the Lord from heaven. But we have also words of cheer. Those who were ready went in with the bridegroom into the marriage festival! Oh, what joy and gladness do those words represent! The storms of life all past, and gone forever. Perfect peace, perfect love, and perfect purity, the full enjoyment of the Redeemer's joy. All this, to an extent beyond our conception, is in store for those who are found of the Christ at his coming, walking "not after the flesh, but after the spirit." Courage, ye faithful ones, the night is far spent, the day is at hand. Be patient, therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh.—W. Laing.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE

Quarterly Meeting, October 25

The Michigan Conference Quarterly meeting will be held at Coats Grove beginning October 25 and continuing over the following Sunday. As Coats Grove is so centrally located, we are aiming to make this a large meeting, to be remembered for its spiritual uplift and lasting benefits. To accomplish this we need every brother's and sister's co-operation. Make plans now to attend. Come and invite your friends.

We expect Bro. L. E. Conner, of Cleveland, Ohio, to be one of the speakers. Don't fail to hear him, if it be possible. Coats Grove is reached via the C. K. & S. Ry. connecting at Hastings, Kalamazoo, or Woodbury of if, Bazoo, or Woodbury, or if Bro. A. K. Richardson, Hastings, R. F. D. be notified in time, anyone will be met at Hastings with conveyance adequate for the transportation across the country to Coats Grove.

All interested are earnestly entreated to come to the feast of good things from the word of God.

Your sister in Christ,
ROSE, MILLER,
Secretary.

EVANGELISTS REPORT.

The following is a report of the financial part of the Ohio Conference Evangelistic work for the month of September, 1912. A report of the places visited and work done has appeared under the notes, "Among the Brethern" each week in The Restitution. We shall be pleased to hear from any of the brethern regarding the state work.

C. C. MAPLE.

P. S.—You will notice that our collections have taken care of the expenses, and I think after we get started they will more than do this.

Offerings

At Jacksonville meeting	$11.00
Other receipts	17.00
Sale of song books	.55
Total	$28.55

(About one hundred copies of "The Death of Christ" were sold during the month Bro. Maple being active in the work, but not reported here, because of interest only to The Restitution Publishing Co.—Editor).

BEREAN DEPARTMENT.

Dear Bereans:

The name we bear is very suggestive, because they were more noble in that they searched the Scriptures daily. Do we follow their example? Is the word of God to us as Jeremiah says, "Thy words were found, and I did eat them. Thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of my heart, I am called by the name, O Lord God of Hosts (Jer. 15:16). The Psalmist also says (Psa. 19:10), "More to be desired are they than gold, yes, than much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and the honey-comb."

Dear Bereans, permit me to exhort you to a daily reading of God's word, especially you who have children growing up around you. We are exhorted by the apostle to bring up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. How can we do that unless we read the word of God with our children? You remember they said of Timothy that he knew the Scriptures from childhood. Do not stop your bible reading with the mere Berean book lesson. If I had the means I would like to place in the hands of every Berean a little book called, "How to Master the English Bible." It has proved a great help to me. It can be had from the Bible Institute and Colportage Association, 826 La Salle avenue, Chicago, Ill.

My dear fellow Bereans, I now commend you to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up and give you an entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Amen.

Your brother in the Blessed Hope.

M. T. ASLAKSEN.

Dear Bereans:

I think too much cannot be said in regard to the coming of Christ and our preparation to meet him. The signs of the times portray his advent near, prophecy is fast being fulfilled. There is unrest in the world, such as never before men's hearts failing them for fear of the things that are coming upon the earth. But we have cause for great rejoicing. We should be the happiest people on the earth. What could cause any one more happiness than to have the hope of being a joint heir with Jesus Christ?

There is a great work for each of us to do. The isolated ones may feel that they cannot do much, but I think they can do as much as anybody. I believe in systematic giving. If we would all set aside a stipulated amount of our income each week, (and give as much as we could beside), we might always be ready to respond to any calls that may come to help carry on the Lord's work. I am personally acquainted with a sister in Ohio, who sets aside a tenth of her income, and I never knew of a call for help that she was not able to respond to.

There are so many ways of preaching the gospel. Distributing tracts is one, but I thing the weekly visit of our religious paper has brought many to a knowledge of the gospel, and has since been their instructor. If each of us would send the paper for six months to some one whom we think is interested in the things concerning the kingdom of God, or send its equivalent to the Helping Fund, we might be the means of bringing some one out of Babylon.

One thing that grieves me very much is that a few of the isolated ones will mix with the other churches by communing with them. My dear young brethern, I beseech of you not to do this. Let us set the example to others by keeping ourselves separate from those who believe and teach the serpent's lie.

Dear Bereans, I fell that the time is short in which to work. Let us so live that we may ever be ready to welcome the Prince of Peace when he comes to take his great power and reign.

May the Lord bless you in the good work you are doing.

Your sister in Christ,
H. M. BARBER.

"But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the son of man be" (Matt. 24:37).

"And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually," (Gen. 6:5).

"The earth also was corrupt before God; and the earth was filled with violence, and God looked upon the earth and behold it was corrupt; for all flesh had corrupted his way upon the earth." (Gen. 6:11-12).

"But as the days of Noah were," the wickedness of man was great and God saw that every imagination of the thoughts of man's heart were only evil continually—"So shall the coming of the son of man be." According to these Scriptures, are we not living in the time of our Lord's soon coming? Is not the wickedness of man great and their hearts filled with evil continually today?

Our daily papers are filled with reports of murder, strife, oppression, and innumerable crimes. The outlook in the world never presented so wholly an un-Christian spectacle.

Some are saying, What does it all mean, these perilous times? If they would read Matt. 24:37 and other Scripture in connection with it and believe, they would not be in darkness. It is only to the wicked that the Lord comes as a thief in the night. In spite of these facts it is preached from the popular pulpits that the world is growing better.

Some people have an aversion to the thought of the coming of the son of man, thinking of it as the end of the world, instead of the end of sin and sorrow. We should not look forward to this time in any other way than with grateful hearts and thanksgiving. The words of a hymn come to my mind in this connection:

Oh how unlike the present world
Will be the one to come!
"Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." (1 Cor. 2:9).

I see no sickness, anguish or sorrow there; no open graves to entomb our loved ones; no broken hearts caused by intemperance. I see peace, joy and gladness and loved ones long parted meet to be eternally together.

We read that Noah did all that God commanded him, and was saved. (Gen. 6:22). Let us who are of the light be as Noah was, trusting in the word of God, and preparing ourselves for the coming of our Lord and Savior, telling it to the world whereby we may save some sister, some brother, so they will not be on the outside when the door is closed and it is too late to enter.

My dear Bereans, let us so live that we will not have to utter the cry of anguish, "Lord, Lord, open to us."

We know not the day or hour when the Lord will come, but know that the time draweth nigh.

EDNA B. ANDERSON.

However good you may be, you have faults, however dull you may be, you can find out what some of them are; and, however slight they may be, you had better make some effort to get quit of them.—John Ruskin.

EVANGELISTIC NOTICE

To the Brethren scattered abroad:

I expect to start in the general evangelistic work October 10th. Same as last year, will go wherever I have a call, take whatever is given as a free will offering. Have calls at present from Nebraska and Texas. Write me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, if you want meetings. Will go to the Atlantic or Pacific coast from Texas.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

To the brethren scattered abroad:

I will make engagements to preach anywhere (D. V.), beginning in Nov. to March. I have been laboring for over fifty years to make people better acquainted with the teachings of the Scriptures in many parts of the world; I will speak every night when it is desirable to do so.

Address Dr. H. Wallace Mason, Box 259 St. Catherines, Ont. Can.

JUBILEE HARPS WANTED

Will any person or church, having one copy or more than one copy of The New Jubilee Harp, that he is willing to sell, please communicate with Mr. Chas. Blevey, 623 North Willow avenue, Austin station, Chicago, Ill., stating the number of books for sale, the condition of books and the price of same.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Winee, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be mentioned.

The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Winee, Pierceton, Ind.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST

A sermon by the Editor of The Restitution. If you have friends who have immortal souls, present them with a copy of this sermon, and it will cast out the unclean spirit. One copy, 3 cents; two copies, 5 cents; twelve copies, 25 cents. Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, O.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

Charles Clifford Maple.

EDITOR'S APPOINTMENTS

Correspondents, particularly those who write for publication, will please note our address and preaching appointments on the following dates: Springfield, O., care Bro. A. E. Overholser, Oct. 15 to 18; Casey, Ill., care Bro. Lewis Weaver, Oct. 19 to 27, and West Lebanon, Ind., care Sister S. J. Whitten, Oct. 28 to Nov. 3.

When a grain of corn dropped into the soil becomes a full ear, when the apple seed makes a tree, loaded season after season with delicious fruit, we see the old miracle repeated, the little made much.

Leaders of great movements are remembered longer for what they were than for what they did. Multitudes can tell today what Mr. Gladstone was who cannot recite what he did.

To drink neither wine nor strong drink is becoming more and more an essential for the man who is to do great things in the world, whether for himself or for God.

Good is slow, it ascends; evil is rapid, it descends; what wonder that it should make much way in a little time.—Madame Swetchine

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16. Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38; 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or quit the pulpit.

Teach the Scriptures, not foolishness. Honor God and the Savior.—B. S. Driggs.

Great Combination Offer
OF "THE RESTITUTION"
GET THESE
Money-making Secrets
WITH Farm Journal

In this cock graphically titled "Poultry Secrets" tells how to carry lowls, and many other secrets for more profit.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says ROY CRABBET, Illinois. "What it tells would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes F. J. RICKSON, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 300 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck-raising," says F. M. WARNOCK, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-Book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says E. W. MANSFIELD, New York.

T. F. MCCREA, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden this summer. I lost my health in the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting near to the soil. After a long tussle with the Chinese language and mission problems, it is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, trees, chickens, etc. I find FARM JOURNAL indispensable."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. POTTER, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. GLADWIN, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes MRS. JOE LAWRENCE, Saskatchewan. "I was never successful in growing cabbage until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes DR. WILLIAM DAVIS, New Jersey. When the first copy came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to seem like home. When it arrives, I feel the gladness jump right into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until bedpost time, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. I. STOUT, a Virginia bank clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL, I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. WETZEL, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."
These booklets are 6 by 9 inches, all profusely illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of discoveries and methods of successful poultrymen, long jealously guarded. It gives Felch's famous mating chart, the Curtiss method of raising one-half more pullets than cockerels, Boyer's method of insuring fertility, with priceless secrets of mating, breeding, feed and feeding, how to produce winter eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "doctoring," "plugging," cocaine and gasoline doping, and other tricks of "jockeys" and sprinklers, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse. It also gives many valuable training, feeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $15,000 a year, mainly from eggs. All back-yard chicken-raisers will learn about the "Hargenus Unit," and how Foster FEEDS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest fall-bearing strawberries almost until snow flies. It gives you the fruits of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and pinching-removing to produce berries in the fall, tells inside facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how one farmer gets 10,000 quarts an acre and sells it cents a quart, etc. E. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who can grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Prof. Holden, the "Corn King," tells how to get ten to twenty bushels more per acre of corn rich in protein and the best stock-feeding elements. Pictures make every process plain.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of seven cows that produced half a ton of butter each per year (140 pounds is the average). Any creamery, Gail II. weed out your poor cows, and turn good ones into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your back-yard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck farm near Boston makes every year 50 cents each on 40,000 ducklings. Tells why ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW they do everywhere.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Horace Vose, the famous Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to raise, to set eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey-ranch PAY.

EVERY live farmer knows the FARM JOURNAL, for it is famous everywhere as the leading farm and home paper. It is thirty-five years old, and has the largest circulation of any farm paper in the world. It has always stood up for the right of farmers to "sit at the first table," and is one of the great forces that have made the American farmer prosperous.

To interest NEW readers in The Restitution, and increase its circulation and usefulness in every corner of its field, we have made an arrangement with the publishers of the Farm Journal by which subscribers to The Restitution can, for a short time, get both papers and any one of the booklets for little more than the cost of the Farm Journal alone, although in spite of its excellence it is one of the cheapest papers published.

The regular price of The Restitution is $1.50 a year.
The regular price of the Farm Journal is $1.00 for five years.
The regular price of the booklets to old subscribers 25c each.
The regular price of two copies "A Letter to a Friend," 20c.

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 17) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." THE SEASONS.

Selected by Mrs. Abbie W. Baker

These, as they change, Almighty Father, these
Are but the varied God e rolling year
Is full of thee. Forth in the pleasing spring
Thy beauty walks, thy tenderness and love.
Wide flush the fields, the softening air is balm;
Echoes the mountains round; the forest smiles,
And every sense, and every heart is joy.
Then comes thy glory in the summer months,
With light and heat refulgent. Then thy sun
Shoots full perfection through the swelling year;
Thy bounty shines in autumn unconfined,
And spreads a common feast for all that lives.
In winter awful thou with clouds and storms
Around thee thrown, tempest o'er tempest rolled,
Majestic darkness, on the whirlwinds wing,
Riding sublime, thou bidst the world adore,
And humblest nature with her northern blast
Owns thy power.

Jerusalem the city of the Great King; and the Priesthood of Melchisedek.

H. V. Reed

"Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedek" (Heb. 5:6).

The above text refers to our Mesiah who became a priest under the order of the priesthood, which existed long before the Levitical order. It is called the order of Melchisedek. The word order as used in the Greek means series or succession, or a distinctive class. In other words, it refers to a succession on the priestly line of sacrificial offerings and worship; based upon appointment and upon oath. King James' version does not fully express the apostle's meaning, when it is said of Melchisedek he was without father, without mother, without descent (Heb. 7:3). The language does not refer to the idea that Melchisedek was never born! The reference alludes to his priesthood, which was not made after a carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life (Heb. 7:16). The following translation from the Syriac conveys more nearly the exact idea of the original, which is as follows:

"Moreover, his name is interpreted king of righteousness; and again (he is called) king of Salem that is king of peace, of whom neither his father nor his mother are written in the genealogies; nor the commencement of his days as a priest, nor the end of his life; but, after the likeness of the son of God, his priesthood remaineth forever." (Heb. 7:2-3).

The priesthood of our Lord, therefore, is based upon the direct appointment and the oath of God; and he sprang from the tribe of Judah of which tribe Moses said nothing concerning the priesthood. There are two very important points connected with this priesthood. Melchisedek was a king, and as such he must have had a throne, a crown, subjects, and a city as well as territory. Hence it is said of him, that he was a king in Salem! It is also clear that jointly with this kingly position he was a priest of the most high God. It is plain therefore that he filled the two-fold position of king and priest. Both positions were held by one person, not so with the Levitical priesthood. Israel remained under this priesthood of Levi until the time of Saul and David, when a king became associated with the nation and Israel's relationship was changed from a theocracy to a kingdom the entire system of sacrifices was under the control of the priesthood, while the civil and executive power was in the king.

We have certain proofs of the existence of the Melchisedek priesthood and of divine worship, and sacrifices reading back to the days of Noah, and even back to the times of Adam, when Abel brought his offerings of the firstlings of his flock to make sacrifice unto Jehovah. It was this order of worship which preceded the Aaronic or Levitical order under the law.

The book of Job assures us that he made sacrifices and offerings unto God. In speaking of his sons it is said that Job sent and sanctified them, and rose up early in the morning and offered burnt offerings according to the number of them all, for Job said it may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed God in their hearts, thus did Job continually (Job 1:5). Job was not only a priest who made offerings to God for his sons, but he was also a king. This two-fold relationship identifies him with the Melchisedek order. That Job was a king as well as a priest is evident from what is said of him in the last part of the Septuagint version of his book, and he (Job) himself was the son of his father Jare, one of the sons of Esau, and of his mother Bosorrha, so that he was the fifth from Abram. And these were the kings who reigned in Edom, which country he also ruled over; first Balac, the son of Beor, and the name of his city was Dennaba; but after Balac, Jobab who is called Job. And it is further written of him, "And Job died an old man, and full of days; and it is written that he will rise again with those whom the Lord raises up." See Sept. version, 43 of appendix.

Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses was a priest in Midian and joined with Moses and with Israel in sacrifices of burnt offerings, and in thanksgiving to God for the deliverance of his people from Egypt. Indeed the sacrifices and offerings and altars in the days of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; as well as the wise men in the East, in the days of Job, were made the sacred medium through which the divine being was worshiped by his devoted children.

Melchisedek and Jerusalem.

The next point claiming our attention refers to the relation that Melchisedek sustains to the city of Jerusalem. From what can be implied or proven it would seem to be a well established proposition that Jerusalem was the city of Shem, the son of Noah, who lived five hundred years after the deluge, and that he was a contemporary of Abraham. The following quotation presents this point clearly as to Shem being the person who was the king of Jerusalem, and must have been alive when Abraham received the blessing from Melchisedek the priest of the most high God. Of Jerusalem, Abraham Peditzol writes—Shem the son of Noah was king of Shalem which is Jerusalem (Itinera Mund: chap. 2). See the long note of his translator upon the name and history of the city. That Shalem is the original name for Jerusalem, and that it was at Jerusalem that Melchisedek was king may be seen from the following statements: (1) The name of Melchisedek's city was Salem (Gen. 14:18). This corresponds with Jerusalem; and the identity is established by Ps. 76:2 "In Salem is his tabernacle and his dwelling place in Zion." When Salem is given as the name for Jerusalem and placed next to Zion (2) The 110th Psalm connects Melchisedek with Zion as other passages connect him with Salem. (3) Joshua 10:1 shows the traces of Melchisedek's name in Jerusalem, ages after his day, Adonizedec, king of Jerusalem." (see Josh. 10:1) See Abraham Peritzol's notes. Josephus confirms the above position in his history. But he who first built it (Jerusalem) was a potent man among the Canaanites, and is in our tongue called Melchisedek, the righteous king, for such he really was, on which account he was there the first priest of God and first built a temple there, and called the city Jerusalem, which was formerly called Salem." (See Josephus, page 761). The same facts as stated above as to Salem and Jerusalem and Melchisedek we find the following remarks in the critical bible encyclopedia: "Melchisedek was the first king of the early city of Salem the city of peace, which was called Uru-Salem in the Tel-el-Amarna tablets. He was a priest of the most high God to whom Abraham paid tithes." (See Gen. 14:18; Ps. 110:4; Heb 5:6-10 6:20 7:1-15-17-21). See also the tablets of Tel-el-Amarna.

It seems to be an impressive fact that the historic statements from various historians and from the Bible itself—is now confirmed by the tablets which now become the silent witnesses to the truth of Revelation. The conclusion therefore seems to justify the claim that Shem was the king of Uru-Salem, who met Abraham and blessed him for his victory over the heathen kings that plundered the various cities around the city of Melchisedek—the king of peace. *(See Critical Bible Encyclopedia article Hammurabi by Elizabeth A. Reed).

Abraham and Melchisedek

It is a most remarkable coincidence that Abraham and Melchisedek should be contemporaries at the time when the blessed promises were made and when the gospel of universal blessings should be made to Abraham as the heir of the world (See Rom. 4). It is also a significant fact that all these great blessings should be made over 400 years before the Levitical priesthood together with all the Mosaic ceremonies, came into force. And it impresses upon us the wisdom and the beneficence of the divine being, who united the two great lines of rath and promise in the illustrous characters of Abraham and Melchisedek. Messiah was promised in the covenant made with Abraham, and our Lord was made a priest forever by the oath of God under the order of the Melchisedek priesthood. Hence all from among the gentiles who became heirs of promise by believing in that sublime gospel which says, "In thee and in thy seed all the nations shall be blessed." This gospel was preached unto Abraham who was a believer in the one God under the Melchisedek priesthood. We also are children of God though the faith of Abraham.

From what has been written above we conclude that the heirship of all who believe the gospel will partake of the fullness of those eternal blessings under the everlasting priesthood of him who is greater than Abraham, and who is to carry out the terms of the oath of God to David, that his seed should endure forever on his throne as the days of heaven the covenant with Abraham, and with David find their fulfillment in our blessed Messiah in whom dwells all the fulness of the divine nature bodily. The shadow of temporal priesthoods, of local ceremonies and carnal sacrifices find their antitype in the greater than Solomon. All dispensations and ages converge into one glorious harmony. How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth salvation, that saith unto Zion thy God reigneth! (Is. 52:7). May we become heirs of the Abrahamic promises and by faith make our offerings and sacrifices under the eternal priesthood, after the order of Melchisedek.

JEWISH COLONISTS OWN 40 VILLAGES.

Over 75,000 Acres of Land Under Cultivation and Giving Good Yield—Population Increasing—Many of the Settlements Independent of Zionist Organizations.

Constantinople, Oct. 13.—A correspondent for Haifa sends to the Osmanischer Lloyd an interesting review of the results of Jewish colonization in Palestine. Jewish colonists and other recent Jewish immigrants now form half of the entire Jewish population of Palestine and are rapidly increasing. They are especially strong at Haifa, Jaffa and Jerusalem.

The colonists now own forty villages and about 100,000 acres of land. Of this land 75 per cent. is under cultivation; 21,000 acres in Judea, with 15 colonies; 15,000 acres in Samaria, with 8 colonies; 40,000 acres in Galilee, with 16 colonies, and 500 acres in the trans-Jordan country, with one colony.

The most important of these settlements, which were founded between 1878 and 1902, are Petlach-Tikweh (1500 colonists), Rishon le Zion (1000 colonists) in Judea, Zikhron-Jacob (1000 colonists) in Samaria, and Rosh-Pinah (800 colonists) in Galilee.

The early progress of these settlements was slow, and at the end of the nineteenth century they were not self-supporting, but relied to a great extent on the generosity of Baron Edmond de Rothschild. In 1899 the Jewish Colonization Association of Paris took over the management of the colonies and the bulk of them are now economically independent. Vineyard, grape, oranges, olives and wheat form the chief industries.

The following Zionist organizations are now at work in Palestine:

(1) The Jewish Colonial Bank of London, with its offshoot, the Anglo-Palestine Company, which has branches in Beirut, Haifa, Hebron, Jaffa, Jerusalem and Safed. This institution is principally engaged in making loans at very low rates of interest to agriculturists and traders. (2) The managing board of the Jewish National Fund which has planted extensive olive orchards and purchases land which is not sold but divided into allotments and leased to settlers or otherwise exploited for the benefit of the fund. (3) The Palestine Land Development Company, which has acquired large properties on the shores of the sea of Galilee. (4) The Erez Israel Colonization Company of Cologne. (5) The Berlin Jewish Women's Cultural Association, and (6) the Wolffsohn Foundation of Cologne, which is employed in building workmen's houses.

The education of the Jewish population of Palestine is mainly in the hands of the French Alliance Israelite Universelle, with 15 schools, 70 teachers and 2,200 pupils, and of the German Jewish Hilfsverein of Berlin, with 22 schools, 150 teachers and 3,000 pupils. Six schools in which the Talmud and Torah are taught through the medium of Hebrew are controlled by the Free Union for the Interests of Orthodox Jewry of Frankfort-on-Main. Two girls' schools are managed by the Anglo-Jewish Association of London and the Khoweweh-Zion Association of Odessa, while certain important private schools, e. g., the Theudore Herzel Memorial High school of Jaffa, the Bezalel Arts and Crafts school at Jerusalem and the German Jewish Union's Polytechnic school now building at Haifa also deserve mention.

The correspondent of the Osmanischer Lloyd estimates the number of Jews resident in Palestine at 100,000. But others who have studied the subject think this below the mark. There are from 50,000 to 60,0000 Jews in Jerusalem alone.

THE COMING OF THE LORD

A Wallace Mason

I send you this cutting from the Mail and Empire of Toronto containing news of great importance to all God's household concerning the land. We have long been looking for events which are occurring now; and this news of the great number of Jews flocking to their ancient land from all quarters is of great interest to us who are looking for the soon coming of the king; for before he can come to the world, at least there has to be a large number of wealthy Jews in the land when Gog goes up "to take a spoil and take a prey" Ezekel 38:12. This whole chapter should be read, as well as Zech. 12 to rightly understand the importance of this statement of what is going on in Palestine, preparing for the day of the Lord. At the same time we must not be rash in making predictions like many have done in the past, also the exact time of his coming, they have done a great deal of injury to the cause of Christ from Miller with his sure prediction that Christ was coming in 1844 down to Russell and his prediction that Christ is to come in 1914.

Many men seem to take the religious route in order to bring honor and glory to themselves from Mahammed to Mrs. Eddy, occasionally gaining their point, but more frequently it brings shame and confusion even in this life.

Over forty years ago Baxter predicted that Napoleon the second was the man of sin, and he had followers in great numbers who preached that till Napoleon's life ended in disaster. So with predictions as to the exact time Christ is to come. Dr. John Thomas who did a great deal for the spread of the gospel, did also a great deal of harm by some of his unscriptural theories. In the year 1863 I went to London, England, intending to go on to New Zealand, I meet there with a brother in the truth, now dead for many year I expect, he said to me: "Brother Mason there is no use going to New Zealand for before you get there Christ will be here," and he gave me a book written by Dr. Thomas, called Anatolia, proving to his own satisfaction and many others that the Crimean war was to end in disaster to the British, French and Turks. Europe was to be chained and Russia triumphant. The book also stated that Christ was to come in 1884 or 83. I am not sure which I have been very doubtful about time predictions ever since and still men get up hobbies and ride them until they die or the theory explodes.

Just in this connection I wrote a short article last winter, which was published in the Restitution, in opposition to a theory which is being exploited. I showed in that brief article that Antiochus Epiphanes fulfilled the prediction contained in Daniel 11. 29 to 35 this statement of mine has been denied in another paper. Here are the historical facts (the 11 of Daniel has been so remarkably fulfilled to the letter that critics have claimed that it was written after the events occurred there is positive proof that such was not the case). Josephus in his Antiquitie of the Jews' Book xii chapter 5 paragraph 4 says, He is speaking of Antiochus, Now it came to pass, after two years. . . in the hundred and fifty third olympiad that the king came up to Jerusalem, and pretending peace, got possession of the city by treachery; at that time he spared not so much as those who admitted him into it, on account of the riches that lay in the temple; but led by his covetous inclination * * * and in order to plunder its wealth, he ventured to break the league he had made. So he left the temple bare. * * * He also emptied it of its secret treasures and left nothing at all remaining; and by these means cast the Jews into great lamentations, for he forbade them to offer those daily sacrifices which they use to offer to God according to the law. * * And when the king had built an idol altar upon God's altar, he slew swine upon it, and so offered a sacrifice neither according to the law, nor the Jewish religion. He also compelled them to forsake their own God, and to adopt those whom he took to be gods, and made them build temples and raise idol-altars in every city and village, and offer swine upon them every day. He also commanded them not to circumcise their sons, and threatened to punish any that should be found to have transgressed his injunction. He also appointed overseers who should compel them to do what he commanded * * * * those of the noblest souls did not regard him * * * on which account they every day underwent great miseries and bitter torments, for they were whipped with rods and their bodies were torn to pieces, and were crucified, while they were still alive; they also strangled those women and their sons whom they had circumcised, as the king had appointed. * * * And if there were any sacred books of the law found they were destroyed and those with whom they were found miserably perished also.

This led to what is known as the wars of the Maccabees with all their consequences. Do not ride hobbies; be sure you have scripture and historical facts to back your statements; be not wise above what is written.

THE VISITOR.

Harriet E. Boice.

Is now in the hands of the publisher; it will be ready to send out about the middle of November. It will be a book 5 1-4 by 7 3-4, printed on good book paper, and will have a cabinet cover of soft brown color. It will contain approximately 195 pages, brevier type. It will be a durable and attractive book, written in such a manner as to fully instruct the unconverted on all points essential to salvation. It also contains much of a historical nature to make it valuable in prophetic study. The following is the title of subjects: "Not Left Alone,"—a poem by J. L. Wince; "He is Risen," "I know That Ye Seek Jesus," "The Lesson of Bible History," "What is Your Life," "The Gospel of Christ," "The Hope Set Before Us," "The True and Living God," "The Resurrection of Christ," "The Testimony of Classical Writers," both by Elizabeth Reed:; "What is Man? Why Created Mortal?" "If a Man Die Shall He Live Again?" "Two Doctrines Contrasted," "God's Truth and the Devil's Lie," "The Great Apostacy," "Spiritualism," "The State of Man in Death," "Reasons and Revelations," "Jesus' Death and Resurrection," "The First Resurrection at the Second Coming of Christ," "Second Advent," "First Resurrection, Milleunium," "Seven Victories."

Part II. "A Gospel Series of Bible Lessons," "The Covenants of Promise," "The Promised Kingdom," "Saving Faith," "Repentance," "One Baptism," "A Holy Life."

Part III. A prophetic series of eight lessons on a scripture symbolism—"The Kingdom of this world."

The price of the book will be 25 cents for single copies; five for one dollar, which is less than the cost of printing and mailing. Please let me know before the first of November how many copies you will take for gospel work. If possible I would like to hear from each one before the book is printed, so that I could order additional copies at a lower rate if needed.

EDITORIAL

To the Isolated Members Scattered abroad, Greeting:

Dear Brothers and Sisters you have been told and retold that we now have an organization, a place to put our funds and a means by which we can do something. May we be the means of getting the light to some perishing souls.

Perhaps you have been longing for years to have some one come and preach in your locality, but have had no means. With the aid of all it may be that that longing can be satisfied.

I would suggest that every isolated member send at once to Sister Hanson as much as he can spare and then have a box somewhere, and every time he has a nickel or dime to spare, put it in this box. Do not wait for it to become a large sum, but send it in occasionally.

Now brethren you who are interested in the isolated ones and the cause, send us as much as you can and the Lord will bless you.

A number of years ago, through the earnest solicitation of Sister Calkins, the Nebraska brethern sent Brother Almus Adams here, and as a result my three sisters and myself obeyed the gospel and have ever tried to be true to the one faith. What was done for us we can do for others.

Right here let every one take a few moments time and read Proverbs III:9-10 and then commence honoring the Lord by sending Sister Hanson a donation.

Some will say I am already helping to support an evangelist, but brethren, deep down in our heart, where God looks, can we say we are doing our full duty or is it just what is convenient for us? Will the Lord find us at our post faithful and true is a solemn thought. When we think of the members all over the United States and each one contributing a little we can realize what the sum would be.

Our glorious truth is not enough we must have a zeal that will prompt us to do something that beautifies and glorifies. Now don't forget the secretaries address:—Leota B. Hanson, 3609 McDonald avenue, St. Louis, Mo., Who will she hear from next?

Yours for work,
Helen Eberle, Vice President,
Kansas City, Kas.

THE OPENING OF THE WORK IN ELYRIA, O.

Eld. C. C. Maple.

As a part of our winter's work in Ohio evangelism, we wish to enter the city of Elyria the county seat of Lorain county.

As we shall appeal to the brethern at large for assistance in this important move, we thing it will be wisdom to say some things here regarding this progressive and rapidly growing city of northern Ohio.

Your conference evangelist knows this field thoroughly and has a deep interest in the establishing the cause of truth there. It being located as it is within easy reach of the evangelist's home and only twenty miles from the city of Cleveland it can be looked after to advantage and at much less cost than can work in parts of the state more isolated. Elyria is a city of 15,000 inhabitants and growing very rapidly. The county seat of Lorain county with a population of over 75,000.

The main line of the L. S. & M. S. and the Lorain branch of the B. & O. Railway's pass through the city. The C. S. & C. and the E. & L. electric lines reach out in six directions, connecting all the smaller towns with Elyria. One great advantage in this is that any work done in these many fields will add to the work in Elyria giving those who may be interested an opportunity to attend the service in Elyria, thus making the city work the center of influence.

Elyria has employment for men in all walks of life and it may be that some of our brethren who are seeking a new location can find just what they need here. We shall gladly welcome and assist all we can. There are between forty and fifty manufacturing plants in the city whose monthly pay rolls average over $200,000.00. Among these are such plants as The American Lace Mfg. Co., Baughton Bolt Works, Columbia Iron and Steel Co., Dean Electric (this is a telephone manufacturing plant and employ 400 men and women. Elyria Foundry Co., The Fay Stocking Co., The Garford Auto Co., Harshaw Fuller & Goodwin Co., and many other large plants, employing many hundred men.

There are twelve miles of paved streets, 35 miles of sewers and more pavement and sewers are under construction.

As for natural beauty with its many acres of parks and nearness to Lake Erie it is a very desirable residence city.

In this city but little has been done in the line of real Bible teaching; there are some twelve churches that are all popular even at a sacrifice of the truth.

One peculiar feature of the city is that with only one or two exception all the churches are in the center of the city. The east side of the river has no religious influence of any kind.

Brethren pray that the hearts of the people may be opened to hear the word and that many may be led to search the scriptures for a knowledge of the truth.

We shall have more to say later regarding this work. Let us hope that the effort which we anticipate may be for the glory of God and the advancement of the cause of truth.

Address all correspondence to my address at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

AMONG THE BRETHREN

Eld. C. C. Maple.

The past week has been one of unusual activity for the conference evangelist. While we have done little pulpit work we have been very busy with our visiting. Visiting in several places where we hope to preach at a later date.

We find a ready sale for our tracts and sermons, let us hope that some may read and become interested in them. We now have as many as twelve or more places on our list where we hope to preach the truth during the present conference year. This will no doubt be more than we shall be able to enter and continue with until the people learn the truth. We shall continue however to sow the seed as time will permit.

We found in the city of Wellington a family who were at one time connected with the A. C. church. We hope to keep these people in mind and visit them from time to time until a meeting can be held in that place. We have work enough on hand now for three evangelists. We thank the Lord for the open doors. Brethren let us all work for the advancement of the cause of truth.

MARRIED

It is our pleasure to report a very pleasant occurence that took place in the house of Sister Rima Baker, 209 W. Dry street, Salem, Ohio, at noon October 23, 1912. The writer assisted Brother Peter Jeffrey of Murphysboro, Ill., and Sister Mattie Neill of Salem, Ohio to consumate their marriage contract. After the ceremony all present extended congratulations, after which all sat down to tables well filled with everything desirable to the taste. Sister Mary Knowles proved herself a very able hostess.

After dinner all enjoyed themselves in a social way. Brother and Sister Jeffrey departed on the evening train for Cleveland, Ohio, where they will vist a few days with her people. Then spend a few days in Toledo, Ohio with relatives, after which they will proceed to their home in Murphysboro, Illinois.

Brother Jeffrey is well known to our people as an intelligent, earnest defender of the truth. Sister Neill is known as one of our most tireless workers. Brother and Sister Neill came to Salem ten years ago from Cleveland, Ohio, through the earnest efforts of Sisters Mary Knowles Nancy Barber Robison and others. Their efforts were blessed by God and the church built up and strengthened. We shall miss Sister Jeffrey very much, but the work must go on and the church enlarged and made stronger. We are rejoiced to know that her efforts will continue. It is our prayer that Brother and Sister Jeffrey's efforts may be blessed and many brought to see the light of the blessed gospel of the son of the living God.

There were thirty-eight guests present. A number of presents were given to Sister Jeffrey. Sisters Lang, Blyth, Tomlinson, Neill and son George were present from Cleveland; Sister Iza McCave from Atwater, Ohio, and J. W. Cochran from Knox, Ind.

OBITUARY

Robt. McLaughlin.

Robert McLaughlin was born in Sunberry county, New Brunswick, January 18, 1849 and died in Moorefield, October 6, 1912. When he was a young man he went to Illinois and after a few years there, went to Missouri, and while there met Miss Anna Wood who became his bride in 1881. In 1885 they came to Frontier county and homesteaded the place they still own and call the 'home place' three miles east of town. The family lived on that place continuously until about ten months ago, moving into town on account of failing health. He had tried numerous treatments, but none of them seemed to give any effectual cure, and step by step his constitution seemed to give way. He was out on the street Friday, and although he was quite feeble, no one thought he would be called so soon, and the announcement of his death, which occurred Sunday morning from heart failure, was a sudden shock to his family and friends. He leaves a wife five sons and two daughters to mourn the loss of a husband and father who was ever kind and considerate. Four sons and one daughter are married, and live in this county. One son and one daughter live at home. Besides his immediate family he leaves 8 grandchildren and five brothers. When he came to this county there was no railroad and this town was unknown. They were poor and went through with the hardships of pioneer life as but few have done, but by staying right with it, working hard and carefully managing, made good in every way. He leaves considerable property and several good farms. He was a man that always had a good word for everybody and everyhody had a good word for him. Always cheerful, willing to help, and strict honesty won for him a place in the hearts of his wide circle of friends and neighbors that never can be destroyed. He was a faithful member of the Church of God, living a conscientious christian life, ever ready to meet the Savior when he shall come to claim this world for his kingdom. We wish we could add a word of consolation to the bereaved family, but language fails because we believe every neighbor feels his departure to the bottom of their hearts. We all sympathize together. His life was one that can be well considered not only by his own children, but by others, as a grand example of life, lived as it should be lived, and at last commended to the Master's keeping unto his coming.

Rev. L. L. Pressler, of Hunt, Nebraska conducted the service Wednesday afternoon in the Moorefield M. E. church building (the largest church building in town) and the crowd was so large not all could get inside even to stand. You can write this up, and I assure you of the great appreciation of the entire family.

No doubt you remember Uncle Robert, when you conducted conference here sixteen months ago.

Very truly yours,
JAMES PEARSON.

The rest that Christ promises is not idleness. That would be a curse, disguised as a blessing. But no one can work as he should, who does not have rest combined with industry. A heart at peace and a hopeful outlook inspire head and brain to do their best.

After resting for a few days after conference we went to Freedom for a week. The interest was good, and on the last evening we had more than we could seat. After conference Brother and Sister Newell remained at Moorefield for a week, visiting with the brethren and old neighbors. Then they proceeded to Freedom where they visited for another week, and took in the meeting. We mention this because nearly 23 years ago Brother and Sister Newell lived in this vicinity and through them and Brother and Sister Stevens, who had moved from old Union, Indiana to this place, we held our first meeting in 1889. A large congregation was the result, a church building was erected. And now that 23 years have rolled into the past, and by force of circumstance we were again there stopping with Brother Stevens as we did 23 years before. But oh, what a change. Some have fallen asleep and are waiting the Masters call. Others have moved away, and still a few who were among the first to heed the gospel call are left, and meet in the old church. The meeting, so nearly like the one 23 years ago, took us all back over the pleasant and sad memories that always belong to the lapse of years.

Sister Trebby was anxious for the people of Curtis to hear the gospel, so the Masonic hall was secured, and we started in, but we soon found that most of the people were satisfied, and only a few came out. But it was encouraging to know that the few who did come were on the side of the truth. We then went to Moorefield and met with the brethren over Sunday. Then proceeded home to doctor up a severe case of sciatic rheumatism.

ALMUS ADAMS, Evangelist.

WAIT!

B. Roxana Wince.

"Rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him; fret not thyself, because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass." Literally rendered this passage reads:

"Be Silent to the Lord and wait." How expressive, how significant, how full of warning to us who are watching for Jesus! We see the fields of the wicked broadening, their cattle multiplying, their barns filled. The poor are oppressed and their wages withheld, the crops they have raised that were to be their very own, are violently taken away, and there is no one to plead their cause.

It is hard sometimes to feel submissive when we see the potatoes, the cabbage, the corn, the squashes, the tomatoes, and the cucumbers that the poor man's wife and children have raised, and of which they were to have their rightful share, snatched from their hands, and they, driven out with curses to seek another home. We want to take the matter into our own hands. We want to see to it that those little ragged, hungry, toil-worn children are clothed and fed from the proceeds of their work. But the Holy Book says, "Be silent to the Lord, and wait.' Be silent as to any fretting or murmuring. Do not get wrathful, nor angry at him because these things are. Do not do any rash thing. The Lord is coming; wait patiently for him." He shall deliver the needy when he crieth, the poor also and him that hath no helper.

We see the rum-power and Roman politico - ecclesiasticism spreading themselves like green bay trees, breaking all laws, human and divine; trampling on virtue and protecting vice; breeding criminals and race-degenerates; robbing the poor, and robbing the nation, and dictating and controling the movements and actions of all our officials from president down to path master, and feel justly alarmed, as well we may; but even here the Lord says wait. "Do not fret yourself in any wise to do evil," because these wicked powers bring their wicked devices to pass. Work in the Lord's way with might and main against both; live temperately; preach temperance. Be a true protester against Rome, but do not get angry and petulant with the Lord, because our country is in the grasp of this evil power. "For evil doers shall be cut off, but those that wait upon the Lord they shall inherit the earth." It will not be the inheritance of rum nor Rome, much as they desire it. "For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be; yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place and it shall not be."

A LETTER ON THE SOUL.

Mr. P——. Dear Friend:

I enjoyed our short talk on the nature of man very much. As I am confined to the house, (and the bed much of the time), and cant work, I am trying to write you another short letter. You teach, and I think, honestly believe, that the soul of man is an immortal conscious entity apart from the body. The first place that the word soul occurs in the Bible is Gen. 2:7. God formed man and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man (that was formed of dust) became a living soul. What words could God or man speak to make it plainer just what the soul is? The breath caused life, and we find by observing what we read, that life is often called soul in the Bible; but how are we to determine when we see the word soul, which is meant the body (whole man) or the life? We know just as the musician knows what the notes are that look alike; he knows them by their position and connection. I have looked up scores of places that speak of soul, but have found no hint of it being immortal and conscious without the body. I will speak of a few instances. Exodus 30:12, "Give every man a ransom for his soul." If we say it is immortal the obstacles that arise are too numerous to mention; but say it means life in that case, all is plain and harmonious. Num. 31:50, "To make atonement for our souls." Does a shell or tabernacle atone for immortal parts of God? Job. 33:22, "His soul draweth near to the grave," curious language if spoken of a deathless entity. Psa. 49:15, "God will redeem my soul from the power of the grave." Does an immortal soul get bound in the grave, or is it not the mortal-body (called soul in this place) that needs redemption? Psa. 33:19, "To deliver their soul from death, and to keep them alive in famine." From this language the soul has to have something to eat, or it will starve and die. Psa. 116:8, "Thou hast delivered my soul from death;" the soul then surely dies. Psa. 119:175, "Let my soul live;"—a curious request, if the soul is by nature deathless. Isaiah 55:3, "Hear and your soul (body, self) shall live." We read in James 5:20 of saving a soul from death, and Ezekiel 18:4 says, "The soul that sinneth it shall die;" but you say the word death means separation of parts. To separate into parts an immortal, imaterial entity, would make the parts so very small, could God possibly find them? Job 33:18, "He keepeth back his soul from the pit;" and 33:28, "He will deliver his soul from going into the pit;" and 33:30, "Bring back his soul from the pit." Does an immortal entity go into the pit or grave, or is it not the man that became a living soul by receiving the breath of life that goes into the pit, and needs redemption from the pit? Acts 3:23, "Every soul which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed." How destroy it, if immortal? Job 7:15 says, "My soul (body, self) chooseth strangling and death." Lev. 22:11, "If a priest buy any soul with his money, he shall eat of it." Psa. 74:19, "Deliver not the soul of thy turtle dove unto the multitude of the wicked" (for food). This quotation shows that the body of fowls is the soul, as well as the body of man. In Mark 14:34 Jesus said, "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful unto death;" curious language if his soul was deathless. Our Savior said in Rev. 1:18, "I am he that liveth and was dead." His body that Gen. 2:7 says became a living soul. If Christ (the body or soul) be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. So our only hope is in the part that was raised from the tomb; and that imaginary entity that was not crucified or in the tomb does not concern us. Speaking of Christ in Acts 2:31, "His soul (body, self) was not left in hell, (grave or sepulcher).

In 1 Thess. 5:23, Paul speaks of the whole spirit and soul and body. If you speak of the heart the head and the body, we understand that it takes all three parts spoken of to make one living man. Just so with Paul speaking of the spirit, soul, and body. It seems perfectly clear to understand that it takes the three parts spoken of to constitute one complete living man, or living soul, as God called him in Gen. 2:7, after he had breathed into his nostrils the breath (or spirit) of life. Man was not called a living soul until he received life, so the life as well as the body, is often called soul; but the soul or spirit is not said to be deathless or immortal any place in God's word. We read in Psa. 146:4, the very day that a man dies his thoughts perish—not so said of the beast, so a conscious entity apart from the body is more in favor of the beast than man.

I am sorry that the great majority of the professed Christian world believe and teach that one or two of the parts spoken of are conscious entities apart from the body, and are immortal and cannot die. As there is no such teaching in the Bible, tradition is taught instead of God's word.

I have said there was no such teaching in the Bible—I am mistaken, for it is taught in one place Gen. 3:4, and that is in the Bible, but it is not God's word. The teaching of that verse is generally believed. I don't believe it. Read carefully and see if you believe it. The person teaching that the soul or spirit, or both are immortal conscious entities apart from the body, surely does forget what is written in Rev. 22:18-19. I hope you will study what I have written, and if you find that it is digestible, I will be g'ad to write more on the nature of man, but if I fail so that I can't use my pencil, I think I can get a better writer to answer your letter. My letter is getting long, so close, hoping that the time will soon come that is recorded in 1 Cor. 13:12, when we shall see face to face (or alike) and know as also we are known. Your true friend in hope of a better and more satisfactory life than we now live.

"OLD MOTHER EARTH TO BE BORN AGAIN."

A POPULAR LECTURE

By M. Joblin.

The final destiny of the earth is a subject that should be profoundly interesting to every one. God has informed us, by Isaiah the prophet, that he formed the earth, and established it; made it to be inhabited and then assures us that he made it not in vain; it will be inhabited just as he intended. The inhabitants of earth will be men, always men. It was made for man and given to man. Earth is man's mother. He was made out of her dust, and is therefore a part of her. The Psalmist says the heaven, even the heavens are the Lord's, but the earth hath he given to the children of men. Having given it to them, does it not belong to them, and belonging to them, will he take it away from them? I would here say that he has not given it to all men, therefore all men

Will not inherit it. He has given it to all who believe him and lovingly obey him—that is, do his will in preference to their own. This the qualification, in general terms. From what the prophet has said, we see that Jehovah was not experimenting in world-making. He knew what he wanted, and what he wanted it for, and made what he wanted, and it just suited his purpose after it was made; it was pronounced very good; he was satisfied with it and all the works of his hands. Here another lesson claims our attention. If God had no need to experiment, as we have, of course he always adopts

The Best Methods. And we know by this means that the best way to people a planet is create people specially adapted to it, so that they will be indigenous to the soil. I say we know this, because this is just the thing that God did; and he would not choose the second best way. He does all things well. Heaven, then, is doubtless peopled with intelligencies just adapted to that heavenly sphere, as earth's inhabitants are adapted to earth. The idea that earth was formed to raise inhabitants for another world is as baseless as the fabric of a vision. In all the book of God not a hint is given of any such thing. And if it be not in God's Book, God is not the author of it. Faith comes by hearing or reading the word of God—not the word of man, nor the suppositions of man, nor his guesses, nor speculations. I maintain that we have but one source of information on this subject, and of necessity but one source of faith. But when we look through the present religious systems and find that not one in a thousand considers that his destiny it linked with that of the earth, it has a most starting—I may say, a bewildering effect. Whence comes this almost universal impression? As God's word is silent about it,

It is not a God-idea. God does not now miraculously instruct people; and if he did, surely he would not contradict his word by a miracle. He has not only not said he would transport the inhabitants of earth to another world, but he has said that, that portion worthy of it should remain here forever—inherit it, and possess the world forever. God, by Daniel, said that the kingdom he would set up under the whole heavens should be given to the saint—and by David, that the righteous shall dwell therein forever and by Jesus that the meek

Shall Inherit the Earth; and who distinctly says that no man hath ascended to heaven, and Rev. 5:9-10 says the redeemed ones will reign on earth. I shall assume that you admit that we have really grounds for our faith that our destiny, as believers of the gospel, is bound up with the destiny of the earth. But this does not account for the universality of the opposite view. Whence comes it? Heathen philosophers found themselves possessed of wonderful powers of mind. Minds that reached out after the infinite—minds that nothing in this cosmos seemed to satisfy, and so they partially reasoned themselves into the belief that they themselves—their personality, survived the death of the body, which was only a temporary house for the real man to live in for a time. They were not quite sure that this was the truth, but thought it was, and hoped it was—but at times had grave doubts about any life after death at all. My poor heart goes out after these philosophers, groping their way along thus, without one ray of divine light. But when we see the word of God for it that men are dust, and in the death-state know nothing, and

Without a Resurrection will never live again—in view of this, I say, what can we say of religious teachers who, with oceans of such divine testimony to show that man is not dead and alive at the same time, base their belief of inherent immortality upon the philosophy of heathens? Yes, wrest the Scriptures out of their natural and grammatical sense, which say God only hath immortality, and that only those who have the Son of God have future life. Will hold them guiltless? Nay, verily; a reckoning awaits them! We have now arrived at a place where we can see where the idea that earth's inhabitants go to rewards above, or to hell beneath for punishments at death, comes from. It grows out of the heathen dogma that the real man does not die. And, supposing him to be alive, of course he must be somewhere. And, without one promise or proposition or invitation in all the book of God they propose to go where God is. This is the most presumptious procedure possible to conceive of. It grows out of believing what the serpent said "That man should not surely die."

Enough in this direction. I propose not to prove to you that the very earth we live in and upon is included in the redemption that is in Christ Jesus. It is a vast and sublime subject and I cannot expect to do more than outline it to some of you, so that you may be encouraged to prosecute the study yourselves. Believe me, it would richly repay you. In Rom. 8:18 Paul says: 'For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory to be revealed in us, or to us; for the earnest expectation of the creation (Greek), waiteth for the manifestation of the Sons of God; for the creation was made subject to vanity (or frailty), not willingly (or voluntarily), but by him who has subjected the same in hope. Because the creation itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

For we know that the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now. And not only they, but ourselves also, which have the first fruits of the spirit, even we ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body." The great God idea here given expression to, is that the redemption of their estate is included in the redemption of the saints. And there is such a fitness of things in this that it should commend itself to every candid mind. Man's dominion was lost by disobedience, and the earth was cursed through his disobedience, so that the first Adam left his ruined legacy; but it is to be restored and blessed in the second Adam and given back to those redeemed from among men by

The Precious Blood of Christ. It is an inheritance of glory to the perfect man in Christ Jesus. The history of man and earth shows that both fell together. And the resurrection of our planet to newness of life is just as certain as that of the saints. I showed at the outset that this planet is an elect planet. It is predestinated to be the theatre of redemption, and will be sanctified and glorified with man, by virtue of the same redemptive work of Christ. The efficacy of the resurrection life of Christ, the power of his all-glorifying spirit, will bring about, or result in, a regenesis of all things. De we not hear him whispering from heaven to assure us of this in Rev. 21:5, "Behold, I make all things new?" This will be a restitution of all things spoken of by all God's prophets, and will put all-vaunted triumphs of science to shame. What culture can not do this will do, It will

Emancipate the earth from the repressive curse that has so long kept its vital forces in check and blastered its efforts to yield its increase. Yes; old earth will be born again—regenerated. This is the sublime idea given utterance to by the apostle in this scripture. Take in the whole context and you will see it is that the sufferings of believers are not worthy to be compared with the glory ready to be revealed in the last day! It is because something superbly grand is to occur when the times of restitution arrive and God sends Jesus Christ again according to promise. What is it? Why, it is what the apostle in this 8th of Romans calls the

Deliverance of the creation, in addition to the redemption of the saints from the power of death and the grave. Creation here means, in this connection. (1) the earth itself, (2) the atmospheric heavens, (3) the vegetable kingdom, (4) the animal kingdom—the whole animate and inanimate creation, or what the apostle calls the whole creation; or what we would call nature, outside of humanity. The apostle here describes the present condition of creation or nature as one of involuntary subjection to vanity and the bondage of corruption—subjected, not willingly, but by reason of him who subjected it—not Adam, but God. It was subjected by a divine decree; not only on account of man's transgression, but for the Benefit of sinful man. Present human toil is part of the curse, or grows out of the curse on earth; and yet it would not be difficult to show that toil under the circumstances is a benefit to man. The energies of nature are perverted and repressed, "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life; thorns and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread till thou return unto the ground, for out of it wast thou taken." Thus, as has been said, vanity or frailty smote through cosmos, which but shortly before was chaos, and had the effect, in a great measure to reduce it to a chaos again—from which a regenesis shall at last restore it to more than its pristine beauty.

Subject of vanity, then, is creation's present law. Held in the bondage of corruption in nature's present doom, on account of sin on the part of man. The curse has struck through the whole framework and vitals of nature, entailing the untold sufferings and groans of the whole animal creation, causing mutual ferocity and slaughter among them—causing stinted and dwarfed development of vegetables, and making them call almost incessantly for help from the hoe and the rake and the cultivator, and creating pestilence in the air, and convulsions by land and sea. In a word, nature has been unable.

To realize its native tendencies, and the ends for which it was called into being. It is constantly endeavoring and being baffled, constantly mocking expectation, constantly blooming, but often without fruit. Science and nature alike confirm the Bible declaration, that ever since the last genesis vanity, disease and death have reigned; but it is only the Bible that can explain why a new and fair creation has been so degraded. The present disorder and death comes of a moral cause. Earth's disorders date from the hour of disobedience. Since then, what land has not borne thistles and thorns? What soil has not been filled with the graves of men and beasts? What signals of distress has not old earth displayed? Through all its veins, as it were, the effect of Human transgression has gone by no fault of its own, but by a divine ordinance the guilty man and his estate are bound by the same destiny. Here is where we find the secret of that negative power which cripples the heaven born energies of nature. Paul truly says the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together, until now. It is a common distress. It awaits millennial blessedness. Not till then will its groans cease, its sighs be hushed and its chains be broken. Sometimes, indeed, a bright spot is seen; sometimes a smile plays upon its face and reminds us of paradise. There are patches of sunshine here and there, but they are followed by dark clouds, and thunderstorms and cyclones, and tidal waves and pestilence stalking at noonday, and famine and fear and death—Oh, the groans that go up from Old mother earth. Long has her bosom been made the graveyard of her children. Oh, the myriads of sin-stricken and plague-smitten. Oh, how the night winds howl over cities crowded with luxury and guilt, and dens of corruption, and cemeteries piled with the dead. Oh, poverty and crime, and hunger, and nakedness, and cold, and distress, and misery, where shall they find relief? And, says the Apostle, "We, too, who have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we, ourselves, groan within ourselves, through Frailties that abort, as it were, our efforts, and thus place us beside nature as petitioners at the throne of grace for relief from vanities of head and heart, and from bereavements, and afflictions, and losses and wounds, and pangs, and griefs—and our groaning is often too deep for expression." But nature waits. The apostle uses the boldest kind of personification. Nature is represented as a person with anxious face looking way off to see, if possible, the end of the groaning period, and the time of her deliverance—the reversal of her vanity—her emancipation from

The bondage of corruption. More than 1800 years have passed since the apostle wrote, but still nature looks painfully into the future, although her eyes sometimes glisten with the gleam of on-coming glories when restitution shall have become a fact. And it will give us some idea of what she will be, to think of what she has accomplished while traveling in anguish. Why, if the sparkling diamond from the mine is common charcoal, wrought up to translucent splendor by her own unaided force while under the curse, what will she do when

The curse is removed? The moss rose, so beautiful, is a rude flower from the hedge that culture has charmed to another than itself. Crystals, and pearls, and gems, and silver and gold are shining dust and glorified slime. The costliest marble is common earth manufactured by nature's hand. A good deal might be said of the auguries nature gives of still greater wonders. But when tongue can tell, what pen describe the splendor of the result when the deliverer comes and fulfills his promise

To make all things new? And nature, straining no more in painful gaze, shall experience as it were, her own resurrection and the life of the very Christ, mingling with all her forces, shall wake her to immortal beauty and glory—when every effort she has made during her long travail will be seen to have been a prophecy of coming redemption from all her woes, and recompense for all her toil.

"It is not, then, a poet's dream,
And idle vaunt of song—
Such as, beneath the moon's soft gleam,
On vacant fancies throng—
Which bids to us in heaven and earth,
In all things fair around,
Strong yearnings for a new blest birth,
With matchless glories crowned."

Oh, no; it is based upon the immutable word of God. Nature's groans will be hushed, and her expectations realized when the redeemed of all ages shall have been raised and made kings and priests of God, and reign upon the earth. Creation's hope is staked upon the apocalypse of God's son, and the redemption from death of the faithful of all ages.

Believers first and nature afterward. This was the order of the fall. Do we realize as we should what an absorbing event the resurrection of the blessed and holy will be? Think of it! They are awakened to partake of divine nature, and to share the royalties of God's coming kingdom; and the resurrection life and energy that takes possession of believers, would seem to penetrate the planet, and begin its regeneration. The blessed book of God shows immutably that earth shall be set free and reinvigorated by supernatural power, and spontaneously yield here increase; and that the animal world will be in harmony with itself—

The wolf and the lamb shall lie down together; and that the vegetable world will put on beauty richer than the rose of Sharon; riches surpassing those which Eden knew. I said the book of God shows this, and for fear you doubt the assertion, I call your attention to the 67th Psalm, where, by the spirit of prophecy, the Psalmist anticipates the glad day we speak of. He begins with saying, "God be merciful to us, and bless us; and cause his face to shine upon us;" and the following words state the why and the wherefore of these petitions: "That thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations." The next words assume the prayers answered, and he responds thus heartily: "Let the people praise thee, O God!

Let all the people praise thee." And then he strikes a higher key, "O, let the nations be glad and sing for joy." Why, what is it that fills him to overflowing? The next words explain: "For thou shalt judge the people righteously, and govern the nations upon earth." I want to know if this was not enough to make him run over with gladness? After 5000 years of man's inhumanity to man, making countless thousands mourn, he sees by the spirit God's kingdom set up, and God's son seated upon the throne of David on the Holy Hill of Zion, having turned down all the tyrants, and wounded all the rulers, over many countries, and governing the nations upon earth righteously. Wasn't it enough to make the Psalmist shout? It doesn't surprise you a bit, does it, to hear him break out afresh, "Let the people praise thee, O God; let all the people praise thee? You see from this the divine administration of earth's affairs

Makes all men happy, peaceful, contented, grateful, joyful. Then follows the verse that bears directly upon the subject of the syning, the re-genesis of earth—Earth born again. It is the 7th verse that calls upon all the people to praise God for the happy condition of things existing through a righteous government, and then the 6th adds other glad tidings. It says, "Then"—then when? Why, then, when all the people praise him, "then shall the earth yield her increase, and God, even our own

God, shall bless us; God shall bless us and all the ends of the earth shall fear him." This was the utterance of the Spirit a thousand years before Christ came, and you see the quotation from the 8th of Romans, written sixty years after he came, tells the same story. God in all those intervening centuries had neither changed his mind nor altered his purpose. Creation's groans are to cease * * * The earth is to bloom again like the garden of God. Listen to the Spirit's poetic effusion in the 55th chapter of Isaiah, where Jehovah first says his word shall not return unto him void, but shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it. For ye shall go out with joy, and be let forth with peace—the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field

Shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree, and it shall be to the Lord for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off." The curse said, "Thorns and thistles shall it bring forth to thee." Thorns and thistles and hundreds of other noxious weeds need no sowing. They come up spontaneously and scatter thousands of seed broadcast without any culture or care, while bread and other things for food require laborious efforts. But the last scripture shows the era of thorns and thistles is to pass away. Things that cumber the ground and wear men out to keep them down are to give place to the Useful and beautiful. Mark the way the Spirit words it. Instead of the thorn, shall come up the fir tree—no need to plant the fir tree. I believe the fir tree to be akin to our pines—both useful and beautiful, and they are to come up—and so of the myrtle tree; and then the mountains and hills are said to sing and the trees of the field to clap their hands because of the joyous change that has come. In Isaiah 65:17 Jehovah says: "For behold I create new heavens and new earth," and in the next verse explains what this consists of. "Behold

I create Jerusalem a rejoicing and her people a joy." I understand the heavens here to mean the ruling power, vested in Jesus and his immortal cabinet at Jerusalem—and the earth means the subjects, or ruled ones. Look at the explanation closely—Jerusalem is to be a rejoicing—that's the capital of God's kingdom—the law goes forth, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem—and Jerusalem's people, the Jews, a joy. The twelve apostles reign over them, and they are the subjects proper of the kingdom. Jesus was born to be king of the Jews, and will be king of the Jews. The next verse says, "I will rejoice in Jerusalem and joy in my people, and the voice of weeping shall no more be heard in her, nor the voice of crying—and there shall be no more thence an infant of days—

No dying in infancy then—the child shall die an hundred years old." Fancy a hundred-year-old child. What would the age of a man be at that rate? The 22nd verse answers by saying, it shall be as the days of a tree—hundreds of years, as of old; and it goes on to say, in harmony with this, that men shall build houses and inhabit them themselves—will not have to die and leave them to others soon after fixing them to their minds and will plant vineyards and eat the fruit of them themselves and long enjoy the work of their hands. All these things point forward to the time described in Revelation, when there shall be no more curse.

And I want to say right here, that God once had a typical kingdom on earth, and anyone who is anxious to know wherein the kingdom of God soon coming will differ from the present human governments, would do well to Study the kingdom of Israel in the past, where every one had his portion of soil, every one sat under his own vine and fig tree, and no one could make him afraid, or threaten to oust him. If through stress of circumstances, they had to sell their homestead, it could be only sold from that time on to the year of Jubilee, and the price would be regulated by the time to elapse before Jubilee, be it little or much. But every 50th year all properties reverted to the original owners, And we know from the 72nd Psalm, that the coming kingdom of God will be characterized by just

Such beneficent provisions, for David, singing of the administration of his greater son, says, "He shall judge the poor of the people, he shall save the children of the needy and break in pieces the oppressor." Friends, I have given but the merest birds-eye view of the great restitution times. It is the burden of all the prophecies; but with a sad heart I say it, all the prophet says about it is nullified by the great religious systems of this age. As they are bound to get away from earth when the body dies, the most glowing descriptions of that good time coming given by God himself have

No charms for them. With them the prophets are all out of date, and therefore useless. But Peter full of Holy Spirit, in the 3rd of Acts tells us plainly that when the time arrives God will send Jesus to restore all things the prophets have said. What will they do with this New Testament statement of the spirit's purpose? Jesus has said the meek shall inherit the earth, but they don't want it—and won't have it as a gift; and when the Spirit endeavors to draw them to him by showing them how gloriously he intends to renew and fit up old mother earth for the everlasting abode of the saints, they will not listen to it.

Oh, the towering delusions that possess the minds of the religious world today. But all the same, Jehovah will carry out his program, and you may well ask, what will be the doom of those who reject his propositions and try to thwart his purpose? Leaving these thoughts to any such before me, let us again dip into the great fountains of truth; that great book that shines ahead and gives us history in advance. Paul shows us that the groans of creation shall cease, and the prophets tell us that the nations of the earth will be attracted by the

Gleams of Zion's brightness and walk in its light; that the deluge of knowledge of the glory of the Lord under the Spirit's power shall cover the earth as waters do the sea; that mountains and valleys will echo with Jehovah's praise—that the planet will be clothed in her Sabbath dress, and adorned with innocence—and purity shall beam again as when the morning stars shouted for joy.—and that the whole creation, strung and tuned like a harp, will breathe its

Heavenly music—Christ first, Christ middle, Christ last, Christ on every string. Such are a few of the things in reversion for the saints and their inheritance—blessing for the curse, life for death, plentitude for vanity, satisfaction for hope, liberty for bondage, the throne for the grave, and for corruption, glory. This is no fancy sketch. It is a reality beyond what eye has seen or ear heard, or man's heart conceived, but which the spirit of God has revealed in the Scriptures of truth. It is this hope the Church of God cherishes. It is the hope of the Christian, because the only one set before him; the Hope of Christ's appearing and kingdom, the hope of resurrection life and glory. The early martyr church lived with this glorious hope shining full in its face. And we, too, cherish the same blessed hope, as you may know by the sign over our door. Oh, it is a blessed hope. All along the line of their sorrowful march the saints have had to make countless groans. They marched all the way through the enemy's country. Countless thousands suffered violent deaths, but they hoped on to the end of life, because the same precious lips which said, in the world "ye shall have tribulation," also said,

"I will come again." Blessed assurance. He will come again. Yes; beyond the death bed, beyond the martyr's flame, beyond the partings and the weepings, they saw the resurrection dawn, when the once tear-dimmed eye will be lighted up with ineffable glory—broken hearts be made whole and beat strong with pulsations of joy and gladness. Oh, let us thank God that Jesus said, I would come again. This has echoed from saintly voice to saintly ear as the centuries came and passed. Oh, it has been

The one jubilant note among all the discordant sighs of groaning creation. Beloved of the Lord, do you all realize it? We are left-over remnant of the church—we are in the last night-watch, looking for the dawn of day, and our prayer should ever be—"Thou redeemed of men—Thou son of the highest—the hope of Israel, the prince of peace, the joy of the universe, come. Come wearing thy many crowns come and take thy rightful throne;

Come in robes of majesty—come and change this vale of tears and charnal house of death into a floral paradise of life and blessing. Come and give us the water of life instead of the bitter fountains that mock our thirst. Blessed Jesus, a groaning creation says come, a weary, worn and wasted band of expectant pilgrims says come—the waiting bride says come, even so come, Lord Jesus."

Oh, if he should come now, how would he find us? Would he find us in him by faith in the gospel of the kingdom of God and immersion into his name? And observing his commandments? And praying with the Apostle John, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly?" Would he? If any present are willing to forsake all and follow Christ, they can make it known after this service, and arrangements to instruct them further in the way of life in private interviews will be made.

THE BIBLE; ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. C. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST

A sermon by the Editor of The Restitution. If you have friends who have immortal souls, present them with a copy of this sermon, and it will cast out the unclean spirit. One copy, 3 cents; two copies, 5 cents; twelve copies, 25 cents. Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, O.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16. Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38; 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or quit the pulpit.

Teach the Scriptures, not foolishness. Honor God and the Savior.—B. S. Driggs.

GET THESE Money-making Secrets WITH Farm Journal

If this cock frightened half "Poultry Secrets" tells how to carry lewis, and many other secrets far more important.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says ROY CHENEY, Illinois. "What it tells would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes F. J. DICKISON, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 300 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck-raising," says F. M. WARNOCK, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-Book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says F. W. MANSFIELD, New York.

T. F. MCCREA, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden this summer. I sent my booklet to the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting near to the soil. After a long tussle with the Chinese language and mission problems it is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, trees, chickens, etc. I am saving money and regaining my health. My wife and I both find FARM JOURNAL indispensable."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. POTTER, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. GLADWIN, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes Mrs. JOE LAWRENCE, Saskatchewan. "I was never successful in growing cabbage until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have made them I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes Dr. WILLIAM DAVIS, New Jersey. "When the first copy came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to greet me when I arrive. I feel the gladness jump right into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until half-past ten, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. I. SLOAT, a Virginia bank clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL, I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. WHITTEL, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."

These booklets are 6 by 9 inches, all profusely illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of discoveries and methods of successful poultrymen, long jealously guarded secrets. It gives Pabst's famous method, the original method of getting one-half more pullets than cockerels, Byron's method of lessening fertility, with priceless secrets of mating, breeding, feed and feeding, how to produce winter eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "whispering," "roaring," nostrils and gasoline dosing, and other tricks of "gyps" and peddlers, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse. It also gives many valuable training, feeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $10,000 a year mainly from eggs. All back-yard chicken-raisers should learn about the "Runaway Unit," and how Foster FEEDS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest table berries throughout almost your whole crop. It gives you the fruits of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and blossom-removing to produce berries in the fall, tells broken facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how one grower gets 10,000 quarts an acre and sells it quart, etc. E. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who will grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Prof. Holden, the "Corn King," tells how to get 100 to twenty bushels more per acre, of corn rich in protein and the best stock-feeding elements. Pictures make every process plain.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of seven cows that produced half a ton of butter each per year (150 pounds is the average). An eye-opener for dairymen. Get it, weed out your poor cows, and turn good ones into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your back-yard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck-farm near Boston makes every year 50 cents each on 40,000 ducklings. Tells what ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW to do everything.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Hocker York, the famous Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to mate, to set eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey-ranch PAY.

THE DATE IS COPYRIGHTED.

Ian Katison.

That the diction of Sister Wood's article, "We May Know" is lucid and entertaining, goes without saying. The day for a year theory and vice versa, is discussed, presumably on the supposition that were the hitherto undiscovered key found, to unlock the mysteries of the kingdom advent, then the exact date could be easily located, and the ponderous veil which enshrouds the future destinies could be moved—could be edged aside far enough for inspection.

This is the vital point of all surmisings on the subject, and where innumerable date fixers have been hopelessly wrecked. The following sample from among many similar date fixings will illustrate.

Back in the seventies of last century a Mr. Thurman and a little band of followers met in a hall on Adams street, Chicago one night to await the coming of the Lord. The followers of the man had disposed of their property, their business and those who had homes among them were broken up. They firmly believed before the dawn of another day the Lord would come, and that he would stand in their midst. Thurman was positively convinced, he was absolutely correct in his surmisings regarding the date, and so between intervals of fervent songs, and earnest prayers, Thurman lectured on the how and wherefore of his conclusions. How he had critically examined all the available scriptural data three times, and the finding on each count was virtually the same, and therefore undeniably correct.

The night wore on, and toward midnight the rumbling of a thunderstorm was heard, accompanied by sword like flashes of lightning previous to each explosion. Finally the storm subsided and the sky assumed a lurid appearance. The little band were excited in exuberance of expectation. Indications in the heavens were at that moment a sure sign of the Lord's return to earth. Exclamations in the little band were plentious, such as "The Lord is coming and will soon be here." But, alas, the morning came and the Lord had not come. Reader imagine the pathetic plight of that deluded company of dupes, leaving that hall in sorrow and tears, and children of tender years there too. But the unabashed and redoubtable Thurman still maintained he was correct, although the verdict of date was set against him. "They that excuse themselves, accuse themselves."

History repeats itself in those matters and spasmodic efforts are put forth in these days, as was the case in the time of our Lord, notably when Peter, James, John and Andrew presented their trio of questions to the Master, said they, "Tell us when shall these things be, and what shall be the sign of the coming, and of the end of the world?" (Margin Age). Jesus replying warned them to beware of deception and learn the parable of the fig tree bursting out in buds and leaves, denoting summer near. But of that day or that hour knoweth no one, not even the angels in heaven, neither the son, but the Father. The date is copyrighted or the exclusive property of the author. Moreover the Lord warns anxious enquirers and others, "Take ye heed, watch and pray for ye know not when the time is, and what I say unto you I say unto all, watch."

"Be ye as men that wait,
Constant at the Master's gate
Even though he tarries late,
Be watchful, pray and wait."

WHAT IS THE CHURCH?

Sermon by the late Bro. Joblin

Brothers and Sisters:

We are not prepared to give you a well digested and well arranged sermon today, neither are we prepared to make a speech, but we are merely going to talk with you a little while about what the Church of God is. If you remember we referred in our discourse last Sunday to two families of sons; the sons of man and the sons of God. And we desire very much that each one of us should so comprehend the genius of Christianity and the plans and purposes of God in training his sons, and the special privileges his prospective sons enjoy and the way by which he constitutes them heirs, as that we shall be the better prepared to appreciate our privileges, perform our duties, and give glory to our God. Without undertaking to define the philological meaning of the word ecclesia, we may accept the apostles use of the word church, as its most important and most practical meaning. He says, "God hath put all things under his (the Christ's) feet, and gave him to be head over all things, to the church, which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all." But that there may be no question as to the sense in which he uses the term body, or that it may be manifest that he uses the terms church and body as convertible terms, on another occasion he says: "I now rejoice in my suffering for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of the Christ in my flesh, for his body's sake, which is the church.

We are all aware that the radical meaning of the word body is derived from the organized substance of animated creatures; and although the term body is applied to masses of what we call inert matter, yet, the reason of this application is found in the coherence of the separate particles, by which the mass is formed; thus the applicability of the term body to these masses, comes from the organic law by which the separate particles are caused to adhere and form the mass, and which, by consequence of its coherence, we may call it a body. We can safely say, then, the leading idea conveyed in the word body, is the organization of separate parts into one concenter whole. It is the highest organic capacity which God has revealed, or manifested; and without the shadow of a doubt in our mind, the highest organic capacity possible. We stand amazed at the grandeur—the stupendous grandeur of Jehovah's designs; and are compelled to borrow the words of Paul to express ourselves; "Oh! the depths of the riches, both of the wisdom and the knowledge of God;" and that of the Psalmist: "Oh! how great is thy goodness which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee!!!

The organization of masses results from the law of chemical affinity, and those of vegetable or animal organisms, from their legitimate capacity to appropriate that which is animating to them, from the sphere in which they are placed; but how does the organization of individuals, whose flesh is full of sin, take place? How do men and women who have developed such diverse dispositions, purposes and capacities growing out of the diverse circumstances of birth, and the multitudinous influences of evil to which they are exposed—we ask. How do these become rounded into one harmonious body? By what means is this accomplished? What are the agents employed? We see the omnipotence of God displayed by organizing animals and men out of the dust of the earth, and endowing them with the capacity of elaborating and developing the phenomena of life; but pray, what is it to organize the particles of dust that have chemical affinities for each other, into a beautiful body, when compared to the work of organizing individuals, possessing personally such antagonistic interests and developments into the most perfect of all bodies?

To the foregoing questions we reply: The creative energy of God performs this marvelous work. Some may not be prepared to receive this, but they will after a while; for such will remember that Paul says, "We are (God's) workmanship, created in Christ Jesus," etc. The genesis of the earth and its inhabitants being called the creation, the latter stupendously glorious work is emphatically called "the creation of God." Do you want to see the first piece of finished work in the creation of God? Look at Rev. 3:14. It is the faithful and true witness that was the beginning of the creation of God.

But to begin back, many suppose that the term body is only used figuratively; and that we are by no means to suppose that the church is really the body of Christ. Indeed, the prevailing opinion is that men are simply required to believe certain dogmas, or theories, and then as servants or slaves, obey, and that their approval or disapproval will be accorded to them as servants merely, and that these and similar expressions are merely used just as much relatively speaking as it did Jesus. The words quoted from I Cor. 12:12 proves this, if words mean what they say. You observe the human body is used first as an illustration, and then concluded thus, "So also is Christ:" thus is Christ; in like manner is Christ. (But, says one, I thought Christ meant anointed? Well, so it does.) "But your remarks are certainly calculated to give the impression that the Son of God is not the complete Messiah or anointed." We hope they are; this is just what we are aiming at. Not one ray of luster would we take from his starry crown; we glory in God that he is the Head and Chief of this mystical body, and Paul's words are: "The body is one and hath many members." If the head is the anointed—we ask in all candor, will not every individual member be destined to a proportionate share? Understand us, we firmly believe this Scripture to characterize the body as the Christ.

This is something that's not apparent to the senses; but God affirms that it exists, and that's sufficient; but we humbly conceive it consists in the divine, heavenly unity oneness that is established between the head and the Christ, his body. This unity is like that of the Father and his son. The dear son prayed for this; we know the Holy Father would hear him. These relations may be considered as among the invisible things of him, but clearly seen or illustrated by the things that are made; and in this instance the human organism clearly illustrates the nature of his spiritual organism, and teaches us that the functions of the body, the conditions of its existence, and whatever may be predicated of it naturally, may be predicated spiritually of the Christ body.

Our answer to the question, "What is the Church?" is expressed in the language of the apostle, "The body of the Christ." We are then asked How are separate organizations to be effected? We answer, There can be no separate church organizations; the apostles argument is, there is one body, and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling. If there were two faiths and two hopes, then there could be two bodies, but not otherwise.

Keeping in mind the figure introduced by the apostle, we ask, How can additions be made to the body? By a similar process, and in the same manner as the human body—it first masticates; second, digests; finally, assimilates foreign substances. Do you see the work assigned this body in Cleveland and elsewhere? It is to assimilated foreign, or outside substances. But to prepare you for discouragement, we remark that as but a small percentage of the food digested by the human stomach is assimilated by the body, so of the many called "few are chosen," that is, assimilated by the Christ body.

You will now please note the workmen that the great head assigned as the builders. "He gave some apostles, some prophets, some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers, for the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry, for the building or edifying of the body of the Christ. Oh, that all would more constantly bear in mind our intimate relation to the great head of the Church! Not only is the whole body fitly joined together, united in the head, but they are compacted, pressed closely, knit together, made dense and firm; but how are the joints secured? Examine a joint in one of our limbs, and a moment's reflection will convince all that if only one of the two bones to be joined had been provided with ligaments, there could be no working joint effected, and oh, how very beautifully is this expressed by the apostle, compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the building of itself up in love." Baptized into the same spirit we are united, compacted; but where there is one who does not seem to be so completely united to the body, it is because he does not supply his quota of the compacting elements.

The process then, by which individuals are added or built up with the body of the Christ is by assimilating these first principles [illegible] by you that we do not particularize. The anointed Jesus is the great Master builder, hence to "ter he said, "Upon this rock I will build my church," therefore he said, "I am the resurrection and the life;" "I am the door of the sheep." His work is to create out of the fallen sons of Adam, who are alienated from the life of God—dead in trespasses and sins, earthly, sensual, devilish, sons of the great Spirit—God, who by consequence of their sonship, become like their Father, spiritual, or one with the Father and the son, identified with them just as the branches are with the parent stock. Hence, "He that is joined to the Lord is one spirit;" and therefore the one body is called the Christ, who is also called the Lord, that spirit, and the apostle affirms, "We are his workmanship created in the Christ unto good works."

My brethren and sisters in the Lord, remember there is positively but one spirit. Our blessed Master was possessed of the spirit without limit; we are by that one spirit baptized into one body. Thus he the Lord, the spirit, is the Christ or anointed, and therefore he is the body, the church, consequently the members are Christian, or the Christ-ones, or annointed ones—the Christ being a unit, and because he, in baptizing them into one body incorporates them into himself; therefore he and they are henceforth "one spirit."

WHO IS THE PRINCE OF EZEKIEL xlv. 22?

This question is of special import considering the "one great sacrifice;" for if this prince offering for himself and for the people, under the memorial institution of sacrifice, be the Christ, then did Messiah offer both for himself and the people when once "he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself;" for there cannot be a memorial of that which has not been; neither will it be denied that all the sacrifices of animals, in themselves inefficient to the putting away of sin, point, either as type or memorial, to his work who offered one sacrifice "for sins for ever," "by which one offering he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified."—(Heb. x. 10-14).

The application of the title, "the Prince," as found in the description of the reign of Christ, contained in the closing chapters of Ezekiel, is not to be judged according to the present significance of that title in our country and others, where a prince is but the son of the reigning monarch, having no kingly or governmental power, but is a subject of the kingdom or empire. A consideration of the scriptural meaning of the title of prince, as applied to the Christ, will abundantly establish the truth of this proposition, and will also manifest the true significance of the title. Messiah, then is spoken of as the prince of life. His relation to life is set forth in the following texts: "As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the son to have life in himself; for as the Father raiseth up the dead and quickeneth them, even so the son quickeneth whom he will; thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him."—(John v. 26 and 21; xvii. 3). These passages agree in demonstrating that Jesus the Christ is invested by the Father with supreme and absolute authority and power in regard to life; therefore, we have scriptural evidence that the title of Prince is expressive of supreme and absolute authority and power. Again, Christ is styled "the Prince of the kings of the earth" (Rev. i. 5), and the Kings of kings and Lord of lords—Rev. xvii. 14). These titles are evidently the same; for it would not be reasonable to hold that Messiah is "King of kings and Lord of lords," and yet occupies some inferior position in respect to "the kings of the earth" expressed by the title "the Prince."

Here then, we have the warrant of Scripture that the title of Prince is equivalent to that of king or lord. Again, if we strive to realise the glorious position of Christ, to whom "all power in heaven and earth is given" (Matt. xxviii. 18); who is far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come (Eph. i. 21), and recall the apostolic announcement of his exaltation—(Acts v. 31): "Him hath God exalted with his right hand to be a Prince and a Saviour;" we cannot fail to perceive that the title of Prince is adequately expressive of supreme and absolute authority and power as before shown. The Prince, then, is, undoubtedly, the Messiah.

But we need not leave the matter here for want of testimony. The saints are to be kings and priests, reigning with Messiah—(Rev. v. 10 and xx 6.) Would their position be a less honorable one if they were said to be princes and priests? The emphatic reply of the Spirit is, the rulers in the future age are princes. Psalm xlv. 16: "Instead of thy fathers shall be thy children, whom thou mayest make princes in all the earth." The prophecy of these closing chapters of Ezekiel, from which our title is taken, speaks of the princes of Israel generally. In the 8th verse of chap. xlv. we read, "My princes shall no more oppress my people." Need it be asked whether this does not mean that the rulers, or kings, or those that have dominon shall be just and righteous. Then when we read, in the same prophecy, of a person styled by pre-eminence the Prince, knowing that the definite article is used to distinguish this Prince from all others; and bearing in mind the scriptural significance of the title, are we not impelled to the conviction that the Prince is indeed the Christ, the chief Prince among the princes of Israel, and of all the earth; even the great Prince (Dan. xii. 1), the Prince of Peace.—(Isaiah ix. 6)? Thus we have an abundance of Scripture giving an affirmative answer to the question forming our title.

Suppose, however, for the sake of further manifesting the truth, we take up the position that the Prince is not the Christ; to what will it lead? The 21st verse of the last chapter decrees that a certain portion of the land shall be for the Prince, and the sanctuary shall be in the midst thereof. Now, Messiah is to build the temple of the Lord (Zech. vi. 12), and as the land for the site of the temple is now in the possession of the prince by a decree of the Almighty, he the Christ, the king of all the earth, will on such a hypothesis, be under the necessity of petitioning the Prince to grant him the land whereon to build. In the portion of the Prince, also, the sons of Zadok, the then immortalized brethren of Christ, are to have a place for their houses—(Ezek. xlviii. 9-11 and xlv. 4). This arrangement puts some personage—we are not told who—styled the Prince, at the head of the saints; therefore, Christ, if he is not this prince is not their head. There are to be two orders of priests, the sons of Zadok, and the Levitical priesthood restored. The prophecy contains ordinances for the service of both these orders; and for the Prince, who is also a priest. Other parts of the Scriptures treat of both orders of priests, but we have no mention of the Prince or his priestly office. Messiah is to be a priest upon his throne (Zech. vi. 13), and yet the prophecy we are considering, if the Prince be not he, is silent concerning his priesthood.

But enough; we cannot accept a position involving us in such inconsistencies. A part of the Messiah's work is to raise his household from the dead, judge each one according to his [illegible] reject and punish the unworthy, immortalize the approved, and also constitute them kings and priests to reign with him.—(John v. 29; Luke xiv. 14; 2 Tim. iv. 1; 2 Cor. v. 10; Rom. ii. 6-10, 16, and Rev. xx. 6). These are the sons of Zadok, whose habitations are to be round about the sanctuary in the Prince's portion, in the most glorious time when Messiah shall build the temple of the Lord, in which he and his glorified brethren are ministers. The Prince, therefore, is the most distinguished among the priests, in whose portion is the sanctuary in the midst thereof, and the residences of the immortal priesthood cannot be any other than the Christ. The Prince, who is also a priest, for whom there are special ordinances separate from the ordinances from all the other priests, must be the Messiah.

"UNTIL HE COMES."

The above words are chiseled over the grave of A. J. Gordon. He was one of the ablest premillennialists among modern teachers. His book, "Ecce Venit," is one of the best on the subject. Perhaps not all his conclusions will be accepted, for the Lord's coming is such a vast subject that we are liable to be mistaken in any statement of the details. But premillennialists are in the main a unit on the essentials, and if we understand the Scriptures there is much more said about the second coming of the Lord than the first. Some have gone so far, and these are among the most spiritually minded Christians, as to say that they find twenty times as much Scripture pointing to his return as there is to the first advent.

Anxiety as a rule, indicates a lack of faith. If the disciples had trusted their Master more, they would have been less concerned for the hungry people.

Virtue that must always be watched is not worth the watching.

Strike from mankind the principle of faith and men would have no more history than a flock of sheep.

EDITORIAL

A countryman is as warm in jeans as is a king in velvet, and the truth is as comfortable in homely language as it is in fine speech.

Many a man who claims to be as honest as the day is long would not like for the searchlight of truth to be turned on his night record.

Everybody may be endured except continual prosperity.

TWO WAYS OF DEALING WITH OFFENSE—REAL OR RUMORED.

"Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving yourselves" (Jas. i. 22)—"The law of the Lord is perfect."

This perfection shines forth with great brilliancy in every part. Contrast the law of man, written or unwritten, with the law of Christ; and its darkness only tends to enhance the brightness of the divine system, and proves it to be in verity and truth, "a light shining in a dark place."

This is exhibited in a striking manner in connection with the law of offences. Contrast the natural with the divine way, and see the barbarous ugliness and folly of the former, and the infinite glory and beauty contained in the latter. The divine side is full of the highest beneficence, and sublimest and grandest philosophy, and presents a picture so beautiful as to fill the heart with joy and admiration.

When a man can overcome himself in this matter, and conform to the divine way, he will be then not far from the kingdom of God, for underlying and interwoven with this way, are principles lofty as heaven, and enduring as eternity.

Let us glance at the natural way:

If you hear, or if you have apparent reason to think, a brother has transgressed, straightly believe it entirely. Human reason is unerring, and sure to be right in its conclusions; while rumor of course, is quite infallible, and always gives the exact truth. Believing the brother has sinned, do not go direct to him to enquire concerning the fact or bearing of the matter; for if he have sinned he may sin again and deny it; therefore you will not believe anything he may say contrary to your conviction. You have it on undoubted authority, and your informant would not have told you if he doubted its truth; besides, he is a man of sound sense and honor and possessed of keen perceptions, and thorough understanding of human nature; consequently, it must be indisputably true, both in fact and inference, "for where there is smoke there must be fire."

Feeling this, what is the next step? Why! tell this to all with whom you come in contact. Others have some knowledge of the affair, and can add something to what you already know. You are sure to obtain additional evidence if you seek it.

The offender has wounded your honor by his transgression, and of course this must be vindicated at all cost, for what is a man's life worth if his character be not secure from calumny?

Sin must, as a matter of justice, be punished; and, as you know all about the transgression, you must, however contrary it may appear to your expressed desire, seek, in some way, to punish him by convicting him of sin, and denouncing him.

With this object, take one or two, who you have good reason to consider favorable to your position, to the brother, that they may witness and testify to your denunciation of him, and his consequent discomfiture. Impress him with a supreme sense of your injured dignity, and make him appear as evil as you can; you will shine all the brighter by the contrast. Ignore his past good works and faithfulness. If you consider these, you may be tempted to act unjustly to yourself. Do not ask him if there be any truth in the affair; that will savor of reasoning with him, as a brother; you must be true to your nature and feeling, and treat him as an enemy, therefore rate him soundly and heap coals of fire on his bowed head—not the fire of pity and kind deeds, this is not the time for them; and Solomon says, "There is a time for every thing;" but the fire of just and honorable indignation; this is the correct thing. Threaten to take extreme action, unless he humbly apologize and promise not to do the like again. You may overwhelm him by this; afterwards you can promise to extend your gracious forgiveness.

If the brother be "weak in the faith," your righteous action may drive him from the truth, which, of course, will be additional proof that he was evil, and unworthy, and deserved much more than he suffered at your hands. If he be strong in the truth, and in the knowledge of God's word and ways, he will perhaps be saddened and grieved (for reasons unknown to you, viz., that Christ's law is so abused; and for the rarity of Christian charity in the matter. His sadness and grief will be proof to you of his guilt, and consequent shame.

If he have very strong faith in Deity, and can confidently rest in the Lord, you will interpret his confidence as hardness of heart, and act accordingly. In any case you will keep far away from him, lest he contaminate you. A man is known by the company he keeps, and you must see to it that your character be not prejudiced in the eyes of others. Not only avoid him yourself, but, as you know him thoroughly, it is your duty to make his character known to others, so that they may not be hurt by him.

The result is gratifying to you. It has afforded you the just satisfaction of exposing and punishing an offender, and vindicating your own honor, a matter of great importance.

The Divine Way.

"If thy brother shall trespass, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone" (Matt. xviii. 15).

(I have omitted the words "against thee." Some four or five critical editions, and some four early manuscripts do not contain them. And the text with the omission appears to me to read more in harmony with other parts of the Scriptures).

This is an affirmative answer to the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and fixes grave responsibility upon every brother of Christ.

The injunction to warn the wicked is as binding upon us as it was upon Ezekiel, and the omission on our part to give warning to a righteous man who may turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity will bring us under the same condemnation as would the prophet's neglect (Ezekiel iii. 17-21).

Yes, we shall certainly be answered to Christ for our attitude toward our brethren, and as to how we have performed that part of Christ's service due to them. If we can get this idea firmly implanted in our minds, our duty will be easily recognized and our service in this direction rendered much easier.

It is a command of Christ of paramount importance that we "love one another."

"Let love be without dissimulation." "Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love." (Rom. xiii. 9-10). "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth, through the Spirit, unto unfeigned love of brethren: see that ye love one another with pure heart fervently" (1 Pet. i. 22). "Above all things, have fervent love among yourselves, for love shall cover a multitude of sins" (1 Pet. iv. 8).

This is the most vital principle in the whole counsel of God. Love is the only present existing principle among us that will continue eternally (1 Cor. xiii. 8). Its claims are inculcated and reiterated more emphatically and frequently than the use of any other principle. This certainly is not without significance. "Love is the fulfilling of the law; he that loveth another hath fulfilled the law" (Rom. xiii. 8-10).

"Let us love one another; for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God and knoweth not God; for God is love" (John vi. 8). "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen. and how can he love God whom he hath not seen? And this is the commandment that we have from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also" (John iv. 20, 21).

Owing, perhaps to our aggressive attitude in contending earnestly for the faith, we are liable to overlook, or under-estimate the superlative importance of this principle. We are frail, and whilst building up one side of our spiritual fabric, we may unconsciously allow another to suffer from the stress brought to bear upon it.

This golden thread of love runs through all God's revelation: from Adam to Christ: from Christ to John. Without it we are positively nothing (1 Cor. xiii. 2). It was inculcated under the Mosaic dispensation. "Thou shalt hate thine brother in thine heart, thou shalt in anywise rebuke thy neighbor, and not suffer sin upon him. Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (Lev. xix. 17, 18).

"If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death" (1 John v. 16).

"Love suffereth long, and is kind; is not easily provoked: thinketh no evil: heareth all things (or covereth the faults of others), and endureth all things" (1 Cor. xiii. 5-7).

When the force of the passages is fully realized, and acted upon, the commandments of Christ are sure to have their full place and weight: "For this is love that we walk after his commandments." In such cases the offender will not be evily thought of, or spoken of; for "love covereth all things," and the transgressors' status and feelings will be as fully considered and respected as one's own. Yea! much more so. Neither will he be visited from motives and feelings personal to the visitor, but solely and purely for the good of the brother who has transgressed. The love of Christ will constrain such a one to seek to uphold the truth, and to obtain a recognition of its claims, and obedience to its precepts. With the object of gaining, not of sacrificing, his brother, he will, in the spirit of meekness, strive to restore the faulty; and will consider his own imperfections and weakness and consequent liability to fall into temptations and transgression (Gal. vi. 1). Trivial matters of intended disparagement of a brother will not enter or occupy his mind. He will be ready with the cloak of love for human frailties, while serious detraction of a brother, he will refuse to listen to, as unworthy of a son of God; and an offence. He will silence the would-be scandal retailer by the admonition, "Speak not evil one of another, brethren" (Jas. iv. 11).

But where he has good reason to think sin exists, he will, in the spirit of love and obedience, immediately communicate with the brother. A visit made in such a spirit will generally be satisfactory, and bear good fruit. The mere mention of the matter at this right quarter, may immediately shew the trespass to be mythical both in motive and action. (What a terrible injustice and trespass if it had been previously talked of to others). Or it may reveal the fact that the trespass was committed ignorantly or undesignedly. Exhibition of the truth's bearings will in such a case be sufficient to shew an earnest brother his exact position; and, profitting by the brother's righteous example, he will be thereby "provoked to love and good works." The offending brother is thus benefited: and the truth is upheld, and Christ is glorified. On the other hand, enquiry may shew the matter of offence to have a grain of truth in it, and a bushel of misrepresentation. Side-shaking of the head, and unintelligible hints which may mean almost anything, and help to convey grave innuendos may have made a mountain out of the original mole-hill. You do the truth and the brother good service by thus affording him an opportunity of explaining his part and position. Again, perhaps the trespass was committed in a moment of weakness, reveals the operation of a besetting sin, which has caused the brother painful and continued remorse and anguish of mind annd against which he has struggled more or less successfully for some time. He is distressed sufficiently. Upbraid him not, lest he be overwhelmed with "over-much sorrow," and in despair fall away. Forgive him in sincerity and truth, even to seventy times seven, as you would have your trespasses forgiven! Point him to a merciful deity for further forgiveness, and do all you can to encourage him. Your object is to gain him for Christ's sake. Do not be sparing in your efforts. Pray constantly for him, and let him see that you are really anxiously concerned for his eternal well being. Remember that "he that converteth a sinner from the error of his ways, shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins" (Jas. v. 20). Many weak and falling ones may be upheld by such Christ-like treatment. There is a further possibility of its being an extreme case, where the brother has designedly trespassed. "Judge not," even in this. Be merciful. Take the God-like attitude of "come now, let us reason together."

If, after your utmost effort there is no alteration of position, take further and necessary measures; and, if finally the ecclesia have to take action, and sorrowfully withdraw him, remember even this should be done in love, for the good of the offender. "For the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus" (1 Cor. v. 5). "Count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother" (2 Thess. iii. 15). In the carrying out of the commandments there is no room for spite, or tale bearing, evil speaking, or personal animus of any kind. Let no brother imagine he can "work the work of God" in that spirit.

That is not obeying Christ's law, although it may possibly have that appearance. It is the operation and prompting of the carnal mind, and to be "carnally minded" is death; for the carnal mind is enmity against God, and is not subject to the law of God (Rom. viii. 6,7) Christ knoweth the heart and motive, and he will judge accordingly.

Those who act from fleshly motives are among brethren what Samson's foxes were to the Philistines' cornfields. If there be any such, let them read carefully through Proverbs, and particularly note every one of Solomon's wholesome remarks concerning such characters.

Fleshly feelings, uncontrolled by divine wisdom, are a terrible snare, and lead to Sheol, and those who sow to them "will reap corruption."

"If ye have bitter envyings and strife in your hearts, glory not, and lie not against the truth. This wisdom descendeth not from above, but is earthly, sensual, devilish. For where envying and strife is, there is confusion, and every evil work." "But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy, and good fruits. Without partiality, and without hypocrisy. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace, of them that make peace" (James iii. 14-18).

They only who take Christ's attitude in this matter will of the spirit "reap life everlasting."

It is essentially "sowing the spirit," and will be so regarded, and rewarded at the righteous tribunal of Christ, where doubtless many, who have been condemned even by their brethren, will, much to the chagrin of their detractors, be welcomed by Christ with approval, while the self-considered more righteous will be sent empty away.

We are all faulty, and have great need of mercy and forbearance, for "If Thou Lord shouldest mark iniquity, O Lord who shall stand? But there is forgiveness with Thee that Thou mayest be feared" (Ps. cxxx. 3, 4).

Therefore, "Let all bitterness and wrath, and anger and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: and be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God, for Christ's sake, hath forgiven you" (Eph. iv. 31, 32).

It makes a difference in the force of a sentence whether a man be behind it or not.

AMONG THE BRETHREN.

Eld. C. C. Maple.

Our report will be brief at this time sickness during the past week has prevented us from doing all that we had expected to do. We hope, however, to be able to report more in the next issue of The Restitution.

We have had the pleasure during Elder Huggins' stay in the West of preaching to the Cleveland brethren. It has been our privilege also of preaching upon two Sundays to a mixed congregation two sermons on the Kingdom of God.

I. What the Kingdom of God is not.

In this I considered: It is not the Church. It is not a spiritual Kingdom in the heart.

II. What the Kingdom of God is under this theme.

(I). It will be Divine Political Dominion established upon the earth.

(II.) The Kingdom is to be established upon the land bequeathed to Abraham for an everlasting possession.

(III.) The Kingdom will be the Kingdom of Israel restored.

(IV.) It will be established or set up when Christ comes again.

(V.) The Kingdom is for who? These though we presented with the Scripture and we know was entirely new to many. One man who said that the Kingdom was in the heart, and that the kingdom was the Church, has changed his mind. But there are not many nowadays who are interested in the study of the word. They are willing that the preacher do their thinking for them.

We shall say a few things next week regarding the prospect at Elyria. We hope you have all read in last Restitution the article on our opening there.

Pray for the cause in Ohio.

CHRIST THE PASSOVER LAMB.

Before we can apprehend Christ in all the detail, all-sufficiency, and many-sidedness of his atoning death, we need know him as the one who removes the condemnation of sin, as typified in the Passover.

"Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us" (1. Cor. 5:7). When Jehovah was about to bring Israel out of Egypt, he said to Pharaoh, through Moses, "I will put a division," or a "redemption" (margin) "between my people and thy people" (Ex. 8:23). The Hebrew word rendered "division" should be as in the margin, rendered "Redemption." The word is translated "redemption" in Psalm 111:9, where we read, The Lord "sent redemption unto his people." The word is also rendered "redemption" in Ps. 130:7—"With him is plenteous redemption." The word means to sever by a ransom hence, to release. Practically the same statement is repeated by Moses, when he tells them what Jehovah is about to do, "That ye may know that the Lord doth put a difference* between the Egyptians and Israel" (Ex. 11:7). What that difference was, we are plainly told in Exodus 12, when the Lord passed over the children of Israel in grace, because of the shed blood of the Paschal Lamb, and passed through the midst of the Egyptians in judgment.

I. Direction

"Jehovah spake" (Ex. 12:1). "The Lord spake," settles all questions, solves all difficulties, scatters all doubts, sways all though, sanctifies all service, satisfies all longings, searches all motives, and separates from all fears, to those who meet the Lord in the authority of his word by the faith of their hearts. One clear, concise direction to the children of Israel was, "Take every man a lamb and kill it on the fourteenth day of the month" (Ex. 12:6). There were many lambs killed on that day, but lambs are not spoken of: it is "the lamb," clearly showing that the lamb was typical of the Lamb of God, who would in the fullness of time be slain for us.

Before the English took Quebec under General Wolfe, the French thought themselves safe, in what seemed to them, an impregnable position. The city was poised, like some eagle in its nest, on an inaccessible height, as it proudly looked down upon the bosom of the flowing St. Lawrence. But the English had discovered a path, and in the silent midnight the army with muffled oars, floated on the ebb tide, the heights scaled, and the city taken. So Jehovah found a way to spare the first-born of Israel, not because the Israelites were any better than the Egyptians, but because he in his grace had loved them and had determined to save them (see the five references to Jehovah's love to Israel, and why he loved them, in Deuteronomy 4:37; 7:7; 10:15; 23:5; 33:3). The word of the gospel is, as Elihu said long ago, "Deliver him from going down to the pit; I have found a ransom," or as the Scripture might be rendered, "Release him for a ransoming price, for I have found an atonement (Job 33:24, margin). This is the message of the Divine Revelation of the word, namely: "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures" (1. Cor. 15:3). Not according to men's opinions, nor men's thoughts, but "according to the Scriptures."

II. Provision.

The slain lamb was God's provision for Israel's safety, even as Christ's sacrifice on our account is God's provision for the guilty race of man. The passover is significantly called "The Lord's Passover" (Ex. 12:27). So with Christ God is no silent onlooker. His mind thought out the plan of salvation. His grace provided the sacrifice for salvation. His hand of power sustained Christ in his acting in salvation. His heart of love was manifested in the cross of salvation. His words of cheer encouraged Christ in his onward march to the goal of salvation. His walk of communion kept step with Christ in his obedience unto death to procure salvation, and in his Son there is the unfolding of all God's purpose relative to salvation, for he is the divine word. "The Logos" who proclaims all the Father is and does. The salvation of God's providing is gracious in its gift, complete in its character, holy in its nature, sufficient in its contents, perfect in its blessing, eternal in its betowment, powerful in its working, and answering to God in its outcome.

Many years ago a venturesome whaleship, driven from her course found a deserted brig drifting among the ice-floes of the polar sea. Deserted by her crew, her rudder guided by no human hand, she had sailed, like the ship of the "Ancient Mariner," into that silent sea. Her gallant discoverers brought their prize through untold perils into port. But the tidings spread that the staunch ship, which for well nigh two years had sailed among the frozen horrors of the northern seas, without a living soul within her open sides, was one of an English fleet that the British government had sent to rescue the heroic Franklin. Then it was that the United States did a beautiful, as well as a noble act.

The U. S. A. government fitted up the vessel in every minutest detail. From stem to stern her old aspect was restored. On deck in her cabin, not an article was lacking to render her complete. And then, with grateful courtesy the costly gift was sent across the ocean and given back, a freewill offering to the government of England. The glory of the deed belonged to America alone. No British seaman had helped to save her. Not a farthing of English money had aided in her restoration. Even in her voyage across the Atlantic, the crew that manned, the officers that commanded were of America's navy. For England there remained nothing to do. She could only accept the salvation of her vessel as a free and generous gift. Bishop Cheney well says, "Oh! type of God's work for man; image of the simplicity of men's accepting faith. Brother, your soul has long been drifting amidst icebergs, tossed on a heaving sea, it is a miracle like a ship abandoned to the seas, of Providence that it has not sunk beneath the depths. And now God would save it. He would rescue it from danger. He would restore its long lost peace, its heavenly hope, its shattered purity, and give it back to you redeemed and saved. But God will do it all. He will not give his glory to another. He will not let you add one solitary item to re-

*The Hebrew word signifies "a difference in a marvelous and glorious manner," hence, to separate and thus to distinguish." The word is so used in different relations. The word is rendered "separated" in Exodus 33:16, where Moses speaks of the Lord's presence with his people making a decided difference between them and other people. The same word is rendered "sever" and "setapart" in Exodus 8:22; 9:4; Ps. 4:3. The Hebrew word also translated "shew marvellous" in relation to the Lord's exclusive "lovingkindness" (Ps. 17:7); and in Ps. 139:14, the Psalmist uses the same word, when he refers to his body as "wonderfully made." In each of these Scriptures there is the thought of distinction as well as difference.

deeming love, or pay one farthing for the blessings of salvation. There is absolutely nothing for you to do but to accept the gift. And this is faith. Oh take him at his word!"

III. Application.

It was not sufficient that the blood of the lamb had been shed; it was to be placed by means of a bunch of hyssop on the side posts and lintel of the house. There had to be an application of the blood. The sufficient cause of God's salvation is found in the provision of his grace, but the efficient means of salvation is by virtue of our faith in Christ. The atonement of the Saviour only benefits those who accept the Saviour and his atonement.

There is a legend that on the night of the Exodus a young Jewish maiden—the first-born of the family—was so troubled on her sick-bed that she could not sleep. "Father," she anxiously inquired, "are you sure that the blood is there?" He replied that he had ordered it to be sprinkled on the lintel. The restless girl will not be satisfied until her father has taken her up and carried her to the door to see for herself: and lo, the blood was not there. The order had been neglected, but before midnight the father made haste to put on his door the sacred token of protection. The legend may be false, but it teaches a very weighty and solemn admonition to every sinful soul who may be near eternity and is not yet sheltered under the atonement of Jesus Christ. It is not enough to know there is a Saviour provided; he must be the Saviour accepted.—Serial Bible Course.

ZACCHAEUS.

J. M. Kirkpatrick, St. Bride's, Partick.

"And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and said unto him, Zacchaeus, make haste, and come down; for today I must abide at thy house."—St. Luke xix. 5 (R. V.)

Two histories set close together in this gospel, show how diverse were the ways of Christ with men. At Jericho, by the wayside, sat the blind man who called for help, till he thrust himself into notice; there also was Zacchaeus, who sought only to see Jesus, "who he was," and neither expected nor planned to have notice taken of him. In his case our Lord did not wait to have his attention attracted, or service offered to him. He exercised his royal right of claiming the service which he required.

To have seen Jesus, it is plain, would have been a sufficient gratification to Zacchaeus; for curiosity, however reverent, appears as his principal motive. To see, and not to be seen, he climbed up into the sycamore tree. But the narrative, which expresses how unexpected and sudden was the notice taken of him—"when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and said"—brings out the manner in which the whole situation lay clear beforehand to the mind of Christ. There is no sign of surprise on his part, of uncertainty, of pause that he might grasp circumstances unforseen. And the impression which this readiness made upon Zacchaeus is of the same kind as Nathaniel is said to have gathered, when he asked of Jesus, "Whence knowest thou me?" and received the answer, "When thou wast under the fig-tree I saw thee." Amongst the instruments of the authority, unique in character and intensity, which our Saviour exhibited over the spirits of men, were these words and deeds of his, which made them feel that he was one who knew their downsitting and their uprising, and was acquainted with all their ways.

Our Lord entirely transformed the purpose of Zacchaeus by what he said to him. Zacchaeus meant to be satisfied if he could obtain a view of our Lord as he passed through Jericho. But our Lord caused him to be brought far nearer to himself than the interest of a mere spectator could effect. Not to stir interest, but to win disciples is Christ's desire. He was not content with a spectator, even though his curiosity had paid so much homage of ingenuity and effort as Zacchaeus had shown. He summoned such a follower as would put himself, his house, and all his resources at his master's disposal. So Christ said, "Make haste, and come down, for today I must abide at thy house."

In very many ways the human spirit confesses the attraction which it finds in Jesus Christ. Art acknowledges the poetical and mystical fascination of the gospels. The student of morality recognizes in them the delineation of a character and an ideal profoundly original, distinctive, and of ethereal beauty. Even to an unsympathetic historian, their pages present a problem which cannot be passed unnoticed—what was the transcendent personality, whose influence set the course for the voyage of humanity through so many ages. Thus, in every generation spectators gather about our Lord "to see him, who he was." But, until we place our hearts and all that fills them at his disposal, as Zacchaeus placed his house and his possessions, we are but spectators of his presence. And it is not to attract spectators, but to attach disciples, that he shows himself to us.

Although, however, our Saviour bade Zacchaeus make so great an advance as from interest to obedience, the words which he used were still humble, an appeal rather than a command. Those who murmured at Christ said, "he has gone to be guest with a publican." Indeed, to be taken as a guest was the whole of his own request, and though he possessed the rights of a king, he preferred to employ the persuasive tone of a petitioner.

This accords with our own experience of the voice of Christ, as it speaks to us now in the words of the New Testament. There is but one book there, the Acts of the Apostles, which tells the history of what was wrought by the might of the ascended Lord of glory: while there are four separate shrines for the record of the humility and sufferings of the Son of Mary. With the voice of these lowly days he approaches our hearts and appeals to them. It is a poor man who asks us to help him: it is one of boundless and penetrating human sympathy who seeks for the heart to be opened to him, one whose ill-treatment, whose patient endurance of injustice, whose unquenchable forgiving pity, are his arguments with us that we should yield to his advances. And when, amazed at so much patience, pierced by the sight of such meekness, holiness, and love in agony, we must adore this crucified sufferer, we find that the living Lord of power and glory has laid hold on our hearts. The life and sorrows of the days on earth supply the power which convinces and conquers hearts for Christ, and subjects them to his kingly rule.

If Christ's word changed the purpose of Zacchaeus, Christ's presence changed his life. Zacchaeus felt that his holy guest was the condemnation of the luxurious appointments which his wealth had gathered together. All these costly things, when he would have brought them out to do honor to the occasion, were so many accusers of the fraud and rapacity which had paid their price. "Not in rich furniture or fine array" could one do honor to Christ, if the splendors were tarnished by an origin in dishonest gain. So Zacchaeus stood before Christ, and gave all his goods away. He stripped himself bare of these possessions because "that day salvation was come to that house," and the house and the life must be made as simple and sincere and pure as he who had entered into both heart and dwelling.

The words of those who said "that he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner" were falsified before they were spoken. Christ had given his presence to Zacchaeus the publican, and he was a publican and sinner no more.

With the humble confession let us likewise say of the guest who seeks admission to our hearts, "He is come to be guest with a man that is a sinner," and with earnest sincerity let us do grateful homage to his presence, by casting out all thoughts and joys that we cannnot set before him for his service.

When once thou visitest the heart,
Then truth begins to shine,
Then earthly vanities depart,
Then kindles love divine.

THE STRAIGHT GATE AND NARROW WAY.

Selected by Bro. O. J. Allard.

"Straight is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth to eternal life, and few there be that find it."—Jesus.

Let us, at least for the moment, consider this shattering statement of Jesus, not as describing the difficulty of getting into any sort of success, efficiency and poise of soul while we live. Look at it once, not as a day of judgment decree, but as a simple law of our human nature.

That law is that whoever gauges and models himself after other people is on the road to deterioration and eventually ruin; that all real moral advancement and true success are solitary and along the lone trail.

Men go to the devil in crowds. One goes because the rest are going. The boy gets drunk because he does not like to reinse the fellows. The politician steals because he hears they all do it.

In fact the devil's other name is "They-all-do-it." Girls become bad usually trying to keep step. Almost all vice is social: almost all righteousness that is of any account is purely personal.

The real gist of any kind of genuine salvation, Jew or gentile, is that a man had formed a partnership of two, himself and God, against the universe and all that dwell therein. Saving one's soul is, in its last essence, a sort of a declaration of independence, a sworn allegiance to one's own inner, individual convictions and ideals, and a renunciation of all outside authority.

This makes plain why the Bible tells us to beware of the world. The world means the mob—other people. The prince of this world is one of the names Jesus gives satan. "He is Mr. They-all-do it."

When the devil was cast out of the Gadarene swine he confessed his name was Legion. God is one; the devil is the many.

The truth of this appears in ordinary business. The kind of clerk that is hardest to find is the one who simply does what we ought to do. Says Kipling:

Creation's cry goes up
Give us the men who do the work
For which they get the wage.
From age to elevated age!

It is a pity, but true as gospel, that the average servant is inefficient, the average mother incompetent, the average business man incapable, the average actor a poor one, and the average preacher a bore.

In fact the average of any class of men is below the average, so to speak. The world's work is carried on by makeshifts. If any man will train himself properly and will correctly perform the duties of his calling, whatever it is, he will find that people call him a remarkable person, unusually extraordinary!

If you want to amount to anything, follow the gleam, satisfy yourself and not others; go in for your own self-respect and not the admiration of the crowd. The curse of many a youth is that he has been content to do as well as those about him.

You have heard possibly many a sermon on "What Shall I do to be Saved?" Here is one on "What Shall I do to be Ruined?" And it is a short one: Do nothing! Follow the crowd. Aim for the average.

"For wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be that walk therein."

HOW GOES THE WORLD?

Newspaper clipping sent by Bro. Adams.

Since these articles began, this suggestion has been offered:

"The term 'Church' is often misused. The word comes from the Greek 'ecclesia' compounded of 'ek'—out of—and 'kaleoinn'—to call—hence, 'those called out from the world to be disciples of Christ.' Any number of persons congregated together, no matter by what name they are known, if they are still subject to their old passions appetites and carnality are no more the 'ecclesia' than children, armed with tin swords constitutes the United States army. Mere head belief, confirming, baptizing in water, 'joining the church,' the evangelist, pastor or the meeting house without being born anew (John 3:3) is all in vain. Thousands have made shipwreck following false teaching to the contrary. We stand corrected.

Rev. W. W. McArthur, founder of the Bible School of Healing and Life, Denver, writes regarding the trend of affairs: (1) "No. Good and evil are being intensified. Acts 14:15." Question (2) Are churchmembers growing more spiritually minded? Reply: "A few are growing more spiritual, but the majority are growing more worldly." No. (3) Is there a tendency to drift from these beliefs: The "vicarious atonement," "witness of the Spirit," "Baptism of the Holy Spirit," and toward the Unitarian belief that Christ is not God made manifest in the flesh? Reply: A growing tendency in some quarters toward the Unitarian idea. In others different terms are used to express the same old doctrines which have been and are considered orthodox."

Rev. A. H. C. Morse, Ph. D., pastor of the Strong Place Baptist church, Brooklyn, N. Y., whose sermons and writings appear frequently in the Christian Herald, New York City, replies as follows: (1) "The Scripture evidently teaches in places that the Lord's return was promised Personally I have no difficulty upon this subject, for I find my opinion in other passages, as for instance, the parable of the Kingdom coming gradually. Mark 4: 13-30 and similar passages. I believe that Christian work will go on until eventually there will be a great burst of blessing upon us and behold the kingdom will be here." (2) Are church members more spiritual, loyal and opposed to worldly amusements? Reply: Yes, there never was an age when the churches were so filled with truly Christian people as today, and they have a vastly more intelligent idea of the Christian problem than those who have gone before." (3) Is genuine conversion (John 3:3) and the Pentecostal experience emphasized as much as formerly? "Yes, and the preachers have a much more intelligent notion of what constitutes conversion; they render a better help to all young people that they may walk worthily and they all seek for their people the best blessings of the Spirit."

The church of the Brethren (Dunkard) is represented in this article by Mr. John R. Snyder, of Bellefontaine, Ohio, an able writer in their official organ, is a worker with the prominent evangelist, Dr. French E. Oliver. Regarding question (1) whether the people will grow better he says: "I do not find the Scripture to sustain such view. The weight of evidence seems to be on the other side: See Matt. 10:16-22; 13:47-50; 24:4-21; 25:31-36; Luke 17: 28-30; Jas. 5:1-9 and many others. Question (2) touches the amusement question: As a rule I fear that the church as a whole is becoming more lax, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. There is a faithful remnant which is holding to the faith, but the great movement of the church members seem to be worldward. There is a lack of loyalty to the church of Christ that is appalling when viewed in the light of God's word." (3) "My experience in the evangelistic field is that Spiritual power is not insisted on as in years past. The desire seems to be for numbers rather than conversions. 'If fruits of the spirit' were more strongly insisted on, the church would not find itself in the position we assume today in bowing to the world in foolishness in dress, amusements, preferment and position. But the Lord is selecting out his people who will be ready when he cometh."

Rev. R. L. Cosand, pastor Friends church, (Quaker) Grant, Neb., replies: (1) "Scripture teaches world will grow worse until time of gentiles be fulfilled, then Christ will come for his bride which is only those who have been through the Pentecostal baptism. II. Thes. 2:1-3; I. Tim. 4:1-3 and 4:3; Luke 17:22-36; Matt. 24:36-42. When Christ and his bride go to the marriage supper of the lamb the Spirit of God will leave this world then comes the great tribulation, after which Christ will return to earth and reign a thousand years and afterward comes the great judgment day. Matt. 24:20-24, 29-31; Mark 13:24-27; Rev. 20: 1-3. (2) "Church members as a class are not as spiritually minded as they have been in the past. If by loyal you mean punctual to attend church service and help in the real work of the church, I say No. As a class they are becoming less opposed to worldly amusements. In fact, majority of churches encourage these things by having all kinds of amusements in their church buildings." (3) As a rule genuine conversion, nor the Pentecostal experience are emphasized as formerly, although a certain class of preachers do insist emphatically on both, and if you accept the Bible as true you must believe they are necessary. Without holiness (or as revised version says sanctification) no man shall see the Lord. Heb. 12: 14. A man is not holy until he has had the Pentecostal experience."

"WHO ONLY HATH IMMORTALITY."

William Sheldon.

"I charge thee in the sight of God . . . that thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukeable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ: which in his times he shall show who is the blessed and only potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see" I. Tim. 6: 13-16).

Who is the personage here spoken of as the one "who only hath immortality?" Some suppose that God the Father is meant—but this view makes the text deny immortality to Christ, and to all the angels, by attributing it to God exclusively. The objection cannot be obviated by saying that the text means that God only has underived immortality; for firstly, nothing is said about "underived" immortality in the text, so it must be read into the text before it can be read out of it; and, secondly, derived immortality is all that is claimed for human souls, as well as angels; so to quote this text in opposition to the doctrine of soul-immortality, while claiming that it refers to God the Father, and while insisting that it alludes only to underived immortality, is worse than a waste of time, since no one claims underived immortality for the soul, all claiming that it was derived from God at its creation, as really as was angelic immortality.

Who, then, is the personage alluded to as the only one having immortality? This one which the Father shall show, or manifest in kingly power, for the Father shall send Jesus Christ to earth as the blessed and only potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality—that is in the count of kings and lords of earth, he is the only immortal one; for the contrast is not an unlimited one between Christ and the upper realm of angelic and deific existence and nature, but a limited and specified contrast between Christ and earthly kings and lords. Christ being made superior to them all—King of kings, and Lord of lords—being the only immortal one in the entire list, and only potentate left in the long catalogue of kings; for Christ is to be not only a potentate on earth, but the only potentate left, he only being immortal; while expecting from henceforth till his foes be made his footstool, he is dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; and the revelator describes him as coming from heaven to smite the nations, while bearing the inscription, "King of kings, and Lord of lords." Rev. 19:15-16.

But it is objected that the language, "Whom no man hath seen, nor can see," would not apply to Christ. Yes, it would, when understood with reference to his present capacity and dwelling, in unapproachable light—mortal eye has never seen him there, and never can behold him there. If we should make an application of the language outside of this specified dwelling place, and apply it to the Father, we should be confronted with the Saviour's statment, "The pure in heart shall see God." So the objection is as strong against its application to the Father as to the Son: but when applied to Christ in his present capacity and limited dwelling place, all is plain.

If Christ is the only one among earthly potentates who has attained unto immortality, certainly other human beings are not immortal, as they do not grade higher than kings. In his own person, as the first-fruits to immortality from the mortal realm, Christ hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light (2 Tim. 1:10), that is, he has manifested it in his own person, and it is now proclaimed to mortals through the gospel. Christ obtained it at his resurrection: "Christ being raised from the dead, dieth no more." The saints will obtain it at their resurrection. "This mortal shall put on immortality." Then we shall be immortal souls, but not bodiless souls, Christ being the physical pattern.—Our Hope.

A HERETIC?

An interesting batch of questions was asked by one J. H. Painter in the "Christian Oracle." Here are the questions:

"Is the man who thingks he sees evidence that the book of Isaiah has more than one author, a heretic? Who will so affirm? As long as he does not dispute the statements of the book, how can he be unsound in the faith? And suppose one is of opinion that the whole Pentateuch was not written by Moses—especially that part which records his death—can he not be a Christian and hold that opinion? Who will say that he cannot? What does it matter whether one thinks those books were written before the exile or afterwards, and that there are slight inaccuracies he and there in them, from some cause or another, if he yet believes in Christ and trusts in him for salvation, is he not a Christian? And if he hold one theory, may even if he holds that the Bible is inspired only to the extent that it inspires its readers, but still believes that Jesus Christ is the son of God, does he not believe enough to be a Christian? He may be wrong in theory, or views, or he may be right, but what difference does it make when he can be a Christian in either case?"

This is a sample of the material coming from the "critics den," and is so worded as to deceive the very elect if it were possible.

Look out for the fellow who is always saying: "What harm is there in it?" Or, "what difference does it make?"

Here is some difference anyhow: The New Testament writers say that Isaiah wrote chapters fifty-third and others, which come on this side of Isa. 53: Either the New Testament writers were telling the truth or they weren't! Which will you have?

There is proof sufficient to every Bible believer that Moses was the author of the Pentateuch. We except the obituary of course which is different in style than the other.

Of course after we cut a man's left arm off he is yet a man. Cut off his right arm and his legs and he is yet a man. But he is a mutilated man.

So with a man's faith. We should dislike to clip the legs and arms of a good Bible faith. It would result in a mutilated faith. Yet this is precicely what we do when we adopt the "it doesn't-make-any-difference-who-wrote-this-or-that" policy.

A good many today believe in an inspiration for the Bible, but it is of a human sickly and weakly type. If the Bible is the God-breathed word of Jehovah it is tremendously inspired; and if it is not its inspiration counts for nothing.

The entering wedge of the experience of many a back-slidden soul and the experience of all Back-slidden preachers we ever knew is the doubting of the inspiration of the book of God, and higher criticism hasn't done much to assist in removing these first doubts. —Messiah's Advocate.

The most insignificant people are the most apt to sneer at others.

No author is as moral as his books, and no preacher is as pious as his sermons.

Nothing in the world is more haughty than a man of moderate capacity when once raised to power.

A man never sees all that his mother has been to him till too late to let her know that he sees it.

EVANGELISTIC NOTICE

To the Brethren scattered abroad:

I expect to start in the general evangelistic work October 10th. Same as last year, will go wherever I have a call, take whatever is given as a free will offering. Have calls at present from Nebraska and Texas. Write me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, if you want meetings. Will go to the Atlantic or Pacific coast from Texas.

O. J. ALLARD.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

To the brethren scattered abroad:

I will make engagements to preach anywhere (D. V.), beginning in Nov. to March. I have been laboring for over fifty years to make people better acquainted with the teachings of the Scriptures in many parts of the world. I will speak every night when it is desirable to do so.

Address Dr. H. Wallace Mason, Box 209 St. Catherines, Ont. Can.

NEW SONGS OF THE KINGDOM

JUBILEE HARPS WANTED

Will any person or church, having one copy or more than one copy of The New Jubilee Harp, that he is willing to sell, please communicate with Mr. Chas. Elvey, 623 North Willow avenue, Austin station, Chicago, Ill., stating the number of books for sale, the condition of books and the price of same.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST

A sermon by the Editor of The Restitution. If you have friends who have immortal souls, present them with a copy of this sermon, and it will cast out the unclean spirit. One copy, 3 cents; two copies, 5 cents; twelve copies, 25 cents. Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, O.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16. Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38; 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or quit the pulpit.

Teach the Scriptures, not foolishness. Honor God and the Savior.—B. S. Driggs.

Great Combination Offer

OF "THE RESTITUTION"

GET THESE Money-making Secrets WITH Farm Journal

Is this tock property sold? "Poultry Secrets" tells how to carry lice, and many other secrets far more important.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result— this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says ROY CHENEY, Illinois. "What it took would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes F. J. DICKSON, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 300 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck-raising," says F. M. WARDOCK, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-Book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says F. W. HAMPSTEAD, New York.

T. F. MCCREA, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden this summer. I lost my health in the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting near to the soil. After 2 years to-do with the Chinese language and mission problems, it is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, trees, chickens, etc. I am saving money and regaining my health. My wife and I both find FARM JOURNAL indispensable."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. POTTER, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. GRAWBEIN, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes MRS. JOE LAWRENCE, Saskatchewan. "I was never successful in growing cabbage until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes DR. WILLIAM DAVIS, New Jersey. "When the first copy came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to seem like home. When it arrives, I feel the gladness jump right into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until half-past ten, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. L. SLOAT, a Virginia bank clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL, I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. WEITZEL, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."

These booklets are 6 by 9 inches, all profusely illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of discoveries and methods of successful poultrymen, long jealously guarded. It gives Felch's famous trapping chart, the Curtiss method of getting one-half more pullets than cockerels, Boyer's method of insuring fertility, with priceless secrets of mating, breeding, feed and feeding, how to produce winter eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "stuffing," "plugging," cocaine and gasoline doping, and other tricks of "guys" and swindlers, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse. It also gives many valuable training, feeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $15,000 a year, mainly from eggs. All back-yard chicken-raisers should learn about the "Rangeless Unit," and how Foster FEEDS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest fall-bearing strawberries almost until snow flies. It gives you the genius of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and blossom-removing to produce berries in the fall, tells inside facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how one grower gets 10,000 quarts an acre and gets 25 cents a quart, etc. L. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who can grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Prof. Holden, the "Corn King," tells how to get ten to twenty bushels more per acre of corn rich in protein and the best stock-feeding elements. Pictures make every process plain.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of seven cows that produced half a ton of butter each per year (440 pounds is the average). An eye-opener for dairymen. Gets weed out your poor cows, and turn good ones into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your backyard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck-farm near Boston makes every year 50 cents each on 40,000 ducklings. Tells why ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW they do everything.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Horace Vose, the former Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to mate, to get eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey-ranch PAY.

EVERY live farmer knows the FARM JOURNAL, for it is famous everywhere as the leading farm and home paper. It is thirty-five years old, and has the largest circulation of any farm paper in the world. It has always stood up for the right of farmers to "sit at the first table," and is one of the great forces that have made the American farmer prosperous.

To interest NEW readers in The Restitution, and increase its circulation and usefulness in every corner of its field, we have made an arrangement with the publishers of the Farm Journal by which subscribers to The Restitution can, for a short time, get both papers and any one of the booklets for little more than the cost of the Farm Journal alone, although in spite of its excellence it is one of the cheapest papers published.

The regular price of The Restitution is $1.50 a year.
The regular price of the Farm Journal is $1.00 for five years.
The regular price of the booklets to old subscribers 25c each.
The regular price of two copies "A Letter to a Friend," 20c.

Here is Our Offer--$2.70 Value for $1.50

By special arrangement with the publishers we are able to offer to new subscribers the Farm Journal four full years with choice of any one of the advertised booklets, "Money Making Secrets and two copies of a "Letter to a Friend" and The Restitution for one year, all for $1.50.

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Lk. 19:12-15), who will be King of Kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:53-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom 1:16), repentance (Lk. 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ." GLAD TIDINGS OF GREAT JOY

The Bible reveals a coming age (Eph. ii:7) in which the government of mankind will be solely vested in Jesus Christ (Ps. ii:8; Zech. xiv:9; Acts xvii:31; Rev. xi:15); who will be personally present on the earth to administer the functions of his high position (Job xix:25; Zech. xiv:4; Acts i:11); and sets forth that everything wrong will then be put right (Ezek. xxi:27; Ps. xlv:6; lxxii.; Jer. xxiii:5; Acts xvii:31; Rev. xix:2). Men will universally be brought to submit, with bended knee and confessing tongue to the sovereign supremacy of God, and to do His will, even as it is done in heaven (Ps. lxxii:9; xcix:1; cii:15; Jer. xvi:19; Isa. lx:12; ii:11; 1 Cor. xv:24, 25). They will be influenced to abandon hatred and selfishness, and to show mutual good-will, which will become the order of the day (Isa. xi:13; xxvi:9-12; Zech. viii:16 to end; Luke ii:14). The oppressor will be destroyed and the down trodden set free (Ps. lxxii:9-12; xxxvii; Isa. xiv:25; xvi:5; Luke i:52-53). The arrogant and the proud will be driven from the high places of the earth, and replaced by the meek and the needy, who will have undergone previous preparations for the position (Isa. ii:17; Ps. ii:9; xciv:22; lxxvi:9, 12; Rev. ii:26, 27; xvii:14; Jas. ii:5; Matt. xxi:43; 2 Tim. ii:12). Ignorance and debasement will give away before the spreading glory of the Lord, which will cover the earth as the waters cover the sea (Isa. xxxiii:3; iv:5; Ps. cxiii:3; Jer. xxxi:34; Isa. ii:2-3; lix:19; Mal. i:11). The people shall learn Jehovah's ways; and no more walk in the imagination of their evil hearts (Isa. lx:21; Ps. ii:1; Ezek. xxxvii:24; Luke i:51). Truth and righteousness, abounding like a mighty stream, shall sweep away the subterfuges and hypocrisies of the present time (Amos. v:24; Hab. ii:14; Zech. xiii:1-2; Isa. lxi:11; xl:9; 1:29). In a word, the effulgent rising of the sun of righteousness will dissipate the shades of night, which have so long brooded over the world, and restore the day for ever (Mal. iv:2; Isa. lx:1-2-3-20; 2 Peter i:19; Rev. xxi:22-25; xxii:5-16). This coming age is heralded on almost every page of the Bible. Moses (Deut. xxxii:36-43), the prophets (Dan. ii:44; vii:18-27; Joel iii:16; Obad. xxi; Zeph. iii:8; Hag. ii:6-7; Hos. iii:5); and the apostles (Acts iii:19-24; x:42-3; xvii:31; xxvi:23)—all unite in sounding its prophetic fame, and their report reaches down to this late generation, yet its approach is almost unknown. A shapeless tradition, that a good time is coming, is all the trace that can be discovered in Christendom of the glorious and the definitely worded proclamation of heaven's messengers. How lamentable that God's promises should be so little understood and appreciated!

The change is near, even at the door; "The times of the Gentiles" (Luke xxi:24) have nearly run their course. The gathering storms of the political atmosphere, co-incident with the expiry of the prophetic periods (Ps. cii:13; Hab. ii:3; Dan. vii:19; vii:25; viii:13-14; xii:11. Rev. ix:2; xii:14), are a sure omen that the close of this dispensation is at hand; and that the present generation may witness the unparalleled judgments by which the kingdoms of this world are to be wrested from the powers that be, and transferred to "that man whom God hath appointed" (Acts 17:31).

IS THE WORLD GROWING BETTER?

A Negative Reply to the Question

L. S. Bronson

On the editorial page of the Christian Herald of April 10, 1912, can be found this question, "Is the World Growing Better?" In answer to this inquiry the writer says, "We have but little patience with the Pessimists who always says No to the question." Could the writer of the article exercise a little patience towards those holding the apposite view and examine the Bible authority for his position he might be able to discover he is the one in error on the question. We long ago learned one out of patience is not in a good condition to reason. But after disclosing to the reader his state of mind the writer of the article proceeds to prove (not from the Bible) but from human reasoning and the development of the arts and sciences and wordly improvements, that it is advancing in a better way and fast rising upward and nearer to God.

It is not what the world gives as proof on the question but what says the scriptures in regard to the matter. The natural man with all his worldly learning and achievements is no nearer his God today and never will be in this age than he was at the first dawn of creation when all was pronounced "very good." Since then man has ever been hewing out cisterns, broken cisterns, (not perfect ones) that could hold no water (Jere. 2:13). "Clouds they are without water, trees whose fruits wither, fruit twice dead, plucked up by the roots" (Jude. 12). "So this I have found that God hath made man upright, but they have sought out many inventions. How many of these inventions, think you, tender to better his condition since God created and pronounced him "upright?"

Let me say right here, in no age of this world's history has man ever been known to "fall upward." "All like sheep have gone astray" (Isaih. 53:6); and none in their natural state ever returned to the fold of his own accord. If the world is growing better and coming nearer to God and a higher life, then Christianity must be on the increase. I will admit there is abundance of religion in the world at the present time and always has been; but religion is not always God's idea of Christianity. James 1:27 says, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: To visit the fatherless and the widow in their affliction and to keep himself unspotted from the world." Tell me how many there are today observing this command and having no worldly insignias or spots on their garments.

Now for the Bible proof that the world is not growing better. God's children in all past ages have not been found with the multitude or the popular throng. How many were found on God's side out of a world of ungodly people after 120 years of faithful warning by Noah? How many did Abraham find in the city of Sodom while the angel of God waited his careful and prayerful search? How ended the Mosaic dispensation? I need but refer to the fact that the world in that age had been sinking into a pit of iniquity. Neither the glory of Greece nor the power of Rome could bring back the race to their God. But at its close the bitter cry of His enemies was heard saying, "Away with Him, crucify Him," and the awful prayer went heavenward, "His blood be on us and on our children," which in a measure has already been answered in the destruction of Jerusalem and the scattering of that people among the nations of the earth. How many of the vast multitude at the close of that age were found to be on God's side? How many Christians were with Christ when in the garden of Gethsemene? Only three, and they were asleep. And in the agony of soul Christ exclaimed, "What! could ye not watch with me one hour?" How many of Christ's followers were found defending him before Pilate's bar? How many Christians followed Him to the cross and stood close by and there comforted Him in his last dying moments? Was it the sympathizing multitude that comforted him in His last moments of suffering?

Near that point of time began this age or dispensation, and the first question I wish to ask is this: What is the Bible teaching as to its godly qualities? Where in all the Bible is it stated that this is to be an age of righteousness, an age glory and virtue? The Bible declares this age is to be an evil age. We read in Gal. 1:4 that Christ came to deliver his children from the present evil world or age. This age is not, never was, never will be, a friend to Godliness. "If the world hate you ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own (and does). But I have chosen you out of the world, therefore (for this reason) the world hate you" (John 15:18-19). Not a very flattering feeling towards Christianity coming from the world as here described by Christ. Again He speaks to His Father concerning His children in this age as follows: "I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world. I pray not that they should be taken out of the world but that thou keep them from the evils. They are not of the world (some have that appearance now days) even as I am not of the world" (John 17:16-17).

The scriptures also teach that God's people in this age, as in all past dispensations, will be few in numbers and greatly in the minority as compared to the multitude. The path in which God's children are commanded to walk is both narrow and difficult, while the broad way is for the multitude, is easily found and the many walk therein (Math. 7:13). Again, "Straight is the gate and narrow the way that leadeth unto life and but few there be that find it" (Math. 7:14). Where two or three are gathered together in my name there I am in the midst of them (Math. 18:20). Oh! How often that text has been quoted by the little company gathered in His name, and how much it has comforted, strengthened and cheered their fainting hearts as it has been remembered! No need of quoting or remembering the text should the multitude be found there. "Fear not (great company? No.) little flock for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you (not the multitude) the kingdom" (Luke 12:32).

"Many are called, but few are chosen" (Math. 22:14). The harvest is great, but the laborers are few" (Luke 10:2). "Lord, are there few that be saved?" (Luke 13:23). Why this question if in this age the multitude is saved? What was the condition of God's people Christ saw as he viewed the churches spoken of in the third of Rev., representing (as many claim) the last phase of the church before Christ returns; Sardis. "Thou hast a name that thou livest and are dead, yet thou hast a few (not many) names in Sardis." Philadelphia, "I know thy works, for thou hast a little strength." Not very strong. Unto the church of Laodeceians, "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot. Because thou art lukewarm and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth" (Rev. 3:1). This is not a very safe condition for God's children in the last days of Gentile rule, if Christian piety is to be on the increase at that time.

But let us look more closely and see what the Bible further says will be the condition of the world when Christ returns. "As it was in the days of Noah so shall the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage (all honorable enough had they been conducted in a proper manner), until the day of Noah entered the ark and knew not until the flood came and took them away. So shall also (in like manner) the coming of the son of man be" (Math. 24:36-39). There were not many saved from the antediluvian world. Only one family. Again, as it was in the days of Lot. The same day Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be when the son of man is revealed (Luke 17:28-30). Not many righteous in that city when its destruction came. Five could not be found. Why take these two illustrations of great wickedness and fearful judgments to illustrate to us the condition of the world and the small proportion if Christianity is to increase and flourish in that day? Why did not Christ say. As it was at the dawn of creation when all was fair and "very good," if men are to be at peace with themselves and their God at that time? These are strange illustrations to be given to establish such a claim. Surely they are not very appropriately chosen. But listen again to God's word: "When they say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them as travail upon a woman with child and they shall not escape (II. Thess. 5:3). A very appropriate and forceful illustration. In speaking of the last days in Math. 24:11-12 it is stated that "many false prophets shall arrive and deceive many, and because iniquity shall abound (a plentiful supply) the love of many (not a few) shall wax cold." Does iniquity add to piety, and coldness increase Christianity? Again, "Now the spirit speaketh expressly (note the word "expressly") that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils forbidding to marry," etc. (1 Tim. 4:13). Remember all this is said to be in the last days. Can you locate it by any conditions that exist today?

In II. Tim. 4:1-3 we find this earnest charge given by Paul to his son Timothy, "I charge thee before God and the Lord Jesus Christ, preach the word (not something else). For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts (desires or tastes) shall they heap (hire or gather) to themselves teachers, having itching ears, and they shall turn away their ears from the truth and shall be turned unto fables." Who are to preach these fables? Is it hard for any one to locate this period to which Paul is referring? Are we not very near that time today? Again II. Tim. 3:1-3. This know also (something more) that in the last days perilous times shall come." Do you hear of any perils on land, on sea, or above the earth, in our day, greater than ever before? Reflect on this question for a moment and then answer. Again, men shall be lovers of themselves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, incontinent, fierce, despisers of them that are good, traitors, heady high minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. Is not this a very strange mixture of religious characters for Paul to declare will exist on the earth in the last days, and at a time as we are told by some when the world will be advancing in all that is great and noble? Paul, is this class of whom you have been speaking and warning your son Timothy against, Christians and worthy our love and fellowship? "From such turn away." Why Paul? "For of this sort are they which creep into houses and lead captive silly women laden with sin, led away with divers, lusts." Have we any such religious men, such silly women, and are they growing less in numbers or are they on the increase as your godly piety advances? How about the red light signals that point along the way that leads to crime debauchery, and an early death? Are they multiplying or are they growing less in numbers because of the lack of patronage? Let us for a moment look at the situation.

"On the basis of abundant information gathered by the Salvation Army, there are in the United States, 230,000 professional prostitutes. Adding to this apprentices there are fully a quarter million supported by more than a million male prostitutes, some of whom Paul in II. Tim. 3:5 declare "have a form of godliness." It is also stated that the characters following this awful trade last on an average only about five years. This causes 50,000 deaths each year and 50,000 recruits are yearly needed to fill their places. It is also stated the police returns show that the whole number of professional dissolute women in New York cannot be short of 20,000. In London 80,000. How many men having only a "form of godliness" are obeying Paul's injunction, "From such turn away?"

How about the white slave traffic in this, our so-called Christian land? Is it soon to die out and disappear? I fear not according to late developments disclosed to public view as existing in New York City, and has been recently stated in other directions that within ninety days from a given date this year, seventeen hundred girls suddenly disappeared from their homes. Where are they, think you? Is it hard to tell? I think not. Mothers, are any of those missing ones your daughters? Think of it for a moment. They are some mother's children to whom that parent once sang the soft sweet lullaby song, "Hush my dear, lie still and slumber." Oh! could some of the "unknown wives and mothers of well known men," during the short hours of night suddenly enter some of those very quiet, unassuming and closely curtained buildings, perhaps standing near their homes and under the very shadow of some large business firm, and for a short time view the scenes transpiring there, they would then know where some mother's daughters are, and also be greatly surprised at the sight of their companions. Think you, would those mothers and wives return to their homes rejoicing and believing the world is growing better and the millenium very near at hand, or would they think a portion of Sodom had been suddenly imported into their beautiful city, destroying forever their happiness and joy of home?

But right here let me say women of bad character are not all found within the red light districts neither are all disreputable men found outside professed Christian churches. Tares and wheat are yet growing in the same field, and always will be until the angel of God separates them in the time of harvest.

Again, we are also informed by late census that the consumption of opium in China is 26 per capita, while in our Christian land it is 50. Are not the Christian missionaries being sent in the wrong direction?

What about the liquor business in our land? According to late statistics it has not decreased in the least since 1909, and if that be correct each day of the year 274 people of this nation are going down to fill as many drunkards graves. It is stated that Ohio now has 8643 saloons, an increase of 700 over the year 1911.

How about the modern playhouse and picture show? Do the daily and nightly gatherings of the people, young and old, tend to bring prosperity to the home, elevate the morals of the people, strengthen, build up society and increase the spiritual growth and influence of the church of God?

How about the present meager style of dress worn by some of the female portion of community which in some instances is not much greater in quantity than that which was so hastily prepared by our first parents in the Garden of Eden, and plainly revealing to the observing eyes the character and object of its wearer? Does it tend to elevate humanity, crucify the flesh with its affections and lusts (Gal. 5:24), thereby helping the condition of the world? Or is its subtil and suggestive influences, degrading, demoralizing, and ruining in body and mind, many who are fast becoming devotees to one of the most ridiculous and immodest fashions the devil has ever suggested to society.

On this question, says James M. Gray of Chicago, "Little criticism have I to make and few comments but I would set before you facts that are as plain as anything can be. Consider how women are in evidence in their personal appearance. Their hats for example: their powder and paint on their faces, even in the public streets; their boldness in dress that need not be described, their brazenness on the stage and in the audiences of such performances where in the companionship of the opposite sex they gaze upon a lewdness that would shock their mothers only a generation ago."

Girls, you who have as yet traveled but a short distance in this world, guard well thy steps, lest life's young petals fade and fall under the frothy breath of him who would blast character, and ruin all the nobler purposes of life. They that play with fire may get burned. Remember it is stated in the scriptures, "They that cover (or hide) their sins shall not prosper" (Prov. 28:13). Are all these elements of evil now in the world evidences of increasing and growing righteousness in the earth? And are the good pasturage ground upon which modern Christianity is to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth?" (II. Peter 3:18).

But at this point I hear you say, "We have always had many of the above named conditions more or less to contend with in the world, and why should you magnify them now at such length? Answer. We do not speak of them because we are ignorant of the fact that they have in some form or degree always existed in the world. But because many religious teachers and others are claiming and teaching that the world is each day growing better, and if this is true all these evils must be on the decline. Conditions in society high and low, all about us are teaching in thunder tones and in unmistakable language that such a statement is very far from the truth. My second reason for noticing these conditions is because Paul in I. Tim. 4:1-4 warns us of these coming dangers declaring "The Spirit speaketh expressly that in the last days" these conditions are to become more marked than in former times and not grow less as some are teaching (II. Tim. 3:1-13; 4:1-5).

WORDS OF COMFORT

Hear the blessed words of Jesus,
Radiant with light of life,
Balm for every mortal anguish,
Calm for every mental strife;
Richar far than earthly treasures,
Are the truths they do impart,
Bread of life for starving mortals,
Power to heal each broken heart

Hear again the words of Jesus:
"If I go away I'll send
The blessed holy comforter.
And he'll be with you to the end
My Father's hous hath many mansions,
Or I would have told you so;
And I'll come again and take you,
Where I am, you shall be too."

O the cheering words of Jesus:
"I'm the shepherd, ye my sheep,
And of all my Father gives me,
To the end I'll safely keep.
None shall ever take them from me,
For I know them every one;
And they know their shepherd's calling,
At his word with joy they run.

EDITORIAL

Brother Maple, now in a meeting near Brush Creek, Ohio, reports good interest. He is greatly pleased with this promising field. He will give full particulars in his weekly report.

Sister Mattie Ridgway writes of her appreciation of Sister Cassie Hicklin Williams' poetry in a recent Restitution, entitled "My Morning Prayer."

Bro. Charles W. Russell writes that he has delivered two sermons in a coal camp in Colorado to hearers that were both attentive and interested. He adds: "This is a great field. I wish the Church of God would occupy it with an energetic godly man. Come, brethren; wake up. You will strengthen your own faith and enrich your own experience by working."

CHRIST'S RESURRECTION: WHEN?

On the First Day of the Week

The idea that Christ rose from the dead on the Jewish Sabbath is entertained by Sabbath observers on grounds that are plausible, but not sound. Without a question he rose on the first day of the week, if God's word is authority on the subject.

Editorial consideration of the issue has been provoked by a correspondent who sends an elaborate paper on the subject of the Lord's saying that he would be "three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Contending that this requires that he, Jesus, should have been full three days and nights in the death state, he points out that Jesus was "laid in the tomb a little before six o'clock in the evening preceding the passover sabbath." He argues that this passover sabbath was the fourth day of the week: that Jesus was therefore in the grave during the fourth, fifth and sixth days, and awoke on the morning of the seventh or sabboth day. The principal feature of the article is the repudiation of the phrase "first day of the week" as an unscriptural phrase, and, as in point of fact, an inaccurate and misleading form of speech, both as regards translation and what the narrative shows took place. His principal point is the translation. He cites all the cases of its occurrence and shows that in every case, the Greek is literally one of the sabbaths or the chief Sabbath, and contains nothing equivalent to the phrase "the first day of the week." In this the brother is right, but we cannot accept the conclusion he draws from the fact. He contends that the phrase "first day of the week" and the fixing of the Christian Sunday for that day, are both the work of the false system of religion established by the Little Horn of Daniel's fourth beast in accordance with the prophecy that that power would "think to change times and laws" (Dan. vii. 25).

There are two considerations of a general character that bear weightily against this idea The first is, that the Christian community (by whose bishops Constantine was guided in his public policy) had existed for nearly 300 years before Constantine publicly established the first day of the week as a public sabbath, and there is evidence (such as Justin Martyr's allusion to their weekly assemblies) that they had a tradition and a practice as to the particular day of their worship, which must, from the nature of the case, have been a fair index of the practice of the first century. The holding of Christian assemblies on that day was so universal before Constantine's time that it must have originated long before the Little Horn power became an ingredient of the apostacy. As it is one of those things that could not easily be changed after the practice was once established (or if changed, would leave some trace of the supposed original practice, of which there is none), we must assume that the existence of the first-day practice long before the days of Constantine is proof of its recognition at the beginning. If so, the question would be, why did the believers of the first ages observe the first, and not the seventh day of the week? This would go back on the question of the day of Christ's resurrection discussed by our brother. The English version says it was on "the first day of the week," which, if a sustainable translation, would be decisive. The brother, however, impugns it.

This introduces the second general consideration, viz.: the invariable adoption of this translation by all good judges of the Greek idiom, including Dr. Young, who was no respecter of ecclesiastical authorities. In such a question, it requires a much deeper knowledge than is to be acquired from Greek lexicons. They are, of course, of great value in giving us the English sense of Greek words considered as detached terms, but they necessarily fail to impart that subtle of idiom and usage by which it often happens, even in the English language, that terms having a fixed meaning as dictionary terms, acquire a totally different meaning in conventional usage and idiomatic combinations. There must be a good reason why all translators agree that mian sabbath (literally, one of sabbaths) is correctly represented in English by "first day of the week." We are not prepared to explain how such a Greek form could come to have such an English sense, unless Dr. Young's suggestion is correct, that "sabbath to sabbath," or the interval between the two sabbaths, came to colloquially express the idea of a week, and that sabbaths come to be adopted as a briefer phrase than "sabbath to sabbath." Whatever the explanation may be, there seems no doubt that such is the meaning of the Greek original. All the cases will not fit our brother's suggestion, that the meaning of mian sabbatoon is the first or chief sabbath (as distinguishing the seventh from the passover sabbath). Thus we have Matt. xxviii:1, saying that Mary visited the sepulchre "after the sabbaths, as it was dawning towards mian sabbatoon." If the phrase means "one of the sabbaths," we have Matthew telling us that "after the sabbaths," or in the evening of the sabbaths, the dawn of one of them was coming on. We should then have three sabbaths in question. But our correspondent disputes the translation here. He contends that "dawning" should be "lighting up." And that it refers to "the lighting up of the temple for service." There is no evidence of this. Dawning is certainly a lighting up but the lighting up is associated with a day and not with a service; and that this is the right association is proved by John's alternative description of the same moment; "early, while it was yet dark."

The idea that Jesus rose on the Jewish sabbath is excluded by the testimony that the women, "having purchased spices and ointments . . . rested the sabbath day according to the commandment" (Luke xxiii:5, 6). If it be said that this refers to the passover sabbath, the reason for rest must have been still more binding as regards the seventh day, for "the commandment" to this effect refers peculiarly to the seventh day. If they did not go to the sepulchre because of the commandment to rest on the passover sabbath, the similar commandment would certainly have kept them away on the other. The same reason would have prevented Cleopas and his neighbor from undertaking a seven miles journey to Emmaus on the seventh day. They did so journey on the resurrection day (Luke 24), which is a proof it was not the seventh day, but "the first day of the week," on which, accordingly ever since, the disciples of the Lord in all times and countries have, by apostolic example in the first century, broken bread in remembrance of him.

FRIENDLY SUGGESTIONS

To the Brethren of Central Washington

The reader will have the pleasure of perusing the articles of faith and discipline of the Washington Conference in this issue. A brother sent with them a letter from which we make the following excerpt:

"The inclosed articles of faith and discipline, show just where we stand. We have been deliberate in this matter, realizing the importance of doing so, that we might be in harmony with our heavenly Father, and be a help to our fellowmen, who are groping in the Babylonian darkness of the present hour. If we expect to be able to stand against the enemy, we must be united, cease biting and devouring one another, and present a solid front: the battle has become a rout, as it stands at this present time. There must be a housecleaning, if we ever accomplish anything. We have taken this means of defending ourselves. There may be some things in the articles that you may not feel like endorsing on first reading, but I ask you to consider them calmly and carefully before rejecting them.

We would like to have the articles of faith and discipline published in The Restitution that the readers may know who we are and how we stand."

Let the reader remember as he reads these articles that no matter how many errors he may find in the outline of faith, the Washington brethren are honest and frank enough to tell us and the world just what they believe and where they stand. They are not like creed dodgers, who believe all kinds of absurdities slyly and privately, and yet put up a respectable appearance in public. However erratic and heretical you may thing the Washington brethren are, thank God, they are not dodging, pretending, and clothing their nudity with garments of hypocrisy.

Their statement of faith is most excellent in the main, and we heartily endorse it, except in a few minor thoughts that are perhaps misunderstood by us because of verbal vagueness. The brother anticipates there are some things in their confession of faith that we may not feel like endorsing. As he wants us to "consider them calmly and carefully," we assure him that we have done so, and as a result we wish to offer him and the Washington brethren a few "friendly suggestions." Not criticisms, mark you, but only suggestions, which we assure them come from a hand of kindness and a heart of love.

In article 15 of the discipline we learn that the articles of faith and the discipline "shall be a test of fellowship among us." This is right and proper, but no "test" should be introduced in a statement of faith which is not a test. Only fundamentals, essentials, should find a place in the outline of faith. We suggest therefore that the resurrection of the unjust, which is placed at the end of the 1000 years in article 7, should be stricken out. The texts used to prove this statement would be satisfied and their meaning exhausted if the subjects of the reign of Christ who die were resurrected then, without introducing and mixing up with the people of that age the people of former ages and dispensations, who have lived and died under different laws and conditions. All agree that the unjust will be raised and condemned; surely you are not going to make the time of their resurrection a "test," are you?

"Baptism by immersion in water," in article 13, is not an allowable form of speech in deliberate composition. If one believes in different "modes" of baptism, immersion, pouring, and sprinkling—he can speak of "baptism by immersion," which is equivalent to a claim that though immersion is baptism, something else is also baptism. This form of speech admits of "baptism by sprinkling" or some other mode than immersion. We feel sure this statement does not correctly represent the faith of our brethren. They believe that baptism is immersion. To say "baptism by immersion." is unpardonable tantology; tantament to saying "immersion by immersion in water!" We suggest that for the sake of plainness this statement should be revised.

Again, in article 13 "the washing of the saints' feet" is put down as an essential ordinance. To this no objection can be made unless in the matter of form. The texts given are clear in directing us in the performance of this duty. Beginning with Jno. 13: 5-17, the first proof text, we learn that we "ought to wash one another's feet" (v. 14); this makes fee washing a binding and plain duty. The next text cited, John 14:15, reveals that "my commandments," feet washingwith all others intended—will be kept if we love the Lord. Amen. Then the next text in the list is I. Tim. 5.10, an invaluable passage, for it is the only one in the New Testament which shows how the commandment to wash feet was obeyed: "Well reported of for good works; if she have brought up children, if she have lodged strangers, if she have washed the saint's feet, is she have relieved the afflicted, if she have diligently followed every good work." We are not here among "church ordinances" and ceremonials, but private duties. Bringing up children, lodging strangers, relieving the afflicted—these are home duties, not church ceremonies; and since "washing the saints feet" is found in this category of home and private duties, we take it as sufficiently plain by the law of classification that feet-washing is no more a church ordinance that the other duties specified in the same text. If one duty is ceremonial in this list of duties they all are. If some dear old sister abounds in "good works," among them, raising children, lodging strangers (and even washing their feet, as per many examples of hospitality in Old Testament), relieving the afflicted, and "every other good work," will she not, to use the last text given in your articles of faith, be among the "blessed" and have the right to enter the Holy City, because she has kept this commandment, and all other commandments of our Savior? (Rev. 22:14). Certainly. So understand your article on feet washing is good and biblical; but if the article means to ignore this scriptural manner of obeying our Lord's feet- washing commandment, and instead means to enforce the German Bantist-Dunkard invention of orthodoxy, then works of supererogation are introduced, and we have a different matter to consider.

Article 14 is unnecessary, even if true. Some very inconvenient questions could be asked about it, and there would be great difficulty in harmonizing its sentiments with other parts of the statement of faith. You say that man is "wholly mortal" (Article 5). Then in article 14 you that the devil is "separate and distinct from man." If man is "wholly mortal," the devil being distinct from man would be, mortal i npart or "wholly" so? mortal in part, or "wholly" so? Partly mortal and partly immortal? "Wholly" immortal? Who can tell? No rapid fire answers, now; keep calm. Consistency is whispering for recognition. In article 1 you say that God is "maker of heaven and earth and all things therein." The devil is either in heaven or on earth—just where he is was not told in article 14. But if God has made heaven and earth, "and all things therein," he must have made the devil. Why he made this "arch enemy of the human family" (article 14) and gave him the power of death, and so on—these questions are puzzles and problems. Why and how he has lived all the past thousands of years, and is to live in a bound condition for a thousand years after Christ comes (article 14), and yet "eternal life is obtained through Christ at his second coming" (article 5)—there is some confusion of thought here. The devil is mortal or immortal. If mortal, how do you explain his long life?. If immortal, how can he, as a being possessing the attribute of deathlessness, "finally be destroyed with the unrighteous" who are "wholly mortal," in "eternal death?" (Article 14). See how the difficulties multiply. Where is justice? She has been eluded or the devil would not get off so easily. Unrighteous men who are "wholly mortal," and only lived three score years and ten, and spent this brief span of time in deadly conflict with the "arch-enemy of the human family" must be "finally destroyed in eternal death" because the devil, an older and stronger than they, defeated them in battle; whereas, the devil himself, who has lived three score years and ten multiplied one hundred times, and during all his life time bubbled over with devilry, only gets the same penalty which is meeted out to men who are "wholly mortal"—eternal death! The hand of justice has been arrested; the devil, "separate and distinct from man", only gets the punishment of a man! Justice has slipped a cog here, or the devil would get a penalty commensurate with his crimes. Clear minds become clouded by these mists which cover God's theodicy; strong men faint when they face squarely the difficulties of the theory. The thoughts are too subtle, I cannot grasp them; they are too contradictory? cannot entertain them.

Coming now to the discipline we cannot help noting a few glaring errors. Number 8 requires that the "apostolic injunction found in Acts 15:29" must be strictly observed, "especially the eating of blood." The injunction is against "meats offered to idols, and from blood, and things strangled, and from fornication." These are all denominated "necessary things" in the 28th verse: there is no intimation however remote in the text or elsewhere that eating of blood is "especially" to be avoided. If all the things named are "necessary things," no man has the right to cull out one of them and distinguish it by "especially."

Number 9 makes it the "duty" of brethren to refrain from taking an oath. This "duty' is hard to see when God himself has set the example in using oaths (Gen. 22: 16; Numb. 14:26, 28), sometimes even swearing by his attributes (Psa. 89:35; Heb. 4; 6:13, 16). Then Paul made statements under oath (Rom. 1:9; II. Cor. 1:18, 23; Gal. 1:20; Phil. 1:8; 1 Thess. 2:5), and so did Christ the Lord (Matt. 26:63; Luke 5:1; Mark 14:61).

Number 10 exceeds the texts given in elaborateness of detail and comprehensiveness of significance.

Number 12 requires an impossibility, for while we can be "immersed in water" by some one willing to do it, when we are told that only "an obedient believer of the faith" can administer the ordinance, the standard is raised higher than any human being can reach.

These "friendly suggestions" are made, not to start controversy, but to provoke investigation, and to suggest a modification of what, to us, seems like extremes in faith and discipline.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Editor Restitution:

One sees many strange things in the wild West. For instance, I went into a Sunday School here, and found it ornamented with a billiard table. At the service we had about a dozen present. This is a mining camp. They seldom have preaching of any kind, but have plenty of dances. A few days ago I met the agent of the Am. S. S. Union, who told me that he had canvassed the town twice, visiting every home, and could not find one person who would take any interest in the S. S. work. This is a fair statement of the religious interest all over this country.

There are a great many preachers located on claims through here but most of them seem to have lost all interest in religious work.

I am the only one of the Restitution faith here. Have been doing all I could, but am about to the end of my work, to all human appearance.

It seems to me some definite action should be taken to put the resources of our people where they could be available to push the work forward. If I could get a horse and buggy I could do an unlimited amount of work, but cannot get around on foot. Lift up your eyes and look, for the fields are white already to harvest. A good many people are interested in the truth through the country. What say you, brethren?

CHAS. W. RUSSELL.

To the Household of Faith:

"Behold I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown" (Rev. 3:11).

Here Jesus through John, is addressing members of the Philadelphian church, but it can well be applied to all believers of the gospel. If the exhortation was applicable then, how much more so now, when we can see the fig-tree budding and almost ready to burst into blossom.

Surely the Lord is at hand, even at the door. The signs of the times, clearly indicate that the first clause of this exhortation will speedily be fulfilled, "Behold, I come quickly." Are we eagerly watching the events in the East? Turkey is meeting with overwhelming defeats and a general European war is imminent.

The sick man is rapidly losing his power and dominion, having recently to give up its last remaining possession in Africa, and now, being driven from Europe, surely the power is being dried up and the coming of the King of kings is not far distant. It is when we see these things beginning to come to pass, that we can lift up our heads and rejoice, for our redemption draweth nigh. Then, dear ones of the household, let us hold fast that which we have, that no man take our crown. We are liable to loose the crown, hence the injunction, "Take heed that no man deceive you. For there shall arise false Christ's and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect" (Matt. 24: 4-24).

Let us renew our zeal, and press toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us not become lukewarm or indifferent. The struggle will not be long and God will send forth his angels to gather his elect from the four winds.

Unto them that look for him, shall he appear the second time. Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end, for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ (I Peter. 1:3). Dear ones, let us be ready to meet our Lord with joy.

MRS. W. S. TOMLINSON.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

The accompanying clipping is from a recent Cleveland daily paper, and as all God's people are (or if not should be) watching with great interest the struglge in the Balkans I thought it might interest all and enlighten some.

We are living in an age brothers and sisters, when we may see prophesy being fulfilled before our very eyes. Keep them (your eyes—the eyes of your understanding) wide open all the time, for more and greater things are yet to come.

"And the sixth angel poured out his bowl upon the great river, the river Euphrates; and the water thereof was dried up, that the way might be made ready for the kings that come from the sunrising. And I saw coming out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet (Mohammed), three unclean spirits, as it were frogs; for they are the spirits of demons, working signs; which go forth unto the kings of the whole world, to agther them together unto the war of the great day of God, the Almighty. (Behold I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame). And they gathered them together into a place which is called in Hebrew. Har Magedon (Revelation 16.12-16, Revised Version).

The river Euphrates is drying up, i. e. Turkey (the "sick man of the East") is shrinking.

Yours in Christian fellowship and hope of eternal life.

STERLING P. GROVES.

TURKS ONLY OBEY KORAN IN MURDER.

Moslem Fanatics are Urged by Mohammed to Slay All Unbelievers.

And when the month wherein ye are not allowed to kill then shall he past, kill the idolaters wheresoever ye shall find them, and take them prisoners and besiege them and lie in wait for them in every convenient place (The Koran, chap. ix.).

When ye encounter the unbelievers, strike off their heads until ye have made a great slaughter among them (The Koran, chap. xvii).

For to kill a Christian or a Jew assuredly is "to acquire merit."

Any Turk who can't carry out a simple job like that isn't worth his salt. Nor has he much chance of reaching heaven. So sayeth the book of Mohammed, prophet of prophets, the Koran.

In 1904, H. G. Goshgarian, 1586 E. 66th street spent six months in a Turkish prison at Alope Syria. He was visiting there at the time. Identification with the Armenian revolutionary party gave the Turks a strong case against him. Then the United States stepped in Goshgarian was an American citizen. He came to this country from Harpoot, Armenia, in 1890. The United States won its case and Goshgarian was released. In the 1895 massacre 17,000 were killed at Harpoot.

In the sight of the Turk the Koran is a most sacred work. To see it in the hands of an unbeliever is bad enough. To translate it from the language of the prophet is desecration.

Goshgarian is an infidel, but he has a copy of the Koran. More than that, he has translated it into Armenian. The eight commandments he has read into Enlgish.

Practically, these eight commandments are different ways of saying "kill al infidels—Christians and Jews." Now and again at the instigation of the authorities, the Turks do their best. Witness 216,000 massacred in seven grand affairs during the last eighty years. Greatest among them was that of 1895, when 99,000 were put to the sword.

"O, true believers, take not the Jews nor the Christians for your friends. They are the friends one of the other. But whose among you taketh them for his friends, he is surely one of them" (Chapter 5).

That is the second commandment. The first brings out the difference between the Christian and the Mohammedan beliefs.

"They are truly infidels who say that God is Christ, the son of Mary—" (Chapter 5).

Where the Jews comes under the ban is that he is not a follower of the prophet of prophets.

In 1893, which saw a comparatively minor massacre of only 10,000, the Armenian revolutionary party intercepted a message from Sultan Abdul Hamid—the same who recently was torn from his (how many) wives and locked up—to Zakee Pashim, commander of the fourth army corps, then in the province of Sassaun. That message, Goshgarian says, contained instructions to go ahead with the killing.

The powers took a hand when it was shown to them, for Abdul all along had denied the sublime porte countenanced the ruthless slaughter. The "unbelievers" have maintained they were being killed only at the instigation of the government.

"Ordinarily," said Goshgarian, "the Turk is peaceable enough. He does not want to kill until the government passes out the word. That is shown by the fact that, except at spasmodic intervals, Christians and Jews are safe and unmolested."

Hear the third commandment:

"War is enjoined upon you against the infidel. But this is hateful unto you. Yet perchance ye hate a thing which is better for you and perchance ye love a thing which is worse for you. But God knoweth and ye know not" (Chapter 2).

And here's the four it to strengthen the situation:

"Fight, therefore against them until there be no temptation to idolatry and the religion be God's" (Chapter 2).

Then comes the injunction: "And when ye encounter the unbelievers, strike off their heads until ye have made a great slaughter among them."

Even in the eighth which refers to the taking of wives, there is word of violence, although it is the only one which lets the "infidels" alone:

"Ye are also forbidden to take to wife free women who are married, except those women whom your right hand shall possess as slaves. This is ordained you from God" (Chapter 4).

CENTRAL WASHINGTON CONFERENCE

Articles of Faith

Article I. We believe in one God, who revealed himself unto the fathers, Abraham (Gen. 12:1 to 3), Isaac (Gen. 26:1-5), Jacob (Gen. 28:13-15; Isa. 44:6; Isa. 45:5; Eph. 4:6. Gal. 3:20. 1st Tim. 2:5). He is the maker of heaven and earth, and all things therein (Gen. 1:1 Isa.; 42:5; Psa. 148:1-6; Psa. 146:5-6; Heb. 3:4). And is a physical, corporeal, being (Gen. 1:26-27; Acts 17:28-29; Heb. 1:3; II. 6). He is the Father of only that portion of the children of Adam who have believed and obeyed his word (Rom. 8:14-15; Eph. 2:11-12-19.) and will reward with eternal life those only who believe and obey his commandments, and today is the day of salvation (Heb. 2:3; II. Cor. 6:2).

Article II. We believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of the living God (Mark 1:11; Matt. 3:17; Matt. 17:5), and was divinely begotten of God, through the agency of the Holy Spirit (Matt. 1:18; Luke 1:35; Isa. 7:14). He was born of a woman (Matt. 1:20-25; Luke 2:5-7; Gal. 4:4). died (Jno. 19:30-33), was buried (Mark 15:46), and rose again from the daed (Mark 16:6). He appeared in the body to his disciples (Luke 24:36-43; Rom. 14:9; I. Cor. 15:1-8), ascended into heaven (Acts 1:9-11), and is now sitting at the right hand of the Father (Acts 2:32-33; Rev. 3:21; Heb. 10:12; Col. 3:1), acting as our high Priest (Heb. 8:1; Heb. 7:21-22). We have access through him to the Father (Heb. 4:14, 15; Heb. 9:24; Heb. 10:21-22), and he is the Savior of the world (Jno. 3:16; Jno. 4:42; Gen. 3:15).

Article III. We believe in the existence of Angels (Matt. 26:53), who are physical, corporeal beings (Gen. 18), whose office is to minister to the children of God (Heb. 1:14).

Article IV. We believe in the existence of the Holy Spirit, or Spirit of Truth (Jno. 14: 16-17), which God gave to the Prophets, Holy men of God (2 Pet. 1:21; Luke 24: 27, 44; Isa. 61:1-2; 2 Sam. 23:2), revealing through them his will and purpose (Amos 3:7; Jno. 15:15). The Spirit was given to his Son without measure (Jno. 3:34-35), and to the Apostles, bringing to their remembrance the teachings of Christ and qualifying them to speak with authority (Jno. 14:26; Eph. 4:8-11-12), thus giving us the word of God (Eph. 6:17), which makes known unto us the way of salvation.

Article V. We believe that man is wholly mortal (Gen. 2:7; Ecc. 9:4-5; Ecc. 3:19-20; Psa. 146:3-4; Job 14:20-21; I. Cor. 15:45-49), and that eternal life is obtained only through Christ (I. Jno. 2:25, I. Jno. 5:9-12; Jno. 3:36; Rom. 6:23), at his second coming (Col. 3:3-4).

Article VI. We believe in the resurrection of the saints of God, to a physical existence of everlasting life in the kingdom of God, at the second coming of our Lord, and Master Jesus Christ (I. Tim. 4:8; Col. 3:3-4; I. Thess. 4:13-18, I. Cor. 15: 51-55; Phil. 3:20-21; Luke 20:35-36; Isa. 26:19).

Article VII. We believe that Christ is the rightful heir to the literal Throne of David (Luke 1:32), which was situated on Mount Zion (2 Sam. 5:5), in the City of Jerusalem, in the land of Canaan (Isa. 24:23; Psa. 89:34-37; Acts 2:30), and he will reign thereon for a period of one thousand years (Rev. 20:4). The saints (figuratively called the body of Christ) will rule jointly with him in the subjugation of the nations (Rev. 3:21; Dan. 7:13-14-27; Rev. 2:26-27; Rev. 2: 26-27; Rev. 5:9-10), at the end of which time will occur the resurrection of the unrighteous to judgment and condemnation (Rev. 20:5; Jno. 5:28-29; Rev. 20:12-15).

Article VIII. We believe that the earth is the promised inheritance of the saints, according to the covenant God made with Abraham and his seed (Gen. 13: 14-17; Gen. 15:18; Gal. 3:16; Rom. 15:8; Gal. 3: 27-29; Rom. 4:13; 8:17; Matt. 5:5).

Article IX. We believe that the kingdom of Israel was the kingdom of God (2 Sam. 5:3-5; I. Chron. 29: 23), established by his power and authority (2 Chron. 1: 11), and was overturned by him because of Israel's transgressions (Ezk. 21: 25-27), but will be restored by him through Jesus the Christ (Luke 1:31-33; Isa. 9:6-7; Acts 15: 13-17), at his second appearing (Matt. 25:31).

Article X. We believe in the Restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all God's holy prophets since the world began (Acts 3:19-21), which includes restoration to life and dominion (Micah 4:8), THE EARTH from under the curse (Isa. 35:1-10; Rev. 22:3), and the literal return of the living house of Israel to the land of Canaan (Ezk. 37:20-28; Jer. 31: 1-30; Luke 1: 30-33), which was covenated to the fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Article XI. We believe that the law given at Mount Sinai to the children of Israel, by the hand of God, containing the ten commandments, and ceremonial, and sacrificial ordinances called "the law of God," "the law of Moses" or "the law" (Ex. 24:12), was fulfilled in Christ (Matt. 5:17; Gal. 3:19). It was given to the house of Israel as a schoolmaster to bring them to Christ (Gal. 3:24-25), and ended with the death of Christ on the cross (Col. 2:14-17; Jno. 19:28-30; Matt. 27:50-51; Hosea 2:11).

Article XII. We believe that the followers of Christ, who are the children of God by faith, are under the law and guidance of the Holy Spirit, through the word since the day of Pentecost (Rom 8:1-2).

Article XIII. We believe that membership in the family of God, (figuratively called the body of Christ) is obtained through adoption (Rom. 8:15; Gal. 4:5-7), by faith in his promises, and obedience to his commandments (Mark 16:15-16). Also that a belief of the gospel (Rom. 10:17), repentance and baptism by immersion in water for the remission of sins (Acts 8:12; Acts 2:38; Heb. 10:22), and a holy and righteous life, are prerequisites to salvation (Rom. 6: 16-22; 2 Cor. 7:1; 2 Tim. 3:14-17; 2 Pet. 1:5-11). At the time of adoption into the family of God our names are recorded in the book of life (Phil. 4:3; Luke 10: 20), which constitutes our citizenship with the saints, and a separation from the world (Eph. 2: 19-22; Jno. 15: 19; Eph. 6:12; Jas. 4:4). We also teach and observe the following ordinances as essential to salvation: the Lord's Supper, consisting of the bread and cup (I. Cor. 11:23-26; Jno. 6:53), also the washing of the saints feet (Jno. 13: 5-17; Jno. 14:15-23; I. Tim. 5:10; Rev. 22: 14).

Article XIV. We believe in the existence of the arch enemy of the human family, called by various names in the Bible: Dragon, Serpent, Devil and Satan (Rev. 20:2), and that he is separate and distinct from man (Gen. 3:1; Job 1: 6, 7), the opposer of God (Zech. 3:1-2; Luke 4: 1-13), the author of and has the power of death (Heb. 2:14; Job. 2:6), that his power will be broken and he himself bound during the reign of Christ (Mark 3:22-27; Rev. 20:1-3) and that he will finally be destroyed with the unrighteous (Matt. 25:41), which we believe to be eternal death (Rom. 6:23; Mal. 4:1-3).

Article 13. We believe the sick among us may call for the elders of the Church, and they shall pray over him anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and through their prayers his sins shall be forgiven him, and he shall be justified in the sight of God (Jas. 5: 14-15).

CHURCH DISCIPLINE

We believe that the Church as organized by the Apostles of our Lord on and after the day of Pentecost, was perfect in its organization, and the offices are God-ordained (Eph. 4:11), and are therefore vested with authority. The officers are first, Elders (Titus 1: 5); second, Deacons (1st Tim. 3: 8); third, Evangelists (II. Tim. 4: 5); fourth, Pastors (Eph. 4:11); fifth, Treasurer (Acts 6:3; I. Cor. 16:1).

1st. It shall be the duty of the Church to select its Elders according to the instructions given in 1st Tim. 3:1-7; Titus 1: 5-9, therefore they must be chosen entirely from the standpoint of fitness.

2nd. It shall be the duty of the Elders to look after the Church's welfare in general with a willing mind, setting a good example to the members, in faith and practice (Acts 20: 15-28; 1st Pet. 5: 1-4). To fail in these duties shall be sufficient grounds for removal (1st Tim. 5: 19-20-21).

3rd. It shall be the duty of the Church to select Deacons (1st Tim. 3:8), whose duty shall be to assist the Elders in the general care of the Church and direct in the relief of the poor and sick (Acts 6:3).

4th. It shall be the duty of the Church to select Evangelists according to their qualifications, for the purpose of spreading the Gospel and to organize Churches and set them in order (2nd Tim. 4: 1-5; Titus 1:5).

5th. It shall be the duty of the Church to select a Pastor (Eph. 3:11.) whose duty shall be to teach doctrine in harmony with the foregoing articles of faith.

6th. It shall be the duty of the Church to select a Treasurer, who shall have charge of all Church moneys and keep a correct record of all Church business (Acts 6: 3; 1st Cor. 16:1).

7th. It shall be the duty of those who preach or teach the word to subscribe to the foregoing articles of faith and teach doctrine in harmony therewith. And a filure to do so will be sufficient grounds for dismissal. Such authority to be exercised by the Elders and Deacons. And in case of disagreement between them, by a majority of the Church.

8th. It shall be the duty of each member to strictly observe the apostolic injunction found in Acts 15: 29, and especially the eating of blood.

9th. It shall be the duty of each member to refrain from making a worldly oath, or swearing, but they may affirm (Matt. 5:33-37: Jas. 5:12).

10th. It shall be the duty of each member to separate himself from all worldly lusts, some of which are: adultery, fornication, lasciviousness (dancing), idolatry, (covetousness), witchcraft, (spiritualism, hypnotism, palmistry, etc), hatred, variance, emulations, (to strive to excel), wrath, strife, seditions (rebellion), heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, (feasting, ball games, theaters, etc.), lying, anger, malice, blasphemy, slander, filthy talking, and such like. Also to observe the waning of the Apostle Paul in Eph. 6:12, and refrain from taking part in politics, and secret societies (2nd Cor. 6:14-15). Read carefully the following scriptures: Jas. 4:1-17; 1st Jno 2:15-16-17; Jno. 15:19; 1st Pet 4:1-5; 2nd Cor. 6:14-18; Gal. 5:19-20-21; Col. 3: 5-9; 2nd Cor. 5:17.

11th. It shall be the privilege of any married member to become divorced for cause, but he shall in no case be married again during the lifetime of the other party (Matt. 19:9; Rom. 7:1-3; 1st. Cor. 7:39).

12th. No one shall be admitted to membership without a confession of faith in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, being immersed in water by an obedient believer of this faith (Acts 8:12; Rom. 6:4-5; Gal. 3:27).

13th. No one shall be considered eligible to partake of the emblems of the Lord's Supper except immersed believers (Matt. 26: 26-29; 2nd Cor. 6:14-18).

14th. Differences between members shall be settled in the spirit and power of the Savior's instructions (Matt. 18:15-19).

15th. A hearty belief in and obedience to the foregoing articles of faith shall be a test of fellowship among us (2nd John 9, 10).

16th. A failure to comply with and live up to the foregoing articles of faith and discipline, shall be accounted as heresy, and dealt with according to the rule and practice, found in the following scriptures: Titus 3: 10, 11; Matt. 18: 15 to 19.

We believe the foregoing articles of faith and discipline to be a synopsis of the plan of salvation as revealed in the word of God. Our purpose in drafting these articles of faith and discipline is that we may all believe and speak the same things, thus coming to a unity of faith and practice (1st Cor. 1: 10; Phil. 3:16; 1st Pet. 3:8).

We extend a hearty invitation to members of the Church of God everywhere, who can indorse the above articles of faith and discipline, to join with us in our effort to establish unity of faith and practice among the Lord's people.

OBITUARY.

L'Orient Castle.

It is with sadness that we record the death of one of the most dearly loved sisters of the Oregon Illinois church, sister L'Orient Castle, who fell asleep at her home in that place on the morning of October 23rd, which was the sixty-eighth anniversary of her birth. Sister Castle, whose maiden name was Gleason, was born in Balsam Spring, New York. She was the only daughter in a family of ten children, of whom but one brother Mr. Joseph Gleason, of Central City, Nebraska, is now living.

She was married March 31, 1864 to Asher M. Castle, whose declining years are now saddened by her absence. In addition to her husband, she leaves four children to keep in loving remembrance the ever kind and patient mother, who has entered into rest. The children are Mrs. Edith M. Andrew, of Oregon, Illinois; Mr. Edwin Castle, of Hammond, Indiana; Mr. LeRoy Castle of Des Plaines, Illinois, and Mrs. Lizzie Eshbaugh, of Oregon, Illinois.

In early life Sister Castle united with the Baptist church, but later became a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Under the ministration of Brother R. G. Huggins she embraced the glad tidings of the kingdom of God and was baptized in obedience thereto August 25, 1907.

During the last few years Sister Castle has been a continuous sufferer. Yet throughout her protracted illness she remained patient and bore her burdens with fortitude.

The writer addressed a large concourse of friends and relatives, who met to pay a last tribute of respect to the dead, to whom we spoke of that blessed hope which was the sustaining faith of our aged sister.

G. ELDRED MARSH.

AMONG THE BRETHREN

Eld. C. C. Maple.

At this date, November 14, we are in a meeting at Ginghamsburg near Troy. The meeting has been well advertised by Bro. Eidemiller, and the prospects are that the people will attend in goodly numbers. The rain has kept many away on the last two evenings, but about twenty-five came out last evening and gave most excellent attention to our sermon on "How to Read the Bible to Understand it."

An expecting Elder Huggins to join us in this meeting in a few days. We hope to have the pleasure of preaching for the church at Brush Creek on Sunday morning. The brethren at that point are expecting Elder Anderson of North Carolina, to hold them a series of special meetings some time in the near future. We hope to visit the church at Springfield and also preach for a few days at Jacksonville, before we leave this section of the state.

Our meeting here is well attended by those of many different faiths, including Disciple, Brethern of Christ, United Brethern, Baptist, Christian, etc.

Yesterday was our first day calling among the people; twelve calls were made and the class of people appeal to me as a class of very kind, intelligent people, whom we trust may gladly receive the word and search the scriptures for themselves.

Elder and Mrs. Robinson have done much good work in this section which has not been in vain. May the seed that they have planted, which we shall cultivate in the Lord's own good time, produce an abundant harvest.

We hope to have more to say to our readers in the near future regarding our work in Elyria, O. This field will be then center of activity when we finish our fall meetings. Address me at North Ridgeville, Lorain county, Ohio.

THOUGHTS ON PROPHESY AS CONNECTED WITH PRESENT EVENTS.

Flora A. Wood.

I have no doubt brethren, we are all watching with eager interest and longing hearts, the conflict now raging in the territory of the "sick man" of the East. Our interest is not that of the world at large, but comes from knowing what the word of the Lord says of this time; and our longing is that the Euphrates may be dried up, not because of the awful carnage that must follow or the time of trouble such as never has been that will come upon the world but that the way of the kings of the East may be prepared an d the blessing and peace from the seed of Abraham may come upon all the earth.

Our Lord has commanded us to watch for the sign of his coming, and has told us we may know when he is near. Because some have made mistakes in the past, should we cease to watch? If some have erred slightly in their computation of prophetic time, does not the word of the Lord stand fast? We do not know the day nor the hour in which our Lord will call for us, nor do we set times—but there are times and signs given by the God of heaven, and if we are wise we will study them carefully.

The Crimean war did not dry up the Euphrates; perhaps the present trouble may die down for a while; but we know that its coming is not far distant, for the mouth of the Lord of Hosts hath spoken it. Be sure that when the set time to favor Zion be come, the Lord will work.

It may seem to us that so much is to be accomplished that it will take a long time, but we cannot measure God's power by our own weak abilities. I have been reading of these things in a book written by a brother, one who labored diligently for the Lord, one who fell asleep long since, but will doubtless waken when Jesus calls, to honor and an abundant entrance into the kingdom. God is not unfaithful to forget his labor of love.

In reading I came across something bearing so directly upon the times soon to open before us, and of interest to all who are studying the prophecies on this subject, that I wish to transcribe it. I may not give the exact words, but will try. The article is entitled, "Position of the Russian and British forces at the Advent."

"The king of the North, or Gog and his hands, takes his position between the Mediterrean and the Sea of Galilee, and from thence to the Holy City, which he will invest with his forces (Dan. 11:45). Thus he will be like a cloud to cover the land, being a distance of seventy miles from Jerusalem to the rear of his army, and thirty-five miles from sea to sea. Within this area is Jezreel and the plain of the ancient city of Megiddo. Here the forces of Judah were overthrown by the Egyptians, and here was the death of Josiah, which caused great lamentation at Jerusalem and throughout the land. Zechariah cites this as an illustration of a future national lamentation, when all nations shall come against Jerusalem (Zech. 12:9-11).

After Jerusalem is taken the war will be continued on the other side of Jordan. This will extend the war to Eastern Idumea or Edom in the region of Bozrah, while South Edom, Moab, and the greater part of Ammon escape its ravages (Dan. 11:41; Isa. 45:3). So we see while the king of the North is making rapid progress, elsewhere another power is securing a maretime section of Ottomania for itself and this power affords a refuge to those who flee before the advance of God and all his hands. That this power is England, is beyond a doubt, as see Ezekiel 38:13.

This being the final position of the hostile armies, the reader will see the force of Isaiah's inquiry of the blood-stained traveler, "Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah? This that is glorious in his apparel, advancing in the greatness of his strength (Isaiah 63:1-6). Edom may then be styled the front of the Gogian armies, and therefore when the Lord goes forth to fight them, as when he fought in the day of battle in old time, he strikes the first blow at Bozrah. John also speaks of this in Rev. 19:11-13. Daniel calls attention to it in Dan. 12:1; also Ezekiel in chapter 38 and 39.

Thus will the image be smitten, the little horn broken without help, and the king of the North come to his end with none to help him."

Now listen to the closing words of this deceased brother, written over forty years ago, "A catastrophe in which the struggle ere long to begin among the nations of the old world will be sure to end."

Brethren, has that struggle begun? Is the image rising to its feet to be smitten by the stone cut out without hands? If this be true, then indeed our salvation is near.

Do you remember the command of our Lord to his disciples in that other time of trouble at Jerusalem? "Let him who is on the housetop not come down to take anything out of his house." Those who obeyed, escaped. What is the lesson for us who are living in the near time of trouble, such as never was? Be not striving to grasp the riches of this age. The age to come is ours. What are all the glories and honors and riches of this world, compared to the great and exceeding weight of glory which will be revealed for the faithful, when our Lord shall bring the pride of the haughty low?

If you will turn to the seventeenth chapter of John you will see that the great burden of the Savior's prayer was that his followers should not be of this age or world, even as he was not. And why? Because the world has never known the Father. We cannot serve two masters. We cannot go forward to meet the Lord if we are burdened with the cares and desires of this world—for after all these things do the Gentiles seek. Be not like them, but seek first the kingdom of heaven, and our Father will give all things needful.

"Go gather the glories of all the spheres,
And multiply each by endless years."

One moment in the kingdom with our dear Elder Brother and all the saints, is worth them all.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homiletic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 368 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do heerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

Just laws are no restraint upon the freedom of the good.

The use of money is all the advantage there is in having it.

Patience is the strongest of strong drink, for it kills the giant dispair.

When a grain of corn dropped into the soil becomes a full ear, when the apple seed makes a tree, loaded season after season with delicious fruit, we see the old miracle repeated, the little made much.

Leaders of great movements are remembered longer for what they were than for what they did. Multitudes can tell today what Mr. Gladstone was who cannot recite what he did.

To drink neither wine nor strong drink is becoming more and more an essential for the man who is to do great things in the world, whether for himself or for God.

Good is slow, it ascends; evil is rapid, it descends; what wonder that it should make much way in a little time.—Madame Swetchine

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God. *

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16. Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38; 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or quit the pulpit.

Teach the Scriptures, not foolishness. Honor God and the Savior.—B. S. Driggs.

Great Combination Offer

OF "THE RESTITUTION"

GET THESE Money-making Secrets WITH Farm Journal

Is this coop properly built? "Poultry Secrets" tells how to carry fowls, and many other secrets for more profit.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scrant-on, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says Roy Cramer, Illinois. "What it tells would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes F. J. Dickson, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 300 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck raising," says F. M. Warnock, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-Book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says F. W. Marshall, New York.

T. F. McCabe, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden this summer. I lost my health in the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting near to the soil. After a long siesta with the Chinese language and mission problems, it is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, fowls, chickens, etc. I am saving money and regaining my health. My wife and I both find FARM JOURNAL indispensable."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. Potter, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. Gladwyn, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes Mrs. Jos Lawrence, Saskatchewan. "I was never successful in growing cabbage until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes Dr. William Davis, New Jersey. When the first copy came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to seem like home. When it arrives, I feel the gladness jump right into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until half-past ten, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. L. Stone, a Virginia bank clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL, I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. Wetzel, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."
These booklets are 6 by 9 inches, all profusely illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of discoveries and methods of successful poultrymen, long jealously guarded. It gives Felch's famous mating chart, the Curtiss method of getting one-half more pullets than cockerels, Boyer's method of insuring fertility, with priceless secrets of mating, breeding, feed and feeding, how to produce winter eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "bishoping," "plugging," cocaine and gasoline doping, and other tricks of "sport" and jockeydom, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse. It also gives many valuable training, feeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $18,000 a year, mainly from eggs. All backyard chicken-raisers should learn about the "Raspecas Unit," and how Foster FEEDS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest fall-bearing strawberries almost until snow flies. It gives you the fruits of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and blossom-removing to produce berries in the fall, tells inside facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how one grower gets 10,000 quarts an acre and nets 25 cents a quart, etc. J. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who can grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Prof. Holden, the "Corn King," tells how to get ten to twenty bushels more per acre of corn rich in protein and the best stock-feeding elements. Pictures make every process plain.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of seven cows that produced half a ton of butter each per year ($160 pounds is the average). An eye-opener for dairymen. Get it, weed out your poor cows, and turn good ones into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your backyard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck-farm near Boston makes every year 50 cents each on 40,000 ducklings. Tells why ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW they do everything.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Horace Vose, the famous Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to mate, to set eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey-ranch PAY.

EVERY live farmer knows the FARM JOURNAL, for it is famous everywhere as the leading farm and home paper. It is thirty-five years old, and has the largest circulation of any farm paper in the world. It has always stood up for the right of farmers to "sit at the first table," and is one of the great forces that have made the American farmer prosperous.

To interest NEW readers in The Restitution, and increase its circulation and usefulness in every corner of its field, we have made an arrangement with the publishers of the Farm Journal by which subscribers to The Restitution can, for a short time, get both papers and any one of the booklets for little more than the cost of the Farm Journal alone, although in spite of its excellence it is one of the cheapest papers published.

The regular price of The Restitution is $1.50 a year.
The regular price of the Farm Journal is $1.00 for five years.
The regular price of the booklets to old subscribers 25c each.
The regular price of two copies "A Letter to a Friend," 20c.

Here is Our Offer--$2.70 Value for $1.50

By special arrangement with the publishers we are able to offer to new subscribers the Farm Journal four full years with choice of any one of the advertised booklets, "Money Making Secrets and two copies of a "Letter to a Friend" and The Restitution for one year, all for $1.50.

"YOUR SORROW SHALL BE TURNED INTO JOY."

John 16:20.

Sister Alice B. Curtis of Fountain City, Ind., says the following verses soothe and comfort her. She longs for the touch of a vanished hand and the sound of a voice that is still, till it seems at times as if her heart must break. Others are passing through the same bitter experience. Let these verses speak for her to them. God giveth songs in the night. He has given us this.

S. R. WINCE.

"I've found a joy in sorrow,
A secret balm for pain.
A beautiful tomorrow,
Of sunshine after rain:
I've found a branch of healing,
Near every bitter spring,
A whispered promise stealing,
O'er every broken string.

I've found a glad hosanna,
For every woe and wail,
A handful of sweet manna
Where grapes of Eschol fail:
I've found a rock of ages
When desert wells are dry,
And after weary stages
I've found an elm nigh.

An elm with its coolness
Its fountains and its shade,
A blessing in its fullness
When buds of promise fade.
O'er tears of salt contrition
I've seen a rainbow bright,
A glory and fruition
So near yet out of sight.

My Savior, thee possessing
I've all things, and in thee
The healing and the blessing,
The sunshine and the Psalm,
The promise for the tearful,
The elm for the faint,
The rainbow for the tearful,
The glory for the saint."

THE CHURCH OF GOD

The True Bible Name

No. II.

Jas. A. Patrick.

V. Should the Church be named for Christ?

There is a class of people that hold that the church should be called the Church of Christ: (1) Because it belongs to Christ. (2) Because Christ and God are one, and when we say Christ we say God, and when we say God we say Christ. Now a word more in regard to the church belonging to Christ. That it does no one will deny, but is that any reason why it should be called by his name? In Acts 20:28 we read: "Take heed therefore unto thyself, . . . to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." Of course in our common version this reads as if it were God that shed his blood, and that is a strong point with some that Christ and God are one. But the thought is preposterous. God shed His blood? Prof. Wilson, in the Emphatic Diaglott, renders it: "The blood of his own." He further says in his note on this verse: "There are no less than six different readings of this phrase in the MSS. which have probably arisen from a presumed difficulty in understanding it in connection with the latter part of the sentence—'purchase with his own blood.' But read it as it stands in the original, and it still makes good sense, without rejecting the reading of the most ancient MS. and some of the oldest Peshito Syriac Copies. The reader can supply the eliptical word after own, whether it be Son or Lamb, or Sacrifice. Thus, feed the Church of God, which he acquired by the blood of his own (Son)."

Thus we see that it was the Church of God which was purchased by the blood of Christ. It was the family of God that was lost, sold under sin, and it took the precious blood of Christ to purchase or redeem it. It belongs to Christ by right of purchase; but what is it that belongs to him? The Church of God, which he purchased by shedding his blood.

Another thought right here is this: Christ is not a name but a title, meaning the Anointed One. So if we say Church of Christ we are giving it a title instead of a name. Christ is no more a name than sultan, czar, king, president, etc. So when we read of the "Churches of Christ" it refers to those churches which own allegience to the Anointed One as their head; simply a descriptive title, as "Church of the first-born," "the household of faith," etc.

2 Now in regard to Christ and God being one, so that when we say God we refer to Christ, and vice versa. Christ and God are one what? One person of course. How else could Christ and God be used as referred to above except they applied to one person? And our friends proceed to argue this from the fact that the names of Deity are applied to Christ. For instance Isa. 9:6, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given. . . . and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace." Also Heb. 1:8, "But unto the son he sayeth, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever." But when asked to show one scripture where the title "Christ" is applicable to God they fail to do so.

Now that Christ and God are one person is too absurd to be argued, it would seem, and yet there are those who will argue to that effect because, as I have said, the appellations of Deity are applied to Christ, and also because Christ said in John 10:30, "I and my Father are one." Yet they fail to read John 17:11, where Christ explains their oneness. "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are." How are Christ and God one? As the true followers of Christ. One in desire and purpose to save the lost. If Christ and God are really one person, to whom did Christ pray? Who was it that said, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased?" and many like expressions.

Now in regard to the names of Deity being applied to Christ. We notice in Isa. 9:6 that the Son which was to be born was to be called the Mighty God, etc., not that he was the Mighty God. Now why was he called by these names? We read in Heb. 1:4, "Being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than the." What name did Christ inherit? What name could he inherit but that of his Father? That is why he is called God in the 8th verse. He has a right to that name because he obtained it by inheritance.

Some people ask us: Why do you take the name, "Church of God?" I answer, we do not take it, we inherited it from our Father. My child does not take my name; he inherits it. Christ is our brother; he inherited his Father's name. What is more natural than that the rest of the family should inherit the same name. Some argue that among some nationalities the Swedes, e. g., the children do not take the family name, and that the Hebrews had no family names at all. That is true, but family names seem to be of divine institution, for Paul says that the whole family in heaven and in earth was named for the Father, and we see those nations which have become the most enlightened under the influence of the gospel following out this divine institution of naming children after the head of the family. The Swedes and others did not get their custom of naming from Christianity, but brought it down from heathendom.

VI. The Bride.

It is admitted by all that the Church is the bride of Christ. Has the marriage yet taken place? Some answer, Yes; on the day of Pentecost. Paul says, 2 Cor. 11:2, "For I am jealous over you with a Godly jealousy: for I have espoused you unto one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ."

In Matt. 25:10 in the parable of the virgins, Christ places the marriage at the coming of the bridegroom; and if we turn to Rev. 19:7-9 we find that the marriage of the lamb was shown to John as something then yet future. And to be sure the espoused bride does not take the name of the prospective groom till the wedding has been solemnized. To think of the marriage having taken place on the day of Pentecost would make Christ get his bride on the installment plan. Preposterous!

VII. Denominations.

Eld. A. E. Hatch in his tract on "The Church Name" says: "Denominationalism exists; and as long as we 'know in part and see through a glass darkly, it is liable to continue. How can we distinguish the denominations without denominational names?"

This is simply begging the question, because we find that denominationalism is condemned in the Bible. Of course from man's standpoint these things are necessary, but from God's standpoint they are condemned. From which standpoint will we look at them? Paul says that we should be joined together in one mind, that we all speak the same things, that there be no divisions among us. Will we be conformed to the whims of men? or will we be transformed by the renewing of our minds?

Elder Hatch further says: "When I use the word Church in our language, it always refers to Church of God. We never heard of anyone organizing a church of the devil, or anything else but of God alone. We sometimes rashly judge others to act that way, but the honest founders of each religious body actually purposes to make it a Church of God. 'Baptist Church' signifies Baptist Church of God; 'Advent Christian Church,' of course, Advent Christian Church of God; and so with all others."

Well, if this be true, in the name of God why do we want so much of a handle to the name of his church? Did he not know enough to name it properly, or must we be called upon to put on the finishing touches and decorate it up, each to his own fancy? Our writer is also a conditionalist in belief. Why not the Conditionalist Advent Christian Church of God? Just as well use the whole handle as a part. Further on in the same tract he says: "The denominational name is merely a matter of business and convenience, not denied us by the scriptures, and made necessary by the nature of the case."

Why could not a Bible name be as convenient and businesslike as any other? And what could be the nature of the case that would make anything unscriptural necessary? And as for its not being denied them in scripture, neither is sprinkling denied for baptism, neither is triune baptism denied those that practice it, and many other things that might be mentioned. Why are they not denied? Because the positive is so plainly stated that there is no need of a negative statement.

VIII. Excuse for not taking a Bible name.

Every writer and every one with whom I have conversed freely admit that "The Church of God" is a Bible name, and in fact the only one recognized in holy writ. But if the question be asked "Why, then, if it is a Bible name, do you not accept it?" The answers usually given are:

First: "Oh it makes no difference what name we take." And yet each will contend that their name is the right one.

Now if it makes no difference what name we take, then Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Christian, Universalist, Advent, Reformed, Lutheran, etc., each have as just a claim to being right as the other, so far as names goes. If it makes no difference, why do we not find the Bible writer recognizing the name of Paul and of Apollos by which some wished to be called? On the contrary, we find Paul condemning them for this and for the divisions and schisms among them. So it seems that it makes a difference whether or not we take the name which God intended us to have.

Second: "The Church of God is the name of the universal church, including every believer in the world, and was never intended for the different denominations." Does the Bible recognize any denominational lines? Is there more than one creed set forth in the scriptures, and does not Paul speak of the "Church of God" at Corinth showing that it was applied to the local churches?

Third: "We take our name to indicate our belief." To all such I would answer by asking a question. Is your belief in accordance with sound Bible teaching and doctrine? If so, are you not casting a reflection on your belief by taking a name to indicate it? And again, if your belief is in accordance with the teachings of the Bible, why would not a Bible name be the best indicator of that belief? Besides there is no one name that will cover all the phases of any belief.

Now for instance, the name Baptist indicates that those that bear it believe in baptism, and not sprinkling; so with the name Advent; it only points out the fact that those who bear the name are looking for the coming of Christ. Is a believer in the Second Coming Church as the Advent Church, for coming and Advent are exactly synonymous? Now so far as the name Christian is concerned as applied to the church, it has no foundation at all from a Bible standpoint. "The disciples were first called Christians at Antioch." "Yet if a man suffer as a Christian" and "almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." In these references (and these are all there are where the name Christian is used), it is plain to be seen that only individuals are referred to.

An Appeal.

In closing let me appeal to all lovers of sound doctrine and Bible teaching, and especially to those who believe in a literal interpretation of the scriptures, and do not believe in any twisting or spiritualizing of any passages to make them fit a preconceived notion; to take the name God intended his children to take; to come to the standard of God's word in all things; to give all honor to the Father as Christ did; to be kept one in the Father's name, as our Savior prayed that we should; to belong to the family that Paul tells us is named for the Father. Is there anything unreasonable in this? I am a Baptist, a Conditionalist, An Advent, and a Christian in doctrine; but I belong to the Church of the Living God, which is the pillar and ground of the truth.

THE FAMILY NAME

James A. Patrick.

I ask all lovers of Bible truth,
Do you belong to the family of God?
Are you willing to walk the humble path
That Christ our Savior trod?

Paul said the whole family in heavne and earth
Was named for Christ's dear Father;
And if you belong to the family of God,
You should bear his name, and no other.

Christ prayed this family should be kept one
In the Father's most holy name.
Now all who wish to do Christ's will,
Should herald abroad its fame.

This family, Paul says, is the Church of God,
Of the truth, the pillar and ground.
And all who belong to this family of God,
In his church will ever be found.

For if you belong to God's household,
You are Christ's own sister or brother.
Now the house and Church of God are the same;
And you can belong to no other.

Two families constitute the whole world—
One the family of God our Father,
The other, the family of satan, our foe—
We belong to the one or the other.

Let me plead with all who love the truth.
Be not ashamed of your Father's name;
But rejoice in bearing the name of God,
And heralding wide its fame.

WHAT IS RELIGION?

Eva Gazeley.

Whatever definitions men have given of religion, there is none so accurately descriptive of it as is this, that it is such a belief of the Bible as maintains a living influence on the heart and life. Religion is the divine science which teaches how man may be brought into the favor of and union with God.

The ways of attaining these blessings of religion are faith and obedience. True religion and virtue give a cheerful and happy turn to the mind: admit of all true pleasure and even procure for us the highest. True religion shows its influence in every part of our conduct; it is like the sap of a living tree which penetrates the most distant boughs."

James 1:26-27 reads, "If any man among you seem to be religious, and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain. Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

Love God and he will dwell with you. Obey God and he will reveal to you the truth of his deepest teachings. The religion of Christ reaches and changes the heart, which no other religion does.

Faith is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen. Faith is that quality in the believer which enables him to grasp the unseen and the future (Hebrews 11:1).

Through faith we enter in fellowship with God in Christ through faith we become his children, for ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus (Gal. 3:26). Faith requires effort on our part first of all we must understand what it is that we believe, and then we must grow in the knowledge of that which we believe. Affection is also required on our part. "God is love," and "he that loveth not knoweth not God." We must labor, for faith without works is dead. Through faith we gain eternal life (John 3:15-16-36).

John 11-25 reads "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me though he were dead yet shall he live.

By faith we are freed from sin. When the palsied, sick and blind came to Jesus with faith in him, he said unto them, "Thy faith hath made thee whole."

There are obstacles to faith that must be overcome: that of receiving the honor and praise of men rather than of God. Jesus sent his apostles to preach the gospel to every creature, and it says in Mark 16:16, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." These glad tidings are concerning the seed which was promised to Abraham by God, who was to inherit all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession.

Faith is the root of all good works; a root that produces nothing is dead. Faith and works are like the light and heat of a candle; they cannot be separated.

A firm religious faith makes life a discipline of goodness; it creates new hopes, when those of the world vanish; throws over the decay of life the most gorgeous of all lights; and awakens life even in death.

The first law God ever gave to man was a commandment pure and simple, which was the law of obedience.

Obedience is the mother of success. Shakespeare says, "Let them obey that know how to rule." Jesus said, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." John 14:15; "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Peter says "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins" (Acts 2:38).

No principle is more noble, as there is none more holy than that of true obedience. Christ is an example of obedience.

In Romans 5:19 it says, "for as by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous."

It is everyone's duty to obey God. He is the Creator of the universe and the preserver of all things. He is allwise to legislate and judge, and almighty to execute. Disobedience to God under such obligations will bring fear for punishment. 1 John 5-3 reads "His commandments are not grevious," they are not a heavy burden, if received with willingness, for the burden that is well born becomes light; neither are they impossible, hard, unreasonable, or oppressive. If we love him we will keep his commandments.

David says, "Great peace have they which love the law, and nothing shall offend them" (Psalms 119:165). Rev. 22-14 reads, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city." Let us reverence God's commands and do them daily.

Faith is necessary, but without obedience faith is useless.

Let us consider the faith of Noah; he was a faithful servant of God, but what value would his faith have been to him if he had refused to obey God when he was commanded to build an ark for the preservation of his household? What would Lot's faith have done for him if he had not heeded God's call for him to flee from the burning cities? Likewise of what value is our faith if we do not apply it with obedience to God's word?

Let us therefore hold fast to the religion which we have, including faith and obedience.

GOLD DUST.

To be angry is to revenge the fault of others upon ourselves.

How much easier do we find it to commend a good action than to imitate it.

He that cannot forgive others breaks the bridge over which he must pass himself; for every man has need to be forgiven.

How often do we sigh for opportunities of doing good, whilst we neglect the openings of providence in little things, which would frequently lead to the accomplishment of most important usefulness.

Nothing exposes religion more to the reproach of its enemies than the worldliness and hardheartedness of the professors of it.

By thy word we shall grow in grace. The young man shall cleanse his way by it. The entrance of it giveth light and understanding. The result of hiding it in our hearts is that we needs not sin against thee.

EDITORIAL

At this writing the Editor is in a meeting at Ginghamsburg, O. A full report will be given next week.

Bro. Maple is conducting a meeting this week in Dutton, Mich.

From some remarks in Bro. Allard's "Evangelistic Notes" some critical brethren may deduce the conclusion that he is willing to give up the gospel message of the kingdom of God (Mark 1:14) for the sake of fellowship in the ranks of those who believe in the morality of man alone. To forestall such an interpretation and the criticisms to which it would subject him, we now state that in our opinion the brother does not mean his remarks to be so understood.

GOD AND MAMMON.

Chas. A. Goss.

"No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." Matt. 6:24.

The authority and positiveness of Jesus' teaching was always a source of wonderment to the people; they were astonished at his doctrine, for he taught them as one having authority or right and ability.

He says, "No man can," but he does not say that no man will try to serve two masters. Neither does he make one rule for the Pharisee and another for the Publican; one for the rich and powerful and another rule for the poor and humble ones.

In Romans 2:11 we read that there is no respect of persons with God—as to what he requires of them, so we ever find Jesus in harmony with his Father's will. Thus he said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me" (Matt. 16:24. Any man is as broad as the world, but no man is equally broad.

If any man does this he must be walking according to the apostle's admonition to "walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit." No man can do both any more than he can walk two ways at once.

But that does not prevent many people from trying to do both at once. They try to serve God and mammon. And it was because of our danger in the temptation to do the same thing, that we need the same lesson in our day. It is men of decision and of action that God wants; those who will take a stand for right. In the epistle of James we read that a double minded man is unstable in all his ways. Why he is unstable, or changing and treacherous, is because he is not sincere and upright he is inconsistent. He is continually trying to see how little he can do for God and truth, and how much he can do for himself. This is not satisfactory to himself nor acceptable to God.

But the man of strong convictions is like Joshua: He comes out boldly on the side with God. When he beheld an armed man in his pathway with drawn sword, he did not hesitate, but went directly and asked the one great question, "Art thou for us, or for our adversaries?" (Josh. 5:13). Such a thought as neutrality would never occur to a man of Joshua's stamp. He expected every one to take sides, just as he himself did.

We have a grand pen picture of the man's personality from an incident recorded in Josh. 24:14-15. Standing there before the whole nation of Israel as represented by their elders and chief officers, he does not wait for a popular vote to guide him in making his determination. No, he says, "If it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose ye this day whom ye will serve; * * * but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." He was willing and ready indeed he, to stand alone with God rather than with the whole nation without God.

That very question comes up to each of us and must be decided. Choose you this day. Every one must decide and declare his decision when the question is put to him. It is God who demands an answer, just as when the prophets of Baal were leading the people into idolatry. The faithful old prophet Elijah put the question: "How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him, and if Baal follow him." (1 Kings 18:21).

And the Psalmist voices the same thought in Psalm 95:7-8: "Today if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts."

God's word came to Israel of old by Joshua and commanded them to choose whom they would serve. A choice of masters or lords whom they were to serve was put before them in the words: "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." Now is the acceptable time.

Many people are just like those people were in Joshua's time. They very readily answered, "We will also serve the Lord; for he is our God." Did Joshua accept that declaration as satisfactory and final? In view of all the history of their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, it is not surprising that they made this promise and declaration, but Joshua did not readily accept it. He wanted them to consider well what God would require of them, and to realize the obligation they were assuming.

I cannot help being reminded by this incident of the lesson given to the great teacher in Luke 14:28 to 32. He said: "Which of you, intending to build a tower, sitteth not down first and counteth the cost whether he have sufficient to finish it." A tower was not an ordinary house, but rather a refuge, a stronghold, a safe retreat in times of danger and warfare, and it needed to be built on a firm foundation and of enduring materials.

What emphasis Jesus put on the cost is shown by his words following this text: "So likewise whatsoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my disciple." David sang of his trust in God in these words: "The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer, in him will I trust. He is my shield and the horn of my salvation, my high tower and my refuge" (2 Sam. 22). And again he says: "Lead me to the rock that is higher than I, for thou hast been a shelter for me, and a strong tower from the enemy" (Psa. 61).

Now we see that the figure Jesus used of a tower was scripturally suggestive of the God of Israel, and the counting the cost of possessing a tower is easily comparible to the sacrifice of all that he hath, as taught by him.

What is the answer? What is the purpose or need of this sacrifice? It is found in Deut. 13:3 in the words: "For the Lord your God proveth you, to know whether ye love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul." "God is come to prove you, and that his fear may be before your faces, that ye sin not" (Ex. 20:20).

After the proving, the trials, the temptations, what then is there for the proved and tried ones? Have we not the answer in the words: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for after his trials he wil receive a crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him?" And this is just what I believe Jesus was trying to teach his hearers when he said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

The word mammon is a Syriac word, the common language of the Jews in his day, but is not the name of any god or idol of the heathen, such as dragons and Ashtaroth of the Philistines or as Diana of Ephesians in Paul's day. The word means wealth, riches; and of course, stands for all that wealth can give to its possessors, such things as ease, luxury, pleasure, society, honor from men and their praise and flattery—very pleasant to the self-complacent one who lives only for the enjoyment of this present world. Solomon said: The rich hath many friends" (Prov. 14:20); and it is quite as true now as in that day.

Jesus did not condemn the mere possession of riches, but warned their possessors of the great danger of trusting in them rather than in God, and the difficulty of, withstanding the temptation to use them selfishly. So we must rightly divide the word of truth, remembering that God gave great wealth to some men as a special mark of his favor. Among these we find Abraham, Jacob, Joseph, Solomon. Then in the New Testament times we read that Nicodemus and Joseph of Aramathea were of the wealthy class.

They were not rejected because they were rich—for they were evidently not heaping up wealth for their own pleasures and gratification. That would certainly have brought condemnation and punishment, for we have a lesson in Luke 12:15 to 28 which teaches us what God thinks of such men.

God sent the rain and the sunshine on the rich man's fields and orchards, and they brought forth abundantly. Did the man give thanks for the blessing of bountiful harvests? No; but all his concern was how he could keep it all to himself and for his own selfish ease and enjoyment. And this, his inward though, was his undoing, for the Lord puketh upon the heart in his dings with men. The Lord loveth a cheerful giver. Praise and thanksgiving should be given to God as the giver of all our temporal goods. Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy. So this rich man was not permitted to live at ease and never acknowledge his dependence upon God. His motto was: "Take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry." He chose his God, the god of wealth, Mammon; but that night his life was required of him. It was a foolish choice that he made, yet how many are doing the same every day. Dependence upon what we have of this world's goods will never please God; and though the sentence of death may linger in many cases, it is none the less sure. The force of all the lessons we get from this word is that we are not to rely of any temporal things even for one day, but must daily ask God's blessing upon what we have. And if we daily recognize him as the giver of all we have, how much easier it becomes to consecrate a portion of our all to his service. When this our effort and aim—no matter what our earthly possessions may be—mammon, the God of this world will not be worshiped, and will not be our God.

Therefore take no thought, saying: "What shall we eat? or, what shall we drink? or wherewithal shall we be clothed? For after all these things do the gentiles seek for: your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first—that is chiefly desire the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

What you chiefly desire will occupy all your time, attention, thought, energy, influence and whatever means you possess beyond the needful for the present life. We cannot make sure of anything in the present world by whatever amount of thought we give to it, but we can make sure of the honor and glory of life eternal in his kingdom, if we seek it first and chiefly desire it. So let our determination be like that of Joshua: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord.

"PASTOR" WASN'T LIKED IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Brother Russell Meets More Obstacles in His Record-Breaking World Tour.

Another Imaginary Speech.—Excerpts from Manila Times and Japan Weekly Chronicle Show What Really Happened.

"Pastor" Russell is encountering obstacles at every step in his record-breaking tour in which he is delivering imaginary sermons and completing thorough investigations of foreign missions by alloting from one to three days to each country. According to newspapers received here this week from the Philippines his reception in Manila was anything but flattering. The accounts of what actually happened as reported in Manila newspapers differ materially from reports given in the cable dispatches published as paid advertisements by "Pastor" Russell, in the American newspapers.

The "Pastor" and those who accompanied him on his world tour have decided to abandon the thorough investigation into the mission work in foreign countries. He is now on his way back to New York. According to the advertisments which appeared in this morning's papers he has hired the New York Hippodrome for the afternoon of March 3 to report the results of the thorough investigation.

The records of the pastor's exploits in Manila as contained in local papers show some further interesting discrepancies with the records of these exploits as published in the shape of Russell advertisements in many newspapers in this country. The cable dispatch dated Manila, January 14, which pretends to relate the happenings there on the preceding day, declares that Pastor Russell delivered two addresses there to large audiences, chiefly Americans."

The Manila Times, which carried a news story on the Pastor on the same day, January 14, says that he delivered only one address to an audience of probably 800 people, the bulk of whom were Philipinos, and that in the evening William P. Hall delivered a discourse along the same lines to a considerably smaller audience.

Another peculiar discrepancy between these cable dispatches reporting the pastor's sermons and the actual addresses is that whereas while abroad the pastor everywhere delivers his address on "Where are The Dead?" which has been his favorite sermon for the past thirty years, the dispatches each Monday report a different sermon and never the old favorite.

The pastor's Manila experience is summed up by the Japan Weekly Chronicle in its issue of February 1, 1912, as follows:

Pastor Russell with his suite reached Manila on the 14th ultimo, having sandwiched in an investigation into the mission problem in China between his departure from Kobe on the 3rd and his arrival in Manila on the 14th. He gave a lecture at the Opera House to an audience of about 800, mostly Filipinos. In an interview Pastor Russell attributed the small attendance to the criticisms upon him reproduced from the Brooklyn Eagle, against which he is bringing a libel suit for $50,000 damages, not, of course for purposes of advertisement, but for justification. Speaking of finances, he said that his organization spent $148,000 last year, and that this was $20,000 short of the receipts—a method of expenditure which in a bankruptcy court would be described as dishonest—but Pastor Russell did not produce a balance sheet. Altogether he seems to have been rather disappointed in Manila."—Brooklyn Eagle, February 26, 1912.

THE FUTURE LIFE.

D. C. Robison

A friend of mine who is a preacher said to me, "I would not give much for all the Bible reveals concerning the future life." Paul says, (1 Tim. 4:8), "Bodily exercise profiteth but little: but godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of this life and of that which is to come." The apostle in this scripture plainly teaches that there is a future life, but leaves it to other scripture to teach the nature of this future life.

As long as men teach that God is without body and parts, the future life is an unreal existence. When we believe in a real personal God, we then believe in a future life which is real. Our future life will be as real and corporal as our present.

Now that the dead are raised even Moses showed at the bush. When he called the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him (in the resurrection). If we could remove the doctrine that is universally taught, that we have a conscious existence apart from bodily organization, the primitive doctrine of a future resurrection and life would be a consoling doctrine. Paul says, "Wherefore comfort one another with these words," The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so we shall ever be with the Lord. This scripture teaches that those who are asleep in him will be raised when he comes; it also teaches that those who are alive when he comes will be changed. Paul says (1 Cor. 15:51), "Behold I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." How little we hear in these days of a physical resurrection from the dead. Instead the doctrine of the soul's immortality is taught, which does away with the need of a resurrection.

There is not a false doctrine taught that does not have for its foundation the devil's lie. "Ye shall not surely die." To us it is taught in the form of the immortality of the soul. If the deceiver used to uphold this error were expended to teach that Christ arose from the dead and showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, many of these false ideas prevailing would disappear, then all would be able to rightly divide the word of truth. How few who study the Bible seek for the truth on this point, viz.: the resurrection of Christ from the dead. Why did he remain with his followers after his resurrection, showing them that he had risen? They were to be his witnesses to all the world. His resurrection was to be fully established. He first appeared unto the women who visited the sepulchre with spices and found it empty. They received the welcome news, "He is risen," from the angel who said, "Go tell his disciples that he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him." When the women saw him they held him by the feet and worshiped him. They recognized him as their crucified Lord, having a body and parts. Two of his disciples on their way to Emmaus walked and talked with him. Did he appear as a spirit or a real person? They saw him as they had known him before his death. Jesus appeared in their midst and said unto them, "Peace be unto you." They were affrighted and supposed that they had seen a spirit (phantom). Note the language that follows, "Why are ye troubled, and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; handle me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." Then he asked, "Have ye any meat?" They gave him a piece of broiled fish, and of honey comb, and he took it and did eat before them. They handled him and he did eat before them that their unbelief might be removed, and the truth of his personal existence established.

Thomas refused to believe except he should see in his hands the print of the nails, and see the spear wound in his side. After eight days he was with the disciples and Jesus appeared in their midst, the door being closed. He said to Thomas, reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless but believing. This testimony was all given to prove that Jesus was as real after his resurrection as before it.

Jesus was no phantom nor disembodied spirit, but a person with a body and parts. Paul in 1 Cor. 15 chapter proves his resurrection by more than five hundred witnesses. He was seen by these persons. It would be a very sceptical person who would not believe if placed as they were. Blessed are those who have not seen and yet have believed. Believed what? The personal appearance of Jesus after he arose from the dead.

We are told that our resurrection will be like unto his. He has become the first fruits of them that sleep. The same spirit that raised Jesus from the dead will also quicken our mortal bodies, if that spirit dwell in us. Jesus is the first of the resurrection. All who follow at his coming must be like him. The Bible plainly teaches that there will be a physical resurrection. We shall see Jesus as he is, and we shall also see Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God. In Phil. 3:20, 21 Paul writes, "Our conversation is in heaven, from whence we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself.

In this article we have been able to give but a small part of the testimony regarding the future life. That we shall have a spiritual body is plainly taught in 2 Cor. 15:35 to 58. May we accept Paul's admonition to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

IS THE WORLD GROWING BETTER? No. 2.

A Negative Reply to the Question

L. S. Bronson

We challenge any one to produce a single Bible text that proves the world will improve in godly piety from now on until Christ returns to earth to claim his little flock as his own. The harvest of the world occurs at the end of this age, and Christ's first work after he returns is to bind the devil (Rev. 20:2) who is yet the prince and the power of the air. "The spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience" (Eph. 2:2; 6:12), showing the devil is yet at large and is walking about over the earth seeking whom he may devour (1 Pet. 5:8). Come, my optomist friends, ye who are so much out of patience with the pessimist that does not agree with you that the world is growing better: Would it not be well for you to sober down, cultivate a little Christian patience and begin to clear away a few at least of the many passages we have quoted from the Bible, and that are so easily arrayed against your theory, and tell us where these texts belong, and to what they refer if what we claim for them is not true? One Bible proof is far better than many assertions without any evidence.

One reason, however, the optimist gives as proof that the world is growing better is the great increase in the facilities for the comfort, happiness, and care of suffering humanity at the present time. What, reasoning? Yes, with one hand we build almshouses, asylums, retreats and homes for the fallen and unfortunate and with the other hand we license brothels, red light districts, saloons, etc., only to damn humanity. And when manhood has departed never to return, and womanhood is forever lost, this wonderful, loving, kind and sympathizing world suddenly loses its sympathy, and then with jeering fingers point out to them the grated window and padded cell, their last home in this life, and say to them, Go take a bath and prepare yourself for the potter's field. To all the boasting of our civilization and our human and loving cry of peace, peace to all the world, yet all classes appear amazed at these claims when they realize that all modern warfare has become more terrible than ever before by reason of those same advancements our boasted civilization has brought about and become able to produce destructive explosives and every conceivable device for hurling death to their enemies. Statesmen also seem to be impelled by an unseen but dreadful power to almost bankrupt the government in adding battleships to battleships only for the destruction of humanity they all profess to recognize as "fellow Christians." Six thousand years back in our world's history, Cain was content to take the life of only one in his family and home. But in these days of fast growing Christianity, the modern Cain is not satisfide in striving to slack his thirst for blood without taking the lives of a whole family and all their visiting friends, as was the case in one of our western cities not long ago. Surely the modern Cain, if not advancing religiously, is certainly growing in wickedness and in volume of crime far above that of his ancient brother. The awful crimes of today have become so common they but slightly shock the public mind, as the news is received and in a moment after is forgotten, and we then turn and look forward to that which will be recorded in the following morning paper. Parents are destroying the lives of their children both before and after birth. Husbands taking the life of their wives and wives their husbands, and children their parents—all this as Paul declares in II Tim. 3:3 is because they are without natural affection, saying nothing about their Christianity. Men and women with bloated forms and blotched face that no talcum powder can ever reduce or cover up, boldly and unblushingly walk our streets at noonday and, like the freightened ostrich thinking he is out of sight when his head is buried in the sand of the desert, they too think because they yet live and move in society, their manner of life and character are not known to the observing eye.

Acts of the most revolting and unbecoming character are daily being committed by those claiming to be moving in the highest circles of life and numbering as high as the "Four Hundred." Are all these things pointing to an increase of Godly piety and a closer walk with him? Do they point to a soon coming age that is to welcome our returning Lord, or as the Bible states, like unto the days of Sodom and Gomorrha? It has been said "ignorance is bliss," but usually it is not a good and safe principle to follow. A startled world once perished and knew not its doom until the flood came and took them all away. "If the good man of the house had known in what hour the thief would come, he would have watched." The door to the marriage was closed to the five foolish virgins because they did not know their lamps were empty. The inhabitants of Jerusalem and their city was destroyed because they "knew not the time of their visitation." But Paul was a "chosen vessel" of God and a mighty power in his hand because he had known the scriptures from his youth up. How say today, think you, are blessed of God and chosen of him because they have known the scriptures from their youth up? Christ once resisted the devil because he too was acquainted with the word of God from his boyhood days, and so in the hour of great temptation, was able to say to the devil, "Get behind me satan," it is written. It is written. My optimistic friends, who are so proud of your Bible knowledge, yet give no scriptural proof that the world is growing better and have no patience with the pessimist who believe your claims are not true, do you know that Paul, a chosen apostle of God to the gentiles, was a pessimist? And with the guiding hand of the Holy Spirit nearly two thousand years ago declared to his son Timothy that in the last days perilous times should come. Men would be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, and evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse (not better and better) deceiving and in turn being deceived. Do you know that it is written that the time will come when men will not endure sound doctrine. If you do not know it—and cannot believe we will ever reach such a period in the world's history, much less believe the day is already here, go and experimen with that kind of preaching for a little while and be convinced.

Do you know if the watchman on the walls of Zion is not a pessimist to a degree that will enable him to see the approaching danger and give warning to the people, God has declared in his word their blood will be required at his hand (Ezek. 33:6). Do you know that Christ's kingdom has no part or lot in the ruling of this present world or age? Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world," or age. If my kingdom was of this world then would my servants fight; but now is my kingdom not from hence" or from now on (Jno. 18:36). Do you know as yet Christ is only a prince (Rom. 1:3) and is now gone into a far country to receive authority and return. Then he comes as king (Matt. 25:31). Until then the devil is the power that now worketh in the children of disobedience Do you know it is not the preaching of the gospel that is to bring this sinful world under subjection to God. Listen a moment: "Let favor (kindness) be shown to the wicked, yet will he not learn righteousness. Yet when the judgments of God are abroad in the earth men will learn righteousness" (Isah. 26:9-10).

Do you know it is written, "As it was in the days of Noah and of Sodom so shall it be when the son of man cometh." Do you know that it is written, "Think not that I come to send peace on the earth. I came not to send peace but a sword," etc. (Matt. 10:34). Do you know that it is written. "When they shall say peace and safety then sudden destruction cometh upon them, etc." Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall," is the scriptural warning (1 Cor. 10:12). If you know all the above statements to be Bible language and you believe the scriptures to be the word of God, how can you or any other man claim and teach the people the world at the present time is growing better?

But again I hear the optimist ask, have you no silver lining for your dark pessimistic views as to a better condition for our world and humanity than you thus far have presented to our mind? Yes, thank God, in his word we have But it is after the night is gone the day appears. It is after the clouds depart the sun shineth. After the storm the calm; after the cross the crown. When the words of the angelic song which echoed over Judean hills and gladdened the hearts of the lone shepherds as they listened to the words of the heavenly choir singing, "Peace on earth and good will to men," are fulfilled, then will come to earth, and man, that summerland with its vernal fruits and fadeless flowers. A city fair with streets of gold and gates of pearls its rivers broad, and fruitage rare, will then be there! Rev. 20:21).

For a moment let me picture to your mind that summerland and golden age. In that world to come the new earth appears. God's eternal home will then be there (Rev. 21:1-4) with his people and he their God. And "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. And he said unto me, Write for these words are true and faithful (Rev. 21:1-5). To live in a land filled with fadeless flowers and where there will never come any more sorrow, tears, hunger, pain or death; and to this is added that which "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things God hath prepared for them that love him (1 Cor. 2:9), is surely enough to satisfy the longing heart of the optimist and to convince him that the pessimist can look beyond the dreary and dark hours of the present day and behold the bright shimmerings of coming morn.

Where no tear will ever fall,
Nor hearts be sad,
Where the glory is for all
And all are glad.

Will not all this satisfy your longing soul that there is a brighter day beyond these present shadows?

But I imagine I hear you say, "Taking your view of the question is not the gospel proving a great failure in this age?" That depends upon what is expected of the gospel in this dispensation. If the life boat was intended to keep the ship from sinking, then it is a failure. If it saves the crew only, then it is a failure. If the gospel was to effect the eternal salvation of all men, then it is a failure. If the gospel was intended to convert the world and it is not converted, it is a failure.

But it the gospel was and is to be preached, as is stated in scripture (Acts 15:13-18), to take out of the gentiles a people for his name, his bride, the church, it is not a failure. If it was given that God might, in his infinite love and mercy, "save some" then it is not a failure. If it was given that every repentant sinner might have eternal life, and every good soldier might receive a crown of life and glory, then it is not a failure. If it was given that an innumerable company of the first born written in heaven might be saved out of every kindred tongue and people and nation (Rev. 5:9), then it is not a failure. If it was given that the vales and hills of paradise restored might teem with a holy throng, all of whom shall be equal to the angels of God, to die no more, then it is not a failure. If it was given that the elect might be brought into one great family of holy ones, then the gospel of Christ to the children of the gentile age is not a failure but a great success, and has accomplished that which he pleased and has prospered in the thing whereunto he sent it" (Isah. 55:11).

Oh! that men would study the scriptures to show themselves approved of God (not men) workmen that need not be ashamed rightly dividing the word of truth (2 Tim. 2:15). They would then see a harmony in God's great plan of the ages they never saw before. They would then better understand his purposes with the children of men. Without this understanding of the plan of these ages and God's purpose concerning each of these periods as revealed in the scriptures, very great confusion in reading and teaching the truths of the Bible will be the result. The Bible was not given to us to handle as a parlor ornament, but to be used as a weapon in a spiritual warfare against the evils of the devil and against spiritual wickedness in high places" (Eph. 6:3-17).

Brother, are you one of God's soldiers and having on his armor, and are you acquainted with the sword of the spirit? If so, great is thy coming glory and power with thy God and king.

GREAT AND PRECIOUS PROMISES.

God has Made to those Who are Overcomers

1. To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God.

2. He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death.

3. To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written which no man knoweth saving he that receiveth it.

4. And he that overcometh and keepeth my words unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations; and shall rule them with a rod of iron as the vessels of a potter shall they be broken to shivers; even as I received of my Father. And I will give him the morning star.

5. He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed into white raiment and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels.

6. Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is New Jerusalem which cometh down out of heaven from God; and I will write upon him my new name.

7. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne.

He also promises to come quickly and since a thousand years is as one day with the Lord, the second day seems to be drawing to a close, the day is far spent, night approaches, so let us see that no man take our crown.

Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the true life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

We may all be there brother and sister, if we have faith, obedience and perfect trust in our Father in Heaven.

JESSIE KAUFFMAN.

"THE KING'S DAUGHTER."

"The King's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold. She shall be Brought unto the king in raiment of needlework" (Ps. 45).

Who is this king? He who is fairer than the children of men, whose throne is for ever and ever. The prince of peace—the everlasting Father—the first born of a new creation—the last Adam. And who this daughter, in such distinguished apparel—resplendent with wrought gold of Ophir, that sheds a radiance to the innermost core of her being? She is without spot or wrinkle or any such thing. Her beauty is of a sort that the king desires—from whose scrutinizing eye no flaw can be hid. She is "all glorious within," and he is satisfied. Her value to him is great; for many metaphors are used to show that she is precious. We like to gaze on this picture of the King's daughter in her finished perfection—her purity, beauty, strength, and queenly dignity, and withal a tender compassion that seems born of something foreign to the picture. We gaze until, from very weakness, our eyes weary; we do not penetrate for the moment the detail of workmanship, but turn aside almost in bitterness of spirit that there is no trace of anything in this daughter of a king to identify her with the daughters of men.

Then who is she? The queen consort of him who was "anointed with the oil of gladness about his fellows," because "he loved righteousness and hated wickedness." The last Eve, who is of the last Adam—at once the offspring and the bride—the body corporate of the phrase "The children which God hath given me" (Heb. ii:13). We also read of her as a great multitude which no man could number, of all nations and kindreds and people and tongues. She is descended alike from Adam and from God. The meeting point was effected by "God manifest in the flesh." "The word made flesh," dwelt among us, and begat an incorruptible seed. Those so begotten necessarily sustain the relation of children to him. Thus Christ becomes the father of his race, and in this aspect is set before us in Ps. xlv. It is an aspect seldom introduced, the more general one being that of bridegroom or brother, and we are liable to forget that he is also the everlasting Father (Is. ix:6), and that a daughter is begotten for his eternal companionship, who will render him not only the allegiance of a wife, and the affection of a sister, but also the honor due to a Father from a child which, on the elevated platform of the spirit, becomes worship—"He is my Lord, worship him."

What marvelous wisdom and beneficence are exhibited in this. Here is a plan by which the power and purpose of God become received in Christ, who, through this power, develops from us a multitudinous daughter; endows her with royal honors, and bestows on her a royal home.

This earth is not always to be cursed with thorns and briars and bathed in beasts and desolation. It is destined for the use of the King's daughter. At first she will only require that part of it where her Father secured his title to the possession; and such will be the beauty of it? The corresponding textures and unity between the home and its occupant that it will be named "Beulah."

In connection with this there is a beautiful idea of unity expressed in Hosea ii:21, 22: "In that day saith the Lord, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth, and the earth shall hear the corn and the wine and the oil." If we discerningly admire a beautiful landscape it is because it contains that which is worthy of admiration, and an intelligent perception responds to it, or "hears it." In the same way God will by and by respond to the spirit nature of the political rulers of Aeon, and they in turn will respond to a divinely taught people, who will have their faculties appealed to by the wonderful increase of the fruits of the earth, and they will "hear them" or heed them. In that day the spirit will be a golden link, connecting the Creator with all form of creation.

Afterwards, the bride will become co-extensive with the whole world, and the earth as a beautiful paradise will then be the "finished home of a perfect race.' Then shall he see of the travail of his soul and be satisfied.

The very thought of this issue of the world's history is ravishing. What is there to compare to it? We feel like one "caught up into the third heaven" so clear is the testimony in its behalf. We glory in the revelation, although seven times in the agonizing warfare, we cry out, "it is too high; I cannot attain it." Ah, we forget there is a ladder, step by step leading up to it. We should be in a sorry plight if the family of Adam's race were set forth as a mere possibility, or as a far off haven of rest without either helm or chart to guide us thither. Thankfully, we find the way of attainment made clear.

Psalms xlv, verse 10, tells us of a certain admonitory caution addressed to the king's daughter —"Hearken, O daughter ,and consider and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people and thy father's house"———she belonged to another father's house, and another people than the king's; she was not always a royal personage, but of lowly origin; and in looking back through the dark ages, she beheld herself in vile raiment. Her very progenitor was clothed in filthy garments when God selected him, and by unmerited favor, constituted him a "father of many nations.' Among her ancestry may be traced, many from the highways and hedges who accepted the position of dogs fed with the crumbs from the rich man's table. These qualified themselves for divine honors by buying the king "gold tried in the fire.' when their patrician neighbors preferred the nakedness of a hard disbelieving heart that swelled with the pride of having Abraham for their father.

If this daughter was once in such a case, how came she into the king's presence? Would she gain admission if clad in vile raiment? Oh no; she put on suitable attire. We are helped in this matter by knowing that prior to her investiture of "wrought gold" she was brought unto the king in "raiment of needlework." We ponder this for a moment. Needlework brings the idea of thought, carefulness, preparation, toil. We are all familiar with the idea of character being represented by clothing. The nature of the former is indicated by the quality of the latter, while sin is figuratively described in nakedness. The spirit has chosen in this way to show that all mankind naturally possess a character so opposed to his standard of righteousness, that he will not regard them unless their thoughts become percolated with his wisdom and their wills intertwined with his, so that two distinct materials become woven into one. This was perfectely affected by Christ, who of "twain made one new man." He was figuratively, as well as literally, clothed in a vesture without seam, woven throughout. There seems nothing in the whole scriptures that more beautifully expresses the process of development from filthy garments to wrought gold than the raiment of needlework. We know how it was fashioned—the piercing needle slowly and surely tearing away the old fabric to make way for the new, the shreads of purple and blue and scarlet, day by day wrenched from their firmly fastened settings, to be replaced by the gold whose in their weavings at last obliterated the gaudy old patterns, and in its stead presented a robe of purest gold. It is reserved in heaven, awaiting the presentation of her who prepares raiment of needle-work. When the fire has tried the last golden thread, and the needle has woven the last encircling stitch, the king will return to invest her with his own clothing of wrought gold, so that she will be all glorious within.

The question comes, what are we doing in this matter? Are we dabbing patches on our old filthy garments? Or are we buying gold tried in the fire for "needlework?" Are we complacently appropriating garments of divers colors? Whose moth eaten textures for lack of strength and durability, is the counterpart of the apron of fig leaves—mere vegetation of a season? Or are we tearing into shreds the old Adamic nature with the golden strands of "faith" and the piercing needle of "works?" Those who have chosen the latter course tell us it is a daily, hourly, work of many details. The robe is formed of minute fibres. Character is made up of little things. Our minds may be storehouses of golden grain or pestilential graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them. In mind, as in matter, the great depends on the small. Who can estimate the importance of the apostolic counsel, "Bring every thought into subjection." What wandering, vain, we may say, vacant thoughts we let go constantly, forgetting that they may be converted into fragments of gold and that we should ply the needle much more readily for having a good accumulation of material at hand. If we are to become rooted and grounded in our "work," it will be by whipping our leisure thoughts into the channel of divine wisdom.

We have all traced the robe in outline—taken many difficult curbs and followed the divine pattern strictly—heedless of the numerous counterfeits offered by friendly counsel, until we thought we had arrived at the pinnacle of the divine command when we emerged from the waters of baptism "clothed," and were ready to stand in the king's presence. We see now the robe had to be filled in. Springing from its outline, we see tribulation, patience, experience, hope, love of God, resulting in a wealth of sweetness and beauty. Dare we say that without these the robe would have been perfect? And can we tell how much more is necessary? We agonize for its completion—but—we remember the injunction, "occupy till I come."

A SISTER.

FAITH

Alice Blyth.

My subject is taken from the sixth verse of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews which reads: "But without faith it is impossible to please him, for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is the rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

The first thing to consider is, What is faith? We find the dictionary says it is "belief, trust, confidence, a settled conviction in regard to religion," while the apostle Paul says, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." In the eighth chapter of Romans we find this, "For we are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope, for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." Now, if we are to have faith in God, we must believe what he has promised, wait patiently and hope for things promised but not seen, and trust in his power to do all things well.

Now let us look at a few examples of how greatly the faith of different ones was tried in the days of old. Take Noah for one instance: Think how he was warned by God of the great flood that lived on the face of the earth that lived on take face of the earth save the few that were faithful. And how he was told to prepare the ark that was to preserve the lives of his family ,and how he was mocked and jeered at by the people around him, yet he never wavered, never lost his faith. Then there was Abraham, who left his home, his friends and his country to go into a strange country at God's command: and even offered up as a sacrifice his own Isaac, when God commanded. His life was full of works through faith; so it was with Moses, especially during his travels with the children of Israel. He was constantly tried to test his faith. Now if these men could do what they did without a break of faith, surely our faith ought not to waver over our comparitively small trials.

In studying this subject I came across the following article on faith based on this same verse in Hebrews: "Faith, then—our faith—grasps the infinite and eternal. It looks beyond the veil and sees the Almighty, and then goes a step farther. It does not stay at that point and make no advance. It does not say, Yes, we believe there is a divine being, for everywhere—in the heavens above, and in the earth beneath, and in the mighty ocean—we behold marks of his power and see the impression of his hand: we acknowledge that the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead, but we know nothing of this Creator except by the works we behold: we recognize no revelation from and as regards any purpose he may have in regard to our race or our planet ,we are entirely in the dark, for so far as we can see, no hand is held out to help us, and no voice breaks the stillness of the night. Faith goes beyond that, and we are not now confounding faith with credulity. We are speaking of a faith upon evidence, based upon that which produces conviction, and this faith believing that God is, believes also that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

The nature of the reward is in that revelation which we accept as divine. Therein are contained many great and precious promises which make known to us the way how to become "partakers of the divine nature," and so escape the corruption that is in the world through lust. There is no other way of escaping from this universal corruption except the one revealed in the Bible. Science opens up no way; it can only be realized by the power of God exercised through that man whom he hath ordained, to whom he has given power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as the Father hath given him (John 17:2).

We also find in John 3:18-36 it says, "He that believeth on him is not condemned, but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten son of God." He that believeth on the son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.

Believing on the son we must believe also on the Father: believe that he is and that is the rewarder of them that diligently seek him. So let us, brothers and sisters, diligently and carefully seek him and seek to do his will, so that in the end we may be full of faith, patiently waiting and hoping i— the coming of our Lord. Then we may hear those words: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

10—Do you gain your living by your intellect? Then do not allow your arms and legs to grow stiff. Do you earn your bread by your pickaxe? Then do not forget to cultivate your mind and enlarge your thought.

NEW SONGS OF THE KINGDOM

New edition just out, 141 pages, words and music, flexible cloth covers. Price 25c each, $3 per doz. postpaid. The only song book for those of Restitution faith. Recommended by all our preachers. Address, Chas. E. Crowe, St. Paul, Nebraska.

JUBILEE HARPS WANTED

Will any person or church, having one copy or more than one copy of The New Jubilee Harp, that he is willing to sell, please communicate with Mr. Chas. Elvey, 623 North Willow avenue, Austin station, Chicago, Ill., stating the number of books for sale, the condition of books and the price of same.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be mentioned. The author sleeps, dear brethren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through them. Price 5 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

A sermon by the Editor of The Restitution. If you have friends who have immortal souls, present them with a copy of this sermon, and it will cast out the unclean spirit. One copy, 3 cents; two copies, 5 cents; twelve copies, 25 cents. Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, O.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

Just laws are no restraint upon the freedom of the good.

The use of money is all the advantage there is in having it.

Patience is the strongest of strong drink, for it kills the giant despair.

When a grain of corn dropped into the soil becomes a full ear, when the apple seed makes a tree, loaded season after season with delicious fruit, we see the old miracle repeated, the little made much.

Leaders of great movements are remembered longer for what they were than for what they did. Multitudes can tell today what Mr. Gladstone was who cannot recite what he did.

To drink neither wine nor strong drink is becoming more and more an essential for the man who is to do great things in the world, whether for himself or for God.

Good is slow, it ascends; evil is rapid, it descends; what wonder that it should make much way in a little time.—Madame Swetchine

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16. Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38: 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or quit the pulpit.

Teach the Scriptures, not foolishness. Honor God and the Savior.—B. S. Driggs.

Great Combination Offer

OF "THE RESTITUTION"

GET THESE Money-making Secrets WITH Farm Journal

In this one Poultry Idea "Poultry Secrets" tells how to carry hens, and many other secrets are more expensive.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says Roy Chaney, Illinois. "What it tells would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes L. J. Hoover, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 50 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck raising," says C. H. Warren, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-Book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says F. W. Mansfield, New York.

T. F. McCrea, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden this summer. I lost my health in the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting near to the soil. After a long tussle with the Chinese language and massionary life, it is a great relief to get out with the vegetables, trees, chickens, etc. I am saving money and regaining my health. My wife and I do in the FARM JOURNAL help grapple."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. Porter, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. Gleaves, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes Mrs. Joe Lawrence, Saskatchewan. "I was never interested in growing calshaxe until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes Dr. William Davis, New Jersey. When the first copy came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to seem like home. When it arrives, I feel the gladness jump right into me. I begin on the first page and feed to my wife until half-past ten, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. L. Stoval, a Virginia bank clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL, I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. Wessels, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."

These booklets are 6 by 9 inches, all profusely illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of 1000 secrets and methods of successful poultry men, long jealously guarded. It gives Fetch's famous trained chart, the Curtiss method of getting one-half more pullets than cockerels, Boyer's method of insuring fertility, with priceless secrets of mating, breeding, feed and feeding, how to reduce wasted eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "hidebound," "pinfeeding," cocaine and gasoline doping, and other tricks of "jockies" and swindlers, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse. It also gives many valuable training, breeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $10,000 a year, mainly from eggs. All back-yard chicken-raisers should learn about the "Rameses Unit," and how Foster FEEDS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest fall-bearing strawberries almost until snow flies. It gives you the fruits of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and blossom-spraying to produce berries in the fall, tells inside facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how one grower gets 1650 quarts an acre and nets 25 cents a quart, etc. L. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who can grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Peet, Holden, the "Corn King," tells how to get ten to twenty bushels more per acre of corn rich in protein and the best stock-feeding elements. Pictures make every process plain.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of seven cows that produced half a ton of butter each per year (440 pounds is the average). An eye-opener for dairymen. Get it, weed out your poor cows, and turn good ones into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your backyard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck-farm near Boston makes every year 80 cents each on 40,000 ducklings. Tells why ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW they do everything.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Horace Vose, the famous Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to raise, set eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey-ranch PAY.

EVERY live farmer knows the FARM JOURNAL, for it is famous everywhere as the leading farm and home paper. It is thirty-five years old, and has the largest circulation of any farm paper in the world. It has always stood up for the right of farmers to "sit at the first table," and is one of the great forces that have made the American farmer prosperous.

To interest NEW readers in The Restitution, and increase its circulation and usefulness in every corner of its field, we have made an arrangement with the publishers of the Farm Journal by which subscribers to The Restitution can, for a short time, get both papers and any one of the booklets for little more than the cost of the Farm Journal alone, although in spite of its excellence it is one of the cheapest papers published.

The regular price of The Restitution is $1.50 a year.
The regular price of the Farm Journal is $1.00 for five years.
The regular price of the booklets to old subscribers 25c each.
The regular price of two copies "A Letter to a Friend," 20c.

Here is Our Offer--$2.70 Value for $1,50

By special arrangement with the publishers we are able to offer to new subscribers the Farm Journal four full years with choice of any one of the advertised booklets, "Money Making Secrets and two copies of a "Letter to a Friend" and The Restitution for one year, all for $1.50.

AN OLD STORY IN A NEW DRESS.

Almira Brooks

This world that had long been at war in the East,
Had settled itself to a season of peace.
Yes: this was the promise the sage attest:
When our Savior was born the world was at rest.

Now, many, many years have long passed away
Since the prophets foretold this wonderful day,
That a Savior should come of David's own line:
This all should come true in the fullness of time.

It was night; and on Judea's hills
All nature was hushed and the world seemed so still
That the shepherds while watching their flock through the night,
Felt that some one was near them, 'twas an angel of light.

Amazed at the sight and partly afraid,
"Fear not," said the angel, "nor yet be dismayed;
Glad tidings I bring of heavenly worth;
I am sent to proclaim the wondrous birth

Of a child whom the prophets have often foretold
A Savior of men and of heavenly mould."
So astonished were they at the news they had heard
They watched the bright angel and said not a word.

"You will find this dear babe in Bethlehem town,
In the City of David, in long swathing gowns;
So go to him there and your Savior attend;
It is he that was promised the Savior of men."

With wonder and doubt and greatly amazed
At the words of the angel they could only gaze
At the being who stood in a halo of light,
So startled were they and filled with delight.

And thus while they gazed with wonder and awe,
A cloud of bright angels descending they saw.
And words of great rapture greeted their ear,
"All glory to God, the Savior is here."

Then all the bright angels joined the refrain:
It was "peace upon earth and good will to men."
Then returning again singing this song,
"All glory to God in the highest belong."

As they passed out of sight, the shepherds said, "Come,
Let us go see the things that the Lord hath made known."
They found the dear babe in a manger, and then
They returned, praising God for the Savior of men.

SUCCOTH.

What offerings can we bring thee, Lord?
Thy ruined temple stands forlorn;
Its stones are level with the sward
Or alien altars now adorn.
And bitter desolation stills
The lowings of the stately herds
The bleatings of a hundred hills,
The shepherds songs of joyous words.
No fields of corn or luscious vines
Thy people's toiling hands engage,
And from the Ghetto's dark confines
They make no holy pilgrimage.
To bring their offerings to thy shrine,
With sound of tabret and of lute:
They pour a draught of bitter wine,
And lay before thee Dead Sea fruit!
Oh give us back our father's days,
The land they trod in festive glee,
When harvestings were acts of praise,
And best ripe fruits were gifts to thee!

—Selected by Sterling P. Graves from the Jewish Chronicle.

MAKING OUR OWN WORLD —A THANKSGIVING SERMON.

By Maltbie D. Babcock.

The people therefore, that stood by, and heard it, said that it thundered; others said, An Angel spake to him.—John xii. 29.

A verse from one of the songs of boyhood runs:

"This world is not so bad a world
As some would like to make it;
But whether good or whether bad
Depends on how you take it."

What you make of the world is, practically, what you think of it and what you do with it. There is a difference in the opinions and behavior of people. From the same facts they reach different philosophies; from the same premises, different conclusions. Some said it thundered; others said, An angel spake unto him—one fact, but two opinions; one sound, but two interpretations. Where lay the difference? It must have been in the people.

Fichte says what system of philosophy you hold depends wholly on what manner of man you are. Philosophy means, in effect, your theory of life—Epicurean, Stoic, Utilitarian, Necessitarian. Kant speaks of the "Ding an sich"—the thing in itself. But who can tell what that is? The moment I behold anything it is colored by my powers of perception and interpreted by my personality. There was a sound that day in Jerusalem; but who knows what it was in itself? To one man thunder; to another an angel's voice; to Jesus himself, the voice of his Father. What is music in itself, if there were no one to hear it? I remember listening to a string quartet concert with a friend. I can not describe the pleasure it was to me. Asking my friend afterward what he thought of the concert, he said, "It was one long squeak to me." Mr. Lowell, in an English address said: "The proverb, 'Truth lies at the bottom of the well,' comes about because whoever looks down to see her sees his own image, and is sure, not only that he has seen the goddess, but that she is far better looking than he had imagined." Meta-physicians call this not conception, but apperception. It is the fact colored by the mind. It is the sound as I hear it, the sight as I see it. It is a landscape through the glass of my mind—distorted, if the glass is poor; clear, if the glass is good. In the first scene of Julius Caesar, Decius says, "Here lies the east." "No," says Casca with heart full of conspiracy. Cinna agrees with Decius and points to the gray dawn in the east. Again Casca says, "No, there in the south, where I point my sword the sun will rise," thinking of revolution and a new political day. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he," and so he sees; and the world is not what it is in itself, but what it is to us—colored and interpreted by what we impart. Wordsworth is accurate when he speaks of "The mighty world of eye and ear

Both what they half create, and what perceive."

He laments:

"I heard a thousand blended notes
While in a grove I sate reclined,
In that sweet mood when pleasant thoughts
Bring sad thoughts to the mind.

"To her fair works did nature link
The human soul that through me ran;
And much it grieved my heart to think
What man has made of man.

Through primrose tufts, in that green bower,
The periwinkle trailed its wreaths;
And 'tis my faith that every flower
Enjoys the air it breathes.

"The birds around me hopt and played:
Their thoughts I cannot measure:
But the least motion which they made,
It seemed a thrill of pleasure.

"The budding twigs spread out their fan,
To catch the breezy air;
And I must think, do all I can,
That there was pleasure there.

"If this belief from heaven be sent,
If such be nature's holy plan,
Have I not reason to lament
What man has made of man?"

Again and again he complains over the dulling and deadening of our sensibilities, and of the materializing of our common life,

"The world is too much with us; late and soon,
Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers:
Little we see in nature that is ours."

Why do we not see "Earth crammed with heaven, and every common bush afire with God?" Why is "a primrose on a river's brim" a yellow primrose to us, and nothing more, when to another it gives "thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears?" Why do we only hear it thunder, when some one else hears an angel? Why can not I see the violet hue in the shadows of the fence rails? Artists do. "I do not see these things in nature that you see," said a man to Turner as they stood before one of his pictures. "Don't you wish you could?" was the response. It looks as though the explanation of differences was inside, not outside, and a man's temperament was his fate.

I. What, then, have I to do with this? If the difference is in people so that one hears it thunder and another hears an angel's voice what have I to do with it all? I am what I am. How can I be held responsible? "Can the blind see or the deaf hear?" The whole problem, brethren, is solved by the word attention. It is attention that makes the difference between seeing and looking, between hearing and listening. Seeing plus attention equals looking. Hearing plus attention equals listening. What you see and hear may be wholly out of your control now, but not so with your looking and listening. Moral responsibility and moral power meet in your will. You can choose to look up, not down; to the right, not to the left; not because it is natural to you or pleasant, but because God's word tells you it is right. What is your neck for but to govern your looking and listening? You may see wine red in the cup, but you can look another way. You may hear the voice of temptation, but resolve to listen to the voice of God. So, with your God-given will, you may dispose yourself in opposition to your disposition. This can be done. No man is the slave of his dispositon in a world where the divine will and the human will together can do eventually what they please. Temperament is wax before the human will and God. Natural traits are powerless before moral decision. You are not responsible for the disposition you are born with but for the disposition you die with. It can be changed. Family characteristics may be chosen or repudiated by the determination of the character-builder. Heredity is powerful; but human choice has God within reach. With God all things are possible: Saul becomes Paul: human nature is changed. A man can be "born again—can become a new creation. "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle-tree, and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign." A sign—of what? That God can cross the sign and line of your nativity; that you can be regenerated; that, though you were born under a mercurial, a saturnine, or martial star, you may be born again under the star of Bethlehem with another disposition, divine, and loyal to God, with a new heart that sees God, with a new heart that hears his voice.

II. This is the first, great, and Divine possibility, and the second is like unto it and involved in it. You can change your point of attention, and create or destroy your faculties, govern your senses, and determine what you shall see and hear. Christ taught this truth again and again; he gains that uses he loses that neglects; seek God first, and things become incidental; seek the world first, and God becomes vague and remote. Attention develops; neglect disintegrates. If I were by nature like a fly that feasts on carrion, and should resolve to follow the flight of the bees, and seek only fragrance and nectar, my love for the foul would lessen, my faculties gradually be transformed, and honey and wax, sweetness and light, would become the income and output of my life. Beloved, every Christian has both natures: the old instinct for decay, the new impulse for soundness; the old instinct rejoicing in iniquity, the new impulse in truth. On the left is death on the right is life. The depressing and the encouraging are side by side. Scandal and records of sin are opposed by kindness, and hope, and words of good report; on the one hand debits and things that hurt—on the other credits and things to be thankful for; voices of temptation—high calling from God; our personal wrongs—our imperial duties; carrion—clover. To which will you choose to look and listen, despite what you now ordinarily see and hear? "His servants," said Jesus, "are ye who carries you away by force?" No, "to whom ye yield yourselves." Which way will you look? You can decide; it will affect your seeing. To what will you listen? You can decide; it will affect your hearing. You begin saying: "As am, I see and hear." True. It only thunders to the dull or guilty soul: while the ethereal and aspiring spirit hears angels voices. As we are, we do, say think, hear see. But you can reverse the process: As you look and listen, will you see and hear, think, say, do, become.

The men who heard it thunder could not help it that day. But if they discovered that others heard angels' voices; if they said, "why can not I?" if they began to look for God, began to listen for angels some day glimpses of God came to them; some day heavenly music blessed them. "If with all your hearts ye truly seek me, ye shall also surely find me." "Every one that seeketh, findeth;" for God is the God of the hungry and thirsty soul, and satisfieth the desire of every living thing.

Beloved, what Thanksgiving Day is to us, what voices speak to us today, depends upon what we have been looking for and listening to in the days that are gone. If today you find yourself inclined to murmur seeing much that is hard to bear, seeing little to be thankful for; if you find fault instead of saying grace; if you grean and can not sing; if, as Whittier says,

"You see the cloud which overhangs
A world of sin and loss;
I hear the Lord's beautitudes,
His prayer upon the cross:"

if, in a word, you see only the dark side, I am sorry. But it can be helped, swiftly, today by an act of faith come slowly in the year to come by obedience to God's laws. God can immediately open your eyes. You remember Elijah and the terrified young man who thought they were friendless and helpless, "Lord open thou the young man's eyes!" prayed the prophet, and lo, the mountains were full of chariots and horsemen!

Like a piece of cold iron in sand and metal filings, which brings no iron out, you see no especial mercies. But wind a coil of wire about the iron, and the invisible current inspirits it that every scrap of iron leaps to meet it. You, too, can be so filled with the Spirit of Jesus today that God's benefits will swiftly greet your eyes and cluster about your heart.

But for the future. I appeal to you, friends under the clouds, friends of the minor key, knights of the rueful countenance missing the voice of angels, hearing only the thunder see what can be done by your will and God's in a year. Make three resolutions.

1. Resolve to do—the seraphic rather than the stormy thing; do the thoughtful thing, and cause a thankful response: it will affect the air outside you and change the tone and temper of your mind. We are only just learning the supreme interest of the mind in the hand. Train your hand to be kind and it will react upon your heart and make it sensitive to God's mercies. Being kind to others will awaken you to the Being "kinned" to you. "One who loves his fellow men" will find himself "one whom love of God has blest."

2. Resolve to say—thankful words. However you feel, you are not obliged to tell. It is seldom your duty to say, "What disagreeable weather!" "What a poor breakfast!" "What a homely person!" "What a headache I have!" There is always an appreciative word that can be uttered. As a rule, we say what we chose. Why not choose what we say by the rule of love? We say what comes naturally, and excuse ourselves by temperament.

Let our temperament keep silence before a heart that will tell of God's faithfulness and speak good things of the Lord. It is not wrong for a shadowed heart to prompt sunny words. Even a cat will curl up in the only spot of sunshine in a room. Carlyle came down one morning with his "woes" and lamentations: "If I could but have had that dog by the hind legs within reach of a stone wall!" Walter Scott once had just such a night. "Did you hear that dog?" he was asked. "Yes, poor cur, he kept me awake. I was sorry for him; he, no donbt, has his troubles too." Let our speech be with grace, not groaning. The discouraging note can be left in silence, the loving thought can be uttered; it will help our heart of hope.

3. Resolve to look—for causes of thankfulness. "Seek and ye shall find" is a principle as well as a promise. Look for trouble, for sin, shame, ashheaps, broken dishes; you will find them. Look for goodness, good people, good apples; you will find them. The Pharisees saw in Matthew a despised publican, and their pride was gratified.

Jesus saw in Matthew a man, a possibility, and His love was gratified. Look for the good in people, in history, in the providence of God. Look for the goodness of the Lord in your own life. The dross and slag of life accumulate; smoke is in the air; flakes of soot fall softly upon us; life can easily seem a poor affair. But life is full of dignity, grace, and joy full of opportunity for goodness and kindness. Will you wait till the sunset hour gilds its passing? Will you wait till death stirs your imagination and you see, but too late, how much beauty and half-appreciated joy there was in life; how much you had of blessing, in how many ways you could have been a blessing? Look for God's goodness today. Only so will you come to see life in its fulness. The disagreeable may be forced upon you; but your mind will instinctively find an offset. Sweet uses will shine out of adversity. You will find "Tongues in the trees, books in the running brooks, sermons in stones and good in every thing." In every storm you will hear your Savior's voice, "It is I." Every day will have sufficient testing; but the word of Jesus will hold good, "My grace is sufficient for thee." You will see the sterner side of life, the rocklike structure of righteousness with the Puritan; but also life's gentler side with the Mystic, the green pastures and still waters of Peace. In your life mercy and truth shall meet, righteousness and peace shall kiss each other. The world of law shall yet to you be a world of love. You shall hear it thunder at Sinai; but you shall hear the angel voices at Bethlehem singing the glory of the God of love heralding to all mankind tidings of peace and good will.

"Old friends, old scenes, will lovelier be,
As more of Heaven in each we see
Some softening gleam of love and prayer
Shall dawn on every cross and care.

"As for some dear familiar strain
Untired we ask, and ask again,
Ever in its melodious store,
Finding a spell unheard before,

Such is the bliss of souls serene,
When they have sworn and steadfast mean,
Counting the lost in all to espy
Their God, in all themselves deny.

GOLD DUST.

Restrain the mind, and let mildness ever attend thy tongue.

If we have no defects ourselves, we should not take so much pleasure in noting those of others.

Men are not to be judged by their looks, habits and appearances but by the character of their lives, conversations and by their works. "Tis better that a man's own works than that another man's words should praise him.

We can be thankful to a friend for a few acres or a little money; and yet for the freedom and command of the whole earth, and for the great benefits of our Father, our life, health and reason, we look upon ourselves as under no obligation.

Kind words are bright flowers of earthly existence; use them, and especially around the fireside circle. They are jewels beyond price, and powerful to heal the wounded heart and make the weighed down spirit glad.

AMONG THE BRETHREN

Eld. C. C. Maple

Brethren Beloved: At this date (Dec. 10) we are still preaching the gospel in Michigan. The weather has been much against us and our attendance has not been large, yet the interest has been most excellent. In addition to the sermons every evening Bible readings have been held in the homes. Four have accepted the gospel of the Kingdom.

We expect to return to Ohio about the 16th. The gospel has not lost its power. Amen and amen.

Your character cannot be especially injured except by your own acts.

A strong temper is not necessarily a bad temper. But the stronger the temper the greater is the need of self-discipline and self-control.

Not only to say the right thing in the right place, but far more difficult still—leave unsaid the wrong thing at the tempting moment.

EDITORIAL

The Restitution has been late frequently in reaching subscribers during the most of this year. It is published on time but we have a defective mailing system, which has caused all the trouble. We ask all to bear with us in this particular until the new year, when this fault will be effectually removed.

A curious thing: Every denomination that believes in the impossibility of apostasy believes also in the doctrine of inherited depravity. They argue that a man cannot fall from grace, and then argue that the whole human family is depraved as a result of Adam's fall. They teach the impossibility of apostasy, and base their doctrine of depravity on universal apostasy!

There are remarks that are true, which can produce no effect but irritation; wise men will avoid such. There are other remarks that irritate but do good. There are remarks that do good that do not irritate—these are the best of all.

There are still "children of the market," to whom it is all one what is said and done: they are bound to be displeased. Jesus came under their censure because he ate and drank; John the Baptist, because he did not. They always impute wrong motives to you. If you are silent, you cannot answer; if you speak, you are boastful. If you take no notice of accusation, it is because you dare not. If you answer, it is because you have a presumptuous and egotistical spirit. You cannot deal with such perverse spirits in a practical way. They must be quietly and good naturedly left alone.

Bro. A. L. Corbaley writes: "Our last quarterly Conference convened in Waterville, November 29, and closed Sunday evening, December 1st. It seems that each meeting is the best. We had perfect unity and Christian love."

"A woman cannot be a conscientious Christian and a suffragist also, because of man's monopoly of the Bible and religion," said Mrs. Laura G. Fixen in Chicago, December 9th. Our sisters will all doubtless accept the alternative of being "Conscientious Christians." As showing the anti-Christian nature of the suffragist movement, and also the criminal ignorance of Mrs. Fixen, who is the business manager of the Working Woman's Home, so far as the Bible is concerned, the following quotation from her address before the Woman's party bears witness:

"We cannot accept the Bible as a divine inspiration because it features the male sex in everything almost to the exclusion of the female. Man has usurped almost everything in religion as well as everything else.

"In the Bible that we know, God is represented as a man, Christ as a man, the apostles as men, and the angels in heaven as men, and in it women are commanded to obey their husbands. Suffragists cannot accept the Bible literally as a divine inspiration. We must see that it was written by men at a time when women were their chattels. The equals of men? The Bible needs revision. It is not up to date."

Moral reformers and philanthropist, disgusted with man's failure to abolish the saloon, heartily espoused the cause of woman's suffrage, thinking that if womankind had the use of the voting booth, a great moral revolution would surely result. They reasoned that the gentler and purer sex would unanimously cooperate with the clean, good men in so righteous a task. We had doubts on the point, and have been watching the states that have given women a voice in the government to see what influence it would have on the "white slave" and saloon problems. In San Francisco, December 10, the women defeated the anti-liquor element in California. A charter amendment providing for the creation of local option units in the residential districts of San Francisco was defeated by a vote of 4 to 1.

In a recent municipal election in Los Angeles, where the percentage of women voters exceeds that of the men, a drastic saloon regulation ordinance was beaten by more than 3 to 1. Since then the harbor district of Los Angeles voted wet. No significant changes have been recorded in interior county elections.

The lesson is plain. Sexual immortalities and saloon blots can never be wiped out either by man or woman. "Salvation is of the Lord."

Brother Daniel returns thanks to those who have helped him financially. We are glad to publish this week a "Report of Labor," which gives quite a sketch of his life's work. It shows that he has been a worker in the vineyard of the Lord. One practical observation, however, is suggested by his memoir, pertinent particularly to those who are in the ministry, namely, the danger confronting us of baptizing too many. Only believers of the gospel are eligible for baptism (Mark 6:15, 16), and belief is only possible when the gospel is understood (Rom. 10:14, 17). We are not saying that Bro. Daniel has baptized too many, or that he has baptized people before they believed the truth; far from it. But as ministers of the gospel it is well to keep in mind constantly that when people rush into the truth by hundreds that when the wave of excitement recedes and this numerous company of them imperfectly taught, are left to the attrition of time, a great "wearing out" (Dan. 7:25) process begins which hardly leaves fragments of them. "Standing up," "lifting the hand," "coming forward," "giving the hand," etc., works well enough under the auspices of popular evangelism, for orthodox theologians have not truth to teach; but with us who have a definite message to deliver, and definite truth to teach, and definite requirements to inculcate, these artificial methods of church initiation must not usurp the hearing (Rom. 10:14, 17), believing (Mark 16:16) and the obedience of the truth (1 Pet. 1:22; 2 Thess. 2:13).

FAULT FINDING.

The person who has everything and everybody down wrong, says an exchange, is a peevish, petty, sour, morose, complaining, disgruntled and pessimistic faultfinding piece of humanity that casts a gloom over all things with which he comes in contact. He has no burdens, soothes no sorrows and binds up no broken hearts, but pierces through with many sorrows. He makes all miserable who come in contact with him. This condition of things is no part of the religion of Christ. There is nothing in it that is akin to the spirit of the Blessed Redeemer. "well done, good and faithful servant," "she hath cast in more than they all," "she hath done what she could," "neither do I condemn thee."

We find in the church today among the "lay members" a great routine of fault-finders, in fact, it is about all they do—just find fault. Instead of turning in wholeheartedly and doing everything they can do to help make the weak places and weak things strong, they sit back and find fault and criticise. Towards the preacher they can say and think nothing good, but his faults are numberless as the sands of the sea shore. He preaches too long or not long enough, too hard or not hard enough, dresses too fine or not fine enough, looks "tacky" and "hay seedy" or is too proud and primpy, too well educated for the common people, or is not educated enough for the educated. If he teaches the church its duty in supporting the gospel they say he is preaching for the money, and if he seldom says anything on this line they say he is not doing his duty, and the Lord only knows the faults they find in the poor preacher. Toward the elders they say they are ignorant and slow and do nothing, or they want to assume too much authority and run things to suit themselves, too many calls for money, or they are not having preaching or they are having too much preaching. Toward the singing, they sing too loud or not loud enough, too slow or not slow enough, and toward the members, it is brother "so and so" or sister "so and so" does "thus and so" or does not "do thus and so." Thus to deal with such people is like treading upon a bed of hot coals. They lie out of duty, will not work with the church or attend the services because they find fault with somebody or something in the church. O puny, pitiable, creature blind, naked, hungry, thirsty, poor and needy, and you know it not. Turn on the searchlight of God's eternal truth and look at thine own ugly self and then go into thy darkened closet and fall upon thy knees and pray earnestly to God to forgive thee because of thine own uncharitableness toward thy brethren.

Let us hope, work and pray to see more of the spirit of our Redeemer. "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do," and of the teachings of the apostles manifested in our lives "not to think of ourselves more highly than we ought to think," but in love of the brethren be tenderly affectioned one to another in honor preferring one another.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Through the columns of The Restitution, I wish to congratulate the brothers and sisters at Brush Creek, Ohio, for having succeeded in securing the services of Eld. J. H. Anderson for the coming year. I fell sure they could not have engaged any one more able to carry on their work than Brother Anderson. He is a Bible student.

It was with much regret that the brethren and sisters came together last Sunday at the church of God here at Guthrie Grove for the purpose of listening to the farewell sermon of Bro. Anderson. Brother Anderson has labored with us here for many years, being our pastor since the death of his father four years ago, during which time he has grown in wisdow and knowledge concerning the gospel of the kingdom of God, and is now considered one among the ablest ministers in the field. Bro Anderson's going away is the saddest incident that has occurred among the brethren and sisters here, since the sickness and death of his father, Elder E. M. Anderson, four years ago.

The church here has selected Eld. A. N. Durham as Bro. Anderson's successor. I fell quite sure we have made a wise selection as Bro. Durham is one among the best of young ministers, and one who we believe will be successful in the work. Bro. Durham has been in the ministerial work only about five years, but has gained ground fast for one so young in the ministry. He will now have the opportunity to prove his ability as a minister and leader of the flock. We hope Bro. Anderson will not forget us, but will visit us ever opportunity he has.

EMMIL PACK.

We are glad to welcome Bro. Anderson to our state, and pray that God's blessing may attend his labors among us. His leaving the South has called into active service Bro. Durham, whom all should pray for, as he takes into his young hands the "sword of the spirit" to do battle for the Lord. The blessings of the Lord attend all.—Editor).

"For we are laborers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building (1 Cor. 3:9).

Dear Sisters: We are making a little effort among the sisters of our church to write short letters for our paper, that others may know that we still continue to meet and exhort each other to good works, holding on to the one faith. The words of Paul in the above text, shows us plainly what we are supposed to be, but are we? Let us each stop and think, what is my special talent? Each must have one: there must be something each can do.

He says, "Ye are God's husbandry." If this be so, then we are not our own and have no right to spend all or most of our time on ourselves and our living.

1 Cor. 6:20 reads, "For we are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's."

If we are God's building we must be strong in his cause in order to keep the building perfect; each has her part to do. One good work is to help hold up the hands of our evangelist, who is certainly doing excellent work throughout our state. Every encouragement means a great deal to him and those who cannot preach or exhort can show their good will in this way. We have found that in banding together, as we have in our little meeting, we are enabled to do so much more, towards helping in various ways. Have never lacked for funds when a call has been received.

Paul says in Romans 12:1, "I beseech you, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

To do this we must work. "Faith without works is dead." Let us see to it that we are on the right road, looking toward the prize of the high calling of God, in Christ Jesus. The signs surely tend to make us realize the nearness of Christ's coming and may we be faithful and ready. Hebrews 10:23-25-25. "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, (for he is faithful that promised), and let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works: not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching."

A favorite hymn in our church hymnal:

Hark! the voice of Jesus calling—
Who will go and work today?
Fields are white the harvest waiting—
Who will bear the sheaves away?
Loud and long the Master calleth,
Rich reward he offers free:
Who will answer, gladly saying,
"Hear am I, O Lord send me."

If you cannot cross the ocean
And the heathen lands explore,
You can find the heathen nearer;
You can help them at your door:
If you cannot speak like angels,
If you cannot preach like Paul,
You can tell the love of Jesus;
You can say, "He died for all."

While the souls of men are dying,
And the Master calls for you,
Let none hear you idly saying,
"There is nothing I can do!"
Gladly take the task he gives you,
Let his work your pleasure be:
Answer quickly, when he calleth,
"Here am I, O Lord send me."

LESSON OF THE PRODIGAL SON

Katie Davis.

A thought from the beautiful lesson we learn in the parable of the Prodigal Son.

This parable seems to me to compare one who wandered away from the fold of God as he took his position and left his father's house. He was the younger of two sons, and being young and inexperienced, he plunged into riotous living till he became tired of the life, and became hungry and to be in want. He then joined himself to a citizen in a far country, and was sent to feed swine, and fain would have filled himself with the husks the swine did eat, but no man gave unto him.

I believe there are a great many people who crave human sympathy, and the husks of human sympathy are very poor food for the starving soul. I read an account of a girl, who, just before committing suicide on the street, asked a stranger to kiss her, saying, "I want to feel one touch of human kindness before I die. The world has used me very roughly." She was craving for human kindness. Unlike the prodigal son, she thought only of the world, and not of going to him who will heal all our wounds, and bind up our broken hearts. The poor prodigal came to himself, arose and returned to his father's house, truly repentant saying, "Father, I have sinned against heaven and thee and am no more worthy to be called thy son." He was yet a great way off when his father had compassion on him. Can we not believe that God knows us better than we know ourselves, and if we are sorry and truly repentant, although we wander away from him and make mistakes, if we will arise and come back to him, he will have mercy on our weakness, and if we confess our sin he is faithful to forgive.

The elder brother was angry. Does he not remind us of a great many church people? He seemed to have no sympathy for his brother's weaknesses, and had he had his way, would have turned him adrift. The Pharisees did not believe in eating with publicans and sinners, not because they were so pure and good, but because they wished the good opinion of the world. There are many such in the world today who would not stoop to help the outcast. A few years ago I knew a man who belonged to the church. He got out in company with others, and then came before the church, confessed that he had done wrong and asked them to pray for him. He had become drunk, he said, but he would not do so again. Instead of being kind to him, they made him understand that he was not wanted in the church. He became discouraged and is still an outcast, trying to find comfort in drinking. Many shall say to Christ in the last day, "Did we not prophesy in thy name, and cast out devils in thy name? And in thy name done many wonderful works?" What is his answer? "Depart from me; I never knew you." To those on his right hand he will say, "Inherit the kingdom prepared for you. I was hungry, ye gave me meat; thirsty, ye gave me drink; sick and in prison, ye visited me; a stranger ye took me in. Then shall the righteous answer, When saw we these things? When ye ministered to the least of these, my brethren, ye ministered unto me." To those on the left, "When I was sick and in prison ye visted me not; hungry, ye gave me no meat; but when saw we these things and did not minister unto thee? Inasmuch as ye did it not to the least of these, my brthren, ye did it not to me." This lesson shows the duty of every Christian. Be kind and unselfish to all.

REPORT OF LABOR

Dr. T. J. Daniel

Dear Restitution Readers:

When I came to this part of the country, Western Arkansas, some thirty years ago, there was but one man of the faith here. I went to preaching, and pretty soon the sects all united against us. Every little preacher that came along had something to say about the "soul sleepers," and denounced it as "white washed infidelity," etc. I began to preach at Waveland, Yell county, and pretty soon the people began to believe it, and we began to baptize them. There were quite a number of good citizens who belonged to no church, as they revolted at the popular doctrine they had heard all their lives. Hence when they heard the truth, they began to investigate it, and it was not long until quite a number made the good confession and were baptized. We soon built up a large church there, and it is there yet, and is composed of the very best men and women in the country. They have built a good house of worship and meet regularly. Bro. Shelton preaches for them. I think I baptized in six weeks, about one hundred and twenty-five. Many of them are still here, while some went west, to Oklahoma and other places, and from them the cause in Oklahoma started.

About this time, the Baptists sent for a preacher by the name of Blaylock, to come and tear up these "soul sleepers." He came and challenged us for a debate on four propositions: The kingdom, the nature of man, baptism for the remission of sins etc. We accepted and at the time appointed the discussion opened. There was a large crowd. They came for miles around to hear that Baptist slaughter that little "soul sleeper." In his first speech he said something like this: "Now Mr. Moderators, I want you to understand that the man you see is not the man: it is only the house in which he lives. No, this is not Blaylock: this," referring to himself, "is only the house in which Blaycock lives. These eyes are only avenues through which he hears," etc. When I came to reply I said: "Mr. Moderators, I came here this morning to debate with one Eld. J. H. Blaylock, but the gentleman who has addressed us informs us that he is not the man, that he is only the house in which he lives. Now, gentlemen, I want to see Mr. Blaylock, inasmuch as his house is here, I wish you would hale and see whether he is at home or not." At this the large crowd roared with laughter. The Moderators said nothing, so I said: "Well, gentlemen, as you are a little slow about calling for Mr. Blaylock by your permission I will call." So I walked up pretty close to him, and said, "Hello!" He made no answer. I then called a little louder, "Hello, is Mr. Blaylock at house? If so, I wish you would tell him to come out and let us see him."

Again the crowd roared, and he made no answer, so I turned to the crowd and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I presume that he is either asleep, on a journey, as I can't rouse him." Then said I, "If those eyes are avenues through which Mr. Blaylock sees, and those ears avenues through which he hears, please tell me how he is going to see or hear after these avenues are destroyed? Will you do it? Moreover, I want you to tell me which is the responsible party, Mr. Blaylock or the house in which he lives? If you say the house, then Mr. Blaylock did not sin in the beginning and therefore did not fall; Christ did not die for him, for he died for the sinner. If you say Mr. Blaylock is responsible, then I ask you, why pass the sentence upon the house. "Dust thou art" etc. Now, Mr. Blaylock, Paul says it was by one man that sin entered the world, not by two. Hence you must come up like a little man and tell us which one."

He finally said it was the man in the house that was responsible. Then I came back at him, and told him he had surrendered, for the responsible man, was the one who went into the grave and in the sea. "All that are in the graves shall hear his voice and come forth." The sea gave up the dead which were in it and they were judged according to their works, etc. Hence you see, the one who is to be rewarded or punished goes into the grave and the sea. You said the man in the house was responsible, hence he must go into the grave or sea, as the case may be. The other fellow, if indeed there be another fellow, is left out. He has no part nor lot in it.

But I cannot dwell longer here. The discussion continued five days, and at the close I held a meeting and baptized about forty-three. I think there were only three male members of the Baptist church left. Many of those converts are still here, and belong to the Church of God at Havana, Ark., where our next conference will be held. We have a good church there composed of the most intelligent men and women of the community.

I forgot to say that the church at Waveland has turned out a preacher recently, Bro. Robert Nelms, who was ordained a few months ago.

When I came to Magazine, Ark. there was no house in which we could preach, and inasmuch as I was the only one here, I proposed to four or five members of the Disciple church, if they would build the house, I would furnish the material. They said they would, so I went to putting the material on the ground. Now we have a good house, 28x54 feet I think it is; we have a good bell and organ. I was young then and cared nothing for expenses. The house cost me about five hundred dollars. My wife paid eighty some odd. At one time we had a congregation here of about 75 members but they have all moved away except only a few of us. Bro. Almus Adams can tell you about our house, as he has preached in it.

Some time after the debate with Haylock I was called to meet another Baptist by the name of Morris, near Hanson, Okla. We debated four days, and at the close we baptised nine, I think it was. A few years after this I was called to meet a Methodist preacher by the name of Hickman at the same place. We debated four days, and at the close there were eighteen come forward for baptism. Many of them are still living, and if I am not mistaken, it was at this debate that Bro. Turner and wife came out. Bro. Turner is one of our most influential members, and is the business manager of the Trumpet.

Some time after this debate, I was called down to meet one Eld. Shick in debate, near Ozark, Ark. I met him, and it was at this debate that old Bro. and Sister Lipman got their eyes open. Bro. Lipman is now one of our oldest preachers in the south. Some time after this debate I was called to meet one James Tewery in debate at a place called White Rock. Well, I met him and debated four days, and at the close seven came forward and demanded baptism, of course we baptized them.

This article is already too long, but I wish I could tell you of meeting one Eld. I. T. Garland, one of the finest debaters, and the best scholar I ever met in debate on the kingdom, as he believed as we did on everything else. We debated two days, the hardest fighting I ever did, but thank God, he gave it up and is now preaching the truth near Reform, Ark. I also met Eld. J. H. Milbourn, one of the champion debators of the Baptist church; also an author. We wrote a book on "Immortality," but since I met him in debate he has dropped out of sight some way, and I know not what has become of him. I met him at Cleveland, Ark., and before the debate closed his brethren forsook him and the deacon of the Baptist church there, came to our brethren with tears in his eyes and said, "This debate has ruined us," and borrowed money of them to pay him. But I received no pay. I also met W. F. Ledlow, a Campbellite preacher, at Atkins, Ark., in debate. He wrote a little tract the title of which was, "Man Has An Immortal Spirit." When I read it, it fired me so much I wrote a reply, which I had printed at my own expense and scattered all over this part of the country, in which I submitted four propositions to debate with him at any time, but he has never come yet. The title of my tract was, "Man Has an Immortal Spirit Examined and Refuted." I wish you could have seen it. In the meantime I wrote four tracts on the kingdom, which I had printed at my own expense. I also wrote a tract on the immortality question in a dialogue form, and had five hundred printed. Afterwards a publishing company at Yarmouth, Me. reproduced it, and printed a thousand copies. I also wrote another the title of which was, "Christ's Reign With the Saints Over the Nations." This tract had much to do in helping me to convert Bro. J. D. Scott, of Dyer, Tenn. I soon gave them all away.

I also met Eld. John A. Cargile in a written discussion on the Restoration of Israel. I don't know whether it is out of print or not. It was published by the "World's Crisis" people of Boston, Mass. I have sold hundreds of them, or my wife has, and I am sure that many of your readers have seen it.

THE VISITOR

Do you love the truth and truly believe the Lord is soon coming? Then be a wise servant.

The Visitor is the latest and best book to send to your friends for a Christmas and New Year's gift. The printer, who also read the proof, was so interested that he waited for me to add a lesson on "The Sign of the Times," before binding, which is the cause of delay in sending out the book.

If any who desire a copy sent to any address for Christmas will send me the names I will send direct to them, saving both time and postage.

The price is 25c for single copies, five for one dollar.

Any who wish to send The Visitor of 1908 to friends, should send 25 cents in postage and I will mail ten Christmas Visitors to any ten addresses you may send. Send to the address of Harriet E. Boice, 1009 South Wright St., Champaign, Illinois.

After having been laid up during the entire month of October with sciatic rheumatism I began work November 2 at Kennard and continued to the 30th. We held four meetings in the Christian Church, which is quite a roomy building. The first week not very many turned out, but after that the attendance increased till the house was well filled each evening with an interest shown that was very surprising. There was a little opposition, but we overcame a great deal of it. Every effort was put forth to get us to yield on first one point and then another. But standing firm by the whole truth, the truth won, and when they began to respond to the call of the gospel it continued till next to the last evening. After services we baptised three, making nine additions during the meeting. These are of the foremost families and worthy of the great cause they have espoused.

After we got under way we held a Bible reading each afternoon, which proved very beneficial, and the attendance increased. At the close the interest was unabated, and we were urged to continue, but a promise compels us to close with the promise to return in a couple of weeks.

Pray for those who are rejoicing in the blessed hope and those who are contemplating accepting the truth.

In passing will say Sister Newell has been in the faith for 20 years, all alone so far as relatives were concerned. But during this meeting some have heard the truth for the first time; an aunt a half aunt, a sister and daughter-in-law were baptized; so Sister Newell's Thanksgiving this year meant more to her than ever before. The obedient nine are giving thanks with a different meaning than ever before. Yours for the truth and hope of the kingdom,

ALMUS ADAMS,
Evangelist.

Romans 5:1

Justified by Faith

F. F. Blyth

From almost the very beginning of man's history, man has been accounted sinful by his Creator. Since the time of Adam the first man the race has been under the condemnation of God's law, and the condemnation is just, for man has been sinful from the first.

As sure as nature, is the fact that the sins of the parents shall be visited on the children unto the third and fourth generation. I believe the effect is even stronger than that sometimes. It has been proven that the effects of sin have produced wonderful, and sometimes awful, results after a lapse of centuries. This has been found especially true as regards natural law as it applies to the human body. The misdeeds of one man have been found to affect the physical natures of his descendants for several centuries. "Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned" (Rom. 5:12). The effect of one man's disobedience still continues after thousands of years. The first man, living at a time in the world's history when all things were good and under God's command, disobeyed, and brought condemnation and death on the whole race.

It is God's purpose to people the earth with a race of perfect beings. This purpose was in his mind when he created man and made all things for man's necessity, and pronounced him good; and this purpose was still in his mind after Adam sinned, for he made a law providing for the remission of sins through the shedding of sacrificial blood. The compliance with that law was and is still the test of faith in those that believe. God accepted the obedience to this law, in the case of the ancient worthys, as a supreme test of faith. In the eleventh chapter of Hebrews we find a long list of faithful ones. Abel offered to God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain: Abraham offered up Isaac, his only begotten son; through faith Moses kept the passover and the sprinkling of blood. All along in the history of God's people the keeping of this law has been the evidence of understanding and faith until the advent of the perfect sacrifice, the Sinless Man, Jesus the Christ, who offered himself as a sacrifice "once for all," as Paul writes of which sacrifice all those former blood sacrifices were a type, which pointed to, and showed an understanding and faith in, God's promise to provide a way whereby the faithful ones could attain that perfection.

Brothers and sisters, we show our faith in God's promise to provide a way when we assemble to partake of the emblems of Christ's shed blood and broken body. Referring to Abraham, Paul says in Rom. 4:20, "He staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief, but was strong in faith, giving glory to God." And the 23d and 24th verses, "Now it was not written for his sake alone, that it was imputed to him; but for us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him that raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead." Then follows the words of the text, "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Being condemned by disobedience to the law, we stand in need of justification in order to salvation. "Therefore by the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified in his sight, for by the law is the knowledge of sin" (Rom. 3:20). Rom. 3:23, "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." There was not one that was able to stand perfect before the law, so that those who lived under the law could not be justified by the law. Who could go to God for pardon for his sin? We find the answer in Rom. 3:21, 22, 24, 25, 26, 28. "But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets; even the righteousness of God by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe; for there is no difference; being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God, that he might be just and the justifier of them that believe in Jesus. Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law."

God made provision for our justification through faith, but was it an act of obligation? Was God obliged to provide for the race after disobedience? No; man forfeited all claim for consideration when he disobeyed. It was a free will act on God's part, an act of grace and mercy. Rom. 5:2 reads, "By whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." The word "grace" means peculiar privilege. God arranged a peculiar privilege and offered it to men. This peculiar privilege can be had under certain conditions, and he has also made certain gifts along with this privilege: He gave his only begotten Son over to death; the only righteous man, and has also given him eternal life. His Son was the first to receive that gift. He was the first born from the dead.

Through the gift of his Son we can obtain the peculiar privilege of being justified by faith in the sacrifice and the promises made to the fathers, and if our faith continues to the end, we may be partakers of the gift of endless life.

JUSTIFIED BY FAITH

Justified by Faith

"Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. By whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God" (Rom. 5:1-2).

By these comforting words of Paul we see that being justified by God we have peace with him. God is the justifier. Paul says, "He is the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus" (Rom. 3:26). We are justified by his power, for "All have sinned, and come short of the glory of God; being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Jesus Christ" (Rom. 3:24). Christ redeemed himself for us and in this redemption we are heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

Christ was raised for our justification. "Who was delivered for our offences, and was raised again for our justification" (Romans 4:25). We are justified by his blood, and shall be saved from wrath through him. Paul says, "Neither by the blood of goats and calves, but by his own blood he entered once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." "How much more shall the blood of Christ who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God" (Heb. 9:14). 1 John says, "But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

We are not justified by prayer or works, but by faith, for "without faith it is impossible to please God." Romans 3:20 reads "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight." This teaches us that if we wish to be justified in God's sight, we must rise above the material things of this life, and attain to those things which are spiritual and which are acceptable in God's sight. We must not justify ourselves before men.

If we are to be justified God will do it. He knoweth our hearts, and that which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God. The object of justification in this age is that we, as workers together with him, receive not the grace of God in vain. May our efforts be successful.

In studying our lesson the thought brought to our mind, justified by faith. In Job 25:4 we find him asking the question, "How can a man be justified with God?" Turning over to Acts 13:38-39, Paul shows us how all that believe are justified by his resurrection, which ... could not obtain through the law of Moses. So we see it is vastly important to believe or have faith in his resurrection, for in the preceeding verses of our text we find that Abraham was strong in faith, giving glory to God, and it was imputed to him for righteousness, because he believed that God was able to perform that which he had promised. Then Paul shows us how important it is to have as strong a faith in God as did Abraham because Christ was delivered again for our justification.

The question then might arise, "Was it just Abraham's faith that justified him in the sight of God?" But in Jas. 2:21 it is written that Abraham, our father, was justified by works, when he offered up Isaac, his son, upon the altar. Then we see how faith was wrought with his works and by works was faith made perfect, and the scripture was fulfilled which saith, "Abraham believed God and it was imputed unto him for righteousness. Ye see then how that by works a man is justified and not by faith only (Jas. 2:23-24). Also in Matt. 12:36-37 we find Christ rebuking the Pharisees, telling them that by thy words thou shalt be justified and by thy words thou shalt be condemned. In this text we see it is the daily life we live, for we shall give an account of every idle word spoken in the day of judgment. In Luke 18:13-14 he speaks of the Publican being justified because he humbleth himself. May we then live that faith that we may be justified in God's sight and obtain life and peace through our Lord Jesus Christ.

EDNA BREWER.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES

Dear Restitution:

Last week I left you at Morse Mills, Mo., where nearly 25 years ago Bro. Eychaner held a debate with Elder Rhea of St. Louis, a man in high esteem of the Baptist denomination. The questions of mortality of men and the Kingdom were discussed which resulted in a goodly number coming out into the truth, and the reorganization of a class at this point. Since that time, there has been much truth presented to the people in the persons of W. H. Wilson, W. L. Crowe, G. M. Myers, L. E. Connor R. G. Higgins, Jno. Poor, S. C. Oliver, J. S. Oaten; J. C. Winningham, and others. The scripture at this point has surely been fulfilled, for as I beheld the condition among the brethren here I thought of the words of the prophet as well as the apostle. The apostle said, "Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believe. Even as the Lord giveth to every man? I have planted, Apollos watered but God giveth the increase." And as I realized the condition here was so characteristic of all points I visited everywhere, the words of Isaiah 28:9, to, "Seemed to sink down deeper and deeper into my mind: "Whom shall he teach knowledge, and whom shall he make to understand doctrine? Them that are weaned from the milk and drawn from the breast. For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept, line upon line, line upon line; here a little, and there a little." Surely this has been done at Morse Mills. The thought came to me, We are all weaned from milk yet; and had to answer my own question in the negative. I also wondered as I read where this it there was any Paul or Apostles among us who was honored to see his name associated with the names of those who had battled at this point for the truth, and if so, if they had forgotten Paul's admonition (1 Cor. 3:8), "Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one: And every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor." Could the preaching brethren everywhere, instead of finding so much fault with Paul and Apollos, as to just what things he believed, keep before us Paul's admonition, 1 Cor. 4:5, "Therefore judge nothing before the time until the Lord come who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the hearts: and then shall every man have praise of God."

The brethren seem to be doing their best at Morse Mills to keep the faith alive. We were remembered in a substantial way for expenses to help us to go on our way presenting what precepts we knew to others, and Monday A. M., December 2nd found us boarding the stage at Hillsboro for Victoria, where we changed to the railroad for De Soto. Here we were met by Bro. J. H. Morse of Valle Mines. At Victoria we were reminded that 20 years ago, Bro. Eychaner was forced out of the only church at this place after holding a few meetings (preaching on the nature of man, and the gospel of the kingdom) and compelled to talk to the large crowd that had assembled in front of the church, from the church steps, the condition must have been similar as when Paul stood on Mar's Hill and accused the people of worshipping the unknown God, as a believer for the immortality of the soul and going to heaven at death is surely full of superstition and worshipping a god unknown to the Bible. When we look back and see the difficulties that the early defenders of the truth encountered for the sake of the truth, which has come down to us, their children, we ought indeed to rejoice for the great privilege that is ours to be among those of the calling of God in Christ Jesus. Oh that we as brethren could manifest toward one another the spirit of the apostle, so much beseeches us to have, 1 Cor. 1:10 "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of the Lord Jesus Christ that ye all speak the same thing and that there be no divisions among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together, in the same mind, and in the same judgment." Not forced into the same mind or judgment, but as brethren be courteous to one another and try to all get into the same mind, and spirit. When we get to this point the errors that the other fellow appears to have will not be so magnified to our vision as at the present.

Hope no one here will think that I have reference to Methodists, Baptists, Christians or other denominations and think I advocate compromising the truth to take them in, who deny that Jesus Christ is coming in the flesh. I am referring only to the Church of God, and those of its members, who have obeyed the gospel.

Bro. Morse met me at Desoto and we drove six miles up the bed of the creek to his home at Valley Mines, in the lead belt in the south eastern part of Missouri. We began meeting Monday evening with a small but curious crowd in the Methodist church, discoursing to them upon the subject of the Unknown God, the importance of doctrine, the Good News and Glad Tidings of the Kingdom, the Kingdom of God, what is it? On Saturday evening the church being occupied by the Methodists we attended the services and were taught the Kingdom was in our hearts, that we were already in the Kingdom, am I realizing there was still superstitution in the world we went home rejoicing that some one had been faithful even though through tribulation. We could rejoice in the hope of the gospel and pray in the spirit, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done as in heaven, so in earth."

Sunday we discoursed to a small number at the school house in Bro. Morse's district, a good interest being shown in our subject, viz., "The Old and the New Covenants." Here we leave you this week, rejoicing that we were born in the faith once delivered to the saints, and even though our parents in those days saw but dimly the glories of the coming age (being members of the First Day Advent Church) we their children because of these opinions, line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little, there a little, can see more clearly the beauties of the Golden Age soon to be ushered in by our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. I rejoice in the one hope of the gospel this beautiful morning and pray we may all lay aside the weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us, looking unto Jesus as the author and finisher of our faith. Yours in the work,

O. J. ALLARD.

GOLD DUST.

Too high an appreciation of our own talents is the chief cause why experience preaches to us all in vain.

He that never changed any of his opinions, never corrected any of his mistakes; and he who was never wise enough to find out any mistakes in himself will not be charitable enough to excuse what he reckons mistakes in others.

Our Lord Jesus is hidden from the eyes of the world; they do not see him, they only see us, and our lives are to show what his life is.

ANNA DREW.

ARE YOU READY?

"Be ye therefore ready, also for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not" (Luke 12:40.)

Viola Gazeley

This great preparation for the second coming [illegible] "Fear not, little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom. Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old; a treasure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning. And be your selves like unto men that wait for their lord, when he will return from the wedding; that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching; verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them. And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants. And this know, that if the good man of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through. Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not" (Luke 12:32-40).

As attendants wait for the coming of the lord, so should we be ready for the coming of our Lord. As a man would watch against a thief coming to rob his house, so should we be ready, watching for Christ, for he will come as a thief in the night. Let us heed the admonition, "Be ye ready."

Will any person or church, having one copy or more than one copy of The New Jubilee Harp, that he is willing to sell, please communicate with Mr. Chas. Elvey, 623 North Willow avenue, Austin station, Chicago, Ill., stating the number of books for sale, the condition of books and the price of same.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homelitic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are united and solved satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifty subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible—its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be named. The author sleeps, dear breathren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you. 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

DON'T FORGET THE HELPING FUND

We, whose names are given below, believing it to be our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the manager of the paper to supply the needy ones.

This fund is to be applied as the donors request. Those whose circumstances do not permit of their paying for the paper themselves, should notify the manager, signifying their willingness to accept the paper and it will be cheerfully sent from the proceeds of this fund.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST

A sermon by the Editor of The Restitution. If you have friends who have immortal souls, present them with a copy of this sermon, and it will cast out the unclean spirit. One copy, 3 cents; two copies, 5 cents; twelve copies, 25 cents. Robt. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee avenue, Cleveland, O.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

Just laws are no restraint upon the freedom of the good.

The use of money is all the advantage there is in having it.

Patience is the strongest of strong drink, for it kills the giant despair.

When a grain of corn dropped into the soil becomes a full ear, when the apple seed makes a tree, loaded season after season with delicious fruit, we see the old miracle repeated, the little made much.

Leaders of great movements are remembered longer for what they were than for what they did. Multitudes can tell today what Mr. Gladstone was who cannot recite what he did.

To drink neither wine nor strong drink is becoming more and more an essential for the man who is to do great things in the world, whether for himself or for God.

Good is slow, it ascends; evil is rapid, it descends; what wonder that it should make much way in a little time.—Madame Swetchime

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16. Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38; 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or quit the pulpit.

Teach the Scriptures, not foolishness. Honor God and the Savior.—B. S. Driggs.

Great Combination Offer

OF "THE RESTITUTION"

GET THESE

Money-making Secrets

WITH Farm Journal

Is this sick properly kept? "Poultry Secrets" tells how to cure both, and many other points far more important.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars," says Burt Chaney, Illinois. "What to tell would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes C. J. Dickson, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 500 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck raising," says P. M. Watson, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-Book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says F. W. Mansfield, New York.

T. F. McCrea, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden last summer. I lost my health in the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting near to the soil. After a long study with the Chinese language and mission problems, it is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, trees, chickens, etc. I am saving money and regaining my health. My wife and I both find FARM JOURNAL indispensable."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. Foster, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. Glendon, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes Mrs. Joe Lawrence, Saskatchewan. "I was never successful in growing cabbage until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes Dr. William Davis, New Jersey, "then the first copy came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to seem like home. When it arrives, I feel the gladness jump right into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until half-past ten, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. L. Sloat, a Virginia bank clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL I would soon be a millionaire," says N. W. Whittet, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."
These booklets are 6x9 inches, and profusely illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of discoveries and methods of successful poultry men, jealously guarded. It gives Felch's famous mating chart, the Curtiss method of getting one-half more pullets than cockerels, Boyer's method of using fertility, with dozens of secrets of mating, breeding, feed and feeding, how to produce winter eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "faking," "jagging," cocaine and gasoline doping, and other tricks of "jockeys" and swindlers, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse. It also gives many valuable training, feeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $15,000 a year, mainly from eggs. All back yard chicken-raisers should learn about the "Kangaroo Coop," and how Foster FEEDS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest fall-bearing strawberries almost until snow flies. It gives you the fruits of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and blossom-removing to produce berries in the fall, tells inside facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how one grower gets 10,000 quarts an acre and sells 25 cents a quart, etc. J. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who can grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Prof. Holden, the "Corn King," tells how to get ten to twenty bushels more per acre of corn rich in protein and the best stock feeding elements. Pictures make every process plain.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of seven cows that produced half a ton of butter each per year (150 pounds is the average). An eye-opener for dairymen. Get it, weed out your poor cows, and turn good ones into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your backyard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck farm near Boston makes every year 50 cents each on 40,000 ducklings. Tells why ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW they do everything.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Horace Vose, the famous Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to mate, to get eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey-ranch PAY.

EVERY live farmer knows the FARM JOURNAL, for it is famous everywhere as the leading farm and home paper. It is thirty-five years old, and has the largest circulation of any farm paper in the world. It has always stood up for the right of farmers to "sit at the first table," and is one of the great forces that have made the American farmer prosperous.

To interest NEW readers in The Restitution, and increase its circulation and usefulness in every corner of its field, we have made an arrangement with the publishers of the Farm Journal by which subscribers to The Restitution can, for a short time, get both papers and any one of the booklets for little more than the cost of the Farm Journal alone, although in spite of its excellence it is one of the cheapest papers published.

The regular price of The Restitution is $1.50 a year.
The regular price of the Farm Journal is $1.00 for five years.
The regular price of the booklets to old subscribers 25c each.
The regular price of two copies "A Letter to a Friend," 20c.

Here is Our Offer--$2.70 Value for $1.50

By special arrangement with the publishers we are able to offer to new subscribers the Farm Journal four full years with choice of any one of the advertised booklets, "Money Making Secrets and two copies of a "Letter to a Friend" and The Restitution for one year, all for $1.50.

THE COMING OF THE KING

A. Wallace Mason.

The King, he is coming
In glory and power
But we know not the day
And we know not the hour

He may come in the midnight,
He may come at the noon
But this we do know—
He is sure to come soon.

Long ages they have waited
And watched for his return:
His saints have been slaughtered
And many his foes did burn.

He is coming in triumph,
He will crush every foe
And those who oppose him,
They will melt like the snow.

He will reign here forever
And put down every wrong—
He'll gather his loved ones,
The weak and the strong.

Then wars will cease forever,
Injustice, fraud and greed;
The earth filled with God's glory—
Then all men will give heed.

WE MISS THEM

Lillie H. Willis

We miss them as the years roll by
Our loved ones lying dead;
We think of them, as they dreamless lie,
Within their narrow bed;
And we gaze at the dim and distant past
With a lonely, heartsick thrill,
As we sigh for the touch of a vanished hand
And the sound of a voice that is still.

We miss them, yes, but the future is bright
With hope's most ruddy glow;
And the waiting time is our time to work,
For our future good you know;
For the path that leads to the cold dark tomb
Leads on again to the light;
And we'll clasp glad hands with our loved and lost,
In a land where is no night

Then'll be the only link that binds
The old life with the new;
For "the former things" shall have "passed away"—
The false will give place to the true;
The joy of hope will be lost in sight,
And blessing rare be given;
For the things that were will be replaced,
With the kingdom that is from heaven.

AN ANSWER TO A LETTER FROM A CONGREGATIONAL MINISTER

G. W. Calder.

Dear Friend:

I would say "Reverend," as is customary, when addressing a minister, did I not see by Psa. 111:9 that holy and reverend is only applied to God's name. It is never applied to any of the faithful apostles, who suffered death for their religion.

I received your letter, but am sorry to see that you have not considered any of the plain statements that I sent you on the nature of man, and what the soul is. You say that you still believe that the soul is the immortal part of man, and the body is the house in which it lives; and you give 2 Cor. 5:6 for evidence of your belief. You next say that Paul speaks of soul and body as two different things (1 Thess. 5:23). Why leave out the spirit (beginning of verse), which makes three different things spoken of? And if he had spoken of the heart, head, and foot, that would have made six different things spoken of. Paul knew, as well as you and I know, that it takes all of those six parts to make our living man, or "soul," as God called him, after breathing the breath of life into his (not its) nostrils (Gen. 2:7). Paul nor any of the other Bible writers, never said that any of those parts (or all combined) were immortal, so why do you still believe and teach that the soul is immortal? See what Jesus said in Matt. 22:37, when he asked which is the great command in the law. Jesus said unto him, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul and with all thy mind." Jesus speaks of three parts—heart, soul, and mind. Now what part of the lawyer was it that was addressed and had these attributes and was to keep the great command, and do the loving? It must have been the part that you say is the "shell, tabernacle, or house for the soul to live in." So his immortal soul goes scott free, with no responsibility, and no threat of punishment, nor promise of reward.

You next give 2 Cor. 5:6-8, which says nothing of the soul or its nature. Your next quotation is Gen. 35:18, which says, "As her soul was in departing, for she died." Solomon speaking of man and beast, Eccle. 3:19 says, "As the one dieth so dieth the other:" so if her soul was immortal, as you claim, so is the soul of the beast.

You next give 1 Kings 17:21-23, which says, "The soul of the child came into him (not the house) again and he (not it) revived." This, like all the rest of your quotations, says nothing of the soul being immortal as you claim. And you say that the word "soul" here does not mean life. I believe the Bible is a harmonious book, and the word "soul" in the above quotations must mean life to make harmony.

You quote 2 Cor. 12:2-4, where Paul says he knew a man, whether in the body or out of the body, he could not tell, and that he was caught up into paradise. I am certainly surprised that a man of your talent should say that this proves that Paul believed that the real man, which we believe is the soul, leaves the body; for he said nothing about the soul leaving the body; he said he "knew a man;" and is it possible for you to believe that Paul could see and know an immortal, immaterial soul? How wonderfully easy it is to prove something to a person when you are determined to believe it.

You next give Micah 6:7, and say that he speaks of the body and soul as two things. He says, "Shall I give the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?" So what you call "the house," has to atone for what you call the immortal part! It appears from your own quotation that what you call the house, is the principal part after all!

You next give Matt. 10:28, "Fear not them that kill the body, etc., but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body." Is not this positive evidence that the soul and body are alike destructible?

You next say that the body has no intelligence, that the intelligence is in the soul. When the soul leaves the body there is an intelligence left. You further say that the body without the soul knows nothing; very true. Now why can't you be consistent, and also say that the soul without the body knows nothing? For you would have abundance of scripture to back you in the statement. See Isaiah 26:19, "Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise (both parts dead); awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust;" and David speaking of man in death, Psa. 146:4 says, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his (not its) earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." So your immortal soul (not spoken of in the Bible) in death knows no more than what you call "the house" the man lives in.

Speaking of the rich man and Lazarus, you say it is a literal narative, meaning just what it says, but you don't stick to your assertion; for you say the soul of the rich man went to hell and was conscious, and its body was buried. I am sorry that I have to say there is no such language between the lids of the Bible; the account says the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abrahams bosom. Was the beggar that died the real man (the immortal soul) that did the begging, or was it the body that you say is the house and has no intelligence? How could the house that you say has no intelligence, be comforted, or in Abraham's literal bosom, unless Abraham was extremely large and Lazarus extremely small? Inconsistent, but no more so than to say that it was the man, the deathless immortal soul that died, etc.

Now see what is said of the rich man: "That rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell he lift up his eyes being in torments," etc. That sounds nothing like your assertion that his soul went to hell and was conscious. There is nothing said of the rich man or any part of him going any place. It seems curious if an immaterial, immortal entity has eyes and a tongue to be cooled by the amount of water that would adhere to the tip of another immaterial being's finger, which I judge would be extremely fine!

I would be glad to give many more of the difficulties and inconsistencies that arise from taking figurative language as literal and vice versa. If you take the above parable as intended the rich man, the Jewish nation, and the beggar, the Gentiles), you will not have to take from and add to by assertions and inferences that prove nothing.

Your next and last quotation is Rev. 6:9-10. You also take this literally, or ignore it altogether by saying that the souls of the martyrs were conscious in the eternal world and could talk to God, trying again to prove your point by inference, for there is no such language in God's word. Were immortal conscious souls crying for deliverance from their miserable place, or as the blood is the life or soul, was it not the blood or blood stains, under the altar that did the crying and speaking as in Gen. 4:10? The voice of thy brother's blood cryeth unto me from the ground." No audible voice in either of those instances. Wonder why the revelator said nothing of how the immortal souls looked that he saw under the altar? It appears to me that all of your witnesses have turned state's evidence against you; bring better evidence if you have it.

You say in conclusion, that you pray God that we may know the truth. I say Amen to that. I hope you will not ignore what I have written, as in previous letter. I do surely appreciate the spirit in which you write. In 1 Thess. 5:21 we are told to prove all things; hold fast that which is good. I hope you can soon agree with me in saying that the only witness in the Bible to prove the immortality of the soul is Gen. 3:4. If I have said anything that wounds your feelings, I hope you will forgive me, for I surely have written all in love for you and the truth.

THE LAW QUESTION

No. 5.

J. J. Heckman.

"Now therefore why tempt ye God to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear" (Acts 15:10).

The yoke our text refers to is the law of Moses, and the law mentioned by Malachi in the following beautiful words: "Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb," etc. (4:4). This law must include the ten commandments, as well as the balance of Moses' precepts. Notice here that this yoke (law) was too weighty for the people of Paul's day, and also too burdensome for the fathers—Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Pretty heavy.

Now let us contrast another law with this and see the difference. "My yoke is easy and my burden is light" (Matt. 11:30). Here is a "yoke" we are invited to take upon us; a yoke called "my yoke" by Jesus the Christ, and if this yoke is not his law and precepts (all) some so-called law-keeper tell us what it is? We can see nothing else it could be, and we feel sure that all Bible students will agree with us here, so we feel on solid ground. Notice one is easy, the other burdensome; one is light, the other heavy, and so cannot be the same yoke or law as they would be were Moses' law binding on Christians, and a part of Christ's precepts. If Christ taught in his law any of the precepts of Moses, they must have been those not burdensome, and not those his people could not keep. Paul states: "My brethren (Christians), ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ; that ye should be married to another, even him who is raised from the dead" (Rom. 7:4). The scriptures teach that those dead to sin no longer live in sin, and the same Paul, to be consistent would teach that those dead to the law no longer live under the law, and so we read "The law was our (past tense) our schoolmaster unto us," supplied by the translators, are omitted. Then the law is not now our schoolmaster, nor does it now have anything to do with our coming unto Christ, because "after faith is come we are no longer under a schoolmaster" (Gal. 3:24, 25), hence no longer under the law, which is the same thing as the schoolmaster. How any one can read such plain statements and still teach Sabbath keeping is hard for your scribe to see.

We know also by the fact that belief of the gospel, repentance, and baptism now bring us unto Christ, and that no flesh is justified by the law. Hence, we should not preach Moses' law. "The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus now makes us free from the law of sin and death," or in other words, we purify our souls by our obedience to the truth, which is believing the gospel of the kingdom, and baptism, or burial in Christ Jesus.

But some contend that after we become pure we then, to stay pure and just, must keep the law of Moses, as some affirmed in Acts 15. But the answer given then is good today. There has been no change in God's plans since that time, so we ask, Why trouble ye them? (the disciples) and let him who will answer. But hands are lifted in horror here, and it is asked in amazement: Can we now believe in more than one God, worship idols? And the questions are continued till the whole nine of the ten commandments are mentioned. Let us see. Jesus states "When he, the spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth" (Jno 16:13). If this is a fact, and no Bible student can doubt it, then we can find by reading the New Testament Scriptures just what to do about such things as are condemned by Moses, or even heathens so far as that is concerned.

The first command states, "Thou shalt have no other Gods before me." The Holy Spirit through Paul states, "To us (Christians) there is but one God." We believe it, and had the first command been obliterated we would have it plainly declared that way; and in many other texts of the New Scriptures the same facts are stated. None are stated exactly verbatim with the command of the abolished law, nor should we expect Christ's law on the same topic to be worded just as Moses' was.

The second command pertains to image worship, or idolatry, and we find statements to the same effect under the "all truth" of the holy spirit; but again not verbatim. (See 1 Cor. 10:14; Rom 1:25).

The third command about taking God's name in vain, is also prohibited in the New law also worded differently from the third command. (See Jas. 5:12; Matt. 5:34, 35).

No where are we charged to keep the Sabbath day holy; not once has the holy spirit as sent by Jesus, and which was to guide the apostles into all truth, stated, "Remember the Sabbath day, and not work on that," or anything like the fourth commandment. Is it a part of the 'all truth' for our times, then? No. Why not? Because the holy spirit in guiding us into all truth did not mention it. Or if it is a part of the all truth for us, or the disciples of apostolic days, and the holy spirit failed to give it to us as such, then Jesus is convicted of a falsehood, because the holy spirit did not mention or tell us of one essential truth which we should keep. So either way we look at the question our Sabbatarian friends are stuck in a mire of facts so deep that they cannot wade or paddle to solid ground. We believe Jesus when he said the spirit would guide us into all truth, and we follow him in his teachings, and by so doing we do not observe days, etc., because he says through Paul, "I am afraid of you because I have labored in vain," he discouraged it, and so do we. Remember all those things written are parts of Christ's teaching and should be heard as well as others of his sayings.

Children are taught to obey parents as much under Christ's law as revealed under the spirit, as under the ten commandment law; but that is no proof that Christ's and Moses' law should be identical in all points, nor are the same words used by Christ that were used by Moses, showing that different lawgivers gave the different laws. (See Eph. 6:1; Col. 3:20).

Murder is also condemned under the law of Christ and in much stronger terms than under Moses' law. The spirit states, "Whoso ever hateth his brother is a murderer," while none under Moses' law were accounted murderers except those who had actually slain some one. (See 1 Jno. 3:15; Matt. 5:21).

Adultery also is condemned as a part of the "all truth" for us, and also in stronger terms than under Moses' law. A change is made in this law, because under Moses no one would have been accounted an adulterer unless he had actually committed adultery; while under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and a part of the 'all truth,' we are taught that if we even look upon a woman to lust after her we have already committed adultery, and will be condemned by Jesus as an adulterer. (See Matt. 5:27, 28; Heb. 13:4).

Theft is condemned (see Eph. 4:25; 2 Tim. 3:3). Covetousness is also condemned in the New Testament Scriptures, as you can see by reading Eph. 5:3; Col. 3:5. So you see that if we had never heard of the ten commandments, and had only the New Testament Scriptures, we would know it was wrong to lie, steal, or do anything contrary to the law of Christ. This, it seems to me, is positive proof that we are not under the Mosaic law, but are under a new covenant, with the necessary points of Moses' law inculcated, worded differently, and amended, as we have seen.

The Sabbath law—the fourth commandment has no place in the law of Christ. It is argued that because nine of the ten commands are in Christ's law that the other also is; and the whole ten should be kept at this day throughout the Christian world. But why did not the Holy Spirit guide the apostles and other writers of the New Testament to place it among the other nine? Then no one could doubt it. No one now believes it right to steal, kill, or commit adultery, because they know Christ's law condemns such acts; but it does not condemn any one anywhere for not keeping the Sabbath. The same arguments our opponents use to prove Sabbath keeping would also prove that we should keep all the sayings of Confucius, the Chinese philosopher who negatively stated the golden rule before Jesus gave it. Jesus accepted Confucius on this point. We could say, therefore he kept and taught all that Confucius taught, and he as consistent as our opponents in saying Jesus taught a part of Moses' law as essential, therefore he taught it all as essential. "Consistency is a jewel rare, and very precious," in our day.

AMONG THE BRETHERN.

Eld. C. C. Maple

With this report we close the year 1912 and enter upon the year 1913.

We have not been able to answer all of the calls for meetings since conference. Bro. Westfall had hoped to have a meeting in the school house near his home, five miles north of Troy, but we did not know of this until our meetings in Michigan had been announced; also our Salem church had sent us a call to assist them. Their meeting is to begin about January 1, 1913. We regret very much that our plans for Elyria make it impossible for us to comply with this request.

We hope after a few months to be able again to answer a few calls for special meetings. Let us hear from any who desire meetings held; please correspond early. We now turn our attention to the work in Elyria. This will be known as the "Blessed Hope" mission. We expect to be located in a church building, the former property of the U. P. church, located near Park avenue.

This is a new section of the city, streets are all paved and all improvements made. One of the most popular sections of the city.

In opening our work in Elyria it will require considerable financial backing in order to furnish our hall and get all necessary supplies. Rather than draw upon the conference for all of the necessary funds, I am wondering how many would like a small part in the work.

If one hundred of the brethren would send $1.00 each we can soon have every thing necessary and no one feel the burden. We hope it will occur to many personally to contribute to this worthy enterprise. Let us hear from those who read this. Send your contribution to me at North Ridgeville, Ohio, and I will see that it is properly applied and an acknowledgement of same made in our publication.

Beloved, there is before us in Ohio a great opportunity for preaching the gospel of the kingdom. Let us spread the glad tidings while we wait the coming of the King.

We shall have more to say next week regarding this work.

GOLD DUST

From the errors of others, the wise man corrects his own.

In the affairs of life or business, it is not intellect that tells so much as character—not brains so much as heart—not genius so much as self-control, patience and discipline, regulated by judgment.

Would you throw away a diamond because it pricked you? One good friend is not to be weighed against the jewels of all the earth. If there is coolness or unkindness between us, let us come face to face and have it out. Quick, before love grows cold!"

EDITORIAL

The article by Brother Auld upon which we made extended remarks last week, appears in this issue. We intended it to appear last week, but it was crowded out at the last moment.

We are glad to report our gain by the removal to this city of Bro. and Sister Jas. Sanford. They make a welcome addition to our body.

We are greatly indebted to Bro. J. J. Bronson for a large photograph of Brother J. M. Stephenson. If some brother who is qualified will write his biography, we will pay for an electrotype of his photograph, and will give both to the readers of The Restitution.

In a communication marked "special," Brother Daniel says: "Will you please publish enclosed letter as soon as possible, and call attention to it editorially so it will not be overlooked. I want all the brethren to be sure and read it." Readers will find it under title of "Communications."

The Restitution for a New Year's gift is a sensible present. A dear sister in California paid for the paper to be sent a year to a friend, and marking her letter "private," she writes Dec. 5th: "The family are so pleased with it that as soon as they read it they send it to their friends in the east. I am surprised at the interest Mr. — takes in it, as he has never taken any interest in the Bible. I hardly thought he would read it. Mrs. — thinks it is fine, and I trust good may result from that subscription."

COMMUNICATIONS

Editor Restitution:

In my last letter, I spoke of my meetings in the Tercio coal camp in Colorado. I had started for the train to return to New Mexico; on my way I received a letter from Tercio, calling me to return the next Sunday night and hold another meeting. I had a splendid audience and was earnestly requested to return, but the doctor had ordered me to return to Illinois on account of my health which had been poor for a long time. I am now in Illinois and am improved. I am anxious to return, as I look upon that country as the best place for Christian work that can be found. I want a couple of copies of the paper of different dates, if my letter is thought worthy of a place.

CHAS. W. RUSSELL.

Dear Brother Huggins:

Will you permit me to say to you, and all the loved ones scattered abroad, that you have made this Xmas the happiest of our, mine and wife's lives. Here comes the good letters from all over the country, some signed, some not, but most all containing from one to ten dollars. You may call it weakness if you wish, but I would read the good letters and cry and shout. Yes, I would; I could not keep from it—didn't try. The tears of gratitude are rolling from my eyes now while I am trying to write this. On Xmas eve night me and my dear wife, who has had a time for it has been very cold—snow on the ground, and I am not even able to make a fire—knelt around our old hearth stone and poured out our very souls in prayer and thanksgiving to our heavenly Father for the showers of blessings. We can't talk about anything else but the dear brothers and sisters who have made this Xmas so happy for us. Would to God we could take each of you by the hand and thank you. And we'll do it when we meet in the kingdom. Wish I could write each of you a personal letter. But we can't do this, you must take this as a personal letter from wife and me. We have received $43 as Xmas gifts. While I came near dying two weeks before Xmas, and only weigh 112 pounds with my overshoes, heavy underwear, vest, dress coat and a heavy overcoat on, I said: "Wife, hitch the pony to the buggy and let us go and pay our grocery bills." Oh! how glad we felt to be able to walk up and pay them. Then we bought some much needed underwear and a pair of overshoes each, and drove in home the happiest people on earth. Our friends would meet us on the streets and say, "Why, Doc, are you able to come to town?" I said, "Yes, thank God; and I am going to get well; can't afford to die and good brethren praying for us all over the country." If I do get well I am going to say, Farewell, pill bags; nothing in you any way practicing for as poor a class as I do, and I am going to preach all over the country, or where ever the brethren may want me. Sister Bolee sent me a book for Xmas gift, and it is fine; I read it and rejoice in the blessed hope. But I must now close. Again thanking you, Brother Huggins and Brother Bronson and all the rest. I can't afford to have specialties. A Happy New Year to all is the wish of T. J. Daniel and wife.

A THOUGHT FOR THE NEW YEAR

Just to be tender, just to be true;
Just to be glad the whole day through!
Just to be merciful, just to be mild;
Just to be trustful as a child;
Just to be gentle and kind and sweet;
Just to be helpful with willing feet;
Just to be cheery when things go wrong;
Just to drive sadness away with a song.
Whether the hour is dark or bright
Just to be loyal to God and right.
Just to believe that God knows best;
Just in his promises ever to rest.
Just to let love be our daily key—
This is God's will for you and for me.

IS THE KEEPING OF THE SEVENTH DAY BINDING ON CHRISTIANS NOW, AND MUST IT BE KEPT TO OBTAIN ETERNAL LIFE?

E. W. Knapp

Christ said unto the eleven, "Go e into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:19-16). He that believeth what? The gospel. What is the gospel? Good news of the kingdom of God. What was preached by Christ and his apostles? Something we must believe in order to be saved. John the Baptist preached, "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," and be baptized, after repentence for the remission of sins (Matt. 3:2; Luke 3:3). Jesus preached the same thing as recorded in Matt. 4:17. He preached the gospel of the kingdom (Luke 4:15 to 21). What did Christ tell his disciples to preach? To preach saying the kingdom of heaven is at hand (Matt. 10:7); and they went out and preached that men should repent (Mark 6:12). And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick (Luke 9:2). The Lord appointed other seventy also to heal the sick and said unto them, "The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you" (Luke 10:9).

Here were 82 preachers that Christ himself sent out to preach, and told them how to travel and what to say to the people. It is not on record that he said to them to preach the seventh day Sabbath, or any other Sabbath. The seventy returned with joy, that even the devils were subject unto them through the name of Jesus (Luke 10:17). Christ was asked, "What good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" Eternal life is what we want, so we listen to the answer from the only one that can give it. He answered, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, strength and mind, and thy neighbor as thyself." Jesus answered, "This do and thou shalt live" (Luke 10:26-28; Matt. 19:16-19). Another tempted him by asking, "Which is the first commandment of all? Christ said, the Lord our God is one Lord: and to love him with all thy heart, soul, mind, and strength; and thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandments greater than these." The Sabbath not mentioned (Mark 12:28 to 34). After Christ's ascension some of the apostles were cast into prison. The angel of the Lord opened the prison doors and said "Go stand and speak in the temple, to the people, all the words of this life." Again they were arrested, and when loosed they daily in the temple and every house, ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ (Acts 5:20-42). Paul taught that through Christ is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins. And by him all that believe are justified from all things, from which ye could not be justified by the law of Moses (Acts 13:38-39). When Paul and Silas were cast into prison the keeper asked them, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved and thy house" (Acts 16:25 to 31). Luke says the law and the prophets were until John, since that time the kingdom of God is preached (Luke 16:16; Matt. 11:13). Paul in Rom 3:19 to 31 has much to say about law, and says, "By the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight." Man is justified by faith. The promise to Abraham and his seed was not through law, but through the righteousness of faith (Rom 4:13). Again, ye are not under the law, but under grace (Rom 6:14). The wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord—not through Moses (Rom. 6:23). Paul's brethren were dead to the law by the body of Christ (Rom 7:4-6). Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth (Rom. 10:4). The law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ. Why? That we might be justified by faith. The just shall live by faith, and the law is not of faith. After faith is come we are no longer under a schoolmaster, the law: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Read the 3rd chapter of Galatians, and believe it, and no seventh day Sabbath law will lead you away from the law of faith in Christ Jesus our Lord.

We might just as well say that we in the United States are still under the law of King George, and George Washington was not the end of that law; but we know that Washington did end that law so Christ was the end of the Mosaic law, and Paul says though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed (Gal. 1:8; 2 Cor. 11:4). The Mosaic law is not the gospel. Christ and his apostles preached the gospel. There was no life promised in the law; life comes through Christ.

The sacrifices of the law were done away in Christ. Read Heb. 9th and 10th chapters. Also the law of circumcision was abolished in Christ (Gal. 6:12-13; Eph. 2:8 to 17). Christ did many things on the Jewish Sabbath contrary to the Mosaic law, and was put to death for it. If the Mosaic law is still in force the penalty attached to it, is also; hence every Sabbath breaker should be stoned to death (Ex. 35:23; Num. 15:32, 36; Gal. 4:10, 11; Col. 2:16).

Paul met with the disciples on the first day of the week to break bread, and he preached unto them until midnight (Acts 20:7). He enjoined the Corinthians brethren to lay by their collections for the church on the first day of the week (1 Cor. 16:2). In Rev. 1:10 the first day is called the Lord's day. Read John 20:19.

It is recorded over 60 times what the various preachers in the New Testament preached, and not a single one said you must keep the seventh day Sabbath in order to be saved. So we conclude to stay with God's promises and not be led away to destruction by this new invention. Our reward is very near at hand.

CAN YOU BELIEVE?

By J. T. Auld.

Dear reader: If you are interested in the great plan of salvation and the truths of the Holy Book, the following questions are kindly suggested for your earnest consideration:

1. Can you believe if our Lord taught his apostles a sky-kingdom that they would ask him, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" (Acts 1:6).

The word "again" infers a restoration of the same kingdom that by disobedience was dissolved for a time (Isa. 54:6-7).

2. Can you believe that in the restitution of all things spoken of by all the holy prophets, that any thing more or less shall be given the first Adamic race than what God has promised them on conditions of faith, previous to Christ's birth, death, and resurrection.

Adam lost life and his dominion. The first Adam's race that are justified will receive life, but not the dominion, as it is given to another class, the second Adam. "Fear not, little flock, it is your father's good pleasure to give the kingdom." Again, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you (the natural Israel), and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof (Matt. 21:43).

Can you not see the difference between the first man, Adam's race, and the second man, Adam's nature? The first is and will be living souls in the resurrection, earthy; the second will be spiritual, heavenly (1 Cor. 15:46-49). The apostle gives us the nature of the two Adams, both before and after the resurrection. After a person is baptized into Christ, he is supposed to be dead to the first Adam's nature, and is called "a new creature" in the second Adam and will at the appointed time be partakers of the divine nature.

These exceeding and precious promises were not offered any human being before Christ came to the world and brought life and immortality to light for a special purpose to be given to a special people—his disciples (2 Pet. 1:4). In 3rd verse Peter argues, we are now called to glory and virtue in this mortal state, but at the proper time will partake of the divine nature, and be in his likeness and nature, but not before the resurrection.

3. Can you believe the body of our Lord buried in Joseph's tomb was not Jesus? For he said he would be in the tomb three days and three nights.

The angel believed it was Jesus. "And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus which was crucified. He is not here for he is risen as he said, come, see the place where the Lord lay" (Matt. 28:5-6). Let those of us that have a limited education say in the words of our blessed Lord "I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes" (Matt. 11:25).

4. Can you believe any old thing in order to justify your preconceived ideas of what the scriptures teach, and expect to escape the damnation of hell? (2 Thess. 2:11, 12).

And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie; that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness. God's word is very sacred and it is for life or death to all.

5. Can you believe our Lord was not raised from the dead?

If so, what did the apostle Paul mean when he said, "God raised up his son from the dead" (Acts 13:30, 31; 17:3-31; 1 Cor. 15:12-1 Pet. 1:3-21).

6. Can you believe that God will not save a remnant of Israel when Jesus comes?

If you do not believe this please inform yourself with the following Scriptures: Jesus said to the Jews, "For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth (from now forward) till ye shall say, blessed is he that shall come in the name of the Lord." Surely he would not turn down those that will call him "blessed." Read for yourself the references I refer you to: Matt. 23:38, 39; Isa. 54:7-17; Ezek. 36:21-38; Micah. 7:18-20; Luke 1:72, 73; Rom. 11:25-29.

For the life of the writer he cannot see how our great Bible scholars will say that those people will have to be forced to believe by subjection, when Ezekiel said that their salvation will not be for their own sakes, but for God's holy namesake. And Christ and Paul never infer a condition much less a positive condition on their part. Paul positively declares that the gifts and callings of God are without repentance. God's covenant to Israel (the elect) is to take away their sins, and turn away ungodliness; not one word of their being compelled to repent. Dear ones read and study carefully Jer. 33:24-26; Ez. 20:34; 36:30; Rom. 11:25, 29.

7. Can you believe God has promised the saints a home in heaven in his holy habitation?

If so, why did he say, "The heaven of heavens is the Lord's but the earth hath he given to the children of men."

8. Can you believe that the gospel of peace will not be preached in the millennium? When David said, "A seed—Christ's bride—shall serve him (Christ); they (the seed) shall come and shall declare his righteousness unto a people that shall be born during Christ's reign that he hath done this" (Ps. 22:30). This is the generation Peter refers to in 1 Pet. 2:9.

9. Can you believe mortal man will convert the world before the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ? when it is applied to the age to come (Ps. 22:27-28).

10. Can you believe our Lord pre-existed before he was made of a woman?

If so, would we not have two Saviors? (Gal. 4:4; Rom. 1:3).

11. Can you believe the kingdom Christ promised the little flock will be located in the heavens of heavens?

If so, why did Daniel say it would be under the whole heaven?

12. Can you believe there will be marrying and given in marriage in the age to come?

When Jesus said, "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world (age) and the resurrection (out from) the dead neither marry, nor are given in marriage," he was speaking only of the body of Christ, the Lamb's wife. They are the only ones worthy to obtain that age during Christ's one thousand years reign over the nations to subdue and bring in righteousness.

Christ the first fruits, after they that are Christ's at his coming (Luke 20:34-35; 1 Cor. 15:20-23).

This shows conclusively that this first order of the resurrected ones, being the first fruit like unto their Elder Brother, that they will be the only ones worthy to rule, Judge and act jointly with Christ during his reign. Glorious thought! Come Lord Jesus!

13. Can you believe that man has a part of God's divine nature in this mortal life?

If so, what does Peter mean when he asserts, "whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises: that by these promises we might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust" (2 Pet. 1:4).

14. Can you believe you will be saved without being baptized into Christ?

If so, why did Jesus say, "He that believeth in me and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be condemned"? (Mar. 16:15, 16; Gal. 3:27-29; Rom. 6:3-7).

15. Can you believe the body that some call "the remains" of a man in death, is not the man or person?

Hear what inspiration says about it. "Devout men carried Stephen to his burial and made great lamentation over him," not his remains (Acts 8:2; Gen. 2:7). The identity is always associated with the body, dead or alive. Abraham buried his dead out of his sight (Gen. 23:4).

16. Can you conceive of any body without a body, let it be God, man, angels, or any living being?

17. Can you believe Christ is or ever will be King over his bride, the Lamb's wife?

Jesus said to Pilate when he asked him if he were king of the Jews, Jesus said, "To this end was I born." He was born of the seed of David, and at the proper time he will sit on his father David's throne and wield the sceptre as king over Israel and all nations, except the holy nation that are to be kings and priests jointly with him (Ps. 22:28; Luke 1:32, 33; Rev. 5:10).

18. Can you find anywhere that the Apostles addressed Jesus as their king?

If you cannot, then why do we hear so much among saints saying, "We are looking for our king"? We always hear the Apostles address our Lord in these words, "Our Savior," "Our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," "Our high priest," etc., but never "Our King" by any of his disciples.

19. Can you believe when Jesus comes all the wicked will be destroyed when David said, "All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord, and all the kindreds of the nations shall worship before thee? (Ps. 22:27; Acts 15:16, 17; Rev. 5:10; Ps. 82:8; 2:8; Dan. 7:14; Ps. 72:11, 12; 86:9; 68:3; Isa. 49:6).

20. Can you believe all powers both in heaven and in earth were given to Christ by his Father, was anything more or less than he received of the Father to commission his apostles to preach to all the habitable world at that time?

For we hear him say after his resurrection that he did not have all power (Acts 1:6-7).

That his "all power" was limited to commissioning the eleven to go into the whole world and preach and baptize, is evident from Acts 1:8, "But ye shall receive power, after that the holy Spirit is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth"; and we have it recorded that they preached "everywhere" and to "every creature under heaven" just as the apostles were commanded to do (Mark 16:16; Col. 1:23). Now Christ had the power or authority from the Father to command them to preach to every creature under heaven, and they did it.

He is high priest now and has power to forgive sins, and is the advocate between us and the father (1 Jno. 1:7; 2:1).

21. Can you believe all the old worthies that died before Christ came, had the same hope of the promises given to Christ's followers?

If so, why did Paul say: "For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did?

By so much was Jesus made a surety of a better testament" (Heb. 7:19, 22; 8:6). But now hath he obtained a more excellent ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better covenant, which was established upon better promises." If immortality and a divine nature were ever promised to any of Adam's race before Jesus came and offered it to those that are baptized into him, I would be pleased for some one to prove it to me by the mouth of the Lord.

Dear reader, it will pay you to look into this matter.

22. Finally, can you believe that God will approve, your conduct in the day of judgment if you discard the plain statement of his word in order to hold to your preconceived ideas based upon the opinions and traditions of men?

Should you not rather say, "Let God be true and every man a liar," and act upon this principle. Study these subjects well and meditate on them and see if you are in the faith God designed us to believe.

Let me entreat all who read these lines to study closely the word of God. Of those who teach a traditional faith for money or fame the word of God says, "Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! Should not the shepherds feed the flocks? Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed, but ye feed not the flock" (Eze. 34:2-4).

"With lies ye have made the heart of the righteous sad, whom I have not made sad; and strengthened the hands of the wicked by promising him life."

"Do you, dear reader, know of anything harder to take when you hear the modern clergy preaching a funeral over "the remains"—as they call it—of one that has departed to the happy hunting ground, or gone to heaven on a certain day and date? Does it not make the righteous sad today just as it did in Ezekiel's time?

Does not this language well apply to those who deny that death destroys life, but claim that it means even for the sinner eternal life, though in misery? Do not thousands flatter themselves that if they are to live forever; God, who is infinitely merciful, will at last pardon and receive them to his favor? Thus are the hands of the wicked strengthened by the unscriptural theory that the human soul is immortal and cannot die.

BE CAREFUL IN READING

L. S. Bronson

Careless attention in the reading of the Bible has caused many religious errors and misunderstandings of its teachings and truths, no one can deny. Let me call your attention to one serious mistake in that direction many have and are still making. I refer to the parable of the Wheat and Tares, Matt. 13: 31-42, and the Wheat and Chaff referred to in Matt. 3:12. That these two passages of scripture referring to a harvest and separation of good and bad characters at the close of certain periods, do not refer to the one and same event, as we have and are yet being taught. The harvesting and the separating of the wheat and chaff referred to in

Matt. 3: 12, points to the close of the Jewish age and was then and there fulfilled. It has no reference to the close of this age to which the tares and wheat of Matt. 13 refers. Now for the proof of my statement:

And now (present time) the ax is laid at the root of the trees (the growth of the tree is accomplished and fruit now expected); therefore (for this reason) every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." "Indeed baptize you (who)? The Jews with water (John's baptism) unto repentance, but he that cometh after me (Christ) is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear (or carry): he shall baptize you with the Holy Spirit and with fire." The Jewish people did not all receive both the fire and water baptisms as has been taught. The tree that brought forth no fruit was the only one cut down and cast into the fire.

Again: "Whose fan is in his hand; and he will thoroughly purge his floor (the Israelitish nation), and gather his wheat (the obedient believers) into the garner (gospel barn), but he will burn up (in fire judgments which soon followed that disobedient people) the chaff with unquenchable fire."

Now to prove more fully that this harvest time is located at the close of the Jewish dispensation and not at the coming of Christ, and the close of this dispensation, as many teach, I wish to give further proof. In Luke 10:1, 2 we read as follows: "After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also (besides the twelve) and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place whither he himself would come. Therefore said he unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the laborers (to harvest the ripened crop) are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth laborers into the harvest." Remember harvesting is not making a crop but gathering one already produced. Whose hands were they that cast the seed into the soil now come to the harvest hour? We will see further on. Turn with me to Luke 4:35: "Say not ye, There are yet four months and then cometh harvest; behold I say unto you, Lift up your eyes and look on the fields (spiritual fields), for they are white already to harvest. And he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto life eternal, that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together. And therein is that saying true, One soweth and another reapeth." In the next verse Christ is going to show how it is fulfilled in the above statement: "I send you (the 12 and the 70) to reap whereon ye bestowed no labor (in preparing the soil and sowing the seed); other men (the ancient worthies referred to in the 11 of Heb.) labored (sowed the seed) and ye are entered into their labors," by being called to harvest that ripening grain.

Further proof that I am correct in my thought. Matt. 21:33-45: "Hear another parable: There was a certain householder which planted a vineyard and hedged it round about and digged a winepress in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen and went into a far country. And when the time of the harvest drew near he sent his servants to the husbandmen that they might receive the fruit of it. And the husbandmen took his servants and beat one and killed another and stoned another. Again he sent other servants more than the first, and they did unto them likewise. But last of all he sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence him. But when the husbandmen saw the son they said among themselves, This is the heir (Christ) come let us kill him and let us seize on his inheritance. And they caught him and cast him out of the vineyard and slew him. When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh what will he do unto those husbandmen? They said unto him, He will miserably destroy those wicked men and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen which shall render him the fruits in their season. Jesus said unto them, Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner? And when the chief priests and pharisees had heard his parables they perceived that he spake of them."

This parable as well as all the language in Matt. 3 relates to the close and the harvest of the Jewish dispensation.

That harvest work was done by men, the twelve and the seventy, as we have shown.

The wheat gathered into the barn were those carried over into the gospel plan of salvation; the chaff were those that rejected Christ and perished in the fiery judgment that followed its close. In Heb. 10, 2-6 it is declared that "in the end of that world (or age) Christ came to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself."

In the explanation of the parable of the tares of the field, Christ declares the harvest is at the end of this age or world, and the reapers are not men, as in the third of Matthew, but angels (Matt. 13: 40).

Conclusion: The harvesting work and the separation of chaff and wheat was the work of men at the close of the Jewish dispensation.

The harvest work at the close of the gospel dispensation is by angelic hands. Let us study the Bible that we may "rightly divide the word of truth."

EVANGELISTIC NOTES

Dear Restitution:

Last week I left you at Valle Mines, Mo., where we were in the midst of a meeting, occupying the Methodist church at that place. We continued the meeting all through last week with a splendid attendance and fine attention. Bro. Morse, isolated as he is, has tried three or four times to hold a meeting to get the gospel before the people, but conditions seemed unfavorable. We were blessed with dry, warm weather and everything favorable for us this time. People come steady and could see there was a great difference between a definite gospel and a gospel. But as they had never stopped to think of it before they seemed slow to take hold of the truth. All they could say was "Well, it's Bible, all right." How we were impressed with the thought of the Jews clinging to the traditions of their fathers. For years Brother Morse has stood alone, isolated from those of like precious faith, trying to get the ear of the people. I just thought, as I saw the conditions under which he had labored for years, and then contrasted it with conditions I knew of elsewhere. We have brethren with a good church, plenty of this world's goods, an abundance of things pertaining to this life, who are perfectly satisfied if a preacher comes along occasionally and ridicules the sects and their belief, but want him to be very careful not to say anything about their living any different than the sects.

Brethren, we feel to rejoice in a definite truth, a definite faith, but do we realize that our life must be just as definite and clean cut as our belief? How the words of James come to us, "Even so faith, if it hath not works is dead, being alone." I fear some times when we are so zealous contending for our definite faith that we forget the Bible is just as definite as to our works, or our faith is dead. Which of the two men will stand the best show in the day of judgment: The one who is very zealous that you know all about the gospel, but is very far from leading a definite life; or the one who is very zealous for a definite life, but does not comprehend or care to know a definite gospel? (Neither has any "show."—Editor). I see a spirit creeping in among us I fear will do us harm unless we change. It is this: We must be very careful not say or do anything that will hurt the feelings of the alien. Some of our papers already advocate sending out a paper that we can hand out to any one who does not know that as soon as you hand out a paper that pleases every one outside and inside that people see no difference between what is the gospel, or a gospel. Now, remember, I do not advocate ridiculing other beliefs: There is a vast difference between ridicule and presenting in a clear cut manner, appealing to the reasonableness of God's plan, to save us from sin according to The Truth. We, as a people must stand for a definite gospel in a firm but kind way, realizing that all cannot see just alike on all things on every little technical point. I hope (?) our paper will realize the necessity of the paper being for the church's edification, and not for the outside world. Tracts should be for them, so they can read up each subject by itself and get a clear, definite idea of the truth upon that subject.

I want to sound a note of warning, brethren. We must be careful or, the outside world will soon see no difference between the gospel and a gospel. I believe our great drawback as a people has not been because we did not have a definite gospel, but because we did not have definite works that must accompany a definite gospel. Let us by all means love truth, and never, for a moment compromise the truth of the gospel to please some outsider. I see some periodicals have stopped all criticisms or references to each other's writings, therefore, to reprove rebuke with all long suffering and doctrine by any one even those whose duty it is according to the scripture to do so, cannot be done through their columns. Of what good is such a periodical to build up the church? Brethren, must we not be careful to not let our wishbone get where our backbone ought to be.

I am glad to see The Restitution stand for the faith that is definite; but, let us not carry it to the extreme. Let us remember that temperance (self control) is one of the important graces. But I am getting clear off my subject.

Bro. Morse has surely experienced up hill work in holding up the banner of truth in Missouri. He seemed to rejoice that there was marked interest among his friends and neighbors in the things that were presented for their consideration. Here certainly is a good opportunity for future work, and it may be the isolated organization that is being directed by the church at Blair, Nebraska, will be able to send their evangelist to this point in the near future.

We conducted service each night for two weeks, and two each Sunday, except one or two nights. We enjoyed our stay at Brother Morse's home very much, and wish to say to him, Remember that it is through much tribulation we enter into the kingdom; and the sacrifice you are making at Valle Mines is being laid up for your treasure in heaven. Then let us persevere a little longer; the fig tree (Jewish nation) is putting forth its buds very fast; the summer is nigh at hand, even at the doors, when we expect to see Jesus as he is. Every man has this hope in him purifieth himself.

This leaves me at Blush, Mo., the home of Brothers Graham and Cooper, where I expect to hold over Sunday, December 22, then go to Hammond, Louisiana, where we have some more isolated brethren; then to Houston, Texas, where there are a few more scattered within a radius of 50 miles, who are asking for preaching, part of whom we have never met. They write, "We want preaching, but cannot promise any money." Brethren, scattered abroad, what is our duty? A financial report of the work at Valle Mines will appear at the end of the month. A report of the meeting here will be sent next week.

O. J. ALLARD.

HOW TO PRODUCE A STRONG CHURCH

L. S. Bronson.

"If every church member
Was just like me,
What kind of a church
Would my church be?"

This is an important question for us to answer. No chain constructed for service can add to itself any more power or strength than is contained in each of the respective links composing the cable. The nature of society in a neighborhood, town, or city, is measured or determined by the individual character of the people composing it. A church is composed of individuals, and is no stronger in spirituality and power than that which is produced by the co-operation of its individual membership.

Then the first important step towards the building up of a strong church would be to produce a strong, earnest, working, and loving individuality among its members. I hear you ask, How can that be accomplished? Go to the Bible and learn. Listen: Have the Scriptures exhorted us to be strong in the Lord (Eph. 6:10), and never have told us how that to be accomplished? Finally my brethren be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might. How? Put on the whole (not a part) armor of God (what for?), that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For (a warning reason) we wrestle, struggle, not against flesh and blood, but against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore, for this reason, take unto you the whole armor of God that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace: Above all taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God (Eph. 6:10-17).

When we are thus armed for Christian service, what next is to follow? We are to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth," from milk to strong meat; from childhood to mature manhood (Heb. 5:13-14).

How is this growth in spiritual strength and power to be accomplished? Answer, By the principle of addition, as described in 2 Peter 1:5-8, which reads as follows: "And besides this, giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, purity of life and character. The first thing needful after faith is virtue. Second, "Add to virtue knowledge." It is necessary to know something of God and his purposes. Third, "Add to knowledge temperance." We must keep sober and watch unto the end. Fourth, We must add to temperance patience. We must cultivate patience and longsuffering. Fifth, We must add to patience godliness. We must become more like God as these added gifts multiply and grow in our character. Sixth, to godliness we must add brotherly kindness. Be ye kindly affectionate one to another. Seventh, (a perfect number), we must add to brotherly kindness charity. The last and crowning gift which suffereth long and is kind.

Now the result which will follow the addition of these seven gifts to the Christian life: "If these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. But (a contrast) he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure; for if ye do these (7) things ye shall never fall (2 Peter 1:5-10).

Friends, if we all observe and profit by what we have here alluded to, it will produce in us a strong individual character, build up a strong church, which will be as a light "set on a hill that cannot be hid." We will then become a light that will bless the world, honor God, and light us across the dark ocean of life to that heavenly land of rest and joy beyond these present dark shadows.

DO SOME OF THESE CONDITIONS EXIST?

O. J. Allard.

As I peruse the columns of the different papers published by brethren of the different churches of God and see so many different opinions, such as "Church of God of the Abrahamic Faith," and "Church of God of the Faith of Abraham," "Churches of God in Christ Jesus," and so on, the thought came to me, we are indeed a peculiar people. We are so positive that we teach something real definite regarding salvation! Is this the important theme? We must teach the brethren after they have obeyed the gospel, which is the important thing. Titus 2:14 says, "Who gave himself for us." For what reason? Listen. That he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Must that peculiarity consist simply of a real definite belief? It starts with believing the good news and glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Obedience to that belief sets us apart from the world and we are a peculiar selected people, called out for a certain purpose. Do we stop here? Let's see. Heb. 5:11, "Of whom (Jesus) we have many things to say and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing. For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again, which be the first principles of the oracles of God, and are become such as have need of milk and not of strong meat. For every one that useth milk is unskilful in the word of righteousness, for he is a babe. But strong meat belongeth to them that are full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil." Therefore, for this reason, what shall we do? Leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptism, and laying on of hands, and of resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment." We see here then what we must do, and where the perfection comes. Is it not plain that the perfection spoken of consists of good works? Seems to me for the apostle says, "A peculiar people, zealous of good works." Works; what works? By this shall all men know ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another. Brethren, are we definite on this as we are upon some point of doctrine that has its fulfilment in the day of judgment, and only revealed then? I fear not. When will we realize that our works among each other must be just as definite as what we believe? Jesus says, "Ye say and do not." The apostle says, "They profess they know God, but in works they deny him." Brethren of the Church of God, you especially that knew all of the conditions that exist among us as a body of people, what are we showing to the world of the ungodly today? Are we doing as the apostle tells Timothy, "The servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient; in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves." How often I think of this scripture. "The servant of the Lord must not strive." Now what is our duty? I believe all will agree we learned a valuable lesson at the General Conference. Perhaps we have been shown by what took place there, where we were selfish in the extreme, Gal. 5:13, "For brethren, ye have been called unto liberty, only use not that liberty for an occasion to the flesh; for all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." What does the apostle say, "Only use not that liberty for an occasion to the flesh." Supposing the brotherhood should all meet advocating liberty of speech, and because there was perfect liberty, I should get up and in a very definite manner proceed to air my hobby regardless of who or where it hit, just because I had liberty (mark you now, I do not consider it an essential to salvation) but a truth I had discovered. Should I, because I have liberty of speech, carry my explanation to the extreme of causing strife? Of course not. The moment I do, I, as a servant of the Lord, am striving am I not? And if I do, does not the apostle say, "Of the which I tell you before, as I have told you in times past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Should we not be a little careful here with our liberty? The apostle says, Gal. 5: 25, If we live in the spirit, let us us also walk in the spirit. Let us look around not forgetting ourselves while we are beholding, are we walking in the spirit? It seems to me that if there ever was a people that could claim we live in the spirit (the word of Christ, Jno. 6:63), it is surely us. But can we also say we are walking in the spirit? Take for our example 1 Cor. 3: begin at the 1st verse. "And I, brethren, could not speak unto you as unto spiritual, but as unto carnal, even as unto babes in Christ. I have fed you with milk and not with meat, for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet are ye able. For ye are yet carnal. For whereas there is among you envying and strife and divisions" (factions). Does anyone know of there being any factions among us as a people? Has any one seen any strife among us? If so says the apostle, "Are ye not carnal?" For while one saith, I am of Paul, another, I am of Apollos. Listen, brethren: Is it possible that the Church of God can be so blind as to not see what the apostle was so zealous to show this church at Corinth? We flatter ourselves as a people for being so quick to see where the truth lies upon so many different subjects taught in the Bible; have we shut our eyes to a practical duty?

So many places I visit brethren say, "You must come back again; no one can do the work here but you; no use for any one else to come. You are the only one people will listen to." One example comes to mind in particular. At one place I held a two week's meeting, baptized six people. When the meeting ended the brethren were very zealous for me to return, as they were sure others would be obedient a few months later. I felt sure of it, too. I told them I believed that some other man could do more good than I, and when the time came persuaded them to try another man, which they did very reluctantly. They were sure no one could do any good, but Paul; but after Apollos had been there and held a two weeks' meting, he baptized seven. Then they wrote me a letter thanking me very much for my part in insisting they try some one else. How wrong it is for us to think only certain men can preach the gospel, that only the man whom a few worship instead of the truth, can do any good.

Listen once more to the apostle, "Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man. I have planted, Apollos has watered; but God gave the increase, so then neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth, but God that giveth the increase. Now he that planteth and he that watereth are one, and every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labor, for we are laborers together with God."

THE ARMOR OF GOD.

Mrs. A. E. Overholser

Eph. 6:11, "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil."

We must first obey God's commands and come to him through Jesus Christ, then after obeying we must have faith. Charity or love is among the Christian graces. What is the exceeding greatness of his power toward us who believe, according to the working of his mighty power; therefore we who are of the day must put on the armor of light, and the breast plate of faith and love; so that we may be able to stand against the deceitfulness of this world, which is surely a great trial in this day and age, for the children of God; for we must put on the whole armor of God, that neither things present nor things to come, will separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Therefore have your loins girt about with truth and have on the breast plate of righteousness. Righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins; wherefore let our light be burning, and the loins of our minds girded, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ. For whatsoever is born of God, overcometh the world, therefore we that are born of God shall confess the Lord Jesus and believe that God hath raised him from the dead, shall be saved. What a great and precious promise this is! We shall be saved if we only keep our lamps trimmed and burning, and take for our sword the word of God; for the word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edge sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. Dear brothers and sisters, let us stand up for Jesus, put on the whole armor of God, and take the helmet of salvation.

Do we realize our exalted position of being sons and daughters of God? We are his adopted children, and Jesus is our elder brother. But God who is rich in mercy, for his great love herewith loved us for by grace we are saved through faith, and that not of ourselves; it is the gift of God. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works, which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them. We are exhorted to walk in the light, and to wait for his Son from heaven; for the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the Master cometh, for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not (Luke 12:40).

We know not the hour of the Master's appearing,
Yet signs all foretell that the moment is nearing.
When he shall return—'tis a promise most cheering:
But we know not the hour.
We'll watch and we'll pray with our lamps trimmed and burning,
We'll work and we'll wait till the Master's returning.
We'll sing and rejoice, every omen discerning—
But we know not the hour.

JUBILEE HARPS WANTED

Will any person or church, having one copy or more than one copy of The New Jubilee Harp, that he is willing to sell, please communicate with Mr. Chas. Elvey, 623 North Willow avenue, Austin station, Chicago, Ill., stating the number of books for sale, the condition of books and the price of same.

THE BIBLE: ITS PRINCIPLES AND TEXTS

As indicated by the title this book is divided into three sections. The first consists of a remarkable disquisition on "The Bible;" the second simplifies its "principles" in formulated propositions, and the third expounds in a clear, impressive and homiletic manner particular "Texts." The knotty and perplexing texts of the Bible are untied and explained to satisfactorily to the most fastidious and critical. More than one hundred and fifteen subjects of intense interest to every Bible student are formally discussed. Both simple and scholarly—the child is fascinated and taught; the scholar is entertained and instructed. Bible lovers, here is a feast for you. Throw open the door of your home; let The Bible Its Principles and its Texts come in and bless you and your family. 309 pages, 5x7 1-2 inches, durably and handsomely bound in whole cloth, with title embossed on back in gold. One copy, $1.10, two copies or more $1.00 each. R. G. Huggins, 10623 Lee Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

TWO TRACTS

"Salvation" and "Resurrection," two tracts by the late J. L. Wince, are written in a way that cannot fail to arouse the interest of both saint and sinner. They deal with questions more important to man than any others that can be named.

The author sleeps, dear breathren. His work is left for you to carry on. Let him speak through you, 10 cents single copy; $1.00 per dozen. For sale by S. Roxana Wince, Pierceton, Ind.

SONG BOOKS

Many have written me regarding the new song books. We hope to make some move in that direction during the coming winter months.

We are using during our evangelistic campaign a small song book called "Familiar Songs of the Gospel." We have corrected them in a few places with pen, and expect to insert two printed hymns, "The Glad Tidings of the Kingdom," and "Be Thou, O God, Exalted High." If any one would like one or more of these books we will send same after the corrections are made for 10c each. Address me at North Ridgeville, Ohio.

The use of money is all the advantage there is in having it.

Patience is the strongest of strong drink, for it kills the giant despair.

When a grain of corn dropped into the soil becomes a full ear, when the apple seed makes a tree, loaded season after season with delicious fruit, we see the old miracle repeated, the little made much.

Leaders of great movements are remembered longer for what they were than for what they did. Multitudes can tell today what Mr. Gladstone was who cannot recite what he did.

To drink neither wine nor strong drink is becoming more and more an essential for the man who is to do great things in the world, whether for himself or for God.

A SHOWMAN'S SERMON

Baby baptism is a religious fake and a direct insult to God.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16). Babies can not believe.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them" (Matt. 28:19). You can not teach babies.

"Whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). Babies have no faith.

"But without faith it is impossible to please Him" (Heb. 11:6). Impossible, remember, for babies.

Baptism is for the remission of sin (Acts 2: 38; 22:16). Babies have not sinned.

Ministers preaching infant baptism ought to quit it, or [illegible] pulpit.

Great Combination Offer

OF "THE RESTITUTION"

GET THESE Money-making Secrets WITH Farm Journal

Is this rock probably holding "Poultry Secrets" fills how to carry heels, and many other secrets far more important.

For $1.00 you can get now not only the FARM JOURNAL for FOUR full years, but also your choice of any one of the famous booklets, "Money-making Secrets," which other people have bought by the HUNDRED THOUSAND.

Just note what the information given in one of these booklets, "The Million Egg-Farm," did for Robert Liddle, a clerk of Scranton, Pa.

In May, 1910, Robert bought 2300 day-old chicks. He spent just one week studying the methods now given in this book,—his only preparation for the business. Result—this "greenhorn" raised 95 per cent. of all his chicks, and 1350 of them were pullets. ("Poultry Secrets" tells you this secret.) In less than seven months he was getting 425 eggs daily, and selling them at 58 cents a dozen. His feed cost averaged $4.00 a day, leaving him OVER $17.00 A DAY PROFIT,—and this before all his pullets had begun laying.

Isn't "Money-making Secrets" a good name for such booklets?

Read what people say of the other booklets, and of the FARM JOURNAL itself:—

"I find your Egg-Book worth untold dollars."—says ROY CHANEY, Illinois. "What it tells would take a beginner years to learn."

"I am much pleased with the Butter Book," writes F. J. DICKSON, Illinois, "and would like to know how I could secure 500 copies, one for each patron of our creamery."

"Duck Dollars is the best book I ever had on duck-raising," says F. M. WARNOCK, Penna.

"If your other booklets contain as much valuable information as the Egg-Book, I would consider them cheap at double the price," says F. W. MASSELICH, New York.

T. F. MCCREA, a missionary in China, writes, "I found Garden Gold a great help in my garden this summer. I find my health in the great famine, trying to save the starving Chinese, and I am trying to get it back by getting out to the soil. After a long tussle with the Chinese language and mission problems, it is a great rest to get out with the vegetables, trees, chickens, etc. I am saving money and regaining my health. My wife and I both find FARM JOURNAL indispensable."

"The FARM JOURNAL beats them all," writes T. H. PARKER, Penna. "Every issue has reminders and ideas worth a year's subscription."

"One year I took another agricultural paper," says N. M. GLADWIN, Washington, "and it took a whole column to tell what FARM JOURNAL tells in one paragraph."

"I was very greatly helped by your garden page," writes MRS. JOE LAWRENCE, Saskatchewan. "I was never successful in growing cabbage until last summer, when I tried the FARM JOURNAL way. Now I have more than I need to use."

"FARM JOURNAL was a regular visitor at my boyhood home," writes Dr. WILLIAM DAVIS, New Jersey. "When the first copy came, it carried me back ten years, and I felt a boy again. I shall never be without it again—I want home to seem like home. When it arrives, I feel the gladness jump eight into me. I begin on the first page and read to my wife until half-past ten, and all through the month I drink of its cream. You must work hard to keep it so rich."

"FARM JOURNAL is good for the man behind the counter, as well as the man in the field," says J. A. STOAK, a Virginia bank clerk.

"If I could get as good interest on every dollar as I get from the FARM JOURNAL I would soon be a millionaire," says A. W. WALTERS, Penna.

"MONEY-MAKING SECRETS."
These booklets are 6 by 9 inches, all generously illustrated.

POULTRY SECRETS is a great collection of discoveries and methods of successful poultrymen, long jealously guarded. It gives Teich's famous mating chart, the Curtis method of getting one-half more pullets than cockerels, Boyer's method of insuring fertility, with priceless secrets of mating, breeding, feed and feeding, how to produce winter eggs, etc.

HORSE SECRETS exposes all the methods of "ticksoing," "plugging," cocaine and morphine dopeing, and other tricks of "syps," and swindlers, and enables any one to tell an unsound horse. It also gives many valuable training, feeding, breeding and veterinary secrets.

The MILLION EGG-FARM gives the methods by which J. M. Foster makes over $12,000 a year, mainly from eggs. All back-yard chicken-raisers should learn about the "Hangover Unit," and how Foster FEEDS his hens to make them produce such quantities of eggs, especially in winter.

STRAWBERRY SECRETS tells how you can have the finest fall-bearing strawberries almost until snow flies. It gives you the fruits of ten years' work and study of experts in this new industry. It reveals the secrets of fertilizing and blossom removing to produce berries in the fall, tells inside facts about varieties, how to get three crops in two years, how one grower gets 1200 quarts an acre and sells 25 crates a day, etc. E. J. Farmer, the famous berry man, says, "Any one who can grow ordinary strawberries can, if they read this book, grow fall berries almost anywhere."

CORN SECRETS, the great NEW hand-book of Prof. Holden, the "Corn King," tells how to get ten to twenty bushels more per acre of corn rich in protein and the best stock-feeding elements. Pictures make every process plain.

THE "BUTTER BOOK" tells of seven cows that produced half a ton of butter each per year (140 pounds is the average). An eye-opener for dairymen. Get it, weed out your poor cows, and turn good ones into record-breakers.

GARDEN GOLD shows how to make your backyard supply fresh vegetables and fruit, how to cut down your grocery bills, keep a better table, and get cash for your surplus. It tells how to plant, cultivate, harvest and market.

DUCK DOLLARS tells how the great Weber duck-farm near Boston makes every year 50 cents each on 4,000 ducklings. Tells why ducks pay them better than chickens, and just HOW they do everywhere.

TURKEY SECRETS, the latest authority on turkey-raising, discloses fully the methods of Horace Vose, the famous Rhode Island "turkey-man," who supplies the wonderful Thanksgiving turkeys for the White House. It tells how to mate, to set eggs, to hatch, to feed and care for the young, to prevent sickness, to fatten, and how to make a turkey-ranch PAY.

EVERY live farmer knows the FARM JOURNAL, for it is famous everywhere as the leading farm and home paper. It is thirty-five years old, and has the largest circulation of any farm paper in the world. It has always stood up for the right of farmers to "sit at the first table," and is one of the great forces that have made the American farmer prosperous.

To interest NEW readers in The Restitution, and increase its circulation and usefulness in every corner of its field, we have made an arrangement with the publishers of the Farm Journal by which subscribers to The Restitution can, for a short time, get both papers and any one of the booklets for little more than the cost of the Farm Journal alone, although in spite of its excellence it is one of the cheapest papers published.

The regular price of The Restitution is $1.50 a year.
The regular price of the Farm Journal is $1.00 for five years.
The regular price of the booklets to old subscribers 25c each.
The regular price of two copies "A Letter to a Friend," 20c.

Here is Our Offer--$2.70 Value for $1.50

By special arrangement with the publishers we are able to offer to new subscribers the Farm Journal four full years with choice of any one of the advertised booklets, "Money Making Secrets and two copies of a "Letter to a Friend" and The Restitution for one year, all for $1.50.

The Restitution, Cleveland, Ohio.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

THE RESTITUTION SONG

Lift up your heads, desponding pilgrims,
Give to the wind your needless fears;
He who has said redemption's nearing
Soon is to reign a thousand years.

Chorus

A thousand years earth's restitution,
'Tis the glad day so long foretold;
'Tis the bright morn of Zion's glory
Prophets foresaw in times of old.

What if the clouds do for a moment
Hide the blue sky where morn appears?
Soon the glad Sun of promise given
Rises, to shine a thousand years.

Tell the whole world these blessed tidings,
Speak of the time of bliss that nears;
Tell the oppressed of every nation
Jubilee lasts for a thousand years.

Haste thee along, thou age of glory,
Haste the glad time when Christ appears;
Oh, for the faith of ancient worthies!
Oh, for that reign of a thousand years!

See, all our foes are in commotion,
The very air seems filled with commotion;
But soon he'll come, our conquering Savior,
He'll come and reign a thousand years.

On David's throne in Mount Zion
We'll reign with him as priests and kings;
A thousand years we'll rule the nations,
While dove-like peace shall fold her wings.

[This is an old prophetic song I have had for many years. It may be new to some of your readers.—Mrs. M. Hobson.]

STUDIES IN THE APOCALYPSE

The First Seal (Rev. 6:1, 2).

GEO. FRANCIS.

The student will not proceed far before he will notice the prominence of the number seven. In the Salutation (1:4) we read: "Grace be unto you, and peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven spirits which are before his throne." This language points us to the throne of the Deity, as the source of the number seven; therefore the origin of the number of the days of the week, forming the weekly cycle, which points us back to prehistoric times for its origin. As to its "why" and "wherefore," we are left in the dark; but we perceive its significance to be fullness and completeness. The seventh day is sacred to the Jew, also the seventh year, in which the land was to rest; and the square of seven completed the period between the years of the jubilees. Seven times the Israelites encompassed the walls of Jericho, before they fell down; seven times they were to be punshed for their sins; that is, they were to receive full and complete punishment for all their sins (Lev. 26).

The number seven is continued in the New Testament, especially in the Apocalypse, where we read concerning the seven past plagues: "For in them is filled up the wrath of God" (15:1). In the seven epistles to the seven churches we find the significance of the number seven, in that they fill up the space of time from Patmos to the Holy City full and complete. The book, being prophetic, deals with the events of the seven churches in all this dispensation. Proof: "Behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried, and ye shall have tribulation ten days." This is foretelling future events; and again to the church of Thyatira the woman "Jezabel" is mentioned; not old Jezabel, the wife of Ahab, but the modern Jezabel, who, like Ahab's wife, put the prophets of God to death. In a figure or metaphor, old Jezabel is alive again, and at her old work. If those epistles are not prophetic, touching events all through this dispensation, why are seven and no more mentioned? Had the Master no care for the church of Colosse, Miletus, Troas, Corinth and of Rome? The fact is, the book is largely constructed on the number seven; its significance is fullness and completeness. What I am trying to impress upon the reader is that, before the book will be understood, we will have to keep in mind what is symbolized by the number seven; and, having learned that, apply it to the seals and trumps, as well as to the seven churches. The seven plagues are an exception to the rule, in this respect, that they are called the "last plague." They are full and complete, in that they contain the fullness of the wrath of God (ch. 15).

Now, keeping this in mind, I will attempt an exposition of the seven seals, in harmony with the significance of the number seven. The seals will reveal a class of events from A. D. 98 to the end of this age.

The Opening of the Seals (Rev. 6:1).

"And I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals, and I heard, as it were, the noise of thunder, one of the four beasts saying, Come and see. And I saw, and behold a white horse: and he that sat on him had a bow, and a crown was given unto him; and he went forth conquering and to conquer."

The leading symbol is the horse and its color; and the first question is, What did the horse symbolize? In Zech. 6:5 we learn that it is the spirit of the heavens. The horse, being the most spirited of animals, is here used to indicate the spirit of the government. In Rev. 19:11 we find a white horse, and the rider makes war in righteousness. The white horse in the first seal must symbolize the same as it does in Rev. 19; therefore we should expect to find a spirit of righteousness in the government during the period of this seal. Now, have we anything to guide us as to the time of this seal? Yes, verily we have. In Rev. 1:1 we read: "The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave to him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass." The revelation, being given A. D. 96, we expect the going forth of the white horse not far from that date.

We find in history just such a period, commencing A. D. 98 with the accession of Nerva to the throne, and continuing through the reigns of Nerva, Trajan, Hadrian and the two Antonines, until the accession of Commodus, A. D. 180. Gibbon says of this period: "If a man were called to fix the period in the history of the world during which the condition of the human race was the most happy and prosperous he would without hesitation name that which elapsed from the death of Domitian to the accession of Commodus. The vast extent of the Roman empire was governed by absolute power, under the guidance of virture and wisdom" (Gibbon, vol. 1:93). Volumes may be written concerning the testimony of Gibbon.

"And he that sat on him had a bow: and a crown was given unto him." The bow indicates war, as in Rev. 19 the rider of the white horse makes war, but it is in righteousness; and so we expect this bow will be used in a just or righteous cause. This war was waged by Trajan against the Dacians, a warlike people who inhabited the country now called Germany. They insulted the dignity of the empire, but were completely subdued in the reign of Trajan (Gib. 1:6). Thus a crown was given to the rider: the crown of Dacia.

"And he went forth conquering and the conqueror." In the reign of Trajan the empire of Rome attained its greatest extent of territory and prestige." He undertook an expedition against the nations of the East. * * * He descended the river Tigris in triumph, from the mountains of Armenia to the Persian Gulf. He enjoyed the honor of being the first, as he was the last, of the Roman generals who ever navigated that remote sea. * * * Every day the astonished Senate received the intelligence of new names and new nations that acknowledged his sway." Thus "he went forth conquering and to conquer" (Gib. 1: 7). "The golden age of Trajan and the Antonines had been preceded by an age of iron. It is almost superfluous to enumerate the unworthy successors of Augustus, their unparallel vices and the theaters on which they acted have saved them from oblivion. The dark, unrelenting Tiberius, the furious Caligula, the feeble Claudius, the profligate and cruel Nero, the beastly Vitellins, and the timid, inhuman Domitan are condemned to everlasting infamy" (Gib. 1:96). The last named, Domitan, is compared to a madman on the throne of the world, with unlimited power. Mark the contrast when the gentle and humane Nerva came to the throne, A. D. 96.

GOVERNOR AMONG THE NATIONS

How people who claim to believe the Bible can believe that all the nations of earth will be destroyed when the eternal ages set in, at the second coming of Christ, is hard for me to understand. Why, the very object, or at least one of the objects, of setting up the kingdom of God upon the earth is, "That all people, nations and languages should serve him" (Dan. 7:14). In order to dodge this plain declaration of scripture Elder Hines, in our debate, said this was fulfilled when Christ went to heaven after his resurrection. He says: "He came to the Ancient of days, and the Ancient of days is God, and God was in heaven." In answer I said: "Hold on, and let's see where the Ancient of days will be at that time. This is a prophecy, and in Daniel's vision he said, I beheld until the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did it. When did he sit? Listen. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousands thousands ministered unto him, and ten times ten thousand stood before him: the judgment was set and the books opened. Here is where the Ancient of days was when the Son of Man came to him with the clouds of heaven, and there was given unto him dominion, glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him. He had come and sat in judgment."

Now, to prove that this is true, Daniel, in explaining the vision, said: "I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the Ancient of days came, and judgemnt was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came for the saints to possess the kingdom." We shall not take the time or space to speak of the kind of judgment spoken here, but there can be no doubt but the coming of the Son of Man spoken of in verse 14 is his second coming, for he came "with the clouds of heaven," and that is precisely the way he will come the second time. John says: "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him." Hence this point is settled. Not only did Daniel declare that "all people, nations and languages should serve him," but David, speaking of the time when Christ shall reign, says: "The kingdom is the Lord's, and he is the governor among the nations" (Ps. 22:25). Yet we are told that there will be no nations for him to rule!

Listen again: "He shall have domirion from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; and his enemies shall lick the dust. The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall offer gifts. Yea, all kings of Sheba and Seba shall oqer gifts. Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations serve him" (Ps. 72:8-11). Again: His name shall endure forever; his name shall be continued as long as the sun, and men shall be blessed in him; all nations shall call him blessed." Isaiah declares that when the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains that "he shall judge (rule) among the nations, and shall rebuke many people," while Micah says: "And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off, and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. * * * And I will make her that halteth a remnant and her that was cast afar off a strong nation, and the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even forever." And, to cap the climax, Christ himself says: "To him that overcometh will I give power over the nations;" and John says: "The kings of the earth shall bring their glory and honor into it."

Now, in the face of this divine testimony, how can any Bible believer believe that there will be no nations for him to reign over when his glorious kingdom is established? So rich and grand is the theme of the kingdom that the people will talk about it when it is established. David says: "All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power; to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom. Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and they dominion endureth throughout all generations." I tell you, dear brethren, while we are hated and persecuted here, we will be somebody sure enough when the Lord comes. Listen to what the Lord says about it: "Let the saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two-edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the heathen and punishment upon the people; to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute the judgment written; this honor hath all the saints. Praise ye the Lord." Oh, yes; our coming King will rebuild David's throne, and take his seat thereupon, and he will make Jerusalem a praise in the earth, for Jerusalem is the "City of the great King," and he, with the saints, shall "reign over the nations," just as sure as the Bible is true. Then the weary, sad and tossed ones shall have crowns of glory and palms of victory, and assist in the "restitution of all things."

T. J. DANIEL.

A VISIT TO THE HOLY LAND

No. 1

As we are all interested in the journeys of our Savior while on earth, let us, beloved, take the train of remembrance back to those scenes of old, and pay a visit to the Holy Land.

How fair and calm the day! We could not have chosen a better day for beginning our journey. How swiftly the train flies over the plains, carrying us from the turmoil and hubbub of modern life to those quiet and restful places visited by the holy men of old; yea, even to places where God himself talked with men of old.

I do believe, my friend, that these fields which we are riding through now are the very ones in which

"The shepherds watched their flocks by night,
All seated on the ground;
When the angel of the Lord came down,
And glory shone around."

What a blessed anouncement this was to the world, that "this day in Bethlehem is born a babe, which is Christ the King." Do you not feel appalled when you think that this is the very place in which was revealed to man, for the first time, the coming of the Great One, so long foretold? "A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of his people Isreal."

Bethlehem

We are now approaching the little town of Bethlehem. How fresh and green everything looks! Here we are at last in the very heart of the little town. Let us walk slowly through its streets and talk over the wonderful birth of Jesus. I have read that the associations of our Lord's nativity were all of the humblest character, and the very scenery of the birthplace was connected with the memories of poverty and toil. On that night, indeed, it seemed as though the heavens must burst to disclose their radiant minstrelies, and the stars and the feeding sheep, and the light and sound in the darkness and stillness, and the rapture of faithful hearts, combine to furnish us with awe. There being no room at the inn, Christ was laid in a manger. Just think for a moment of the lowly condition of Christ at his birth. He entered into the world, over which he is to rule, without a place to rest. "The birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." As you reflect upon that eventful night, do you not seem to hear, in the distance, a multitude of heavenly hosts, praising God, and singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men?"

The Jordan

Let us, beloved, hasten our steps toward Jordan, that we may reach there before evening. Here we are, and the sun is just disappearing over the distant towers of the place where at one time stood Jericho, and painting with the richest purple the hills between the river and Jerusalem. Jordan, catching its reddenig radiance, rolls past like a river of liquid gold, embanked in emerald. The sun has now gone down, and the full moon is rising on the opposite shore. The broad disc of the moon is pouring a flood of orange-tinged radiance upon us. Notice, friends, how Jordan, dark as India's eye, darts swiftly past at our feet, between its deeply-shaded banks, sending up to our ears the faintest murmur of its pebbly passage. Look forward, friends; far above our heads swells the vaulted arch of the temple of Jehovah, with its myriad of altar fires. If you look backward you will see, far-stretching, the desert waste, cheerless and yet grand in its desolate distances. All things praise God; shall we be silent? Let us join our voices and sing:

"Praise! praise! praise ye the Lord!
Praise him in the heights! Praise him in the seas!
Praise him, men of Israel! Praise ye the Lord!
For he exalteth high his people and reigneth evermore."

Did you notice how the tide of praise floating over the waters, echoed and re-echoed from the opposing shores, as if the banks and streams, trees, hills and sky found voice as well as we? Dear ones, this is holy ground, for do you not remember this to be the very earth upon which Christ trod when he descended into these waters of Jordan for baptism? Is this not the very place in which, when he raised himself up from baptism, that the spirit, in the form of a dove with outstretched wings, descended upon the Savior, and the voice of God was heard to say: "This is my beloved Son, is whom I am well pleased?"

But the time is short; we must now press onward. The weather is delightful; nights dewy, mornings fresh and cool, days warm, sky clear, grass high and green, trees in full leaf, flowers in blossom, and all nature smiling.

Galilee

I am glad we arrived here at Galilee at daybreak, for the light in the East, just breaking through those clouds of night, recalls to my mind those people which sat in the drakness and saw a great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light sprang up. To our right, beloved, is the place where stood the sacred city of Capernaum, where Christ spent so many of his days. Some of the most eventful things of interest occurred here in Galilee: Here is where Christ called his disciples to be fishers of men; he healed a leper; cured a paralytic; delivered his sermon on the mount; raised Jarius' daughter; a woman sick for twelve years healed by touching the hem of his garment; healed two blind men; cured a deaf and dumb man. Can you picture, as you look across this body of water, the scene of the storm at sea? Darkness had fallen on land and sea, and the disciples were rowing toward Capernaum from Bethsaida, while Jesus was alone in the mountain, praying to his Father. The wind blew stronger and stronger over the dark waters, and the sea was boisterous. They were toiling against wind and waves. Suddenly a figure seemed to appear to them in the dimness and darkness, and lo! they heard their blessed Master's voice: "It is I; be not afraid."

Beloved, let us claps our hands and pray,

"That Jesus As may see,
He the Christ, who stilled the wave
On the Sea of Galilee."

Garden of Gethsemane

Dear ones, let us now pay a visit to one of our Savior's favorite places, a very secluded and beautiful spot, "The Garden of Gethsemane." This garden is across from the Kidron. Here Jesus and his disciples often resorted for rest, conversation and prayer. It is called "Gethsemane," which means oil-press. A "press' always suggests a crushing process; olive oil is obtained by squeezing the berries in a press; and here Jesus comes to a place where he is to be pressed down by a weight of sorrow that crushes him to the earth, and causes his body to sweat and drip with blood, while his soul agonizes in a conflict that threatens to kill him. Thus the very name of this spot tells the story of Jesus' woe for all men.

Here we are in sight of the garden. What beautiful flowers grow here, also fruit hangs upon the trees, and these trees cast cool shadows which invite tired men to rest. So are we reminded that he gives us rest by his sorrow and life by his death. All that is fair and good flourishes in the garden of the Lord.

"Gethsemane! Joy hath no flowers so sweet
As those which cluster on thine olive slope;
Beneath the crimson sheen of Jesus' feet
Springs up the blossom of a deathless hope."

Let us recall the time when Jesus and his disciples arived at this accustomed spot. The full moon was shining, and Jesus asked his disciples to sit down, while he retired into the grove of olive trees to pray; he also bade them pray for preparation against temptation. Feeling the pressure of an awful weight upon his soul, he took Peter, James and John with him. These men had seen him transfigured in a mountain in Galilee, and were especially dear to him. They walked slowly on when Jesus expressed depression at the heaviness of his burden; something was bearing him down to death. He asked them to stay near and watch with him. He then went a few steps farther, about a stone's throw, and they saw him fall on his face, and as he lay on the ground they heard, in the stillness of the night, his prayer, in broken sentences, like the voice of one fainting yet struggling: "O my Father, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; if it be possible, let this cup pass from me." He again cried out: "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done." Then they saw a bright form beside the sufferer, an angel from heaven, who lifted him up and soothed his troubled spirit. This messenger from his Father's throne showed him that he must go and finish his work; and his agony in prayer became so intense that "the sweat was, as it were, great drops of blood falling down to the ground."

A writer describing his visit to Jerusalem says: "As I was passing near Gethsemane one day I saw, at a little distance, a shepherd engaged in shearing one of his flock. The animal lay stretched before him on the ground, submitting without resistance or complaint to the operation which he was performing. It seemed as if every movement of the shears would lacerate the flesh; the feet were bound; the man's knees were pressed rudely against the sides of the helpless captive. This posture, so irksome, had to be endured for a considerable time before the ample fleece was removed. Yet, during it all, it was wonderful to observe how patient the creature remained; it struggled not, opened not its mouth. Under ordinary circumstances this might not have attracted my attention; but, being seen in such a place, it spoke to my heart with touching power. How could I forget the prophet's use of that emblem, in describing the spirit of unshrinking submission to appointed suffering, which was to distinguish the Savior of Men, and of which he gave such matchless proof in the agony in the garden. Isaiah said, with reference to his character: "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter; and, as sheep before her shearer is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth."

"The scene is changed! A garden. One is kneeling
Beneath the ancient olive's deepening shade:
Lanterns and torches! footsteps nearer stealing,
The apostate's kiss the Holy One betrayed!"

As Jesus' persecutors rushed upon him he who was able to procure twelve legions, an uncounted host of angels, only said: "This is your hour, and the power of darkness." It was a bitter experience; but "The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" Gethsemane is one of the choicest spots on earth to Christ's people who have their hours of anguish, when the memory of Jesus, and of his wonderful words: "Thy will be done," bears them up, as he was strengthened by the angel.

Consolation heals without contact; somewhat like the blessed air which we need but to breathe.

One who is very variable can not be very sincere—today's truth is tomorrow's falsehood—or, at least, it is but a momentary sincerity.

THE SPIRIT OF UNITY

By GAVIN LANG, Inverness.

"And Abraham said unto Lot, Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen, for we are brethren" (Gen. 13:8).

There can be but one judgment as to which of the two, Abraham or Lot, comes best out of the transaction with which the text is associated. Could magnanimity go further than that which Abraham showed? Nearly a thousand years later one even wiser, though not more faithful than he, said: "The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water;" and, in view of a danger so startling, he adjures "to leave off contention before it be meddled with."

A word this to the churches! And, if they will not listen to Solomon, the Royal Preacher, the greatest of the glorious company of the Apostles is ready with his counsel. St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Romans, thus writes: "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men;" and again: "Follow after the things which make for peace." If the patriarch's plan of nipping strife in the bud had not been pusued, as indicated in the text, Christendom would today have presented another and fairer spectacle. Instead of being torn into hundreds of denominational shreds and fragments, by wrestling and wrangling about matters of minor significance, it would have shown a bolder, because more united, front to error, infidelity and sin.

Is there any occasion for, can there be any extenuation of, the bitterness which has ever accompanied the formation of sects? Even the herdmen of Christ's flock, like those of Abraham and Lot, indulge in such bitterness; and there are those who freely express the conviction that they are to a great extent answerable for the divisions which mar the church's beauty and grieve the spirit of God.

There will be, to the end of the chapter, varieties of sentiment leading to separations; and, as the late Charles H. Spurgeon once quaintly remarked, "It does no harm to have these well labeled." But surely religion should never be allied to intolerance. It is bad enough to magnify difference which, when viewed out of the arena of combat, appear microscopic. But it is worse still to get vehement and angry in the assertion of these differences. What a gain it would have been to the spread of truth if, at each of those crucial epochs of controversy out of which there came fresh dismemberment of the church, there had arisen some voice of authoritative entreaty, like that of Abraham to Lot.

It is often urged that secessions have been useful in so far as they have led to increase in the number of places of worship and an expansion in the volume of ordinances and means of grace; but who can pretend that they have sweetened the social or ecclesiastical atmosphere, or that they have extended the dominion of charity?

What does it all mean if we are really children of the one Father and disciples of the one Master? It is told that in the Peninsular War a detachment of British soldiers were firing briskly in the direction of a distant wood, where men were seen hovering in dark outline, when the Duke of Wellington rode up, and, looking through his telescope, turned to the officer in command and quietly said: "Well aimed, Captain, but enough; these are our own 99th!" They had come dangerously near committing the crime of fratricide. Consciously or unconsciously, churches are guilty of that same heinous sin when, either wilfully or allowing themselves to be misled, they forget, in their attitude towards fellow-Christians, that they too are of the brotherhood.

Half the trouble is caused by our misunderstanding one another. Mr. Jay, one of the devoutest of writers, told a man who, early one foggy morning on a mountainside, thought he saw a great monster. It seemed to be in motion, but he could not make out its exact shape. His heart beat quick as he went forward. As he drew nearer he saw that the monster was a man. He drew nearer still, and he saw that it was his own brother.

We have only to go in thought to Calvary to have all haze and mist, and all distorted views regarding others, dispelled. As we contemplate him who was crucified on that "green hill far away, and who died to save us all, there could not fail to dawn upon us, dull though we are, a conception of what we should be to and do for those around us and everywhere throughout his whole creation. His atonement there wrought out, his sacrifice there offered, were the seal of his teaching: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." If we could, even afar off, follow in his footsteps who thus enjoined, there would be little need to ring in our ears the admonition used by Abraham and handed down by inspiration of the Holy Ghost to every age: "Let there be no strife, for we be brethren;" nor yet the exhortation of that most illustrious ambassador of the Cross, who in farewell word to the Corinthians touchingly pleads: "Be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you."—Selected by Ian Kattison.

THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD

Psalms 23.

I shall not want rest. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures."

I shall not want refreshments. "He leadeth me beside still waters."

I shall not want repentance. "He restoreth my soul."

I shall not want guidance. "He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness."

I shall not want protection. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death."

I shall not want companionship. "For thou art with me."

I shall not want comfort. "Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

I shall not want provision. "Thou preparest a table before me."

I shall not want joy. "Thou anoinest my head with oil."

I shall not want any good thing. "My cup runneth over."

I shall not want anything in the life to come. "I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

EDITORIAL

Would it not be a strange thing if a miser, after amassing a fortune, were to give it all away? Unaccountably strange, yet this is precisely what he does! When he dies he leaves it all and gets nothing for it, either in this world or the world to come.

The Argos Reflector of February 6 has a long report on the first page of the sixtieth wedding anniversary of Bro. and Sister William Railsback. We pray that God's richest blessings may attend this aged and venerable brother and sister in the eventide of their lives, and that they may have many days yet in which to praise the Lord.

Bro. Adams requests us to state that his address until March 8 is Sunnyside, Wash. From this intimation we judge our brother is expecting to make a tour on the Pacific coast. The Lord's blessings attend him.

We often spend a pleasant hour perusing our exchanges. As a whole, our sister publications are nice, interesting and scriptural. Of course, some of them incline towards some hobby, while others have fads and fancies which they never tire of putting on exhibition. Just now some of them are regaling themselves with the delights of Futurism. They pile up fiction, fancy and imagination on prophetic themes, and then turn away satisfied because they have a good-sized pile. They are fond of Revelations, and dive into its symbols every chance they get. In their ramblings and speculations on this sacred book, like an old minister in North Carolina who always used the same text whenever and wherever he preached, they always conclude with the same conclusion, and that is, it has never happened. One of these dogmatic writers declares in an English exchange that "Babylon is to be restored, reconstructed," etc., etc. The Bible is very effectual in pulling down "high thoughts" when it gets a chance; and if this writer ever reads Jer. 51:64 he will get a sharp thrust from the sword of the spirit which will be bad for his theory, but good for him: "And thou shalt say, Thus shall Babylon sink, and not rise from the evil that I shall bring upon her." This text will rob him of many nice theories; it means death to the imaginative faculty; but this loss will be more than compensated in the real and solid things of God's word. We need more of God's blessed word; less of human fancy.

In advocating the historical view of prophecies; in regarding them as the story told in advance in symbolic language of the events of the Christian centuries, the Adventists are not alone, as some writers would leave us to suppose. They hold no "erroneous teaching" on prophecy that is not held by all Christendom; it is manifestly unjust to single them out for "review" and to deride them as a "sect" when they are only treading in the steps of the most eminent prophetic interpreters from the earliest times, from Justin Martyr, Ireneus, Tertullian, Hippolytus, Victorinus, Methodius, Lactantius, Eusebius, Athanasius, Jerome and Augustine, among the Fathers; of Bede and Anspert, Andreas and Anselm, Joachim Abbas and Almeric, of the middle ages; of the Albigenses and Waldenses, of Wickliffe and the Lollards, of John Huss and Jerome of Prague, of pre-Reformation times; of the Reformers—English, Scottish and Continental; of the Puritan theologians, of the Pilgrim Fathers of New England, of Mede and More, and Sir Isaac Newton, and Jonathan Edwards, of Bengel, the learned German exegete, of Alford and Wordsworth, of Birks and Bickersteth, of Faber and Elliott in England, John Thomas, Robert Roberts, and a host of others, men distinguished for their ability, their assiduity and deep study of the prophetic word. Adventists are in good company; they deserve to be complimented rather than criticized for so noble a stand.

Among the insignificant advocates of the Futurist theory of prophetic interpretation may be mentioned "Rev." S. R. Maitland, Dr. James Todd, and John Henry Newman, and all the Catholics to a man. The first three men named have labored to break down the barriers between the Established Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church, and they have succeeded in the task only too well. John Henry Newman, soon as he espoused the Futurist view, consistently and speedily joined the Roman Harlot! The consequences of the theory have invariably been disastrous and appalling. Actual test has demonstrated that the theory is barren of good and worthy results. Its adoveates have denied accomplishments of prophecy recognized by the great mass of prophetic interpreters from the earliest times; they have invented future fulfillments, as unsubstantial and impossible as the dreams of those who mistake bizarre imaginations for sober realities; they have forsaken the great trend, the main pathway, the well trodden highway of prophetic interpretation, based upon divine explanation of prophetic symbols, and unquestionable historic facts, for empty speculations about the future; unprofitable speculations as to the coming universal dimonion of a short-lived Jewish antichrist, to be seated in a literal temple erected by the Jews at Jerusalem, who in the time of three and one-half years is to fulfill all the wonders of the Apocalypse, and exhaust the meaning of the majestic propheey which the church of God has been blindly misapplying throughout all the ages.

"Surely," says H. Gratten Guinness, in Historic Unveiling Propheey, page 17, "It is time for such interpreters to consider such unscripturalness and unreasonableness of the method of interpretation which they employ, the absence of authority, or warrant, for their views, the lack of demonstration, human or divine; and the fruitlessness of their speculations, as affording no present guidance to the church, and their injuriousness as extinguishing the lamp which God has given to his people to guide their steps along the perilous way of their pilgrimage. I am well convinced from wide observation that many excellent persons adopt these modern prophetic speculations because good men have advocated them, here and there, and for no better reason; they have heard them advanced in prophetic conferences, they have read them in books, and tracts, full of confident assertions, superficial and dogmatic compositions on the sublimest questions which can exercise the human mind, and they have been satisfied to believe without proof, and to repeat without independent investigation, the marvelous inventions of busy brains as to the antichrist of the future, without ever having soberly inquired whether the Standard Bearer of an abominable apostacy, the very masterpiece of satan for the delusion of mankind, were the antichrist already come. Let us appeal to such to open their eyes to the facts of history, to turn their thoughts for a while to the sublime story of the decline and fall of the Roman empire, of the rise of the great apostacies in the eastern and western church, of the testimony and sufferings of the Christian witnesses of the middle ages, and Reformation days, and of the retributive acts of Providence in our own time, the manifest and awful judgments which have poured forth on Papal Rome in and since the French Revolution, judgments whose afterwaves are rolling and reverberating still, uttering with no uncertain sound the solemn conclusion that, so far from living in days preceding the fulfillment of Apocalyptic propheey, we are living in the closing days of the accomplishment of the things which it has foretold."

"DON'T"

Don't think that whatever comes to you on your knees when in prayer to God is therefore from God. Being in God's presence is not necessarily being out of satan's presence, for we find him even presenting himself before God (Job 1:6). Even in seasons of communion satan may gently intrude his thoughts and we need to trust always for protection, "watching unto prayer" and "waiting on the Lord" to be fully assured by his word and providences that the thought is fully of God.

Don't think that a new thought that comes to you in connection with a single passage of scripture is necessarily a truth. Examine the connection and compare with other passages (II. Tim. 1:13).

Don't think out a doctrine and then go to the Bible to prove it, lest you handle the word deceitfully (2 Cor. 1:1, 2).

Don't quickly fall in with new (to you) doctrines, nor undertake to teach what has not been reasonably tested by scripture. We are to be "slow to speak" and not lightly nor rashly assume to be teachers, lest we receive "heavier judgment" (James 3:1, R. V.).

Don't oppose a thing because it may be contrary to your ways of thought and action. Be like those at Berea (Acts 7:11).

Don't allow the fear of God as sovereign to drive you into abject slavishness; nor let your child-like confidence beget careless irreverence (Heb. 10:19-23; 12:28, 29).

Don't take advice, warning, or instruction (even from a true and godly friend) as coming from God until you have tested it by the word of God. Satan tempted Christ through Peter (Mark 8:33; Eph. 1:11).

Don't think that God will never teach you through people; nor that he can not, or will not, use someone to teach you who may not have as much light in general as you have. Some of the sanctified do not think the unregenerated can show them anything. They are in error (Eph. 4: 2; Rom. 12:3). God is often delayed by this disposition in his people and sometimes has to lay them aside because of this proud unteachableness.

Don't think that those who cry "Holiness," "Healing," "The Lord's Coming," are all right. Be kind, but be careful (Matt. 7:15-21).

Don't think the more difficult of two roads is always God's choice for you, because it is harder. This leads to hard servitude. Come to the place of entire willingness and then ask his guidance (Matt. 11:28-30; James 1:5).

Don't think that failures, shortcomings or even an occasional sin, into which you may be betrayed, proves that you have not been regenerated or sanctified. It simply shows that just then you were not truthfully abiding in Christ (1 John 2:1 "we," i. e., Christians; 3:6).

Don't call sins mistakes; nor anger, impatience; nor suspicion, caution; nor indifference to, and unbelief in God's best things, humility; nor stubbornness, firmness; nor love for Christian work, consecration to God; nor religiousness, spirituality (Is. 44:20; Luke 16:15).

Don't fail in your testimony to make Christ prominent instead of yourself (Matt. 7:6; 1 Cor. 2:6; Gal. 2:20).

Don't think that delay means denial, nor contradictory circumstances refusal. God has his delays, and often allows contradictions in order to test faith (Hab. 2:3; Luke 18:1-7; Gen. 15:2, 3; Rom. 1:18-21; Gen. 21:1-3).

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Third Seal: or, Thyatirian State
Text: Rev. 2:18-29; 6:5-7.

1. Symbols of the Third Seal Explained.

(1) Black Horse. Mourning, want, intense depression of mind (Job 30:25-31; Jer. 14:1, 2 Joel 2:6; Rev. 6:12).

2. The Balances.

(1) Emblem of justice (Prov. 11:1; 16:11; Job 31:6; Rom. 13:1-4). (2) Imperial coin of A. Severus: one side, head of emperor; other, a diademed figure holding a balance in right hand. (3) Scarcity (John (John 3:34; Lev. 26:26; Ezek. 4:16, 17).

3. The Voice.

(1) Used for law, proclamation, signification (Heb. 3:7; Ezra 1:1, margin; Ex. 4:8). (2) Penny is 14 cents of our currency, wheat $4.50 per bushel, meaning either the sale price or the taxes on it.

2. Historical Application.

(1) General severity of taxation during the reigns of Caracalla and Elagabalus (Gib. 1:187, 186, 189, 190, 201, 220, 221).

(2) Amelioration of fiscal extortions in latter part of the seal: "See thou hurt not the oil and the wine." The historical counterpart of this prophecy in the reigns of Alexander and A. Severus (Gib. 1:207, 208, 210, 221).

(3) The seals contain a marvelous summary of Roman history. Although essentially symbolic, almost all scenes in them have something literal about them—a symbolic and literal mixture which helps to interpret them. Bryan, Taft and Cannon are terribly extorted in cartoons, yet enough of the literal is inwrought in the figurative to make their recognition easy. So in the seals: "the great sword," wheat, oil, wine, etc., and other literal things are introduced to serve as clues in our comprehension of them.

COMMUNICATIONS

Brother Huggins:

I have today read your sermon on "Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained." Can it be had in tract or booklet form? What will be the cost per hundred?

We are isolated. My husband and I are the only members around here. The people here do not know one thing about the kingdom or any other Bible subject. When we talk to them they say they never heard anything like it. I do want all to understand how good and plain the Bible is, but it is twisted so much they can not untwist it. I send all my Restitutions on when done with them. This is the only way I can get the word to some of them. They never heard a sermon on the true gospel. Tracts and Restitutions preach fine sermons. I had a lady call me the other day by telephone. I had been sending her The Restitution for some time every week, and she said: "It is all Bible; I never read so much Bible in a paper before."

I think some booklets of "Paraise Lost: Paradise Regained" will help many. Please let me hear what the price will be per hundred.

Yours in hope of the soon coimng king,
MRS. ROSCOE McCORY.

[The publication of Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained" is under advisement. If printed it will be thoroughly revised, and several footnotes will be added. Suggestions from readers will be useful in the work of revision. If published, price of sermon will be announced.—Editor.]

Dear Brother:

I am pleased to see the new dress of the good old Restitution. It is much more preferable than the old, as it is much more easily preserved in this form. I have been longing to see such a change. I am glad to learn that you will continue its editor, and shall pray that you be upheld by the arm of the Lord. We hardly see how we could get along without The Restitution. It has so many good sermons for us to digest.

There was some interest in my teaching in this vicinity during the summer and fall, but it has abated on account of so much change by removals. Those who were most interested have mostly moved away. I had intended to have Brother Almus Adams come up and help me in a meeting here, but I think now it would be almost useless. Times are quite dull here on account of three very dry years, one of which was nearly a complete crop failure. I have rented my farm out, and expect to move somewhere else with others who are going. Had to sell out personal property to hold my farm, so I am not certain what I will do yet. Wife suggested that we move where there is a church of our faith, so that our children may have the advantage of the Sunday-school. We would consider a proposition of pastorship from a church, even if it could only help us a little, providing I could find employment of some kind. Would prefer a country place on account of my health. I lived in the city of Dallas, Texas, till I was almost too weak to get around. When I came North I weighed about 130 pounds; now I weigh 195 pounds. Have been on a farm seven years, so you can see why I prefer the country. I am glad to see a letter from Brother W. J. Peck, and can say, though not personally acquainted with him, that he has been a power in the Lone Star State, and, being an ex-Campbellite preacher, he has fought for every inch of the ground upon which he stands.

Your article on the promises to the ancient saints was good, and so near my views on that subject that I can say Amen to every sentence of it. Such articles should have a wide circulation among the Russellites.

I am glad some have enjoyed my feeble efforts on the Sabbath, or rather Law Question. Once I was much puzzled upon that question, and came very nearly joining the Seventh Day Advent Church. Had they not have been so far astray on other subjects I suppose I would have considered their claimes more seriously than I did. But that didn't prove that we were not to keep the Sabbath, and so I read the best works on both sides, and compared with the Bible, finding both mistaken in many things; and as I had not seen any very extended work from those who look at things as we do I have written what I have sent to The Restitution, and have some more to boil down on such points as: Did the patriarch know of and keep the Sabbath? Do modern Seventh Dayites keep it? and its connection with the new covenant. I will send some of them as soon as time permits.

J. J. HECKMAN.

[Any church that may desire to correspond with Bro. Heckman, with a view to locating him with them in pastoral work, may do so by addressing him at Opportunity, Neb.—Editor.]

Brother Huggins:

I have read your long article in The Restitution of January 14, "Can Christians Sin?"

Most of your article is scriptural, and correct. In regard to sanctified people sinning, Paul said: "When we would do good, evil was present with me," and we are told: "If we sin we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." This implies that all can and do sin. We are admonished not to deceive ourselves by saying that we have no sin.

In regard to the passage in 1 John 3:9: It seems to me that you missed the mark altogether. I think that if you take this passage in connection with others of the same class you will have no difficulty with it. You know that there is some difficulty in the authorized translation of the scriptures. It appears they used "born" and "begotten," as though they meant the same thing, or were interchangeable terms. Any person of mature years should know the difference. To hear, understand, believe and obey is being begotten; baptism is being born of water, the outward manifestation that we are begotten to a lively hope in Jesus; that we have faith in him; we believe in the sacrifice that he made; that he died, was buried, and rose again; that, if we prove faithful, when he comes "the trump shall sound, the dead in Christ shall rise first, and we who are alive shall be changed in a moment, and caught up with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." All will then have the immortal nature and be "born of the spirit."

Take John 3:7-8: "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but can not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is everyone that is born of the spirit."

This is very plain and to the point. Jesus, after he rose from the dead, demonstrated this by appearing and disappearing on different occasions. When he went with the two in the way, and was made manifest to them in the breaking of bread, and vanished out of their sight, also appearing to them when they were in secret for fear of the Jews.

Now, take another passage, Luke 20:36: "Neither can they die any more; for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." This shows what it is to be really the children of God; which we will be if we receive the immortal nature, which Jesus came to bring to light through the gospel.

Now, I think you will have no difficulty in harmonizing 1 John 3:9 with those passages, and many more in the scriptures; all they require is that we divide the word in a proper manner, and all will be plain and harmonious. When we are born again we are immortal; we can not sin then.

Yours for the truth,

JOHN E. HOGARTH.

PROMISE TO ABRAHAM

The first thing we think of when we hear this phrase is, What was promised, by whom, and to whom were they promised? They were promises made to Abraham by God when he led him out and told him to look northward, southward, eastward and westward, and all the land which he could see, to him would he give it, and to his seed forever; and that he would make his seed as the dust of the ground (Gen. 13:14-16). God renewed the covenant with Abraham, saying that he would make him father of many nations. God also said: "I will establish my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee in their generations for an everlasting covenant, to be a God unto thee and to thy seed after thee. And I will give unto thee, and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession; and I will be their God" (Gen. 17:7, 8).

When we read that the question arises as to whom the "seed" is. In Gal. 3:16 we read: "Now, to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, And to seeds, as of many; but as of one, And to thy seed, which is Christ."

The next thing we want to know is, How we may become Christ's, which is explained in Gal. 3:27, 29: "For as many of yau as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

The benefits of baptism are that when we are baptized our sins are forgiven, and we put on Christ; in doing which we become heirs to the promises made to Abraham. R. J. PATE.

NOT ALONE

When Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, came out of the Tower of London and saw the scaffold upon which he was to be beheaded, he took out of his pocket a Greek Testament, and, looking up, exclaimed: "Now, O Lord, direct me to some passage which may support me through this awful scene." He opened the book and his eye fell upon John 16:32: "Yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me." He instantly closed it, saying: "Praise God! This is sufficient for me for eternity."—The Friend.

ISOLATED ORGANIZATION REPORT

First report of the Secretary of the Organization of Isolated Members of the Church of God in the United States and Canada.

Since our organization of Isolated Members, thirteen have enrolled as members, and most of them have helped or pledged toward the Helping Fund.

Some who are not isolated have helped, and we are very thankful for their assistance.

MISS LEOLA B. HANSON, Sec'y.
3609 McDonald Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

To the President of the Isolated Organization: I beg to submit to you my report as Treasurer of said organization: Amount received from Secretary of the organization, $106.75 disbursements, none; balance on hand January 1, 1913, $106.75.

Very respectfully submitted.

MRS. E. A. PENDAVIS, Treasurer.

REPORT OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING

The Young People of the Church of God held their one hundred and forty-first consecutive meeting Friday, February 7, 1913, at the home of Bro. and Sister Pate. There were eleven regular members and several vistors present. Dues were collected amounting to $2.25. The Corresponding Secretary reported having sent out five notices and twelve tracts.

Sister Viola Gazeley was leader. She read a very instructive and interesting paper on "A Trip Through the Holy Land," descriptive of various places intimately associated with the life of Jesus. The next meeting will be held at the home of Bro. and Sister Lang on February 28, 1913. Leader, Bro. Clifford Groves. Subject, "The Power of the Gospel" (Rom. 1:16).

HELEN PATE, Recording Secretary.

WANTED

If any have copies of The Restitution for six months or a year back—as far back as the "Editor's Sermon Notes on the Apocalypse" goes—and would like to have them used to good advantage, will they kindly mail them to me? I need them badly. J. J. SCHAUMBURG, Editor Messiah's Advocate, 716 Seventh Avenue, Oakland, Cal.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES

Dear Restitution:

Last week I left you at New Orleans, La., where we had decided to close our meetings. Monday morning, February 2, we boarded the Southern Pacific train for the West, ferrying the Mississippi river. We crossed to the rich bottom land, where truck farming is extensively carried on for the New Orleans market; then we came to the sugar or cane region; then the rice lands, stopping off at Crowley, La., laid over Monday night to visit Bro. J. G. Honpt and wife, with whom we spent a most pleasant afternoon and evening. We had often wished to meet these estimable people, having heard of them many times while living near Sioux City, Iowa. Here is another man of more than ordinary ability, rooted and grounded in the faith of the gospel, forced to bury his talent within the walls of a bank for the support of loved ones, and the cause languishes for reapers, and rich men weep and howl because of their miseries. Like a number of our faithful brethren, Bro. Houpt and wife are bearing patiently life's burdens, looking and longing for the coming of the Master to wipe away all tears from our eyes, when there will be no more sad partings. How powerless we feel when we stand in the presence of grief that none but a parent can feel for an afflicted loved one. But we praise God for the hope of the soon coming of Jesus. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," says the Master.

Tuesday morning we boarded the train at Crowley for Houston, Texas, passing through the rice belt, of which Crowley is the center. We come to the cotton fields of Louisiana, and crossing the Sabine river, which is the State line between Louisiana and Texas, we found ourselves in the oil fields of Texas. We could not help but think of the language of the Psalmist: "How manifold are thy works, O God; in wisdom has thou created them all." Bro. Moses, who formerly lived at Sioux City, Iowa, and who, while there, was associated with Bro. E. R. Howley (whom many of the Iowa brethren remember), met me at the depot at Houston and took me to his home, where we spent the afternoon. After supper we drove out to the suburbs to a place where a meeting had been arranged for. On the way we picked up a young man by the name of Hutchinson, a real genuine Scotch-Irishman. The young man had been to Africa as a missionary for the Presbyterian church, but a year or so ago was brought to Houston to take charge of three small missions in the city. Here he fell in with Bro. Moses, who began to teach him the the gospel, and the young man began to teach what truth he had learned in his mission. He soon learned what it meant to teach the truth; he was simply dropped from the Presbyterian church as a preacher or teacher. He is busy studying the gospel as revealed in the Bible, in the meantime serving as a clerk in a large rooming house to make a living.

After spending a pleasant social evening on Bible topics with the friends who had gathered to met us, Bro. Hutchinson took us home with him, so we could take the boat Wednesday morning for Mount Belview, Texas, the home of Bro. A. Hipsher. We found him well and hearty, exceptionally so for a man of his age, having passed his ninety-fourth birthday January 26th last. We had a splendid visit; spoke twice at the schoolhouse to an excellent audience, taking into consideration the almost impassable roads, dark nights and rainy weather—characteristic weather of this country at this time of the year.

Here we leave you, expecting to return to Houston, and, if able to get a place, hold some meetings and strengthen the brother in his work of spreading the gospel of the kingdom. Brethren, we need your prayers. May God bless this work wherever it is being done, and give wisdom from above, that peace and harmony may prevail among the brotherhood everywhere.

O. J. ALLARD.

KEEP SWEET

Throughout the year, why not keep sweet? No frown ever made a heart glad; no complaint ever made a dark day bright; no bitter word ever lightened a burden or made a rough road smooth; no grumbling ever introduced sunshine into a home. What the world needs is the resolute step, the look of cheer, the smiling countenance, and the kindly word. Keep sweet!

WEAK-KNEED DESIRES

A desire which is not ready to back itself up by sacrifice does not deserve the name. Young people who want to be good, but do not want it enough to surrender their besetting sin; who want to be wise, but not enough to give to study the hours when pleasure invites them; who want to be helpful, but not enough to take any time they could possibly use for themselves, will never realize any of these weak-kneed desires.

Faith, amid the disorders of a sinful life, is like the lamp burning in an ancient tomb.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 17) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

IN HIS LIKENESS

We have this cheering promise given,
Our Lord will soon return from heaven;
Then those that watch for his appearing—
And O this promise is so cheering
Be they awake or be they sleeping,
And o'er their graves the grass is creeping,
Shall come at the call of him who said:
"It is I, be not afraid."

May we, O Lord, when the time shall come
That the saints arrive from out the tomb,
Then may we see thee face to face
And know that we are saved by grace;
May we behold the Crucified,
And know for us he bled and died;
In his likeness we would awake,
Along with the good and great.

"Great," for the love they bore to thee;
"Good," for obeying implicitly;
Then we shall know the story old,
"That half thy love was never told."
Then let us wait for Christ from heaven,
For not till then will crowns be given;
Not till then is the victory won,
When we arise in the likeness
Of God's dear Son.

THE PAPAL PRETENTIONS EXPOSED; OR AN APPEAL TO SCRIPTURE, HISTORY AND FACTS

The following is an address made by Bishop Strassmayer in the Vatican Council at Rome, when the proposition was under discussion to declare the "Papal Infallibility."

Venerable Father and Brethren: It is not without trembling, yet with a conscience free and tranquil before God, who lives and sees me, that I open my mouth in the midst of you in this august assembly. From the time that I have been sitting here with you I have followed with attention the speeches that have been made in the hall, hoping, with great desire, that a ray of light, descending from on high, might permit me to vote the canons of this holy Ecumenical Council with perfect knowledge of the case. Penetrated with the feelings of responsibility, of which God will demand of me an account, I have set myself to study with the most serious attention the writings of the Old and New Testaments; and I have asked these venerable monuments of truth to make known to me if the Holy Pontiff who presides here is truly the successor of St. Peter, Vicar of Jesus Christ, and the infallible Doctor of the Church.

To resolve this grave question I have been obliged to ignore the present state of things and to transport myself in mind, with the evangelical torch in my hand, to the days when there was neither Ultramontanism nor Gallicanism, and in which the church had for doctors St. Paul, St. Peter, St. James and St. John—doctors to whom no one can deny the divine authority without putting in doubt that which the Holy Bible, which is here before me, teaches us, and which the Council of Trent has proclaimed as the rule of faith and morals. I have, then, opened these sacred pages. Well—shall I dare to say it? I have found nothing either near or far which sanctions the opinion of the ultramontanes. And still more, to my great surprise, I find no question in the apostolic days of a Pope successor to St. Peter, and Vicar of Christ, no more than of Mahomet, who did not then exist. You, Monsignor Manning, will say that I blaspheme; you, Monsignor Pie, that I am mad. Now, having read the whole New Testament, I declare before God, with my raised hands to that great crucifix, that I have found no trace of the Papacy as it exists at this moment. Do not refuse me your attention, my venerable brethren, and with your murmuring and interruptions do not justify those who say, like Father Hyacinthe, that the Council is nothing, but that our votes have been from the beginning orderly (in preceding a imposti). If such were the case this august assembly, on which the eyes of the world are turned, would fall into the most shameful discredit. If we wish to make it great we must be free. I thank his Excellency, Monsignor Dupanloup, for the sign of approbation which he makes with his head; that gives me courage, and I go on.

Reading, then, the sacred books with that attention with which the Lord has made me capable, I do not find one single chapter or one little verse in which Jesus Christ gives to St. Peter the mastery over the apostles, his fellow-workers. If Simon, son of Jonas, had been what we believe his Holiness Pius IX. to be today, it is wonderful that he had not said to him: "When I have ascended to my Father, you should all obey Simon Peter as you obey me: I establish him my vicar upon earth." Not only is Christ silent on this point, but so little does he think of giving a head to the church that when he promises to his apostles to rule the twelve tribes of Isreal he promises them twelve thrones, one for each, without saying that among these one shall be higher than the others—which shall belong to Peter. Certainly, if he had wished that it would be so he would have said it.

What do we conclude from this sentence? Logic tells us that Christ did not wish to make St.

Peter the head of the apostolic college. When Christ sent the apostles to conquer the world, to all he gave the promise of the Holy Spirit. Permit me to repeat it: If he had wished to constitute Peter his vicar he would have given him chief command over his spiritual army. Christ—so says the holy scripture—forbad Peter and his colleagues to reign or to exercise lordship, or to have authority over the faithful like the kings of the Gentiles. If St. Peter had been elected Pope, Jesus would not have spoken thus, because, according to tradition, the Papacy holds in its hands the sword, symbolic of spiritual and temporal power.

One thing had surprised me very much. Turning it over in my mind, I said to myself: If Peter had been elected Pope, would his colleagues have been permitted to send him with St. John to Samaria to announce the gospel of the Son of God? What do you think, venerable brethren, if at this moment we permitted ourselves to send his Holiness Pius IX. and his Excellency Monsignor Plantier to the Patriarch of Constantinople to pledge him to put an end to the Eastern schism?

But here is another still more important fact: An Ecumenical Council is assembled at Jerusalem to decide on questions which divide the faithful. Who would have called together this Council if St. Peter had been Pope? St. Peter or his delegates? Who would have formed or promulgated the canon? St. Peter. Well, nothing of this occurred! The apostle assisted at the Council, as all the others did, and it was not he who summed up, but St. James; and when the decrees were promulgated it was in the name of the apostles, the elders and the brethren (Acts 15). Is it thus that we do in our church? The more I examine, O venerable brethren, the more I am convinced that in the scritptures the son of Jonas does not appear to be first. Now, while we teach that the church is built upon St. Peter, St. Paul, whose authority can not be doubted, says in the Epistle to the Ephesians (2:20) it is built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief cornerstone. And the same apostle believes so little in the supremacy of St. Peter that he openly blames those who would say, "We are of Paul, we are of Apollos," as those who say, "We are of Peter." If, therefore, this last apostle had been the vicar of Christ, St. Paul would have taken great care not to censure so violently those who belong to his own colleagues.

The same apostle, counting up the offices of the church, mentions apostles, prophets, evangelists, doctors and pastors. Is it to be believed, my venerable brethren, that St. Paul, the great apostle to the Gentiles, would have forgotten the first of these offices, the Papacy, if the Papacy had been of divine institution. The forgetfulness appeared to me to be as impossible as if an historian of that Council were not to mention one word of his Holiness Pius IX. [Several voices: "Silence," "heretic," "silence!"] Calm yourselves, my brethren; I have not yet finished.

DID JESUS "BRING OVER THE NINE?"

I so often see these expressions: "Yes, Jesus 'brought over' nine of Moses' ten commands;" or, "Nine are incorporated;" or, again, "Now we find Jesus gave us nine of the ten commands as part of his law, and we can preach them," etc.

Now, are these statements true? If I were a sabbatarian, and one should say to me, "Jesus took nine-tenths of Moses' law for his," I would immediately answer, "Then perhaps he took the one remaining tenth," and with reason, too. But did he do this?

The eternal principles of truth are the same in all ages. It is true that it was just as much a sin to kill, to commit adultery, after the first family was born into the earth hundreds of years before Abraham was "called out" to found the nation of Israel, as it was when "God thundered from Mt. Sinai." It will be just as much a sin to do these things in the age of ages—the reign of Christ during the thousand years of judgment and probation—as it was during the reign of the kingdom of Isreal. In every age and legislation these principles underlie all laws.

Now let us directly compare the precepts given by Moses and those of the Lord. We see by faith Jesus upon the mountaintop, surrounded by eager listeners. He opens his mouth and says: "Ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shall not kill, Thou shall not commit adultery, Thou shall not steal." Then methinks I hear some zealous advocate of the law break in upon him with the words: "Yes, Master, they are perfect, converting the soul, and we can not do better than to 'preach' them." Then I see our Lord turn his eye in loving rebuke upon him as he says: "But I say unto you, He that is angry with his brother without a cause has broken the law I give him; he that looks upon a woman with evil desire in his heart has broken my law." Now that man that was guilty before the law of Christ may have kept the law of Moses perfectly.

Do you think Jesus reached back of Calvary and "brought over" nine of Moses' commands to the nation of Israel and gave them to his household? Nay, verily. The priesthood being changed, there is of necessity a change in the law, not in part of it only. Do you think the law that said: "Thou shalt not kill;" "Thou shalt not commit adultery," is the law that is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart? Do you think it is the law that can make man perfect? If it is, then it would not have become a "dead letter," but would be in force from the beginning of time to the end of the kingdom. Those laws which some style "the nine" were not brought over from the Mosaic law, but are a part of that "new command"—"love one another." They are the spirit which gives life.

Now, while the principles of right are the same in every age, the law of Christ which Paul was under covenant to obey, as is every saint who comes into the commonwealth of Isreal, is every command of the Lord (not nine or ten), and has nothing to do whatever to do with the law given by Moses. If a sabbatarian should say to me: "Then God did not give his saints any sabbath," I could reply in no other way than: "Oh, yes, he certainly has," but I surely do not mean that Christ "brought over" the fourth command of the decalogue and changed it in some way, and then gave it as a part of his law.

What is the Sabbath we are to keep? Unless we keep it we fail to get eternal life. See Hebrews

4:9, 10, 11: "There remaineth therefore a keeping of a Sabbath (margin) to the people of God." Verse ten tells us how we keep this rest: by "ceasing from our works," which are the works of sin; and Paul exhorts us to labor (work hard) to enter into that rest, lest we fall and fail to come into possession of the glorious things promised to the faithful. Now, here is a command to the saints to keep a Sabbath, but has it anything to do with the seventh day rest commanded by Moses in the fourth command of the decalogue? Not the slightest union between them. Nor was it given because Moses gave that one—and none of what some call "the nine" have any connection with the decalogue given to Israel as a nation.

Christ never "mixed" law and gospel. In fact, they can't be mixed. They have no affinity for each other and will not adhere.

In the restitution, when Isreal is gathered and united as at the beginning into one nation, there will be one king (lawgiver) over them and the whole world; he will be the Lord Jesus, the one like unto Moses; "like him" in being the one lawgiver of the age.

Moses' law expired by limitation. It became a dead law, for it was nailed to the cross, and will never be resuscitated. We are under bonds to keep the law of Christ, because it is the living law and he is the supreme lawgiver.

LORD'S DAY

Dear Restitution:

In your last paper a writer requests someone to write an article on the subject of "The Lord's Day," and also asks: "Do both forms of speech, 'Day of the Lord' and 'the Lord's Day,' refer to the same day?"

May I venture a reply to these questions? Well, then, here it is—the best I can do. But a reply largely depends upon what is claimed for the language in Rev. 1:10: "I was in the spirit on the Lord's day." If the usual application of this language by the popular world, as referring to what they call "Sunday" be correct, to my mind there is quite a difference in the meaning of the two expressions. "The Lord's day" and "the day of the Lord," as found in several other parts of the Bible. But laying aside the popular and erroneous idea that the "Lord's day" spoken of in Rev. 1:10 is Sunday, and apply the language where it belongs and where the Bible intended to place it, I for one see no difference in the wording of the two expressions. But if Sunday is the "Lord's Day," and he has had fifty-two days in each year for the last two thousand years, methinks the world should be far better than it is at the present time. Under the present state of affairs the devil is the ruling prince and the power of the air, as the scripture states. Sunday has now become Satan's most popular day of the seven. On that day the Lord's work is nearly crowded out, and the devil's voice is loudly heard above God's thought. It is very evident the Lord has not had his day yet, unless it was the day of his suffering and crucifixion. That may have been his day of humiliation, but not his day of exaltation. The day of the Lord or the Lord's day does not occur once in seven days, and will never come until he returns from the far-off country where he has gone to receive his kingly authority from his Father, but we quote Rev. 1:10 as taught by modern teachers: "I was in the spirit on Sunday." Friends, how do you like such reading of scripture?

Friends, listen: After John was banished to the lone isle of Patmos for testifying for his Lord and Master, do you think Sunday was the only day in the week he was "in the spirit" and was inclined to prayer? What blind foolishness. The true thought in the text is this: "I was in the spirit on the Lord's day, or the day of the Lord, and was carried forward in time by that same spirit where I could see, understand and was able to begin a work God had prepared for me to do, as described in the 19th verse of the same chapter." Hear it: "Write the things which are and the things which shall be hereafter." Much of the vision which was then and there revealed to John is now recorded in the Book of Revelation; but then existed only in vision before John; and the day in which those words were to be fulfilled was as much a part of the "vision" as the words uttered.

Now let us, for a short time, consider the Bible teaching as to the day of the Lord or the Lord's day. "Howl ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand. It shall come as a destruction from the Almighty." Behold, the day of the Lord cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land desolate, and he shall destroy the sinners thereof out of it" (Isaiah 13:6, 9). Do such things as described above generally occur on Sunday?

Again: "Behold the day of the Lord cometh, and the spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle, and the city shall be taken and the houses rifled and the women ravished, and half of the city shall go forth into captivity and the residue of the people shall be cut off from the city. Then (at that time) shall the Lord go forth and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the East, * * * and the Lord my God shall come and all his saints with thee" (Zech. 14:1-5).

Is the above a part of any Sunday work? "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up" (2 Peter 3:10). Does Sunday creep in upon the world with any more of a thief-like tread than any of the other six days of the week? I think not. "Being confident of this very thing that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ" (not until next Sunday) (Phil. 1:6). "Holding forth the word of life, that I may rejoice in the day of Christ" (Phil. 2:16). "For yourselves know perfectly (do we?) that the day of the Lord (not Sunday) so cometh as a thief in the night. * * * But ye brethren are not in darkness (some appear to be) that that day shall overtake you as a thief" (it will if we claim Sunday to be the day of the Lord) (1 Thess. 5: 2-4). "Alas, for the day of the Lord is at hand," and as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come" (Joel 1:15). "Blow ye the trumpet in Zion sound an alarm in my holy mountain; let all the inhabitants of the land tremble, for the day of the Lord cometh, for it is nigh at hand. A day of darkness and of gloominess (not to all); a day of clouds and of thick darkness" (Joel 2:1, 2). "The Lord shall utter his voice before his army, for the camp is very great, for he is strong that executeth his word; for the day of the Lord is great and very terrible; and who can abide it" (Joel 2:11). "Now, we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind or be troubled, neither by spirit nor by word, nor by letters as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand. Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day shall not come except (or until) there come a falling away first" (2 Thess. 2:1-3). "The sun shall be turned into darkness and the moon into blood before the great and notable day of the Lord (not Sunday) come" (Acts 2:20). "Hold thy peace at the presence of the Lord God, for the day of the Lord is at hand (not Sunday), for the Lord hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath bid his guests. The great day of the Lord is near and hasteneth greatly, even the force of the day of the Lord: the mighty men shall cry there bitterly. That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress (not much like our present Sunday entertainments), a day of wastness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness, a day of trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities and against the high towers" (Zeph. 1.7, 14-16).

I wonder if I have made my thoughts and position clear to the mind of the reader? If so, and it is God's truth, may he bless the writer in writing and the reader in reading the same.

HOW ARE THE DEAD RAISED UP, AND WITH WHAT BODY DO THEY COME?

How strange it is that intelligent men should deny the resurrection, either directly or indirectly. The two questions at the head of our article indicate that there were some divisions in the church at Corinth. In the 15th chapter of his first letter the apostle corrects these false doctrines, and proves a literal and at the same time a physical resurrection. Let us notice and answer these questions separately.

1. "How are the dead raised up?" This is a scriptural question and must be answered by the scripture. The answer implies to the manner in which the dead shall be raised. This is answered in two ways: by a direct statement, and by incidents of those raised from the dead. In Rom. 8:11 Paul associates our resurrection with that of Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal body by his spirit that dwelleth in you." This answers the question in language that is plain. The dead in Christ are raised by the power of the spirit of God. In Matt. 24:31 it is stated that Jesus will send his angels, and they shall gather his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other. In 1 Thess. 4:13-18 we learn that Jesus himself shall descend from heaven with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. This teaches us that Jesus will, by his personal appearance, raise the dead. When he comes he will have his holy angels with him, who will gather his elect together, as stated in Matt 24:31. Paul states in Cor. 15 that Christ is the first fruits (of the resurrection); afterward they that are Christ's at his coming. This being true, the first fruits and those who follow must have the same kind of resurrection.

In Matt. 28 we learn that an angel descended from heaven and rolled away the stone, and Jesus was raised from the dead. The angel's message was, "He is risen."

In this incident we have a plainly stated truth. The angel descended and Jesus arose. In connection with his resurrection the historian states that there had been a great earthquake, and the keepers became as dead men.

A few incidents in the life of Christ will assist in answering the question as to how the dead are raised up. Jesus and his apostles were traveling, and came to Nain. They met a funeral procession. There was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, who was a widow. When the Lord saw her he had compassion on her and said unto her, Weep not. He came and touched the bier; and they that bore him stood still. And he said, Young man, arise; and he that was dead sat up and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother. This young man was raised by the spirit or power of God through his Son Jesus Christ. The voice of Jesus called him to life again. She said, "I know he shall live again in the resurrection at the last day." But Jesus informed her that her brother shall live again. "Only believe," said he, "and thou shalt see the glory of God." They then went to the tomb. Jesus then said, "Roll away the stone." After praying to the Father he said: "Lazarus, come forth; and he came forth bound with his grave clothes." Jesus said: "Loose him and let him go."

These two incidents teach an important lesson. The resurrection in each was to a physical life, therefore a physical resurrection. Again we read, John 5:28, 29: "The hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of condemnation." They who hear his voice shall receive life. The above scriptures all agree in answering the first question.

2. "With what body do they come?" Paul in this noted chapter teaches and establishes the truth that Jesus was raised from the dead. He gives us more than five hundred witnesses to prove it. He then states: "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then is not Christ risen."

The resurrection of the dead is based upon the resurrection of Christ, which has been proven by a great number of witnesses. Paul begins the answer to this question by stating: "That which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." Also, "Thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat or some other grain. But God has given it a body as it hath pleased him (the body of its nature, Syriac), and to every seed his own body." If it is wheat, it produces wheat; if corn, it produces corn; if weed, it produces weeds. Each has a body of its nature. Each in its decay and reproduction preserves the identity of its kind or body. Paul here teaches that there could be no reproduction without a body to sow. This is not only true in the sowing of seed, but "so also in the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it raised in power." This body is corruptible, dishonorable, weak, made so by sin and the practices of the flesh. It becomes incorruptible, glorious and powerful through the resurrection from among the dead. What a glorious truth this is! No wonder Paul's desire was to attain unto the resurrection of the dead.

The apostle further states that there are celestial (heavenly) bodies and bodies terrestrial (earthly). The celestial bodies are the sun, the moon. the stars; the terrestrial bodies are men, beasts, fishes and birds. We learn in this chapter that there is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. Therefore there will be in the resurrection a sun and two classes of lesser lights. The prophet Malachi says: "But unto you who fear my name shall the sun of righteousnes arise with healing in his wings, and ye shall go forth and grow up as calves of the stall." This sun has been produced, and his brightness has been exhibted on several occasions. When he comes to gather together his saints his glory will reach into the grave and the recesses of the earth, where every one of his has been placed. He will become the supreme ruler in the kingdom of God. "Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in judgment" (Isa. 32:1). The prophet here gives the two classes.

1. The sun.
2. The moon.

Jesus the Christ is by his resurrection constituted the sun or ruling power in the new cosmos or heaven and earth: so will those at his coming through their resurrection be constituted the second planet in the new creation. Jesus said: "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun (natural sun) in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ear to hear, let him hear." What a blessed promise this is!

We have learned in all our scriptural proofs that the righteous will come forth with the same kind of a body that was given to Jesus in his resurrection. Paul says that when Jesus shall come from heaven he will change this vile body, and fashion it like unto his glorious body. Luke writes in Acts 1:3 that Jesus showed himself alive after his passion (death) by many infallible proofs, being seen of them (his apostles) forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. During these days Jesus appeared to them and exhibited his hands and feet, and the spear wound in his side. This was done to prove that he was put to death, but now was alive. His resurrection was attested by "many infallible proofs." On two occasions he appeared while they were in an upper chamber. They were frightened, but he said: "Be not fraid; it is I. Handle me and see."

Jesus said to Nicodemus: "That which is born of the flesh is flesh (a flesh body); that which is born of the spirit is spirit (a spirit body)." There is a natural body (a body of the flesh); there is also a spiritual body (a body of spirit). The natural body is of the earth; the spirit-body is the Lord from heaven.

In conclusion let me say, as did Paul: "As we have borne the image of the earth, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly"—or the Christ—"body." Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." We concludo then from many scriptural proofs that the dead are raised by the power of the spirit of God; also that they come forth spirit-bodies; the identity of the natural bodies being preserved in the spirit-body.

Dear Bereans:

Being requested to write a letter for your February column, and being a new member of your organization, and feeling delporably ignorant concerning the scriptures, the first thought which naturally presents itself to my mind is, What can I write that will be of interest or comfort to any of you? I will only attempt in a few words to tell you that I am with you in spirit, and, like the Bereans of old, I search the scriptures daily, not only to see whether "those things are so," and to learn the will of our heavenly Father, but how to walk righteously before him. I fall far short in many respects, but a Christian's life is a continual warfare. I am fully persuaded if we will strive with all our might to obey God that he will help us to be followers of his dear Son. When we consider with an understanding heart the great blessing which God has bestowed on us in calling us to become his sons and daughters through Christ, it seems to me we can not be thankful enough, or ever tire in trying to worship him in an acceptable manner, which is nothing more, as the scriptures tell us, than our reasonable service. Of course you who have the blessed privilege of assembling yourselves together and hearing the scriptures expounded by able brethren can grow in grace and knowledge much faster than one so completely isolated as I, but I am looking forward to a joyful time when Bro. W. H. Wilson, of Chicago, arrives. I know he will teach me many things in the truth and be such a comfort to us. My mother and myself can hardly wait for him to come.

I am rejoiced to tell you that Miss Schroeder will be baptized into Christ when Bro. Wilson arrives; then there will be three of us joyfully watching for our Lord from heaven.

Hoping to hear "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord," your sister in Christ,

ANNIE B. CARLTON.

EDITORIAL

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Fifth Seal; or Philadelphian State
Text: Rev. 3:7-13; 6:9-13

1. Introductory.

1. Why the horses and their riders and the four beasts do not appear in this seal: (a) The horse had turned "pale," was in the throes of death, in the fourth seal. (b) In the fifth seal the four beasts—the saints—are the subjects of judgment instead of Pagan Rome—are an object to be beheld and not spectators of the judgment. (c) They had lost the unity of the faith. (d) In default of that unity Deity no longer resided in them by his spirit.

2. Symbols of the Fifth Seal Explained.

1. The Altar—Jesus Christ (Ex. 20:24-26; Heb. 13:10-13). 1. Why the saints were slain like Christ crucified: "For the word of God" (Rev. 20:4; Isa. 53:12; Matt. 27:46; 2 Pet. 1:14; Phil. 2:17; 2 Tim. 4:16). 2. "And their testimony" (1 Thess. 1:18, margin).

2. "How Long, O Lord." 1. "O Lord" is "O Despot" in Greek—the only place in the Apocalypse where Despot occurs; in the twenty-two other places it is Kyrios, the word usually rendered "Lord." It occurs here because Diocletian and other emperors assumed titles of divinity (Gib. 1:416, 445).

3. Fellow-Servants and Brethren." 1. Nominal and true believers (Dan. 7:25, 27; Rom. 2:28, 29; Isa. 13:3; 45:1; Rev. 3:9; 12:17; 77).

2. Commentary of the seven messages to the churches in the seven seals (Rev. 3:4, 8, 15; Matt. 5:13).

3. Historical Application.

1. Chronology of the fifth seal; reign of Diocletian.

2. Magnitude of his persecution (Gib. 1:640, 641, 642, 645).

3. Severity of his persecution (Gib. 1:642, 643, 644, 647, 648, 656).

4. "For the word of God" (Gib. 1:642, 645, 646).

5. The Futurist, of course, sneers at history, yet if the prophecies of the Apocalypse are future, as he asserts, he can never know when they are fulfilled except by history. God's appeal to fulfilled prohpecy is found all through the Bible (Deut. 18:21, 22; Isa. 41:21-23; Jer. 28:9; 2 Pet. 1:19, 21).

COMMUNICATIONS

Editor Restitution:

I would like to talk a little to our brothers and sisters scattered over this broad land of ours. I read their letters and wonder where they live, how they look, etc. Some of them we are acquainted with personally, others by their writings. Bro. George Calder we used to know, but it has been all of twenty years or more since he came up from California to Oregon and built our church here. (Bro. Calder, you would not know this place now.) We are very sorry to hear of his affliction, but we know God's grace is sufficient for him, for his faith is strong.

Sister Nannie Osborn is another one we have not heard from in a long time. We should love to hear from her again. Bro. and Sister Woodward traveled over the long road to Oregon twice to bring the word of life to these parts. We do not hear from them very often. Sister Martha Wagoner is another silent party who used to write quite often.

But we are getting acquainted with the new writers. We are glad that there are others to take the place of those that have fallen by the way. I wanted to write this to let the brethren know that I am still in the faith.

Yours for the truth.

M. ALMIRA BROOKS.

ESSENTIALS AND NON-ESSENTIALS

A. E. Bloom

It were amusing at times if not so serious to notice how prone mankind are to shake off responsibility in religious matters by pleading that certain things are not essential. The writer has in his library a book, written by an able author, entitled "The Non-Essentials of Religion," and we find this sentiment cropping out here and there, wherever men deviate from the written word to suit their own notions. After having read the sacred volume from cover to cover, the writer can say that he has never discovered anything therein which in its time and place was non-essential. God does not deal in non-essentials, but does require at the hands of every soul who desires salvation obedience to him in all things. There may be truths that are essential at one time and not at another, as may be freely granted. The ancient law concerning circumcision, and the keeping of the seventh day, as well as the various forms of sacrificial offerings under the law, might be thus considered. They were certainly essential in their time and place, although they are not binding or essential now.

Personal faith in a personal God is certainly essential to salvation, for we read that "without faith it is impossible to please him; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 11:6).

Acceptance of the Lord Jesus Christ as the Divine Son of God and our personal Sovior is certainly essential to our salvation, for it is written: "Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father" (1 John 2:23); and again, "He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father which hath sent him" (John 5:23); and as he is God's representative, and the only one commissioned to be our Savior, we can not ignore, slight or reject him and be safe.

Adherence to the divinely given word is certainly essential to salvation, for Christ declares: "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day; for I have not spoken of myself, but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say and what I should speak" (John 12:48, 49). Jesus also said: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." If that be so, they are certainly essential to eternal life.

Obedience to the commands of God and his Son Jesus Christ must certainly be classed among the essential things. The writer once heard a preacher in Chicago argue against the need of baptism, especially emphasizing the needlessness of immersion. This was his profound argument: "Baptism is not essential to salvation, but it is essential to obedience." The question then resolves itself into this: "Is obedience essential to salvation?" We think all must say it is, for we read distinctly that Jesus Christ "became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him" (Heb. 5:9). Now Jesus certainly conveyed the impression to his followers and disciples that he expected them to observe whatever he commanded them. He said to them in his final instructions before leaving them: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen" (Matt. 28:19, 20).

What right or business anyone has to set aside the ordinance of baptism, as a non-essential for a believer, is more than I have been able to fathom, for there is certainly not a syllable in the instructions of Jesus that conveys such an impression. Jesus has said: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not (no matter how or how many times he is baptized) shall be damned" (Mark 16:16).

The Judge of the earth will do right, beyond all doubt. Let us follow the Divine Example and do right likewise. No believer can afford to slight, ignore or pervert anything that God or Christ has plainly commanded. Let us rather seek in all things to honor our Father and his Son, by a prompt, willing and cheerful obedience in all things. "Whatsoever he saith unto you [find fault with it? Quibble about it? Try to evade it? —No], DO IT." Perhaps we shall find that we have our hands full, if we honestly try to comply with the Lord's wishes as revealed, without spending any time or strength trying to evade any duty on the ground or plea of its being non-essential.

Living a godly, devoted, consecrated Christian life, after we have done all that has been mentioned heretofore, is certainly essential, for it is plainly enjoined: "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord" (Heb. 12:14). We are also informed by the apostle James that "faith without works is dead" (2:17, 26). "Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him is sin" (4:17).

Giving our means to sustain the work of the gospel is certainly an essential thing in the sight of God. Penuriousness, selfishness, covetousness or whatever else may be allowed to keep us from doing our duty in this matter, will certainly not be looked upon with favor by him who has said by the mouth of his servant: "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of thine increase" (Prov. 3:9); and again, by his Son: "Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom" (Luke 6:38). Backslidden Israel, of old, tried to look upon this part of worship as a non-essential, and found that it brought leanness of soul, sorrow of heart, God's disapproval and lean pocket-books. Let us not follow their example.—Selected from Our Hope and revised by the Editor.

HAVE YOU FOUND IT?

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." These are words of the Savior (Matt. 6:33). Now we know by this that God had a kingdom at that time which could be found; and as the New Testament was not written yet, we know we will have to search in the Old. We learn from the first eight books of the Old Testament of God's chosen people Israel. In 1 Samuel eighth chapter we see God set Saul over them as king. Up to this time God ruled over them with judges, God himself being king (8th, 9th, 10th chapters). Here God chose the first king. God's kingdom was known by the name of the kingdom of Israel. Saul became wicked, and God made David king (2 Samuel 5:1-3).

Now a succession of kings ruled on David's throne. Hezekiah was the last. God overturned the throne of David (Eze. 21:27), and said it should not be any more, till he come whose right it is; and I will give it to him.

Now God had made an everlasting promise to David (2 Samuel 7:12-17) that he should have a son to set on his throne forever. Here God speaks of his house and his kingdom. Now before God can do this he will have to regather and establish his people Isreal. And this is what he says he will do (Amos 9:8): "Behold, the eyes of the Lord Jehovah are upon the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; save that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith Jehovah. (It will be well to remember that this house of Jacob includes the twelve tribes of Israel.) For lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Isreal (same house of Jacob) among all the nations, like as grain is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth, but all the sinners of my people (Isreal) shall die by the sword, who say, The evil shall not overtake nor meet us." (Here we see God is preserving his chosen people Isreal till the end of this world.) "In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and close up the breaches thereof; and I will build it as in the day of old, that they (the kingdom rulers) may possess the remnant of Edom and all the nations that are called by my name, saith Jehovah, that doeth this.'

But let us turn to Matt. 1:20-25. Here we find recorded the birth of the promised king of Isreal. Luke 1:32: "He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Most High: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Isa. 9:6: "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to establish it and to uphold it with justice and with righteousness from henceforth even forever. The zeal of Jehovah of hosts will perform this."

Now I know the Gentiles claim this child and try to apply the prophecy to the Gentiles the same as to Israel; but the next verse makes it plain that this is not the case. Besides, we have proved that the child belongs to Israel, and they shall rule over the Gentiles. Salvation is of the Jews (John 4:22). Now the kingdom of Isreal belonged to Israel, and the kingdom of heaven, because it was of heavenly origin and not of men, and the same with the kingdom of God: God is the author of it. So these names are interchangeably used, but they all point to the same kingdom of God. In Acts 1:6 the apostles asked: "Lord, dost thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel? And he said, It is not for you to know times or seasons which the Father has set within his own authority. But ye shall receive power when the Holy Spirit is come upon you." Now here we can see the Holy Spirit is not the kingdom, for the apostles were to receive this power to bring to their memory all things that Jesus had taught them, and he had taught them his kingdom was not of this world. "And ye shall be my witness, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth. And when he had said these things, as they were looking, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight." He went away and did not restore the kingdom to Isreal. Will he never do it? Will God's promise to David fail? Hear what his witnesses under the power of the Holy Spirit say, in Acts 3:19: "Repent ye therefore, and turn again, that your sins may be blotted out, that so there may come seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord; and that he may send the Christ who hath been appointed for you, even Jesus; whom the heavens must receive until the times of restoration of all things, whereof God spake by the mouth of his holy prophets that have been from of old. Ye are the sons of the prophets and of the covenant which God made with your fathers, saying unto Abraham, And in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed. Unto you first God, having raised up his servant, sent him to bless you in turning away every one of you from your iniquities."

Now Israel as a nation rejected salvation through Jesus; they thought it would come to them by the law they were living under; they overlooked the law came to an end when the annointed one came. No doubt they thought God would choose a king from amongst the rulers, for they looked for their nation to be restored to power again, under God's supervision, but did not believe in Jesus, as he seemed to be changing things from the way they were taught by the law. We see this in Paul's care. He thought he was doing God a service when he was struck down on his way to Damascus. Hence the little flock of fisherman were sent to preach Israel (Acts 13: 46). Paul and Barnabas spoke boldly, and said: "It was necessary that the word of God should first be spoken to you. Seeing ye thrust it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name (his kingdom). For so hath the Lord commandetd us, saying, I have set thee for a light of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the uttermost part of the earth. And as the Gentiles heard this they were glad, and glorified the word of God; and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed." And to this agree the words of the prophets; as it is written, After these things I will return, and I will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen, and I will build again the ruins thereof and I will set it up; that the residue of men may seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who maketh these things known from of old. When this takes place the kirgdom of God will be restored to Israel; the people he is now taking out for his name will be raised from the dead; the kingdom in power, ruling the living nations in righteousness, the twelve tribes of fleshly Israel, will be in their own land, have these lands allotted according as God promised their fathers. Amos says (9:13): "Behold, the days come, saith Jehovah, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt, and I will bring back the captivity of my people Israel, and they shall build the waste cities and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be plucked up out of their land, which I have given them, saith Jehovah thy God."

Then will be fulfilled the prophecy of Zacharias, Luke 7:68: "Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel; for he hath visited and wrought redemption for his people, and hath raised up a horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David (as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets that have been from of old), salvation from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us; to show mercy towards our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; the oath which he swore unto Abraham our father, to grant unto us that we, being delivered out of the hand of our enemies, should serve him without fear, in holiness and righteousness, before him all our days."

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Prayer

Dear Bereans:

Let us trust God in all things and keep his commandments. When we have done this we have the assurance that he is ever ready to help us when we come to him in prayer. Our Savior said: "Ask, and it shall be given you" (Matt. 7:7). In Phil. 4:6 we read: "Be careful for nothing; but in everything, my prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God." We may tell our Heavenly Father what we desire, and ask him to give it to us; but we must ask it in the spirit of humility, and remember that what we most desire may be the wrong thing for us; therefore we should always add to our prayer, "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done;" for the true Christian knows the best thing he can hope for is to have God's will done for him, and does not pray for God to let him nave his own way. We must learn what true prayer is, and cast all selfishness out of our prayer. JESSIE CLAYPOOL.

Why Should a Christian Be Glad?

A Christian is one who believes and practices the teachings of our Lord Jesus Christ.

In answering the question, "Why should a Christian be glad?" we will try to find what some of the privileges and rewards of Christians are:

Let us see what the Psalmist says: "Let those that put their trust in thee rejoice; let them ever shout for joy, because thou defendest them; let them also that love thy name be joyful in thee" (Ps. 5:11). "The righteous shall be glad in the Lord, and shall trust in him, and all the upright in heart shall glory" (Ps. 64:10).

By studying the scripture we can see there are two inducements to become a Christian: those which pertain to this life, and those which pertain to a life beyond the grave.

The apostle Paul says: "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life which now is and of that which is to come" (1 Tim. 4:8). Death is a cruel enemy (1 Cor. 15:26). When in youth and health we may for a time forget it, yet sooner or later each in turn must pass through the dark valley, to be laid away in the silent city of the dead, to wait for the resurrection. "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John 11:25). "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). "So Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many, and unto them that look for him will he appear the second time, without sin unto salvation" (Heb. 9:28).

Dear Bereans, let us so live that when our Savior shall appear we may hear the welcome applaud, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

FLORENCE LANING.

The Coming of the Lord

Dear Bereans:

We read that after our Lord's reseurrection he ascended into heaven, which must receive him until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began.

As he ascended into heaven, and while the apostles looked toward heaven as he went up, two men stood by them in white apparel and said: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

This same Jesus, who after his resurrection, walked and talked with his disciples, who took bread, blessed it, brake and gave to them, who ate before them, showed them his hands, his feet and his pierced side, and opened their understanding, is to return. Only a few witnessed his going, and only a few will welcome his return.

In 2 Thess. 4:16, 17 we have a beautiful pen picture of our Lord's return: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

We earnestly wish for his return that we may be numbered with the living, but if death should claim us before he comes, because of the hope of a resurrection we can say with Job: "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though, after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God. When I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another."

He has suffered death, even the death of the Cross; has gone down into the tomb, and has come forth alive forever more. He is our example in all things. Let us not be afraid to go where he has gone. He is the Captain of our salvation, made perfect through sufferings. He has the keys of the grave and of death. He will unlock the grave and set the captive free.

May we ever be found faithful in our Master's service, and may we live such a life that when he comes we may hear the welcome words: "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Your sister in Christ,

OBITUARY

Ella Calder

Ella Calder died at Oleander, California, January 27, 1913, leaving a husband, six children, two brothers and sisters to mourn her loss.

Ella Perry was born in Kansas September 2, 1870. Having lost both parents at an early age, she lived with her uncle, Jasper Balch, through whom she learned the Gospel which she loved so dearly.

She was baptized by Bro. Kimsey at Prescott, Kas., twenty-three years ago, and married Marion Calder February 26, 1893.

She was a faithful wife, a devoted mother, and above all her faith in the soon-coming kingdom and life through Christ was always firm; and through the years of ill health she looked forward to that glad day when sickness, sorrow and death shall be no more.

She sleeps in Jesus, awaiting the "trumpet sound." May memory of her devotion to home and family and her great desire that they might live so as to meet as an unbroken family in the kingdom ever remain with husband and children, helping them to keep close to Jesus, in whom she trusted.

She will be sadly missed in the community, and particularly in the church, but we shall soon greet her beyond the tomb. A large company of relatives and friends gathered to show respect for the dead and sympathy for the living.

Words of comfort and hope were spoken by the writer. E. E. GROAT.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES

Dear Restitution:

Last week I left you at Blackwell, Okla, where I spoke for the brethren twice Sunday, February 16. Our stay in Blackwell was a pleasant one. We met Bro. S. C. Oliver, who came over from Attica on Saturday and visited with us until Tuesday. He seemed to be enjoying the best of health and was just as bashful as ever—in fact, seemed like a boy in his old age. Other circumstances also made us think he was living over his youthful days again, and we therefore had a most enjoyable time. Bro. Forest Chambers came home from Wichita, where he is attending business college, and added to the enjoyment. A couple of Auntie Wince's nieces, the Misses Wald, also live here. Indeed, we had a fine meting and visit.

On our way we passed through Waukomis, stopping with Bro. and Sister Pendarvis a couple of days. We found them strong in the faith, and had a delightful visit with them. At Enid, between our trains, we were entertained by Sister Plumley, a niece of A. W. Darby, of Corvallis, Oregon; and here again we had a few short hours of feasting, not only upon the things of this life, but of the things of the life to come. This place had just gone through the throes of a modern revival, and all were enthusiastic over it, but we just thought that we would not be willing to trade the few whom Bro. Adams succeeded in interesting and baptizing a year ago for all the hundreds who came out under such excitement with zeal but no knowledge.

Thursday we boarded the train for the West. Our first night's ride was through the dry region of Texas to Amorillo. The next day we rode all day in the great American desert in the north of New Mexico and the mountains of northwestern New Mexico. Saturday morning found us in eastern Arizona, and among the mountains. Near noon we ran over the divide at Flagstaff, Arizona, encountering a heavy snowstorm, and finally came to a standstill, stuck in the snow about a mile from the summit. With the help of two engines we were soon on our way again down the other side of the mountain, and after a few hours ride we were out of the snow into the sunshine and warm air, where we could look back to the mountain into the snowstorm. We passed much beautiful scenery, and night found us crossing the Colorado river at Needles, Cal. We rode in the sand and barren regions of southeastern California at night, arriving at San Bernardino in the early morning, where we looked out of the window and beheld for the first time an orange grove, which looked very beautiful to us, but to the practiced eye the opposite, for the oranges had all been frozen, and the crop therefore a failure for the third time in four years, showing us that the tales of untold wealth to be realized in California were rather on the fairy order. The money that has been made here in the last few years has not come from the abundant crops, but from the manipulation of the real estate business. The planting of orange groves upon the dry soil, then establishing a system of irrigation from wells and mountain streams, then selling the groves to unsuspecting people with money at fabulous prices. Think of it: one crop of oranges in four years, after paying $5,000 for one acre of land! This is where the money has been made, not in the products of the country. The people who furnish the money for these enterprises are those who earned it farming in Iowa and Illinois, and thought they would spend their remaining years taking it easy and living in a mild climate. How truly the apostle Paul said, "They that will be rich fall into a snare."

Leaving San Bernardino, we were soon in Pomona, where Bro. W. O. Steffa lived so many years, and where we expect to hold a few meetings, then go to Los Angeles, where our uncle, John Allard, and family live.

More next week. O. J. ALLARD.

In many instances "the Lord's day," "the day of the Lord," "the day of Christ," etc., refer to the second advent of Jesus Christ. No Bible student would think of denying this fact; but we are prone to extremes. Because these Bible phrases refer sometimes and frequently to the return of our present Redeemer is no reason for contracting our vision and starting us on the futile endeavor of trying to make these expressions always allude to this one event. It is an easy matter to get one sense of a Bible word or phrase, and then cull from a concordance all the passages which fit that sense. Such partial views in the handling of sublime Bible subjects are common but imperfect; they are not texts of truth. A reading of the many texts wherein the phrase "the day of the Lord" occurs will reveal the fact that there have been many such days. Wetstein was the first to interpret Rev. 1:10 as referring to the Lord's coming; Zullig, Maitland and Todd followed his leading. The ante-Nicene Fathers speak of Sunday as "the Lord's day" repeatedly; and Mr. Elliott, in Hor. Apoc. 4:367 note points out that the primitive Syriac translates 1 Cor. 11:20, "not as befitteth the day of the Lord we eat and drink," which is a proof of the early usage of calling Sunday "the Lord's day" and indicative also of the scriptural basis upon which that usage is built. The first day of the week was consecrated as a day of worship, alms-giving and the Lord's supper (Acts 20:7; 1 Cor. 16:2; John 20:19-26). The extended sweep of Rev. 1:10 doubtless includes the future and personal manifestation of the Son of Man; but its first and primary application is to the first day of the week. The basic construction of the Apocalypse requires this interpretation. Its visions, seals, trumpets, vials, etc., are grouped in sevens, and naturally begin on the first day of the seven, Sunday, the first day of the week, the birthday of both Christ and the church, the day on which God said, "Let there be light" (Gen. 1:3).

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 11:15), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:28), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

THE SCRIPTURE SEARCHER'S ASSISTANT

M. JOBLIN

Now we enquire, What do the scriptures say of the Doom of the Wicked?

We saw at the outset that the penalty of the law was death, and that death meant a return to dust. That law has neither been repealed nor amended; and if man is to be punished it must be under that law, because no other has been published. Eternal torment has no place in that law.

Mankind are divided into three classes: the just, the unjust, and those who perish without law (Rom. 2:12), being those who do not know the law, and merely die a natural death; that is, die because they are mortal, and are mortal because their parents were. The unjust, or the wicked, are those who sinned knowingly, and deliberately rejected the offer of another life through faith and obedience, and are raised to condemnation (John 5:28, 29), and die the second death (Rev. 20:6, 14). This is a judicial death, an execution. But to the testimony:

They Die: Ezek. 18:4; Rom. 6:16, 23; 7:5; Jas. 1:15, 20.

They shall be Consumed: Ps. 37:20; Ps. 59:13; 104:35; Is. 35; Is. 1:28; Heb. 12; Ps. 49:14.

They shall be Devoured: Ps. 11:6; 21:9; Luke 17:29, 30; Heb. 19:27; Rev. 20:9.

They shall be Destroyed: Ps. 37:38; 92:7; 145:20; Prov. 13:14; Matt. 7:14; Acts 3:24; Rom. 9:22; Phil. 3:19; Ps. 52:5; 1 Thess. 5:3; 2 Thess. 1:9; 1 Tim. 6:9; 2 Pet. 3:16; Rev. 11:18.

They shall be Burned up Root and Branch: Mal. 4:1; Matt. 3:12; 13:30, 40.

Sodom and Gomorrah are given as a pattern of the destruction of the wicked (Jude 6, 7).

Here someone may exclaim, "You don't believe in Everlasting Punishment,

then?" Oh, yes; indeed we do! Everlasting life is to ever live—never die; and an everlasting death is to be forever dead and nevermore to live. Everlastingly deprived of life, is an everlasting punishment. Death is the wages of sin—not torment.

With all these plain declarations before us, no question could have arisen respecting the destiny of the wicked had it not been assumed that they were immortal. But the reader may see that Jesus settles that matter in John 3:36 by saying that they "shall not see life."

We have seen that all men, irrespective of character, are unconscious in death. We have seen, too, that the righteous are not rewarded until raised from the dead for that purpose at the second coming of Christ. Now a few positive declarations respecting the will be in order. If after all the testimony concerning man in death it could be shown that the wicked were in conscious suffering after death we would know that the Bible was not God's book at all, for it would contradict itself. It is in harmony in regard to the time of punishment, as the following scriptures will show:

In 2 Pet. 2:9 it is stated that the unjust are reserved unto the day of judgment to be punished. Is this true? If so, it explains why there is to be a resurrection of that class, as stated in Acts 24:15.

Job 21:30 says the wicked are reserved to the day of destruction—a very significant name for the day of judgment in the light of our previous findings. The judgment is destruction, and hence it is called the day of destruction.

The last clause of this verse says they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath—still another name for the day of judgment, and agrees precisely with John 5:28, 29, where Jesus says they shall hear his voice and come forth out of their graves to a resurrection of condemnation. If already condemned to hell torments, how could Jesus' words be true?

2 Thess. 1:8-10 says that when Christ comes those who know not God and obey not the Gospel will be punished with an everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord.

2 Pet. 3:7 also speaks of the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men.

Mal. 4:1 says the day cometh when all the proud and all that do wickedly shall be burned up—no exceptions here.

These scriptures clearly teach that the wicked are reserved to a "day" when all meet their doom together, and therefore the popular belief of a present hell is a mere figment of the imagination. There is no use for such place, the Bible being true.

Now the question is asked if we believe in Heaven?

Most assuredly we do. We believe the truth about it, and that is, that the heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's (Ps. 115:16), and that he has never offered or promised it to the children of men, but the earth hath he given them.

That it is Jehovah's throne (Is. 66:1; Matt. 5:34).

That no man hath ever ascended there, except the Man Christ Jesus (John 3:13).

That it is the place where Jesus now is, and where he will remain till the times of restitution, when he will come to earth again (Acts 3:20, 21).

What is the truth concerning

Hell?

The original word for hell in the Old Testament is sheol, and as a general thing is properly rendered hell if intended to mean the same as the old Saxon word hell, the covered receptacle of the dead, where the good and bad repose together in a state of unconsciousness; but very improperly and shamefully if intended as a symbol of the traditional hell as the place of conscious torment for the wicked only.

Dr. George Campbell, the learned Presbyterian Commentator, says: "As to the word hades, in my judgment it ought never be rendered hell, at least in the sense wherein that word is now generally understood. In the Old Testament the corresponding word is sheol, which signifies the state of the dead in general, without regard to the goodness or badness of the persons."

Dr. Campbell clearly shows that there would have been no such popular doctrine of hell but for the improper use of this word.

Dr. Kitto says: "Hades means literally that which is in darkness." A careful examination will lead to the conclusion that no sanction to an intermediate state is afforded by the passages where hades occurs, but they denote the grave, both of the righteous and wicked.

Dr. Adam Clark, commenting on Matt. 11:23, says: "Perhaps not meaning here the place of torment, but rather a state of desolation. The original word hades, a not, and ideir, to see, the invisible receptacle of the dead, answering to sheol in Hebrew. The word hell conveys now, an improper meaning of the original word, because hell is only used to signify the place of the damned. But as the original word come from the Anglo-Saxon helan, to cover or hide, the tiling or slating of a house is called heling in some parts of England and the covers of a book by the same name."

These notes, together with the fact that the Revised Version has introduced the original word hades, rather than render it hell, should induce faith in the scriptures which teach that a day of destruction awaits the wicked.

In Mark 9:43; Is. 66:24 and Matt. 10:28 the word rendered hell is from gehenna, which Parkhurst's lexicon says is a corruption of two words: gai, a valley, and hinnom, the owner of it. It was near Jerusalem, where the idolatrous Jews burned their children alive to Moloch. In this valley Sennacherib's army was destroyed (2 Kings 19:35). Here, too, judgment came upon the Assyrians (Is. 30:31-38; 5:24, 25); and when the Lord shall be revealed from heaven the valley of Hinnom will again become the scene of his judgments (Matt. 25:32-41; Zech. 12:2, 4; Joel 2:1, 2). So that not only the manner of, but the place where the destruction of the wicked is to take place, is revealed.

From all this it is evident that for ages a wrong motive to repentance has been set before men, viz.: the fear of hell torments; and this leads us to refer to the

Motive Power of the Gospel, Which is Love

Paul says in 2 Cor. 5:14 that the love of Christ had constrained him and his brethren; and 1 John 3:1; John 3:16, 17, exhibits the love of the Father in the gift of the Son. See also John 15:13; Rom. 3:28, 35; Gal. 5:6; 2 Thess. 2:10; 1 John 4:7, 8, 9, 16; Gal. 5:13; Eph. 2:4; 5:2; 1 John 4:10, 11, 19; Rom. 5:8,; 1 Cor. 2:9.

But what is the truth concerning the Immortality of the Soul?

The truth is that it is false. It is not once mentioned in the Bible, and hence is not a Bible doctrine. Immortality means not mortal, not subject to death. This attribute, underived, is only possessed by God (1 Tim. 6:15, 16), and is therefore called the King Eternal (1 Tim. 1:17). But Christ has brought it to light through the Gospel for us (2 Tim. 1:10); and if we ever attain to it we shall put it on at the resurrection (1 Cor. 15: 53, 54); and if we would then put it on, we must now seek for it by a patient continuance in well doing (Rom. 2:7). The word occurs nowhere else in the scriptures. In no instance is it mentioned as a present possession of man.

By What Means is Man Converted?

Convert means to change; all changes are conversions, but the change of which we now speak is a change of mind, not matter. Mind may be converted from holiness to sin, as well as from sin to holiness—the latter is now under consideration. It is not an arbitrary thing—motives give character to action; conduct not under the influence of motive can neither be pronounced holy nor unholy, without a gross perversion of terms. Inducements to change are offered man in the word of truth; and hence we read in James 1:18: "Of his own will begat he us, by the word of truth;" and is in harmony with Rom. 1:16, where it says the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation; and with Psalm 19:7, where it says the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; and with 2 Timothy 3:15, where it says the "scriptures are able to make thee wise unto salvation;" which proves that the power to induce man to change is in the motives the Gospel exhibits—there is nothing supernatural about this; if it were supernatural, man would not be commanded to repent. See also Psalm 119:9, 11, 16, 130; John 5:39; 15:3; 17:17; Acts 17:11; Eph. 5:26; 2 Peter 1:4, where it says: "Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be made partakers of divine nature." Here is the motive for man to change.

Conditions of Salvation

1. Faith in the Gospel (Rom. 1:16; Mark 16: 15, 16).

2. Repentance toward God (Acts 20:21; Luke 24:47; Acts 2:38).

3. Baptism into the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit for the remission of past sin (Acts 2:38; Matt. 28:19; and thus legally put on Christ, Gal. 3:27).

4. Live a godly life, by observing all things whatsoever God has commanded (Matt. 28:19; Titus 2:12; 2 Tim. 3:12).

5. Wait for God's Son from heaven (2 Thess. 1:10).

What is the truth concerning

God?

There is but one God (not two or three), out of whom are all things—that he dwells in heaven in unapproachable light (1 Cor. 8:6; 1 Tim. 2:5). "For there is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus" (Deut. 6:4; Mark 12:29; Eph. 4:6; Is. 45:5; 1 Tim. 6:16; 1 Kings 8:30, 34, 39; Matt. 6:9; Psalms 128:1).

The Spirit of God is not a personal God distinct from the Father, but the instrumental power of the Father, radiant from his presence, filling universal space (Gen. 1:2; Ps. 139:2-12; Job. 33:4; 26:13; Ps. 104:30; Judges 14:6; Numb. 27:18; Neh. 9:30).

One Lord Jesus

He is not "very God," co-equal and co-eternal with the Father, but was constituted Son of God by preternatural begettal through the power of the Holy Spirit and afterward taken posession of by the Father, through the unmeasured effusion of the Holy Spirit upon him at his baptism in the Jordan, and thus became a manifestation of God through flesh (Luke 1:35; Matt. 1:20; 19:17; Is. 9:6; Acts 2:22; Matt. 3:16; John 3:34; 5:30; Mark 15:34).

THE PAPAL PRETENSIONS EXPOSED; OR AN APPEAL TO SCRIPTURE, HISTORY, AND FACTS

Part 3.

"Bow down, then, to the supremacy of the Pope," you will say to me. Do not run so fast to this conclusion, my venerable brethren, inasmuch as the law of Justinian has written on the face of it, "Of the Order of the Patriarchal See."

Precedent is one thing; the power of jurisdiction is another. For example: supposing that in Florence there was an assembly of all the Bishops of the kingdom, the precedence would be given to the Primate of Florence, as among the Easterners it would be accorded to the Patriarch of Constantinople, and in England to the Archbishop of Canterbury. But neither the first, nor the second, nor the third, could deduce from the position assigned to him a jurisdiction over his colleagues. The importance of the Bishops of Rome proceeded not from a divine power, but from the importance of the city in which they had their seat. Monsignor Darboy is not superior in dignity to the Archbishop of Avingnon; but in spite of that Paris gives him a consideration which he would not have if, instead of having his palace on the banks of the Seine, he had it on that of the Rhone. That which is true in the religious order is the same in civil and political matters: the Perfect of Rome is not more a Perfect than he of Pisa; but, civilly and politically, he has a greater importance.

I have said that from the very first centuries the Patriarch of Rome aspired to the universal government of the church. Unfortunately, he very nearly reached it; but he had not succeeded assuredly in his pretensions, for the Emperor Theodosius II. made a law by which he established that the Patriarch of Constantinople would have the same authority as he of Rome. The Father of the Council of Chalcedon put the Bishops of the new and of the old Rome in the same order on all things, even ecclesiastically. The sixth Council of Carthage forbade all the Bishops to take the title of Prince of the Bishops, or Sovereign Bishop. As for this title of Universal Bishop which the Pope took later, St. Gregory I., believing that his successors would never think of adorning themselves with it, wrote these remarkable words: "None of my predecessors have consented to take this profane name; for when a Patriarch gives himself the name of Universal the title of Patriarch suffers discredit. Far be it, then, from Christians to desire to give to themselves a title that brings discredit on their brethern." The words of St. Gregory are directed to his colleagues of Constantinople, who pretended to the primacy of the church. Pope Pelagis II. calls John, Bishop of Constantinople, who aspired to the High Priesthood, "impious and profane." "Do not care," he said, "for the title of Universal, which John has usurped illegally." "Let none of the Patriarch take this profane name; for what misfortunes may we not expect if among the priests such elements arise? They would get what has been foretold for them—he is the king of the sons of pride."

These authorities, and I might add a hundred more of equal value, do they not prove with a clearness equal to the splendors of the sun at midday the first bishops of Rome were not till much later recognized as Universal Bishops and heads of the church? And, on the other hand, who does not know from the year 325, in which the first Council of Nice was held, down to 580, the year of the second Ecumenical Council of Constantinople, among more than 1109 Bishops who assisted at the six First General Councils there were not more than nineteen western Bishops? Who does not know that the Councils were convoked by the Emperor without informing, and sometimes against the wish of the Bishop of Rome? That Hosius, bishop of Cordova, presided at the First Council of Nice, and edited the canons of it? The same Hosius presided afterward at the Council of Sardica, excluding the legates of Julius, bishop of Rome.

I come now to speak of the great argument which you mentioned before—to establish the Primacy of the Bishop of Rome by the rock (pietra). If this be true, the dispute would be at an end; but our forefathers—and they certainly knew something—did not think of it as we do. St. Cyril, in his fourth book of the Trinity, says: "I believe that by the rock you must understand the unshaken faith of the Apostles." St. Hilary, Bishop of Porceirs, in his second book on the Trinity, says: "The rock (pietra) is the blessed and only rock of the faith confessed by the mouth of St. Peter;" and in the sixth book of the Trinity he says: "It is on this rock of the confession of faith that the church is built." "God," says St. Jerome, in the sixth book of St. Matthew, "has founded his church on this rock, and it is from this rock that the apostle Peter has been named." After him St. Chrysostom says, in his fifty-third homily on St. Matthew: "'On this rock I will build my church'—that is, on the faith of the confession. Now, what was the confession of the apostle?' Here it is: 'Thou are the Christ, the Son of the living God.'" Ambrose, the holy Archbishop of Milan, St. Basil, of Silicia, and the Fathers of the Council of Chalcedon, teach exactly the same thing.

Of all the doctors of Christian antiquity, St. Augustine occupies one of the first places for knowledge and holiness. Listen, then, to what he writes in his second treatise on the first Epistle of St. John: "What do the words mean, 'I will build my church on this rock?' On this faith, on that which said, 'Thou are the Christ, the Son of the living God.'" In his hundred and twenty-fourth treatise on St. John we find this most significant phrase: "On this rock which thou hast confessed 'I will build my church,' since Christ was the rock." The great Bishop believed so little that the church was built on St. Peter that he said to his people in his thirteenth sermon: "Thou art Peter, and on this rock (pietra), which thou hast confessed, on this rock which thou hast known, saying, 'Thou are the Christ, the Son of the living God,' I will build my church above myself, who am the Son of the living God; will build it on me, and not me on thee."

That which St. Augustine thought upon this celebrated passage was the opinion of all Christendom in his time. Therefore, to resume, I establish:

1. That Jesus has given to his apostles the same power that he gave to St. Peter.

2. That the apostles never recognized in St. Peter the Vicar of Jesus Christ and the infallible doctor of the church.

3. That St. Peter never thought of being Pope, and never acted as if he were Pope.

4. That the Councils of the first four centuries, while they recognized the high position which the Bishop of Rome occupied in the church on account of Rome, only accorded to him a prominence of honor—never of power or of jurisdiction.

5. That the holy fathers, in the famous passage, "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church," never understood that the church was built on Peter (super Petrum), but on the rock (super Petram); that is, on the confession of the faith of the apostle.

I conclude victoriously, with history, with reason, with logic, with good sense and with a Christian conscience, that Jesus Christ did not confer any supremacy on St. Peter, and that the Bishop of Rome did not become sovereign of the church, but only by confiscation, one by one, all the rights of Episcopate. [Voices: "Silence, impudent Protestant, silence!"]

A good example is never without fruit. Abram went out of the heathen land from which God had called him, and a number of people went with him. No one can start in the right direction without influencing some friend or neighbor.

"WELL ENOUGH"

The good may cheat us out of the best. "Well enough" is the sentence of doom for aspiration. We are to be pitied if we have come to the point where we are satisfied, if something higher, something better, is not continually tempting us ahead.

THE POWER OF THE GOSPEL

Our text is found in the first chapter of the Epistle to the Romans and the 16th verse: "For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

Before taking up the subject proper I wish to dwell for a moment on the first sentence of this verse: "For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ." The Revised Version reads: "For I am not ashamed of the Gospel," leaving out the words "of Christ." Webster tells us that the meaning of the word "Gospel" is glad tidings. Then the Gospel must be the glad tidings or good news that Jesus preached. In Matt. 4:33 we read: "And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogue and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." It is this gospel that Paul was not ashamed of, the glad tidings, the teachings of Christ.

"For it is the power of God unto salvation." It is not enough to believe that there is a God, and that Jesus Christ is his Son; we must believe the teachings of his Son and do as he commands.

The word "power" found in our text is translated from the Greek word Dunamis. This word has been translated into the English in several different ways: power, mighty, ability, virtue, miracle, strength, etc. Since the translation of the Bible into the King James version a new word has come into use, originating from this Greek word Dunamis. From it we have derived our word "dynamite." Therefore we can use this expression, "The Gospel is the dynamite of God unto salvation." Dynamite is a powerful explosive compound, much used in mining, breaking up old metal in torpedoes, etc. When used discretly its value is inestimable, but when handled carelessly or indifferently it is exceedingly dangerous and may cause great destruction and loss of life. So it is with the Gospel: if we heed its teachings it will be the greatest of blessings to us; it is all-powerful, able to bless us abundantly in the present life, and to give us eternal life in the kingdom of God.

Should we fall under the enemy, death, our belief in the Gospel will cause the bands of the grave to burst asunder and bring us forth from our dusty beds with endless life. But if the Gospel is disbelieved or discarded it will prove disastrous. All those who have once heard the Gospel and do not obey, there is nothing left but a fearful looking forward to judgment. 'Tis a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. In 2 Thessalonians we read (1:8, 9): "And to you who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and that obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; we shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power."

Brothers and sisters, when this Gospel, the power, the dynamite of God, finishes its work at the end of the days, the result will be grand and awful. The dead will be raised, the living changed, the wicked punished, the earth restored to its Edenic beauty, long life and good days given to the inhabitants. The curse that is now on the earth will be removed; even the beasts of the field will be benefited thereby; the ferocious animals becoming tame, the lion will lie down with the lamb; and instead of the wild animals preying on each other, they will eat straw like the ox. Yes, the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation; it is the salvation of mankind, the salvation of the world. God gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish, but have everlasting life.

What does it mean to believe on a person? If we say we believe in President Wilson we have faith in him; we believe in his policy, in his teachings. So if we believe in the Lord Jesus Christ we must believe in his teachings. It is the will of God that we must believe in the Gospel of the kingdom which Jesus taught in order to be saved.

"I AM DOING A GREAT WORK"

No man can do the work of the Lord without provoking the wrath of the devil, who will find various ways to manifest his indignation either in abusing the workers or in hindering the work. When the godly Nehemiah, broken-hearted over the desolations of Jerusalem, had poured out his soul in prayer to God, and had received commission from the Persian king to go and rebuild the city of his fathers; after going out secretly in the darkness and inspecting the ruins of the beloved city, and settling his plans and deciding what to do without consulting the Jewish priests, rulers or workmen, he then called the people together, and told them of his commission and his errand. The people were encouraged by his cheering words, and said: "Arise, and build," and strengthened his hands for the work. But there were plenty to make objections and find fault. Sanballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the servant, and Ammonite, and Gashmu the Arabian, heard of it, and laughed them to scorn, derided their endeavors, and accused them of rebelling against the king, Nehemiah II. The servant of God wasted few words on these men, but when he saw the oppresssions of the nobles of Isreal, and the wrongs they inflicted on their brethren, he said: "I consulted with myself, and I rebuked the nobles and the rulers" (Neh. 5:7). He continued in his self-sacrificing labors until he accomplished the work that was before him. But his enemies could not let him alone. The wall was going up, and they were going down. So they sent word to him to meet them in a village on the plains of Ono, thinking to waylay him and do him mischief. But he, steadfast to his purpose, said: "I am doing a great work, so that I can not come down." Four times they repeated their request, and at length, the fifth time, Sanballat sent a servant with an open letter in his hand—in itself a studied insult —which contained what lies Gashmu had reported, and Sanballat had gathered up, accusing Nehemiah of rebellion and wrong-doing; sending the vile slanders in an open letter, that all who chose might read them, and thus seeking to disgrace him and hinder the work of God.

It was in vain. The servant of God had work to do for his Master; and he had little time to defend his character or protect his reputation. Gashmu might invent lies, Sanballat might write them down and send his servants to peddle them, but he could not afford to chase the lies or parley with the liars. He was about a greater work. Night and day the people were toiling to erect the walls. With trowel in hand, and sword girded on, they builded the walls; while by their leader's side, as he superintended and directed the whole, stood the trumpeter, ready to summon all the people to his aid, if any assailant should presume to attack them.

The success which crowned the efforts of this man of God, and made his name memorable to all ages among the servants of the Most High, was largely attributable to his steadfast determination to pursue his own appointed work. The good hand of God was with him; his commission bore the royal seal; his work was necessary and important; he had personally inspected the ground and knew what he was about, and, taking counsel "with himself," he persisted in his labors. He did not propose to go into partnership with Tobiah or to consult with Sanballat, or to be turned from his work by the lies which Gashmu told, and Sanballat wrote down, and peddled in his open letter through the country. He had better business. He must finish the great work he had undertaken, and accomplish that which God had given him to do.

His example is well worthy of imitation. If Satan allows us to work for God unhindered it is because our work is of no consequence. If we are really accomplishing anything in the service of God we may expect hindrances and opposition. But neither the entreaties of Sanballat, nor the lies of Gashmu, should be allowed for one moment to restrain our zeal or interrupt our work. We must press forward. The time is short; the work is great; the desolations of Zion are grievous to behold; and the voice of God is calling to us to arise and build, and accomplish the work that has been given to us to do. Happy are they who, with sword and trowel in hand, begin the sacred toil; thrice happy they who, when their days of toil are past, can say to the great Master: "I have finished the work thou gavest me to do."—H. L. Hastings.

A CONFESSION

I am the greatest criminal in history.

I have killed more men than have fallen in all the wars of the world.

I have made millions of homes unhappy.

I have transformed many ambitious youths into hopeless parasites.

I make rough the downward path for countless millions.

I destroy the weak and weaken the strong.

I make the wise man a fool and trample the fool into his folly.

The abandoned wife knows me; the hungry children know me; the parents, whose child has bowed their heads in sorrow, know me.

I live by the consent of the Christian voters.

I am ALCOHOL.—Clipping sent by Bro. Knapp.

God's promises are fulfilled in his own time. Sometimes the faith of the righteous is tested, and the presumption of the wrongdoers strengthened by a long waiting.

EDITORIAL

I have too often departed from God; but—praised be his name!—I have never separated myself from him.

God sees all. After years of accumulated suffering, can I wish today that I had never suffered?

I give myself up to God as one who knows that in justice God owes him nothing.

In this world of change naught which comes stays and naught which goes is lost.

One's personal enjoyment is a very small thing, but one's personal happiness is a very important thing. Those only are happy who have their minds fixed on some object rather than on their own happiness.

RESPONSIBILITY OF THE WORLD

There is no scripture which gives man the option of rejecting the truth and its claims. Some of us are apt at times to speak apologetically of the world's disobedient ways, as if it were permissible for the world (in view of its hopeless state) to make the most of this life by adopting courses contrary to Christ's plainly revealed will. This idea is very baneful. The command to all who are brought within the sound of the truth is —"Repent" (Acts 17:30), a command which can only be ignored at the peril of more or less punishment. The world, though not within the bonds of the covenant, is not without responsibility. The moral corruption that prevails is not by God's arrangement (he would have every man to be saved), but is the result of man's obstinate perversity. The world is very disobedient — its "wickedness is great" (Joel 3:13). God's goodness and man's iniquity are manifest in the widespread dissemination of the Bible and the trifling attention that it receives. A day of reckoning is at hand. Christ will not punish unjustly, but terribly punish he will. The dreadfulness of the retributive and corrective measures to be employed are forcibly expressed in such terms as "in flaming fire taking vengeance," "shalt dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel," "by fire and by his sword will the Lord plead with all flesh." Let us bear these truths in mind and they will help us to withstand the world's lawless ways, and also to be more earnest in our efforts to reform the ungodly.

"ACHUZAH"

From a Jewish exchange we note this week that practical Zionist work has begun at Cleveland among the Jews. Those who intend to emigrate to Palestine have organized the Achuzah Society. This is the sixth similar organization in the United States—two in St. Louis, one in Chicago and one in New York.

The Achuzah can best be described as a savings bank for the Zionists who intend to colonize in Palestine and make that country their home. Shares are bought by such members, seven of them at $200 each, making a total of $1400, payable in ten annual installments. This sum will secure seventy dunams of land, four dunams being one acre, the colonist will be entitled to seventeen and one-half acres of land, which during the ten years will be thoroughly cultivated and ready to be sown upon the arrival of the colonist. Eleven members of the Cleveland Achuzah have already paid $123. Among these is Treasurer Kaplan, who has spent many years in San Juan and Ponce, Porto Rico, but is now a resident of Cleveland.

"I am interested in real estate here," said Mr. Kaplan, "and in course of ten years I expect to dispose of most of my business, take up my land in Palestine and go into the business of raising tropical fruit. I expect to stay there the rest of my life and make the Holy Land my home."

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Sixth Seal; or Laodicean State.
Text: Rev. 3:14-22; 6:12-16.

1. Symbols of the Sixth Seal Explained.

1. The Earthquake. 1. There are only three literal earthquakes recorded in the Bible (1 Kings 19:11; Amos 1:1; Matt. 27:51, 52; Zach. 14:5). 2. Symbolic earthquakes represent popular convulsions (Jer. 10:2; Deut. 31:28-30; 32:1, 2; Isa. 1:2, 10; Gen. 6:11; Hag. 2:6, 7; Heb. 12:26-28; Isa. 24:19-23).

2. The Darkening of the Sun. 1. The heavenly bodies are expressive of gradations of power (Gen. 1:14, 16, 17; 1 Cor. 15; Gen. 37:9, 10; Isa. 60:20; Jer. 15:9; Joel 2:10; Isa. 24:23; 13:10; Ezek. 32:7, 8; Amos 8:9; Rev. 12).

3. Discoloration of the Moon (Gen. 37:9, 19; Isa. 24:23).

4. Falling of the Stars (Isa. 34:3, 4, 5; Dan. 8:10; Rev. 8:10; 9:1; Dan. 12:3; 1 Cor. 15:41, 42).

5. Removal of Every Mountain and Island (Jer. 51:24, 25; Dan. 2:35; Isa. 2:2).

6. The Universal Consternation (verses 15-17)

2. Historical Application.

1. The sixth seal opened A. D. 311-12, and closed A. D. 321, a period of twelve years. It opened with Rome subject to four emperors: Licinius, Maximin, Maxentius and Constantine; and Paganism the religion of the State. It closed with the battle of Chrysopolis, the result of which was the reunion of the empire under Constantine as sole emperor and the enthronement of Christianity. As the sixth seal is a prophetic summary of what is more particularly related in the 12th chapter of Revelations, we follow the order of the Apocalypse and defer the details of the "Historical Application" until we arrive at that chapter.

2. However, let us point out the remarkable appropriateness of the sun, moon and stars as the symbols of the imperiality of Rome (Gib. 1:199, 200; 2:162).

TO THE BRETHREN SCATTERED ABROAD

The brethren of Los Angeles and vicinity invite you to join them in a ten-day meeting to be held at Mineral Park, Los Angeles, from May 3d to May 11th, inclusive. Arrangements are being made to have several speakers of the one faith.

If you desire to camp on the grounds in tent or cottage, bring blankets or comforts and towels with you.

Meals will be furnished for a nominal sum. Furnished rooms can be had near the grounds at reasonable rates.

Let us not forsake the assembling of ourselves together. The day of the Lord is at hand; will we be able to stand? "Then they that feared the Lord spake one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it," and a book of remembrance was kept. Come out and speak with us. Let us have a feast in the Lord, that we may gain spiritual strength for the last days, and, having done all to stand.

Program later.

THE PAPAL POWER

Through the ages the Papacy had evolved to themselves many gods. They were not satisfied with the idea which had evolved from Egypt of a triune God. By the time of the so-called middle ages they had many gods to whom they prayed (or saints, so-called). The spirit had spoken through Paul (1 Tim. 4:1): "In the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils;" or, more correctly, demons, for the word here translated "devils" is not diabolis, but demons. These demons were supposed to be the departed spirits of their forefathers, which they now devoutly worshiped. A power was raised up in opposition to this idolatry in Mohammedanism. It originated among the Arabs. The following statements are taken from the American Encyclopedia:

"The Arabs claim descent from Kan Tam, or Jok Tam, or the posterity of Noah by Shem and through Ishmael. Ishmael, according to their tradition, was prince and first high priest of Mecca, and his posterity ruled the city for fourteen generations."

The man who originated this new religion, but into whose history we can not enter at this time, was

"Mahomet. He belonged to the distinguished tribe of Har Eish, and he claimed to be the direct descendant from Abraham by his son Ishmael; but his parents were poor, and they died when he was a child. He was born either 570 or 571 of our era. He died in June, 632. He was succeeded by Abu-Bekr, a relative, and then by Omar, his father's cousin. Omar's forces compelled Jerusalem to capitulate to the Mahomedan power in A.D. 637. It was the Mohomedan power taking possession of Palestine that led to the Crusades, which ultimately led to the partial undoing of the Papal power. Their great battlecry was, "There is but one God." It is not the Arabian power now, however, which is the predominating one in the Mohammedan world, but the Turkish power, of whose downfall, like the Papal power, we are now witnesses. The following brief statements are in harmony with all the history I have been able to consult in regard to their origin:

"The Turks derive their origin from the Avares, a tribe of the Huns, who dwelt in Greater Tartary till forced by another tribe of Huns from the South to abandon their country. They divided into several bodies, each of which, taking a different direction, settled, some around the Caspian sea, some in Pannonia, and others in Asia Minor. In the reign of Orchan or Othman, their first Sultan, the Turks crossed the Hellespont on rafts, took Gallipolis, the key to Europe, penetrated into Thrace, and laid the foundation of the Turkish power in Europe. The Turks took Constantinople in 1453 A. D., much to the consternation of the Papal power. Long before this the Turks had adopted the Mohammedan religion, originated, as I have stated, among the Arabs. They were known in the middle ages as the Saracens, and as a rule were not so bloodthirsty as the Turks who conquered them. The first crusade against the Saracens was in 1095 A. D. It was aroused and led by Peter the Hermit. He induced all Europe to follow him and recover the holy sepulchre from the infidels. He took some 80,000 people with him, and about 200,000 followed after him. Not more than one-third reached the scene of action. Men, women and children died on the road by the thousands. It is calculated that some 350,000 Europeans perished. Some four or five of these crusades were hurled at the Saracens, and latterly at the Turks, their successors. The last one was started in 1218 A. D. This is what the Rev. Royal Robins has to say about it:

"This crusade was led by Louis, king of France. He was canonized as a saint (from him, no doubt, we get St. Louis). Among the causes of the decline and cessation of the fanatical spirit of Europe may be enumerated the decrease of the moral influence of the popes, and the increase of their tyranny, which the people were loath to bear. The avarice of the popes and priests in converting to their own use the funds which were raised to support the holy wars, and the consequent unwillingness of the people to be taxed, the scandal which was cast on the crusades when many of the soldiers of the cross were diverted from their religious purposes to promote the secular objects of the court of Rome, and, most of all, the increasing conviction that no lasting conquest of Palestine could be made by the sovereigns of Europe."

As Robins says, by the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries the nations were beginning to waken under the crushing, tyrannical, greedy, immoral power of the Papacy, and began to struggle to throw off some of its despotism. For instance, Edward I. of England, one of the strong characters of history, passed his famous Mortmain statute in 1279, which arrested for some time the progress of the Papal greed in England. But six years before this statute was passed the Papal power took out of England what was equal to as the most haughty of the popes, issued a bull prohibiting all princes in all countries laying taxes on the clergy without his consent. Edward held a parliament in 1296 A. D., and demanded a twelfth of the movables of the clergy. They refused. Edward gave them until the next parliament in January, 1297, to consider it. They still refused. The king then outlawed them in a body and ordered all the sheriffs in England to seize all the lay fees of the clergy, secular as well as regular, with all their goods and chattels, and retain them till they had further orders from him. This was a state of things altogether unheard of before, and put the whole Papal forces in consternation. The archbishop himself was stripped of everything and was on the verge of starvation, and was glad to submit and pay his fifth to recover the rest of his property. The Papacy had rigidly kept the scriptures from the reach of the people. Pope Pius IV. had laid down this dogma, which is still adhered to by the Papacy:

"I admit the holy scriptures according to the sense which our Holy Mother Church has held and does hold, to which it belongs, to judge of the true sense and interpretation."

In other words, they claim and exercise the power over all of their dupes by making the scriptures say just exactly what suits them; and up to the fourteenth century the unlearned had no way of knowing what the scriptures themselves did say. Toward the end of that century Wickliff, by his translation of the scriptures from the Vulgate or Latin into English, gave the uneducated an opportunity of knowing what the scriptures taught. Then commenced more grievous trouble for the Papal power, and she met it with rage and fury, using every means in her power to crush all knowledge of the scriptures out of existence and destroy all those who had accepted its teachings. After Wickliff's translation of the scriptures was published at the end of the fourteenth century a very large number of people in England accepted its teachings and were known as the Lollards, and latterly were persecuted in the most barbarous manner. The scriptures were burned wherever they could be found, and those who had them were burned as well; but this did not stop the rising against the Papal power, for the knowledge of the scriptures through Wickliff's translation spread to Bohemia, Italy and Germany and aroused many opponents to the Papal power, both among the learned and the unlearned. And although tremendous efforts were made to destroy the whole thing, they never succeeded completely in doing so, but the knowledge lingered in a smoldering condition, while every effort was being made to extinguish it, till the time of Luther, in the sixteenth century, when the world got ready to kindle the fire that was going to burn away many of the rotten props that supported the monstrous pretensions of the Papal power.

PARADISE

What is paradise? A place of bliss. Greek, paradeis'as. Derived from the Persian, and denoting a large enclosed park for the preservation of game. Hebrew, Pardes: A park, a place planted with trees. French, Paradis: A paradise. Latin, paradisus: A pleasure ground. The garden of Eden; any region or state of supreme felicity; familiarly, a fruitful, pleasant and healthful valley or garden.

Where is it located? On this earth. Is it in existence today? The paradise of God is not. Why? Because it is to be restored when the tree of life is in the midst of the street of it, and when the river of life proceeds out of the throne of God and of the Lamb (Rev. 22:12).

Who is to live in it? The overcomer and those that do his commandments. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God (Rev. 2:7). Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life (Rev. 22:14).

The first paradise was the garden of Eden, and the tree of life in the midst of it (Gen. 2:9). God created man and put him in the garden, to dress it and to keep it, and gave him the privilege of eating of all the fruit except the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. If he ate of that he should die. He ate of that fruit, and God said the man is become as one of us to know good and evil. So he drove him out of the garden of Eden and guarded the tree of life. Wisdom is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her in this life, for it leads one to overcome the evil of this life and have right in the future; to the tree of life in the paradise of God (Prov. 3:18). The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life, and the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth (Prov. 11:30). Hope deferred maketh the heart sick; but when the desire cometh it is a tree of life (Prov. 13:12). A wholesome tongue is a tree of life (Prov. 15:4). It takes wisdom, a desire and a wholesome tongue to learn the way of life everlasting.

Then obedience and baptism into the Christ causes one to have their name recorded in the Book of Life; and these recorded ones are to be raised at the resurrection, and they will have their eternal home in the paradise of God restored. He that overcometh shall inherit those things, and I will be his God and he shall be my son (Rev. 21:7).

All the record we have of paradise is here on earth. Also God's kingdom will be restored on earth at the resurrection of the just, when Christ and all his holy angels come to raise the dead and restore the kingdom to Israel. Then Christ will come into paradise, and the promsie made to the thief will then be fullilled. Don't be in a hurry to reward the thief before his time. All that are worthy will get their reward at the resurrection. We believe the time is very near.

E. W. KNAPP.

HOW DOES GOD SEE AND FIND OUT THINGS?

Some time ago this question was asked by J. J. Brown in "Student," published by R. S. Weir, Toronto, Ont. I regard this as a childish question. God has neither to see or hear to find out things. He has no occasion; he knows. From the eternity of the past to the eterntiy of the future, all things are present with him. "He calleth those things which be not as though they were," hence God knows things, not sees them. "God is unsearchable, and his ways past finding out" (Rom.s 11: 33). It's folly to try. "A man can not find out the works of God" (Eccl. 8:17); then it's not wise to try. The foolish say, "How can God know? Can he judge through the dark cloud?" (Ps. 73: 11). "No man can find out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end" (Eccl. 3:11). "God knoweth the thoughts of men." Jesus knew the thoughts of his disciples, he did not see them. The senses to see and hear were given to us poor mortals, that we might learn to know things.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES

Dear Restitution:

Last week we left you at Zelzah, where my uncle, John Allard, lives. I held services there Sunday, March 2nd, I giving a sermon at 11 a. m. and Bro. Kimball giving a lesson from his chart in the evening. Good interest was manifested in both services. Bro. Kimball and I returned to South Pasadena on Monday morning, and after attending to some business matters connected with his mining and oil operations we prepared to make a start in the work of getting the brethren together for effectual work on the coast.

Boarding the Santa Ana car, we rode about twenty miles, and got off at Buaro, and walked about a mile to the home of Bro. and Sister Bailie, reaching there a little after noon, consequently found them at the dinner table. Sister Bailie immediately prepared a place for us, and then we began to understand the reason for Bro. Kimball's sprinting stunt from the car to their home. After visiting for a few hours we prepared to go to Santa Ana, to stay over night with Bro. C. E. Hatch, but Sister Bailie learned soon after we left for the carline that Bro. Hatch had gone to San Diego on business. So then she started to sprint for the crossing, and succeeded in attracting our attention in time to go back and remain with them over night, and a fine visit we had. The next morning Sister Bailie and daughter Inez hitched up the buggy and took us to Bro. Dressers', where we had another fine visit and an excellent dinner. At noon Bro. Hatch came in for a few minutes from his work, and soon after Sister Hatch drove into the yard. After a few hours' visit Sister Hatch took Bro. Kimball and went home, and Bro. Dresser hitched up and took me around the sity of Santa Ana, a beautiful place, situated amid large walnut and orange groves, and landed us at Bro. Hatch's home, where we stayed over night and had a most enjoyable visit. The next morning we returned to Pasadena. After making arrangements to hold a meeting Sunday at Mineral Park, near South Pasadena, at 11 a. m. and 2 p. m. About 10:30 whom should we see but Sister Call, of Long Beach, coming up the walk. It seemed good indeed to see her. Men soon began to come in from all sides; Bro. and Sister Hatch, Bro. and Sister Dresser, and Sister Barlie and daughter, also a young sister (Richardson) from Michigan, who is teaching school here; also Miss Hicklin and a Mrs. Holcomb, sister to Sister Hannah Barber, of Oklahoma; also Sister Spencer, whose husband was formerly a Christian missionary.

We had two very enjoyable meetings and visits. The brethren decided to hold a week's meeting in May, probably the first or second week. Notice will be given in due season. Brethren in southern California, please send your names at once to Bro. L. V. Kimball, 125 Pasadero, Monterey Avenue, South Pasadena, Cal., stating if you will help to make this meeting a success by attending.

Do you not care for the faith of the Gospel, the faith once given to the saints, the precious faith? If so, then heed the admonition of the apostle to not forsake the assembling of ourselves together, and so much the more as you see the day approaching. Show by your works that your faith is not dead, but alive unto God.

This leaves us preparing to leave for Corvallis, Oregon, where we go to hold a series of meetings and visit brethren along the way, and return in time for the May meeting.

O. J. ALLARD.

EVANGELISTIC REPORT

The Ohio Evangelist reports as follows:

Time spent in February, 1913, largely at the Blessed Hope Mission in Elyria.

Besides the sermons preached, many papers and tracts were distributed, calls were made, and correspondence answered.

We believe that much may be done by calling among the people. No record has been kept of the exact number of calls made each day. Today we called at 113 places.

Financial report follows:

Expenses

Salary	$60.00
Car fare	3.95
Meals	2.00
Postage	.50

Receipts

Pulpits supplied	$24.00
Balance due	$42.45

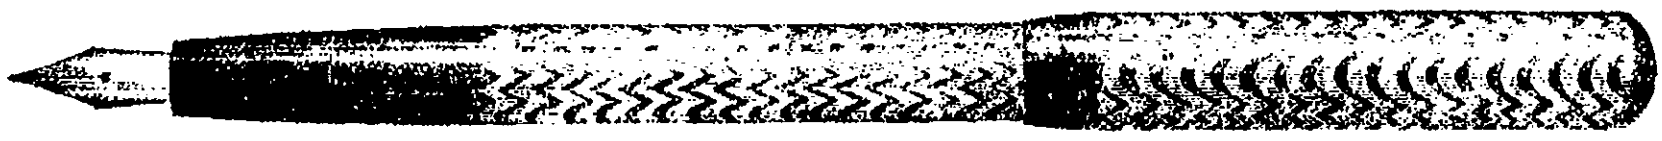
THIRD AWARD—For the third largest list we will give an extra large 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN, barrel covered with silver filigree work.

SPECIAL AWARDS—Besides these first three awards, we will give to everyone who sends in at least one new subscriber a handsome and useful POCKET MEMORANDUM BOOK.

To everyone who sends in at least two new subscribers a 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN like cut, or to everyone who sends in at least three new subscribers we will give a 14k. SOLID GOLD SELF-FILLING FOUNTAIN PEN. These pens are all fully guaranteed.



So you see, everyone who enters into this contest will receive some kind of an award for their efforts; the greater the effort, the greater the award, and everyone will have the same opportunity.

NOW READ THESE CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each subscriber to count must be a NEW subscriber. NO RENEWALS WILL COUNT.
2. Two six-months' subscriptions count as one yearly.
3. Subscriptions must be received after midnight March 31 and before June 30th, at midnight, to count.
4. If two contestants send the same number of subscribers in competing for the first three awards duplicate awards will be given.
5. All awards will be given at the end of the contest.
6. And this is going to be the best help of all: NEW SUBSCRIBERS WILL BE RECEIVED DURING THIS CONTEST at the special rate of

One Dollar a Year : 50c Six Months

This rate does not apply to renewals. To subscriptions in Canada add 50 cents.

We believe the above offer to be very liberal—liberal to the new subscribers, liberal to you who are to get the new subscribers.

Why do we give these awards? To stimulate your interest in helping us increase our mailing list and to get The Restitution into the many homes where it should be read. We want to increase the size of The Restitution, but in order to do this we must increase the size of the mailing list first, so THE BIG EFFORT IS STARTED AND THE CONTEST IS ON—and remember, EVERYONE WILL RECEIVE AN AWARD.

If you want any other information write to

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

HAVE WE FORGOT?

"Now, therefore, why speak ye not a word of bringing the King back?" (After attending a great missionary convention, in which no reference was made to the return of the Lord.)

The King went forth a kingdom to obtain,
With promise to his own to come again;
The long, long years have passed, the years of pain,
And yet he cometh not—
Have we forgot?

He bade us keep our hearts for ever pure,
And, following Him, to suffer and endure,
That we to Him might weary men allure,
And he might tarry not—
Have we forgot?

He asked us for himself to wait and long,
To turn our faces from the worldly throng
Upward to him, to whom our lives belong;
And yet he hast'neth not—
Have we forgot?

And thus the days pass by; we joy and sing,
We take his gifts, yet little to him bring;
And speak no word of bringing back the King;
And so he cometh not—
Have we forgot?

Oh, Christ, our King, forgive us this our sin,
And help us, henceforth, many lives to win,
That we may haste to bring thy kingdom in—
And oh, forget us not,
Though we've forgot!

THE PAPAL PRETENSIONS EXPOSED; OR AN APPEAL TO SCRIPTURE, HISTORY, AND FACTS

Concluded

But you tell me these are fables and not history. Fables! Go, Monsignori, to the Vatican library and read Platina, the historian of the Papacy and the annals of Baronius (A. D. 827). These are facts which for the honor of the Holy See we should wish to ignore; but when it is to define a dogma which may provoke a great schism in our midst, that love which we bear to our venerable mother church—Catholic, Apostolic and Roman—ought to impose silence on us.

I go to the learned Cardinal Baronius, speaking of the Papal Court, says (give attention, my venerable brethren, to these words): "What did the Roman church appear in those days—how infamous! Only all-powerful courtesans governing in Rome. It was they who gave, exchanged and took bishoprics; and, horrible to relate, they got their lovers, the false Popes, put on the throne of St. Peter Baronius (A. D. 912)." You will answer: "These were false Popes, and not true ones." Let it be so; but in that case, if for fifty years the See of Rome was occupied by anti-Popes, how will you pick up again the thread of pontifical succession? Has the church been able, at least for a century and a half, to go on without a head, and find itself acceptable?

Look now! The greatest number of these anti-Popes appear in the genealogical tree of the Papacy, and this absurdity it must have been that Baronius described; because Genebrards, the great flatterer of the Popes, had dared to say in his chronicles (A. D. 906): "This century is unfortunate, as for nearly 150 years the popes have fallen from all the virtues of their predecessors and have become apostates rather than apostles." I can understand how the illustrious Baronius must have blushed when he narrated the acts of these Roman Bishops. Speaking of John XI (931), natural son of Pope Sergius and Marozia, he wrote these words in his annals: "The Holy Church—that is, the Roman—has been vilely trampled on by such a monster. John XII. (956), elected Pope at the age of eighteen through the influence of courtesans, was not one whit better than his predecessor." I grieve, my venerable brethren, to stir up so much filth. I am silent on Alexander VI., father and lover of Lucretia; I turn away from John XII. (1319), who denied the immortality of the soul and was deposed by the holy Ecumenical Council of Constance. Some will maintain that this Council was only a private one; let it be so, but if you refuse any authority to it, as a logical sequence you must hold the nomination of Martin V. (1417) to be illegal. What then will become of the papal succession? Can you find the thread of it? I do not speak of the schisms which have dishonored the church. In those unfortunate days the See of Rome was occupied by two and sometimes even three competitors. Which of these was the true Pope?

Resuming once more: Again I say, if you decree the infallibility of the present Bishop of Rome you must establish the infallibility of all the preceding ones, without excluding any; but can you do that when history is there establishing, with a clearness equal to that of the sun, that the Popes have erred in their teaching? Could you do it and maintain that avaricious, incestuous, murdering and simoniacal Popes have been the Vicar of Jesus Christ? Oh, venerable brethren, to maintain such an enormity would be to betray Christ worse than Judas. It would be to throw dirt in his face. [Cries, "Down from the pulpit, quick;" "Shut the mouth of the heretic."]

My venerable brethren, you cry out; but would it not be more dignified to weigh my reasons and my proofs in the balance of the sanctuary? Believe me, history can not be made over again; it is there, and will remain to all eternity, to protest energetically against the dogma of Papal Infallibility. You may proclaim it unanimously, but one vote will be wanting, and that is mine! The three faithful Monsignori have their eyes on us, expecting from us a remedy for innumerable evils which dishonor the church; will you deceive them in their hopes? What will not our responsibility before God be if we let this solemn occasion pass which God has given us to heal the true faith? Let us seize it, my brethren; let us arm ourselves with holy courage; let us make a violent, generous effort; let us turn to the teachings of the apostles, since without that we have error, darkness and false traditions. Let us avail ourselves of our reason and of our intelligence to take the apostles and prophets as our only infallible masters with reference to the question of questions, What must I do to be saved? When we have decided that we shall have laid the foundation of our dogmatic system, firm and immovable, on the rock, lasting and incorruptible, of the divinely inspired Holy Scriptures. Full of confidence, we will go before the world, and, like the apostle Paul, in the presence of the free thinkers, we will know none other than Jesus Christ and him crucified. We will conquer through the preaching of the folly of the cross, as Paul conquered the learned men of Greece and Rome; and the Roman Church will have its glorious eighty-nine. [Clamarous cries, "Get down! Out with the Protestant, the Calvinist, the traitor of the church."]

Your cries, Monsignori, do not frighten me. If my words are hot, my head is cool. I am neither of Luther, nor of Calvin, nor of Paul, nor of Apollos, but of Christ. [Renewed cries, "Anathema, anathema, to the apostate!"]

Anathema, Monsignori, anathema! You know well that you are not protesting against me, but against the holy apostles, under whose protection I would wish this Council place the church. Ah! if covered with their winding sheets they came out of their tombs, would they speak a language different from mine? What would you say to them when by their writings they tell you that the Papacy has deviated from the gospel of the Son of God which they have preached and confirmed in so generous a manner by their blood? Would you dare say to them, We prefer the teachings of our own Popes, our Bellarmine, our Ignatius Loyola, to yours? No, no, a thousand times no; unless you have shut your ears that you may not hear, closed your eyes that you may not see, blunt your minds that you may not understand. Ah! if he who reigns above wishes to punish us make his hand fall heavily upon us, as he did to Pharaoh; he has no need to permit Garibaldi's soldiers to drive us away from the eternal city; he has only to let them make Pius IX. a god, as we have made a goddess of the blessed Virgin. Stop, stop, venerable brethren, on the odious and ridiculous incline on which you have placed yourselves; save the church from the shipwreck which threatens her, asking from the Holy Scriptures alone for the rule of faith which we ought to believe and profess. I have spoken; may God help me.

GOD'S JUDGMENT UPON ISRAEL AFTER WOMEN CAUSED ISRAEL TO SIN

J. T. AULD.

Now, dear reader, let us see if history repeats itself. Let God give us the history of the suffragists.

I am not a prophet apart from what is written. We are admonished to "despise not prophesying" (1 Thess. 5:20; 1 Tim. 1:18; Rev. 1:3). We have a right to speak on the subject.

As Isa. 3:12-26, inclusive, was a fulfillment of God's judgment visited on Israel by Titus and the Roman army, we will give the prophecy in full: "As for my people, children are their oppressors, and women rule over them (over Israel). O my people, they (the women) which lead thee cause thee to err, and destroy the way of thy paths. Moreover the Lord said, Because the daughters of Zion are haughty and walk with stretched forth necks and wanton eyes, mincing as they go and making a tinkling with their feet; therefore the Lord will smite with a scab the crown of the head of the daughters of Zion, and the Lord will discover their secret parts. In that day the Lord will take away the bravery of their tinkling ornaments about their feet, and their gauls (network), and their round tires (neck ornament) like the moon. The chains (or bells), and bracelets, and the mufflers (spangled ornaments), the banners, and the ornaments of the legs, and the headbands, and the tablets, and the earrings, the changeable suits of apparel, and the wimples, and the crisping pins, the glasses, and the fine linen, and the hoods, and the veils. And it shall (and did) come to pass that instead of sweet smell there shall be stink; and instead of a girdle a rent, and instead of well-set hair baldness; and instead of a stomacher (corset) a girdline of sackcloth; and burning instead of beauty. Thy men (those foolish women's men) shall fall by the sword, and thy mighty in the war. And her gates shall lament and mourn; and she (Jerusalem), being desolate (emptied), shall sit upon the ground."

Now, inasmuch as human nature is the same today as it was in Israel's day, in what condition do we find the nominal sects today?

Let Jesus foretell the condition of the churches in these Laodicean times, just before the Lord's coming, to be admired in them that look for him (2 Thess. 1:10): "Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased in goods and have need of nothing; and knowest not (No, Lord, they don't) that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked: I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou makest me rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eye salve, that thou mayest see" (Rev. 3:14-18).

Dear reader, will you heed the admonition? If the prophecies were fulfilled that God pronounced upon the Jews, do you expect to escape if you neglect so great salvation? Eve was in the transgression (Gen. 1:6). Paul bears out Moses' record four thousand years after, saying: "And Adam was not deceived, but the woman, being deceived, was in the transgression" (1 Tim. 2: 13, 14).

From the Bible record we judge women would do well to stay in their place, the place God designed them to stay, "A helpmeet for man," and care for their children as God ordained they should. The men in the churches have become so absorbed in worldly pursuits in these last days of grace that they have resigned all right and title into the hands of the women; and they have turned them into a playhouse and banquet hall, getting money from the devil to pay the preachers or other expenses. Oh shame, where is thy blush? Nothing short of the Lord's coming will stop this folly. When he reappears the statement made to an apostate church at Jerusalem, "My father's house is a house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves" (Mark 11:17), will be made against the churches. Things will be as in the day of Lot. Our Lord said, "Remember Lot's wife" (Luke 17:32). Take notice, Lot's disobedient wife is proof our Lord warns us that women are not competent to rule either church, state or nation.

But some of our milk and water politicians catered to women's suffrage just as soon as they saw it become popular, for the sake of office, like Roosevelt, for instance. Where has manhood gone?

Let us return to God's judgment upon Israel and see if we can find its duplicate in these last days. Are not the clergy lulling their hearers to sleep? They tell them the world is getting better and cast the lie back in God's face as quick as the devil did when he told Eve God lied (Gen. 3:3, 4). "The holy spirit speaketh expressly (meaning definitely), that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils" (1 Tim. 4:1, 2). In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, has not the last times come; are they not right upon us? Is not spiritualism of the devil? Praying to the mother of our blessed Lord, and her dead over nineteen hundred years! Saying mass to the soul of a dead person! Teaching that all the human family have immortal souls, when God's word and all God's prophets and apostles, were ignorant of such a word being applied to mortal man. Theology tells us man is part of God; the devil said the same (Gen. 3:3, 4). Is God divisible? Better be careful. God's record of man's composition is dust, and I am foolish enough to believe God.

Fourteen thousand women have joined and endorsed Buddhism in the United States in the last decade. As the heathen believe in the immortality of the human soul, you see it was no trouble to catch those women. They got their first lesson from professed Christians, notwithstandig it is a heathen doctrine taught by Plato and Socrates. Paul said, "The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth" (Rom. 1:16).

Please read what the so-called Christian church has to say of the way of getting them into the church: "Ragtime;" "Musical comedy scores afforded the melodies to which ten persons hit the carpet at the Church of Christ last night at Columbus. Fifteen were baptized;" "There was some genuine shuffling ragtime that set feet to wagging and lips to pucker." Can there be a more blasphemous performance, and that, too, in the name of Jesus, who suffered and died on the cross! O Lord, come quickly! Fulfilled is the prophecy of Peter that there should come false teachers, making merchandise of the people. "And through covetousness shall they make merchandise of you" (then what, Lord?) "whose judgment now of a long time lingereth not, and their damnation slumpeth not" (2 Pet. 2:1, 2, 3). The above is being fulfilled—all over the country, every day.

All they have to do is to get a few together with trombone, fife and violin, then have a few words by the preacher, then a call to the carpet, or to hit the sawdust trail. Then you are saved, if you are very careful not to pray or talk about religion on the street or in public places; if you do this you will be unpopular. Our preachers are paid for talking. Don't add anything to your knowledge of God's word, for you are too ignorant to talk on Bible subjects. The preacher will do that.

Last week I read a statement of a Bishop of the M. E. Church at Philadelphia, Pa., who said that "society women were so absorbed in sin in Christ's day on earth that John the Baptist was beheaded by that society. And if Christ were to come to earth today he would not be welcomed by them." Question them on any Bible subject, and they will reply, "We have no time to study." Yet you may see their reading table covered with novels and fashionable magazines. O Lord, hasten the time of thy coming and reign on earth (Rev. 5:10).

Do you know what the Jews say at their wailing place at the foot of the great wall built by Solomon? Their special meeting is Friday afternoon. These words are sung responsively by the rabbi and the people:

Rabbi: For the place that has been laid waste,
People: We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi: For the temple that has been destroyed,
People: We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi: For the walls that have been demolished,
People: We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi: For our sovereignty that has passed away,
People: We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi: For our great men who have perished,
People: We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi: For our priesthood whose office has fallen,
People: We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi: For our kings who have been despised,
People: We have remained solitary and weep.
Rabbi: Jehovah, we beseech thee to have pity on Zion.
People: Assemble the children of Jerusalem.
Rabbi: Hasten, oh hasten, Savior of Zion.
People: Speak in favor of Zion.
Rabbi. May beauty and majesty encompass Zion.
People: Return in pity towards Jerusalem.
Rabbi: May royalty soon be established in Zion.
People: Comfort those that mourn in Zion.
Rabbi: May peace and happiness enter into Zion.
People: May the rod of power be raised in Jerusalem.

Godly women are to be saved "by child-bearing" (1 Tim. 2:15). By "child-bearing" here Paul undoubtedly refers to the mother of our Lord. He was "made of a woman" (Gal. 4:4; God did not make choice of any of the society women in that day, nor was she of the worldly rich class. Mary herself said: "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Savior. For he hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden: for, behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed" (Luke 1:46-55; read it all).

Dear readers, separate yourselves from these worldly amusements, be baptized into the Life-Giver, and be saved if you comply all his requirements.

Please notice Gen. 3:6 and you will see the necessity of a man child born of a woman to redeem the race back from the grave, where Eve put them by disobeying God (Gen. 2:7; 3:19). Please let me say, anyone not endorsing God's record of man's nature, believes the heathen Plato's version, is endorsing the devil's lie and insulting the God of all creation.

If God had intended women to vote, hold office and rule among the nations of the earth he would have ordered it so at the beginning of creation. Now when we see women asking men of nearly all nations to give them the franchise, are they not disobeying God's penalty, pronounced upon Eve at the beginning because of her disobedience to his law? "Unto the woman he said, I will greatly multiply thy sorrow, and thy conception; in sorrow thou shalt bring forth children; and thy desire shall be to thy husband, and he shall rule over thee." If they are given the ballot will they be ruled by their husbands? I trow not.

Again, Paul said God is the head of Christ; Christ is the head of man, and man is head of the woman.

Let the wise man give us a record of the perfect woman: "She maketh herself coverings of tapestry; her clothing is silk and purple; her husband is known in the gates, when he sitteth among the elders of the land. She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness. She looks well to the ways of her household and eateth not the bread of idleness; her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her. Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excelleth them all" (Prov. 30).

Even man has most signally failed in running governments. The holy one, Christ, will reign in the future. "When he comes whose right it is, I will give it him" (Eze. 21:24; Psa. 9:8; 50:6; Isa. 32:1; 58:8; 62:2; Dan. 9:24; Jer. 9:24; 33:15). In this present evil world is selfishness, hatred, jealousy and all manner of unrighteousness; but when he comes who has the authority to rule and reign, all things that are evil will be abolished.

Not even in the age to come is there any mention of women judging. But we do hear Jesus promise the twelve disciples, saying: "And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel" (Matt. 1:28).

Lord Jesus, come, and come quickly. Amen.

THE BLACK JEWS OF INDIA

It has been known from remote ages that there was a large body of dark-skinned Jews in India, but it is only recently that attempts to discover their origin and habits have been successful. Only three of them have ever sailed away from India, the third being now on this continent.

There is a tradition among the Jews that these Benei Israelites are the descendants of the survivors of a band of Jews who fled from persecution and were wrecked near the Henery and Kenery Islands, in the Indian Ocean, fifteen miles from Cheul, formerly the chief emporium of trade between India and Arabia. Seven men and seven women are said to have been saved from the shipwreck, and from them, in the course of some sixteen or eighteen centuries, the Benei Israel claim descent.

The Benei Israelites avoid the use of the name "Jew" because the Mohammedans of India are greatly prejudiced against the Jewish immigrants from other countries, but they prefer the name Benei Israel, chiefly because they are mentioned thus by the prophet Mohammed in his Al Koran. This partly accounts for the great sympathy and friendship which exists between these two races and the admission of the Benei Israel to the Islam lodge, which is the most powerful Mohammedan brotherhood of India. During the Afghan war the Benie Israel held prayer meetings for the victory of the Moslem forces, and many of them lost their lives fighting side by side with their Mohammedan friends.

Though Black, are True Jews

"The question which now arises," says the visitor, Moses ben Reuben, "is this: In what respect does the Benei Israel differ from the western Jew? To this I would say that, so far as the Jewish religion is concerned, no difference could be established at the present day, as the people are at the height of spiritual enlightenment. The difference lies only in the fact that the Benei Israel are the offspring of marriages between Jews and Hindu women, and, just as the Eurasian descendants of the Portuguese of Goa resemble the natives in the color of the skin, so do the Jewish offspring of mixed unions resemble the Hindus.

"In 1795 Samuel Ezekiel Dinckar, though a Jew, a trusted officer in the East India Company, was captured by Tipu Sahib. He prayed for his deliverance, promising to build a synagogue if he escaped. After a miraculous escape, he built the Shaar Harahamim synagogue of Bombay. I think I know from what I have seen of my people that we are the children of Providence, and have yet a remarkable part to play in the history of England and India. We have the courage of the Jews and the determined and trained concentrated will of the Hindus, and I see the time when these people will stand forth in the limelight and proudly say: 'We are the sons of Israel, the chosen people of God!'

The Jews are Great Warriors

"The men have inherited a certain fatalism from the Hindus which has made them invincible on the battlefield, and in recognition of this quality the British government has showered high positions upon the Benei Israel in its military service. And, unlike the Hindus, the Benei Israelites get the same salary, rations and quarters as Englishmen, and are treated as such. At the present day there are Benei Israel majors, captains, risaldars (leaders of cavalry), magistrates and surveyors holding positions for the government. The first sheriff to be appointed for the city of Bombay was David Solomon, a Benei Israelite. Besides these, there are clerks in military and civil offices, railways, telegraph offices and the like. Many follow the occupation of builder and carpenter or mason, and some that of farmers in small towns in India. A few have gone into business as import and export firms, especially in Bombay and Poonah. There are also a few lawyers in Bombay with good practices.

A few of them have adopted the English costume, but a majority still retain the native dress, which consists of shoes, trousers, and a long coat something on the order of the Arabian costume. For headgear they wear a round Persian cap or a Turkish fez with a small tassel. The better class women dress strictly in the Persian costume, omitting only the while cloth wrapped by Persian women around the head. The others wear strictly Hindu clothes. Both the costumes are highly picturesque and very modest.

"The very well-to-do live in a mixture of oriental and western style at home; others live like the Hindus—that is, in a more simple manner, without the rich furniture and oriental carpets that adorn the houses of those better off.—Selected by J. E. Hogarth.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

The Duty of Giving

Dear Bereans:

It is the duty of every Christian worker to give for the cause of Christ according to what he has. Jacob said in Gen. 28:22 that he would give one-tenth of what he had unto the Lord. Then in Deut. 16:17 we find the following: "Every man shall give as he is able, according to the blessing of the Lord thy God which he has given thee." Here we find that the Israelites were commanded to give unto the Lord. In Luke 12:15 Christ says for us to beware of covetousness, and that man's life consists not in the abundance of things which he possesseth. We find, therefore, that the people with a great deal of this world's goods are not the only ones who should give to the Lord, but everyone should give according as he has to give. Then we are told to give freely and willingly, 2 Cor. 8-12: "For if there be first a willing mind it is accepted according that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not."

We read in Acts 20:35 Jesus' words: "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Then in 2 Cor. 9:7 we read: "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity, for God loveth a cheerful giver." We read in Ex. 35:5-21 that the people were to offer things unto the Lord as many as were willing to give. Let us give cheerfully and liberally unto the Lord according to what we have.

Your sister in Christ, MARY J. COOPER.

Elimination of Self

It is said of Michael Angelo that he always worked with a little lamp fastened to his hat, lest his shadow should fall on the canvas.

This is suggestive. We should not let the shadow of self fall upon our Christian work. It is not how much work we do, but the purpose or spirit which prompts us to do it, that the Master considers. How essential, then, that we watch the hear and keep a close censorship of the motive; for if we do right things in wrong ways we may do wrong things. We should be zealous and aggressive, ready for every task that comes to hand, but we should be all these for Jesus Christ. Selfish ambition must be held in contempt if we hope to reach the sphere of real usefulness and devoted service. We should not forget there is no joy like the joy of self-forgetting effort; no influence like the influence of the Christian worker who keeps his own shadow off his own work.

In Westminster Abbey is a marble table with medallion portrait of the two Wesleys combined, and underneath the inscription, "God buries the workers, but carries on the work."—Sel. by Viola Eaton.

Last Day Conditions

Dear Bereans:

If we would stop and look around us would we see anything that would interest us? Would we see all humanity striving to please and to comfort each other? Would we find everything in perfect harmony. No, we would not.

But we find war, strife, malice and all kinds of discord. We see neighbor striving against neighbor and brethren against brethren; and then we wonder what the world is coming to. But this is only a lining up of things in their order to fulfill a prophecy, for Matt. 24:12 shows that because of iniquity the love of many shall wax cold. But it should not be so, for we see the evening shades falling and we know the night cometh, and we should have our lamps ready for the night. For we know that the morrow shall dawn with the bright light of God's love, and those who are found worthy to come forth in that day of joy and peace must be ready with their robes cleansed from malice, strife and sin, for we know that these things do not harmonize with God's rules for salvation.

The man of God must be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good work, and speak the things which become sound doctrine. Paul commands us to show a pattern of good works. Therefore, let us be faithful and put our trust in the Lord. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised. Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him.. Yours in Christian love,

BENJ. H. CARPENTER.

BOTH WRONG

Life is not a joke, and neither is it a dirge. The people who take nothing seriously, and the people who take everything seriously, are both wrong—the one as deep in the mud as the other is in the mire. Life stands for work, hard work, high aims, persistent endeavor, or else it is a failure. But it also stands for laughter, gayety, friendship song. The life which leaves these out is incomplete.

EDITORIAL

All advanced orders for our sermon on "Paradise" have been filled. Thanks to all these fellow-helpers in the cause of the truth.

Some contributors will have to wait patiently for their articles to appear. We are in real need of more short compositions.

The price of "Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained," our new sermon, is five cents the copy; forty cents per dozen. If any of the brethren who buy it are not satisfied with the sermon we shall be pleased to refund their money.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Brethren of The Restitution:

I see a statement in The Restitution of February 25, written by Bro. J. J. Heckman, accusing me of being an ex-Campbellite preacher. My dear brethren, this I deny. I was baptized in 1872, and the man that baptized me was a Campbellite. I believed then, as I do now, that Christ died and that the soul, body and spirit died. If I had not believed this when I was baptized I would be a Campbellite sure; but I understand the validity of baptism does not depend on the administration but on what I believed. At that time the immortality of man was a question in the church and was debated frequently, but was not made a test of fellowship until 1902, when I held a debate with W. S. Miller at Oakdale. Since then we have seen two churches in this part.

I guess Bro. Heckman has seen a report of a debate I held with J. K. P. Williams, the champion Baptist, reported in The Firm Foundation. This was in 1900, before the church was divided; they now.

Brethren, were we to dip a person believing that Christ did not die you have not baptized him. This is pretty strong, but bad cases need strong medicine. This is what I preach and practice, for it would be impossible to baptize a person in the death of Christ if Christ did not die; and if the candidate is not dead when buried he is not baptized. He can not be resurrected to a new life if he was not dead. I am not talking about the sinner's body being dead: I am talking about his spirit being dead to sin. If Christ's spirit did not die we have no atonement made for the spiritual covenant now. 1 Pet. 3:18 says: "Christ was put to death in the flesh. Now notice Peter says nothing about the flesh being put to death, but he is very careful to say that the man in the flesh was put to death, just the same as a man being put to death in his house. If a neighbor was to tell you that your neighbor Jones was put to death in his house, how could you get the idea that Mr. Jones' house was torn down and Jones was off somewhere else holding a meeting?

"Well," says one, "the spirit can't die." In Isa. 57:16 God says the spirit shall fail; and Webster says "fail" means to die. Obadiah 16 says the wicked shall be as though they had not been. "Well," says one, "that is just the body." Well, see Rev. 22:14: "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life." Now if the word "they" only applies to the body in the case of the wicked, what about the righteous? Are their spirits there, or just their bodies walking through the gate? If you separate man from his spirit in one place, you must in the other; for the word "they" means the same in both cases.

Now friends, brethren and sisters, I send this for an express purpose; that is, to show my baptism is of the one faith. I have baptized many in my time that were not properly taught on this question, but had been immersed, and Paul says "Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that he alloweth." W. J. PECK.

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Permit me, through the columns of the dear old Restitution to say to the dear brothers and sisters of the one faith that the Easter services, held annually at the Church of God at Guthrie Grove, S. C., were a success this year. There was a large attendance, and also good behavior, all through the day. The services were much brightened by the presence of Bro. Caleb Shipman, of King Mountain, N. C. We are always glad to have such earnest workers for Christ as Bro. Shipman visit us at any and all times.

The program of the day's service was as follows: Song services at 10 o'clock a. m., led by Profs. P. A. Guthrie and G. M. Pack. The time from 10 o'clock until 11 was taken up with songs and encouraging talks by the brethren, during which time Bro. Oliver Williamson read a statement in The Restitution concerning the Zionist organization making loans to the Turkish government. On this he made some very interesting remarks, showing that such movements should be of much interest to those watching the signs of the times. At 11 o'clock, sermon by Bro. Harper Stone; text, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel" (St. Mark 16:15). Bro. Stone handled the command of our resurrected Savior with much force and ability for a young minister who has not been in the ministerial work any longer than Bro. Stone. At 12 o'clock and intermission for one hour was given for dinner, which was served on the ground and very much enjoyed by all. After dinner we again came together for the afternoon services, and for one hour we listened to an interesting sermon by the pastor, A. N. Durham, his text being "After three days I will rise again." At the close of the sermon we held Communion service, which ended the day's services. We all returned home feeling very much refreshed by the encouraging efforts of the brothers and sisters to hold up the banner of truth.

We received a letter from Bro. J. H. Anderson, of Troy, Ohio, a few days ago, in which he stated, to our regret, that he has been in poor health for some time and is not able to stir out much. We hope Bro. Anderson will soon regain his health and be out again, preaching the word of God in the way he is able to do when his health permits. We notice that Bro. W. H. Wilson is now evangelizing through the western part of the United States. We would like for Bro. Wilson to come around through South Carolina on some of his trips and visit with us here at Guthrie Grove. We have read much of Bro. Wilson's good works and would be glad to meet with him personally.

Yours in the blessed hope. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with all the dear brothers and sisters, Amen. EMIL L. PACK.

OHIO CONFERENCE NOTICE

To the Church of God in the State of Ohio and to the Faithful in Christ Jesus Elsewhere, Greeting:

The yearly gathering of the household of faith and the faithful brethren in Christ, which are in the State of Ohio, will be held in Springfield, Ohio, from August 8th to August 10th, the Lord willing. We also invite the brethren from other places to come and enjoy with us a feast of spiritual blessings. Let us make arrangements to be present from now on; it may be our last gathering, because the coming of our Lord draweth nigh.

On March 30th I visited with our evangelist, Bro. Maple, in the Blessed Hope Mission at Elyria, and found him teaching our Lord's doctrine, the gospel of the Kingdom of God.

Brethren, remember our brother's work and fight at the throne of grace, that our heavenly Father may add his blessing to our humble effort. Program of Conference will appear later. "The Lord is comnig."

With Christian greeting,

H. JUERGENSEN, C. C. C.

EVANGELISTIC HAPPENINGS

The meetings at Lissie having closed, I then started for my next appointment, at Brownwood, Texas. Finding that I would have to pass through Goldthwaite, I concluded to stop off and visit Dr. Wilson and family over Sunday. They met me at the station and took me to his home. Our conversation related principally to prophetic topics regarding the opening of "seals," "trumpets" and "vials." I found him fully alive to these things, and rejoicing to know that the gathering together unto the Lord was near at hand.

On Monday morning I started for Brownwood and arrived at that point at 10 o'clock a. m. Sister Crundwell met me at the station with a carriage. On arriving at her home I was glad to meet Sister Martin, who was just recovering from a spell of sickness. These two sisters are devoted children of God, who are anxiously waiting for the angelic reapers to come and gather the faithful unto the Lord. Oh, what a sorrow it would be to be among the "left," to pass through the fiery trails of fiery judgments! May we be accounted worthy to "escape all these things that shall come to pass and to stand before the Son of Man."

The meetings were commenced the following night. I preached ten sermons in all. Two were left thoroughly convicted of the truth, and another favorably impressed.

After preaching a sermon on the subject of "The Rich Man and Lazarus," someone outside requested me to repeat it, which I did. I am impressed that lasting good has been accomplished. The truth is planted in Brownwood to stay. They regretted the necessity that I should leave them.

My next appointment was at Burbank, Okla. Finding that I should have to pass through Fort Worth, Texas, I concluded to stop off and visit Bro. S. Blessing over Sunday. He is the only one that I know of in that city who is of the faith. He said that it would do him good to have a heart-to-heart talk with someone. The significant events now taking place in the East led him to believe that the day of the Lord is near at hand. Isolated believers feel the need of companionship with other believers.

On Monday morning I continued my trip to Burbank, Okla. By night I arrived at Newkirk, and had to stay over until the next day in order to make railroad connection. I was not aware that Bro. and Sister Waters had moved to Newkirk, and lived near the station, and so I put up at the "Old Kentucky Home" hotel. Two signs were prominently placed on the wall which read as follows: "Christ is the head of this house," "No card playing allowed here." I love to stay in homes where Christ is truly the head of the house and evil practices are not allowed.

In the morning I resumed my journey to Burbank, the home of Sisters Chandler and McCurry. I arrived there at about 10 o'clock. Sister Alexander's son Frank met me and took me home. Sister Chandler gave me a very hearty welcome. We were mutually glad to meet each other once more. She is a true child of God; her heart is in the work. Mr. Chandler was away from home, but arrived in about two days, and he was pleased to see me also.

Bad weather came on, and so meetings were not started until the latter part of the week. We used the village church. My audiences were said to be larger than the local pastors drew. Close attention was given and appreciation expressed. It is hoped that some seed found congenial soil.

After these meetings closed I started for Arkansas City, Kas. On arriving there I took a hack for the home of Bro. and Sister Chaplin. I received another hearty welcome at this place. Bro. Chaplin is a nephew of Bro. S. A. Chaplin. I was also glad to meet their daughter Mabel, whom I baptized on a former trip. I was also delighted to meet Bro. and Sister Jacob Reid, Sister Russell, and Sister Sims. Bro. and Sister Waters, of Newkirk, attended the Sunday meetings.

The topics of the meetings were largely prophetic as related to closing up the times of the Gentiles. May God bless his faithful children in Arkansas City.

In the blessed hope. W. H. WILSON.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES

Dear Restitution:

Last week I left you at Los Angeles, where I had arranged to go to Oregon to hold some meetings there. Monday the 17th we boarded the train at Los Angeles. After riding all night in the mountains we emerged into the beautiful San Joaquin Valley at Fresno. Here we beheld the large fruit orchards and vineyards of the valley and also encountered a heavy rain, very much needed. We soon came to Sacramento, the capital of the state. We lay over for two hours, then boarded the train for the north, and rode all the afternoon through a most beautiful stretch of country, reaching Dunsmuir, at the edge of the mountains in northern California, and about sixty miles south of Mt. Shasta, the highest peak on the western coast. This mountain is about two hundred feet higher than Pike's Peak, Colorado.

At Dunsmuir we stayed all night, and had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Holloway's daughter Mabel, who is teaching school at that place. At 11 o'clock a. m. the train came along and we started over the mountains. We first came to the Shasta Springs, where the water comes out of the fissures in the rocks. The train stopped for ten minutes to enable all of the passengers to get a drink of the water, which tastes like a glass of water with a little soda thrown into it. Some of the springs are very strong of the soda. Then we passed close to Mt. Shasta; then we came to the Siskyou Mountains, and after traveling for two or three hours across valleys and through tunnels, some of them half a mile to a mile long, we finally landed at Ashland, Oregon, where the train stopped for supper. When one sees three of the large Mogul engines of the Southern Pacific attached to a train of twelve cars taxed to their utmost capacity to pull the train over the mountain it gives some idea as to the steepness of the grade. We traveled about thirty-five miles to get nineteen miles straight across the country, and in about twenty miles of the distance we had to take an elevation of two thousand feet. It was the grandest scenery and most enjoyable ride of all my trip since we left Iowa.

From Ashland we wended our way along the valley of the Rogue river for a short distance, and then crossed the Rogue river mountains into the valley of the Umpequa river, which we traversed for a short distance; then crossing a ridge of hills, we came into the valley of the Willamette river. We were soon at Albany, where we changed trains, and arrived at Corvallis, where we were met by Bro. Darby. We began meetings Thursday evening, and spoke to an excellent audience, meeting for the first time many of the pioneers of Nebraska who have been contending for the faith many years. Friday and Saturday evenings we spoke again. Quite a number of outsiders attended. Sunday we spoke both morning and evening to excellent audiences. We are enjoying the meetings very much. All the brethren here seem to be alive in the faith. An excellent spirit prevails among them, and although not all believing exactly alike upon just how the day of judgment will be executed, they are a unit on the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation. To his own master he standeth or falleth, seems to be the motto here. Would to God it prevailed everywhere.

If we would only remember the words of the apostles: "Master, give unto your servants that which is just and equal, knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven" (Col. 4:1), also Eph. 6:9: "Knowing that your Master also is in heaven, neither is there any respect of persons with him." James says: "My brethren, be not many masters, knowing that we shall receive the greater condemnation." Why? "For in many things we offend all." The only man who has a right to be a master of brethren is one who does not offend in word or deed. All should remember the admonition of Paul in Rom. 14:4: "Who art thou, that thou judgest another man's servant? To his own master he standeth or falleth. Yea, he shall be holden up, for God is able to make him stand." Brethren, let us awake to this fact and heed James' admonition: "If ye fulfill the royal law, according to the Scripture" (are we not always priding ourselves upon our Scripture? Do we not seek to impress upon outside people we are great Scripture people? If so, let's make our word good among ourselves). Notice: "If ye fulfill the royal law, according to the Scripture, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," ye do well. But IF." If what? "If ye have respect of persons ye commit sin and are convinced of the law as transgressors." We would to God that all might heed these plain Scriptures.

Here we leave you in the midst of a protracted effort at Corvallis. Pray for us, brethren, that we may set forth the gospel in its purity, and that some may soon hear and understand.

O. J. ALLARD.

BLESSED HOPE MISSION

ELDER C. C. MAPLE

The month of March has been a very interesting one at the Blessed Hope Mission, Elyria, Ohio. Our attendance has been kept down by cold weather, bad condition of walks, and much sickness, yet several new scholars have been in attendance at the Bible School and several new faces have appeared at our evening services. We had the pleasure of a visit from Bro. Walter S. Tomlinson, of Cleveland, at our evening service on March 16th, and Bro. H. Juergensen, of Barberton, on Sunday afternoon, March 30th. Both brethren expressed their appreciation of the effort being put forth.

Our attendance yesterday (March 30th) was 28 for the young people's meeting and 27 for the preaching service. Our special meeting opens on Sunday, April 6th.

Following is the financial report for the month of March:

Receipts During March

Elder C. C. Maple	$5.00

Expense for Mission supplies, including gas bill, Sunday-school cards, papers, etc.	19.59
Balance from February	34.50
	$54.09
Receipts	19.70
Balance	$34.39
From last month	5.00
Balance still needed	$29.39

Let me at this time thank all those who have in any way contributed to the work of the Mission.

OBITUARY

William Wallace Pence

William Wallace Pence was born August 2, 1835, and died March 23, 1913, being 77 years, seven months and two days old. He was married October 15, 1857, to Amanda Evans. To this union were born six children. He is survived by his aged wife, Amanda Pence; four children, Gabriel A. Pence; John F. Pence, Annie S. McCandles, Jessie C. Pence, and nine grandchildren. Besides the immediate family, he leaves other relatives and many friends. He will be missed in his home, in the church, and in the community. He lived his entire life in Warren county, Ind., was a member of the Church of God at Pleasant View, Ind., and lived a consistent Christian life. At the time of his death he was an elder and also a trustee in the church.

The funeral services were conducted at the church at Pence, Ind., by Bro. Joseph Williams, and he was laid to rest in the Jordan Cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

LYDIA RAILSBACK.

SELF-PRAISE

It is the motive which is the real test of the character of self-praise. If it be used only in the cause of justic and truth, not righteous self-vindication, or in the interests of others, it is justifiable and not to be avoided through mistaken modesty. But if, as in the great majority of cases, it is the suggestion of egotism, the bubbling forth of an excessive self-complacency, the effort to force praise from other lips and insist upon being held in higher esteem than the character and conduct will of themselves create, then let is be shunned as an insidious and fatal stimulant, the appetite for which will grow by what it feeds on, and which will finally poison the springs of action, weaken the powers and destroy that self-respect and independence which lie at the root of all manly character and life.

Several weeks ago we received a number of complaints from subscribers who stated they had not received their papers. About that time we were moving our place of publication, and as the new workers were not familiar with our system it took two or three weeks to get it running smoothly. We are sorry this caused anyone to miss their paper, and where possible we sent additional copies. If for any reason you do not get your paper regularly drop us a postal and it will be taken care of.

The truly gifted and learned man is seldom vain of his gifts or acquirements. But he whose natural parts are but feeble, and whose achievements are but slight, is often eaten up with the most inordinate vanity.

God's standard for his children is not a low one. To Abraham he said, "Walk before me and be thou perfect." And Christ said long after, "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

We must expect to meet with something of weariness and painfulness, even in the course of Christian love and duty. It is the condition of human life, a part of the cross appointed for us to bear in imitation of Jesus Christ.

To be worth anything character must be capable of standing firmly upon its feet in the world of daily work, temptation and trial and able to bear the wear and tear of actual life. Cloistered virtues do not count for much.

Only by slow and painful degrees can we fight our way upward and break loose from the clinging hold of self-love.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15) who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26), the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37), the literal resurrection of the dead (John 5:28, 29); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:20, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16, Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of elohim (Gen. 19:1-5), and belief in the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1, 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

MARRIAGE WITH UNBELIEVERS

No. 1

S. ROXANA WINCE

"Did marriage with unbelievers have anything to do with the almost universal corruption of the earth prior to the deluge?"

This is one of the questions asked by Mr. Wince in a series of lessons that seem to have been gotten up for the young people attending the Plymouth Bible School.

I came across it as I was turning the leaves of his notebook the other day, and it struck me as having a force and importance that I had never before attached to it, though always opposed to such marriages, because forbidden in many places in the Bible.

I turned to the sixth chapter of Genesis and read it. Evidently "the sons of God" are the sons of Seth, and not angelic beings. Seth was "appointed" of God to take the place of Abel as the progenitor of a holy race who were to be the custodians of his oracles, and witnesses for him to all other nations. John says: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God." Paul also says: "As many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God," and the whole nation of Israel is called God's son.

Cain had lost this birthright privilege; he could not stand as the forebear of God's nation "of kings and priests." He had been skeptical as to the atoning blood of a coming Christ. He would make no offering that pointed forward to such a Savior, and had made a martyr of his own brother, because he, believing God, had made the required typical offering, and had been accepted. "The original word for accepted," Prof. Bush says, "properly signifying lifting up, elevation, excellency," implying that this "acceptance" involved the birthright. If not, why did Cain show such "burning anger," such "fierce resentment?" Anger that he would not put away, even when assured by his loving Creator that "if he did well" —made the full and complete sacrifice in prospective faith in Christ—"he would still be accepted," but if not sin would lie forever at his door, he would not be pardoned, and instead of Abel's desire being to him, and he having the rule over Abel, the thing would be reversed. God requires sincere faith and full obedience, and these Cain would not give. He wanted the blessings, but he wanted them on his own terms without confession of sin and prayer for pardon, and murdered the brother who stood in his way to desired promotion, audaciously thinking that he could thus secure it, just as his followers have thought ever since, who, "taking the way of Cain," have martyred the saints of God and usurped the headship of the churches.

Cain's works were evil, and because they were evil he was separated from his family, from his home, "from the ground that he had tilled, from the seat of worship, and from the only church that God had then upon earth," "driven" or "cast out" from the birthright place, to be "a fugitive and a vagabond," whose punishment was greater than he could bear, yet whose life was still mercifully lengthened that he might have space to repent, yet he repented not.

The line of demarcation had begun, for it was only a little while after the birth of Enos, the son of Seth (Heb., Enosh, meaning sick, weak, sorrowful, miserable, so called, perhaps, from the prevailing degenerate state at the time, or as prophetically foretelling what would soon be the state of the world) that men "began to call upon the name of the Lord," or "profanely began." "Jewish interpreters, for the most part," Prof. Bush says, "understanding it to be the commencement of idolatry, which consists for the most part in profanely calling upon and worshiping idols, under the names and titles of the true God." The Chaldee Targum reads thus: "Then the sons of men" (notice the expression, "sons of men") "left off from praying in the name of the Lord," or "became profane, so they prayed not." But the marginal rendering is: "Then began men to be called by the name of the Lord," that is, "a portion of them (viz., the sons of Seth), to distinguish them from the sons of Cain by taking upon them the profession of God's holy name, and being recognized as his true worshipers."

"But the Hebrew idiom," Prof. Bush says, "allows both facts to be alluded to under one and the same term." So Maimonides, the celebrated Jewish writer, says: "In the days of Enos the sons of Adam erred with great error, and the counsel of the wise men of that age became brutish, and their error was this: They say, For as much as God has created these stars and spheres to govern the world, and set them on high, and imparted honor unto them, and they are ministers that minister before him, it is meet that men should laud and glorify and give them honor. For this is the will of God that we might magnify and honor whomsoever he magnifieth and honoreth, even as a king would have them magnified that stand before him. When this thing was come up into their heart they began to build temples to the stars and to offer sacrifices to them and to laud and glorify them with words and to worship before them, that they might, in their evil opinion, obtain favor of the Creator, and this was the root of idolatry."

Did Cain invent this star worship? We know not; we can only conjecture. Neither he nor Satan were dead, and the cunning subtlety of the latter appears in this creed, where it makes it "the will of God" that the stars should be worshiped.

Men had greatly multiplied, even at the time when Cain went out from the presence of the Lord, else could he not have built a city and called it Enoch, after the name of his son. Adam had many sons and daughters; and Cain, and these, were from two hundred to one thousand years old in the days of Enos. Plenty of time for the cult to spread and to involve all of Cain's descendants and the most of those of Seth.

STUDIES IN THE APOCALYPSE

The Fifth Seal

Rev. 6:9, 10, 11.

"And when he had opened the Fifth Seal I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held. And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? And white robes were given unto every one of them; and it was said unto them that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow-servants also and their brethren, that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled."

The work of an expositor is to point out the meaning of the symbols and to find their correspondence on the pages of history.

The opening of the Seal reveals to John an altar, and slain persons under it; the figure is taken from the Altar of Sacrifice in the temple, with its victims offered in sacrifice. The reason for their being slain is revealed; "on account of the word of God, and for the testimony which they held." Slain souls are dead souls, or dead bodies, according to the use of the word soul in the Bible, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezek. 18:4). The "souls under the altar" had blood; therefore they were not immaterial nor immortal souls.

The question is, if the slain souls were dead, how did they cry with a loud voice to God for vengeance on their murderers? In order to answer this answer I will say that these Seal-Symbols find their correspondence in the history of the Protestant reformation in the sixteenth century. Some writers—Seiss for instance, in his lectures on the Apocalypse—claim that there is no chronology in the book. And while we hold this to be a fatal error, we incline to admit a grain of truth in the statement. They argue that from the death of Abel to the end of this age the dragon power has persecuted the seed of the woman. "The earlier witnesses for the truth—the Paulicians, the Waldenses, the Vaudois and other bodies of true Christians, had borne an open testimony, from the beginning, against the various corruptions of Rome; her errors in doctrine, her idolatries in worship, and her immoralities, until, in the end of the twelfth century—the same century in which, according to Mr. Gibbon, the meridian of Papal greatness was attained—they proclaimed her to be the Antichrist of Scripture—the Harlot of the Apocalypse, * * * and then was war waged against them with all the power of apostate Rome, to silence and destroy them. War was commenced in the edicts, of councils, which stigmatized the pure doctrines of the Bible, and branded those who held them as heretics. "The next step was to pronounce the most dreadful anathemas on those who were regarded as heretics, which were exectued in the same remorseless and exterminating manner in which they were conceived. * * * The Pope wrote to all Christian princes exhorting them to earn their pardon and win heaven, rather by bearing the cross against heretics than by marching against the Saracens. Those who perished in Germany during the wars of Charles V., and in Flanders under the infamous Duke of Alva, are reckoned by hundreds of thousands" (Barnes on Revelations, pp. 328-9).

"And when he had opened the Fifth Seal I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held." John saw the symbols of that which was to be enacted in the future; and John himself stands as the representative of those that should in the future see the fulfillment of the symbolic scene. Now, to come to the fulfillment of this vision, we see Europe in the dark ages, and, according to the proverb, the darkest hour is the one before daylight; the Papacy has arrived at the meridian of its power, and has sunk to the lowest depths of dark superstition; all Europe is ready to do its bidding. John Huss, and Jerome of Prague, both were burned at the stake, and their ashes thrown into the river; and in this cruel fashion the light of the fifteenth century was swallowed up by the darkness, and the Papacy was comparable to a madman with unlimited power.

In the fourteenth century a change began to appear in the minds of the people. John Wycliffe, in England, translated the Bible into the English language and opposed Rome on many points. "He died and was buried at Lutterworth; but by a decree of the Council of Constance (May 4, 1415) his remains were ordered to be dug up and burned, an order which was carried out by Bishop Fleming in 1428. In this fifteenth century John Huss, and Jerome of Prague, were the chief lights; but in the fore part of the sixteenth century the reformers became more numerous—Luther and Melancthon in Germany, Zwingle in Switzerland, and many others. The invention of printing aided greatly in the spread of the writings of the reformers and of the Bible. The open Bible in the hands of the reformers is the main factor in opening the eyes of the blind and causing the darkness of the apostacy to vanish away.

Another aid to the reformers was the jealousy of the kings against the pretensions of the Pope to interfere in their civil affairs; this came about in the providence of God, when the time had come to consume the Papacy (Rev. 17:16). "The celebrated painter, Lucas Cranach, published, under the title of 'The Passion of Christ and Antichrist,' engravings which represented, on the one hand, the splendor and magnificence of the Pope, and on the other the humility and sufferings of the Redeemer. Luther wrote the inscriptions. These engravings, executed with great spirit, produced an astonishing effect. The people withdrew from a church which appeared so opposed to the spirit of its founder" (Reformation, by D'Aubigne, p. 180).

The time when the symbols of this Seal found their correspondence in history was in the sixteenth century, at the time when the teaching of the reformers had opened the eyes of the people, to such an extent that they saw the slain martyrs and realized that they were the saints of God, and that the party responsible for their death was the very Antichrist and his followers, as taught by the reformers. What John saw in symbols, the people saw in fulfillment of the symbols. And, having their eyes opened to this fact, that the slain were the saints of God, slain because of their testimony to God's word, could they do less than give them white robes, the "righteous of saints?"

"And they cried with a loud voice." If the teaching of the Seals were literal there would be some force to the claim that the martyrs were conscious when they cried for vengeance on their enemies. If we view their cry as literal, how will it agree with the spirit of the Master. "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." And the martyr Stephen: "And he kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge" (Acts 7:60). When we behold the bloody and mangled form of a good man murdered, does not the scene cry with a loud voice for vengeance on the perpetrators of the crime? The blood of Abel cried to God from the ground (Gen. 4:9, 10). The stone cried out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber answered it (Hab. 2:11). The hire of the laborers kept back by fraud cried, and the cry entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth (James 5:4). The principle of personating inanimate things, and causing them to speak, permeates the Apoclaypse from beginning to end. And if the blood of one righteous person cried to God, how much more should the blood of thousands cry with a loud voice? They were to rest yet for a little season, until the rest of their brethren should be killed as they were. This indicates, to my mind, that this view in a measure is applicable to all the martyrs, and that the end of this dispensation brings retribution. It is the Papal horn of Daniel 7:25 that "wears out the saints of the Most High." It is the same power that in Rev. 13:7 makes war with the saints, and overcomes them. The Pagan dragon made war in chapter 12, but Michael helped the woman, and the dragon was cast out of the heaven. I may add, in conclusion, that the drunken harlot, that is drunken with the blood of the saints, is cotemporary with the ten kings; all after the passing of Paganism.

Old age has its privileges. It is a blessed thing to grow old and be respected and honored and humored. The very old and the very young are the light and the hope of the world. The dignity and wisdom of age and the innocence of childhood are the best features of life.

OBITUARY

G. B. Fox

Guy Bruce Fox was born April 21, 1897, and died April 2, 1913, aged 15 years, 11 months and 11 days. Guy was the oldest son of Bro. James and Sister Rebecca Fox, of Moorefield, Neb. Guy accidentally discharged his gun, and as a result had to have his arm amputated. Blood poisoning set in, and all that a loving mother and kind father and sympathizing friends and skill could do were unable to overcome the enemy, so he prevailed for a time.

Guy was a boy of good habits and well liked by all his companions. The pallbearers were six of his young companions. The parents and brothers and sisters are nearly prostrated.

In our discourse we pointed them as a source of comfort to him who stood by the grave of Lazarus and wept with his sisters, and then said, "Lazarus, come forth." Oh, how suddenly tears of sorrow were turned into tears of joy! Mary and Martha waited while Jesus was coming from beyond Jordan to Bethany; the suspense and agony were no doubt intense while they waited, but the kind and significant words and the tender voice of the Savior must have been like balm to their aching hearts. His words will mean the same thing to you sorrowing ones when the waiting time is over. ALMUS ADAMS.

John McCory

Bro. McCory was born December 18, 1834, and fell asleep March 11, 1913, at the ripe old age of 79 years, 2 months and 21 days.

He was united in marriage to Miss Anna Warman, with whom he lived happily until her death in 1864. To this union were born three children: Charlotte, Carrie and Isadora. He was again married on October 7, 1866, to Mrs. Elizabeth F. S. McNamara, with whom he lived until her death, March 13, 1895. Five children were born to this union: Mary, Grant, Schuyler, Lilly and Roscoe, all of whom survive him except Schuyler, who died two days following his mother.

He is survived by three brothers: William, Joseph, Philip; and two sisters, Mrs. Sarah Snyder and Mrs. Elizabeth Lee.

He leaves six children, four daughters and two sons, and one stepson, William McNamara, by his second wife; eleven grandchildren, seven stepgrandchildren, two great grandchildren, and a host of friends to mourn his loss.

Bro. McCory united with the Christian Church at Bridgeport, Ind., when he was quite young, with which he was identified until about 1868, when he united with the Advent Christian Church at Bridgeport, Ind., as one of its charter members. He was identified there for many years as an elder. He then moved his membership in 1903 to Hillsburg, Ind., being a firm believer and a true Christian until death.

A grand old man has been laid to rest, one who has not lived his life in vain. The same characteristic of his church was shown in his attachment to his country. He enlisted in his country's cause in 1863 in the 4th Indiana Cavalry. He was in all respects loyal to the trust. He was confined for six months in Andersonville prison.

He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic at Sheridan, Ind., and later transferred his membership to Salem, Ind., Samuel Reid Post No. 87, which accompanied the remains to their final resting place, thus showing the high regard in which he was held by them.

During his final illness of several weeks he was ever patient in his sufferings, always considerate of the loving hands that cared for him. His last words were: "Tell all my friends good-by. I hope to meet them all at the resurrection at the second coming of our Lord and Savior, where partings and good-bys will be no more."

The funeral was held at Bridgeport Thursday at 10 a. m. by Bro. Downs, of New Albany. He was laid to rest in the Miller Cemetery, to await the second coming of the Lord, when he only will be satisfied when he awakes in the likeness of his Savior.

EVANGELISTIC REPORT FOR FEBRUARY

The month in many ways was a busy one. When Mr. Savadge, a popular minister, advertised he would speak on the return of Ed Neal's ghost I tried to get him to let me have the forenoon of the next Sunday to reply. But he pointedly refused. He speaks every morning at the Gayety Theater, so I spent several busy days finding a place in which to reply. I finally secured the right to speak in the Lyric Theater, and had several hundred to hear me, and never had a more appreciative audience. To show how sincere those fellows are I will relate that, after he knew I was out of the city and so far away I could not get back at his specified time, he accepted my offer to debate the question, and limited the time of beginning so I could not possibly get back. He told his audience that if I was not there before noon it was all off, trying to make them believe that I was afraid to come. Bro. Hobart went to hear him and see fair play, and got up and told them why I was not there. He was not expecting anything like that. It is strange how dishonest those people will be, and still claim to be so full of the spirit.

On the 18th I purchased a ticket for Sunnyside, Wash., where Sister McClelland had interested some in the faith who wanted to be baptized. After traveling for two days and three nights over mountains and through valleys we arrived at our destination, where we found Sister McClelland, Sister Lapp and husband in waiting at the depot. After a hearty dinner at Sister McClelland's she took me over to one of the families that wished to be baptized, to further instruct them in the truth, which we did until sundown, when we damned up an irrigation ditch of pure, clear water, and planted three, who in the next instant had sprouted and come forth into new life.

With the help of Mr. Lapp we secured a building down town, and while a big meeting was going on, and part of the time two, we spoke to a few who were interested in the truth. I firmly believe that if the work could be followed up a congregation could be built up here.

After we had spoken several evenings and had talked privately with Sister McClelland's husband, he too decided to put on Christ. Bro. McClelland has been a teacher, and is a man that impresses one at first sight with the thought that he has been a man of clean habits. Sister Argent also has been a teacher, and her demeanor will tell you at once that you are in the presence of a very intelligent lady, one who would make her presence felt anywhere. It has not been my lot very many times to baptize four such intelligent and earnest people at one time. Sister McClelland certainly deserves a great deal of credit for interesting these people in the truth. Sister McClelland is not ashamed of the gospel, and, again, she believes in keeping it pure. May the Lord bless her. She has made a big sacrifice in many ways for these dear ones, but she will be well repaid. Wherever she goes we all know who know her that someone is going to hear the gospel that she believes. It would seem if she kept still that the rocks would cry out.

While at Sunnyside I had a pleasant visit with Sister Sullivan and family, formerly of St. Paul, Neb. They have a nice home and are well pleased with the country. It seemed good to meet them again. We also made our home part of the time with Sister Lapp and family, formerly of Mooresfield, Neb. Mr. Lapp was a valuable help in securing a place to hold our meetings and in other ways. We always enjoyed visiting them, and as much here in this far-away land as anywhere.

On our return we stopped at Spokane, Wash., and visited Mrs. Gurnesey, a daughter of Sister Calkins, of Kansas City, Kas., whom we had not seen since she was a bit of a girl. The first series of meetings I ever held was near Liberty, Mo., and I was called by her parents and made my home with them during my stay. How strange to meet her in her own home after so many years, and so far away!

I then made a side trip of thirty-four miles into Cœur de Alene, Idaho, and stayed over Sunand until Monday evening with Bro. and Sister Bartlett. Sister Bartlett is a daughter of Sister Johns, of Blair, Neb. I had not met them for ten years, and we surely put in the time talking of bygone days and other topics.

We then started on our long journey home, arriving safe and well, and just one train ahead of the big blizzard, for which we were thankful. So closed a month of hard work, but we trust in the kingdom to see and know that it was profitable. May our Father in heaven bless those who have entered the fight and help them to finish well.

Baptized at Kennard, 3.

After returning from Washington and resting a little I went to Kennard on the 23rd, which was Easter. The Sunday-school had prepared a program which was a credit to both teachers and scholars. In the evening our congregation was small, as the storm continued so late. We had intended to stay until Monday evening, but learned in the morning of the great cyclone, and as there was no way to hear particulars, as the wires were down, we hurried home, to find all safe. When we visited the path of the storm and saw great buildings torn to splinters, and whole blocks swept away clean, we thought, "how frail is man." It has been intimated by those who watched it enter the city from the southwest and pass out at the northeast, where it destroyed the Illinois Central bridge, that it was only about two minutes in operation. In so short a time two thousand five hundred were rendered homeless, one hundred and forty killed, and something like $5,000,000 worth of property destroyed.

When Jesus was here he calmed the wind; it obeyed his voice. So when he comes again, and there is no more curse, the storm, among other things, will go. The storm caught people in unprepared condition; just so, when Jesus comes, many will be caught eating and drinking, unready. But we are not in darkness, that that day should overtake us as a thief in the night.

On the 30th I again visited the brethren at Kennard. At eleven o'clock, after Sunday-school, I spoke from Job 7. In the afternoon at four we met and planted three more in the likeness of Christ's death.

Still others are nearly ready. May God bless and keep these to the perfect day. "Be faithful," says Jesus, "and I will give thee a crown of life."

Yours in the blessed hope,

ALMUS ADAMS.

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Seventh Seal; or the Sealing Angel and his Seal.

Text: Rev. 7:1-4.

1. Introductory. 1. "After these things" locates the events of this chapter "after" the sixth seal; hence they are part of the seventh seal (vs. 1; 8:1; 6:2).

2. Symbols of the Seventh Seal Explained.

1. "Four Angels." 1. Subjection of present world to angels, as its administrators, attested by scripture (Matt. 18:10; Deut. 32:8, Septuagint; Dan. 10:13, 20, 21; 12:1; 4:13, 14).

2. "Holding (Restraining) the Four Winds." 1. Winds in prophecy are symbolic of wars and commotions (Dan. 7:2; Jer. 4-11-13; 49:36, 37; 51:2; Matt. 28:18; 1 Pet. 3:22; Heb. 2:5).

3. "Earth," "Sea," and "Trees." 1. These are symbolic of church-sympathizers, the wicked, kings, potentates, and kingdoms (Rev. 12:16; Isa. 57:20; Rev. 21:1; Ezek. 17:24; Dan. 4:10-15; Matt. 13:31, 32).

4. "Another Angel," a Fifth Angel, the Sealing Angel. 1. He is a symbolic personage representive of a class of agents engaged in the work of sealing (vs. 3; 2 Cor. 5:17-20; 2 Tim. 2:2; Rev. present participle, as in our version, but the second aorist participle, signifying a past action. This angel started in the East, but was doing sealing work in the West when John saw him (Lk. 24:47; Col. 1:23; Rev. 12:6, 14).

5. The Seal. 1. Divine teaching applied to the forehead, the seat of intelligence (Job. 33:16; Dan. 9:24; Jno. 6:27; Eph. 1:13; Heb. 2:4; 2 Cor. 1:21).

3. Historical Application. 1. Unpopular as the truth is, and has always been, yet there has never been a time in history when its followers have not existed on earth (Dan. 7:21-27; Rom 11:2-5; Rev. 2:3; Eph. 3:21; Donatists, Gib. 2: 262, 204).

NOTICE TO NEBRASKA BRETHREN

Will the local collectors please do their best to have all Conference dues collected and sent in to the State Treasurer by May 1st? Those isolated, or whom a collector does not reach, may send directly to the Treasurer, whose address is: Mrs. Emma E. Davis, 3304 Taylor Street, Omaha, Neb. The dues are 50 cents from each sister and $1.00 from each brother.

"ELIJAH WENT UP BY A WHIRLWIND INTO HEAVEN"

(2 Kings 2:1, 11)

The ascension of the prophet Elijah to heaven by a whirlwind, as related by the texts given at the head of this article, has been misunderstood and misused by both the world and the church. It has been quoted by the world to prove and sunstain a precedent for heaven going at death for the good. Obviously this scripture can not be used legitimately to countenance this dogma; for Elijah ascended to heaven in a whirlwind, publicly and bodily, and without dying; whereas in the heaven-going taught by the world it is to be noted with proper wonder and amazement, is on "angels' wings," instead of a whirlwind; the spirit or soul, which Buck's Bible Dictionary calls "an immaterial substance," goes, instead of the body; and no one is permitted to go, no matter how good he may be, until he dies, whereas Elijah went without dying. Here we have no parallel, but positive antithesis.

But the Church of God, equally with the world, has misapprehended the meaning of Elijah's ascension. Some claim that the prophet was carried to the presence of God in mortal nature, and remains there to this day a mortal man—that God has supernaturally prolonged his natural life all these thousands of years! The mere statement of this fanciful imagination refutes it. Others upon whose ears this absurd view and unbiblical speculation has grated have objected to such dreamy, and improbable, and visionary expositions of God's word, and well they may. Only a spiritual body like Christ had after his resurrection is independent of atmospheric air for its support, as is proved by our Lord's ascension to the right hand of power. A mortal body can only live in water and air, and then only at a comparatively low altitude above the surface of the globe. The air only extends from forty to fifty miles above the surface of the earth; beyond that limit, therefore, even if it could be attained, mortals supported by the breath of life could no more live than fish in air. Beyond this belt of air is the ether through which no being depending on the inhaling and exhaling of the breath of life can pass and live. Only beings like angels, God, and his son Jesus, all of whom are spiritual beings, can live where there is no air. The only admissible conclusion, then, is that if Elijah has lived in heaven, the realm of celestial beings, for so many thousands of years without dying, he must be essentially a spiritual being, an immortalized body. But this theory only adds an absurdity to an absurdity. Paul makes one statement in his letter to the Hebrews which shatters this nebulous theory into atoms. He is representing that the Mosaic rites were all typical; and that by them the Holy Spirit "signified" that the "way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as the first tabernacle was yet standing" (Heb. 9:8). "It was not possible," he writes, "that the blood of bulls and of goats could take away sin" (10:4). The Mosiac sacrifices could not of themselves do this; they all had to be ratified by the death and blood of Christ. Now Elijah lived while the "first tabernacle was yet standing;" the "holiest of all" was not therefore "made manifest" to him. So this statment by Paul about the first covenant, and Christ's death as affecting those who were under it, is just as true of Elijah as anyone else who lived under it; "For this cause he is the mediator of the New Covenant, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgressors under the first covenant, they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance" (Heb. 9:15).

From this passage it appears that Christ's death was as much designed to effect the "redemption" of people under the "first covenant" as if no sacrifices had been offered under it. The claim that Elijah has been immortalized is certainly a very grave error; for it represents him as attaining the "holiest of all" by sacrifices which were powerless to "take away sin;" that the holiest of all had been "made manifest while as the first tabernacle was yet standing," while Paul says it was not! And it represents the prophet as realizing the "promise" before the death of Christ, the very "cause" and "means by which," Paul says, "they which are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance." If Elijah was immortalized and taken to heaven hundreds of years before Christ died, and has enjoyed the "holiest of all," and realized the "promise" prior to and independent of Christ's death, then he did not partake of the "redemption" effected by Christ's sacrifice, and so far as he is concerned the blood of Christ is an "unholy thing"—without worth or merit (Heb. 10:29). When the blood-washed throng break out in glad song in the morning of redemption and say, to the honor and glory of God, "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood" (Rev. 5:9), Elijah, not having been a beneficiary of Christ's death, but having been his own savior, will be banished from the heavenly choir to some anteroom in the kingdom, where, in the solitude of isolation, he can by himself sing his own praise forever more!! Dear reader, reject without hesitation or parley a doctrine so derogatory to the life and mission of our blessed Redeemer.

We now pass from prefatory remarks to the texts themselves: "When the Lord would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind;" "There appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven" (2 Kings 2:1, 11). Our remarks of explication will be under the headings: 1, Heaven; 2, Whirlwind; 3, And then the positive proof of our interpretation.

1. Heaven. David says in Psa. 115:16: "The heaven, even the heavens, are the Lord's; but the earth hath he given to the children of men." The contrast in his verse is very marked. While both heaven and earth are the Lord's in the sense of ownership, yet he has reserved "heaven, even the heavens," for himself, and has only "given" us the earth for our abode. He has never "given" the heavens to Elijah or any other man; we defy anyone to show that he has. If this prophet is in heaven he is a trespasser and usurper there. That the heavens "are the Lord's" in an exclusive sense we learn from Paul in 1 Tim. 6:16: "Dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see." Heaven where the deity dwells is a place of such "light" that "no man" can approach near it; for this reason no man has seen nor can see God. If Elijah ascended to heaven, let him be careful and not "approach" too near the Deity enthroned in "light!" That the Lord's throne, the place of his residence, is barred from all human beings, is plain from the challenge of Agur: "Who hath ascended to heaven or descended? Who hath gathered the wind in his fists? * * * What is his name and his son's name, if thou canst tell?" (Prov. 30:4). Heaven-going people, can you meet Agur's challenge? Show us a man who has "ascended up into heaven," and Agur will show you a man who can "gather the wind in his fist!" Pressed on this matter, all have to admit that the only "name" that ascended into heaven is spoken of in John 3:13: "No man hath ascended into heaven but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven." Angels have ascended and descended in all the different ages, but Christ is the only "man" that ever did ascend (and then only after he had been changed to an immortal being). Christ excepted, Enoch, Elijah or any other man, dead or living, never went to the heavens, into the abode and presence of God.

How, then are we to understand that Elijah "went up by a whirlwind into heaven?" Heaven, we must remember, does not always designate the place of God's throne. The original words in the Hebrew and Greek translated "heavens" only mean "heaved-up things," and are frequently applied to the air and sky (see Young's Concordance). In Gen. 1:6-8 the firmament, the "expansion" over our heads, is called "heaven" (verse 8). In this expansion or belt of air, extending, as we have observed before, some forty or fifty miles above the surface of the earth, the birds of the air are said to "fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven" (verse 20). Because they are denizens of the air or firmament they are called the "fowls of heaven" (Zeph. 1:3). That this is the "heaven" into which Elijah ascended is plainly indicated by the statement that he ascended

2. "By a whirlwind into heaven." Soon as the expansion was formed by dividnig the waters from the waters, those on the earth into rivers and seas, those above into mists and clouds, the "expansion" between them called air, before full of humidity and weight, now become rarified, and began to circulate in breezes and winds (Gen. 1: 1-30). Now air in motion is called "wind." The cool of the day is literally the "wind of the day" (margin, Gen. 3:8). The stirring of the air or wind was the means God used to assuage the waters after the flood (Gen. 8:1). When wind becomes violent, and moves with more than ordinary velocity (Hos. 8:7), with circuitous movements, it "whirls," hence "whirlwind" is a word which refines itself. Its whirling rolls chaff and other objects before it (Isa. 17:13), carries them long distances and scatters them all along its pathway (Isa. 11:16). But as a wind is only a disturbance of air, there can be no wind higher than the air belt. No object taken up by a whirlwind can go higher than the wind goes, for the simple reason that the attraction of the earth draws everything to its surface. Balloons and flying machines have to resist the power of attraction. The moment their power becomes exhausted or gets weaker than the earth's power of attraction they are speedily drawn to the earth. When a man ascends into the expansion in a balloon he will not go an inch higher than the balloon goes, for he is dependent on it to carry him every inch he gets away from the earth. A stone thrown upward does not ascend by centrifugal power; it is moved by an outward force, consequently when the activity of that force ceases the stone quickly falls to the ground. Such is the irresistable power of the earth's attraction over all things and mortals. But with Christ, after he was immortalized, it was quite different: the attraction of the earth had no power to hold him; and without balloon, aeroplane, whirlwind, wings or any kind of appendages to resist the earth's attraction he ascended up to the right hand of pore. Elijah, a man of "like passions with us" (Jas. 5:17), had no such power. It is a remarkable fact repeatedly stated that he ascended to heaven "in a whirlwind." This statement not only shows that the "heaven" into which Elijah ascended was the "expansion" above us where the wind moves, the place and the only place subject to whirlwinds, but it also shows that the whirlwind was the power or means "by" which the prophet was taken up. As a mortal he was dependent on some power to ascend; and as he ascended "by a whirlwind," he could not and did not go an inch higher than it went! Here reason and revelation join hand in hand. But putting reason, logic, induction, deduction and all other indirect evidences on the shelf, let us look at the

3. Positive proofs in the case.

1. The testimony of fifty sons of the prophets. They were attending the prophetic schools at Bethel and Jericho (2 Kings 2:3-7). No one can object to them or their testimony, for God revealed to them both the time and place of Elijah's ascension (verses 5, 7). It is not likely that God would reveal all this to them, and then leave them ignorant about the ascension itself. They witnessed the prophet's ascension (verse 15); we are anxious to hear what they thought about it. Listen to their opinion: "Behold, now there be with thy servant fifty strong men; let them go, we pray thee, and seek thy master; lest peradventure the spirit of the Lord hath taken him up, and cast him upon some mountain, or into some valley (verse 16). They sought him for three days (verse 17). Unlike moderns, these men, actual witnesses of Elijah's ascension, and therefore competent to have right views about it, had no idea that the prophet had left the earth permanently. Though he ascended into the firmament before their eyes, they had no other idea than that the spirit had dropped him upon "some mountain, or in some valley." Their failure to find him can not be urged as an argument that the prophet was not on earth. Because

2. The spirit of the Lord had before and frequently taken Elijah up, as it did here, and protected him in places of seclusion. In 1 Kings 17 we learn that he had spent three years (18:1) by the brook Cherith and at the home of a widow in Zarepath. No one knew where he was. One day Elijah met Obadiah in the way as he walked alone, and said to him: "Go tell thy Lord, Behold, Elijah is here" (18:7,8). Obadiah was afraid to deliver this message to Ahab. Why? Listen to the reason: "There is no nation or kingdom whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee; and when they said, He is not here, he took an oath of the kingdom, that they found thee not." None of his contemporaries, whether malevolent or friendly, thought he had migrated to the skies because he could not be found. God had only "hid" him (Jer. 36:26)) from his enemies. Now mark why Obadiah did not want to report, "Behold, Elijah is here:" "It shall come to pass as soon as I am gone from thee that the spirit of the Lord shall carry thee whither I know not; and so when I come and tell Ahab, and he can not find thee, he shall slay me" (1 Kings 18:12). That the spirit of the Lord had previously and frequently carried this prophet to "some mountain or into some valley," where he was fed by ravens, sustained by angels, and was protected from his enemies, is clearly apparent from Obadiah's words. So usual and common was it for the "spirit of the Lord" thus to carry away the prophet that Obadiah anticipated, were he to go and tell him he had seen Elijah, "as soon" as he left him, even before he could return to the spot where Elijah then was, the spirit would carry him to some unknown place! In that case his report would appear to be a lie, and for this Ahab would slay him. Such operations of the spirit upon Elijah, I repeat, must have been very common, or Obadiah could not have entertained such fears. Instead, then, of his ascension being unusual, something that had never occurred before, it was usual and recurrent. No more can be claimed for one ascension than another. And lastly we affirm

3. That to other prophets the same phenomenon has occurred. Ezekiel says (3:12, 14): "The spirit took me;" "The spirit lifted me up, and took me away." Jesus was "led up of the spirit into the wilderness" (Matt. 4:1). "The spirit of the Lord caught away Philip" (Acts 8:39). When the Lord comes the saints are to be caught up into the air (1 Thess. 4:17). No more can be claimed for Elijah's ascension than is claimed for the same language when applied to Ezekiel, Jesus, Philip and the saints. And here we rest our case.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES

Dear Restitution:

Last week we left you in the midst of a meeting at Corvallis. We continued the meeting all through the week, enjoying the fellowship of the brethren. On Thursday Bro. H. J. Prosser, son of Bro. W. A. Prosser, of Scholls, Oregon, came over from Newport and visited with us until Saturday morning. He spoke for us on Friday evening, delivering an interesting discourse on "The Inheritance of the Saints." It began raining on Thursday morning, and continued with hardly a cessation until some time Sunday night. At this writing the water is very high, but they anticipate no trouble. We had a fine attendance all through, especially of our own people. The rain in no way interfered with their attendance, it not being anything unusual. There is a great deal of rain here in the winter time.

Much credit should be given to Bro. Darby for keeping the brotherhood together at this point, as well as keeping the Northern Conference alive. If he drops the work the church will soon be a matter of history in this section of Oregon and Washington. Saturday morning Bro. and Sister Palmer and Sister Belshaw came on from Eugene. Bro. Darby and I went to the train to meet them, but imagine our surprise when the train came and no one appeared, and on returning home we found they had come over on an earlier train and were at Sister Cady's home, having a good visit with her. We went over there for dinner. After dinner we called at Bro. Darby's and Bro. Morgan's, talking of the things concerning the kingdom of God and kindred subjects. Our stay among these brethren so far has been unusually pleasant.

We were glad to notice that the young people of the brethren's families, as a rule, attended all of the services. Some of our people in some localities seem to enjoy the fellowship of the nominal churches. We tried to point out to them the folly of doing any good among them; as the apostles said, "They would always be learning, but never able to come to a knowledge of the truth." This has been our experience everywhere that our brethren have gone into other churches, thinking they could help to show them the truth. My brother, my sister, what has been your experrence? I do not recall a single instance where any of our brethren have succeeded in teaching anyone the truth where the people have come out and taken a stand for it. I do know some who claim they believe our views, but they still remain with their own church, and our brethren are still teaching them the truth, but we have failed to find any that have come to the knowledge of it.

Brethren, did it ever occur to you that churches which bow down to sociables, bazaars and all kinds of things that the world bows down to, that there was something wrong with the gospel that they believed, that the light they were bearing was not the kind of light Jesus said was light? If we have the right kind of light, will it lead us into unfruitful works of darkness, or rather to do the same things that the powers of darkness do? What does Paul say? "For ye were some times darkness, but now are ye light in the Lord." When were ye light in the Lord? When you believed the gospel, of course. Now, what shall we do? Why, walk in among the churches, teach them the truth, have a home somewhere? Let's see. Oh, yes: "Walk as children of light, proving what is acceptable unto the Lord; and have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them." Brethren, if we have the light, let us walk as children of light, May God give us grace to keep ourselves aloof from the garments spotted by the flesh, always abounding in the work of the Lord. Stand by the truth; stand for the truth, even if you have no home. Remember that, like the men of faith, we are pilgrims and strangers on the earth, desiring a better country, wherefor God is not ashamed to be called our God, and that he hath prepared for us a city. Should we not be ashamed to call God our God if, after we have laid hold of the gospel, we find ourselves joined to a home that worships the things the world worships, viz., banqueting, strife, merchandising bazaars, revellings, and such like? Awake, thou that sleepest, and rise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light," not join some nominal church and be lulled to sleep. In every case we have found brethren of the one faith in one of these homes we have found them lulled to sleep and their light gone out. If one of them did happen to awake out of his sleep he soon sought a different home to dwell in. Brethren, these are momentous times; signs are fast fulfilling; the Lord is nigh at hand. Let us cast all our cares upon him, and be ready for his appearing, not eating and drinking with the drunken, and have our portion with the hypocrites, but as a faithful servant deserving of the reward of our faithfulness.

This leaves us at Corvallis, expecting to continue the meetings possibly another week. Below we give you report for the month of March. The reason for so few services, unable to get a house to hold meetings in.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Bro. Huggins:

Am enclosing two dollars as a little Easter offering, to be used as you think best. If it is useful in the "Sermon Fund" I shall be glad. There is certainly a great need for spreading the truth and letting the light shine into darkened minds. God's word is precious; and as it is the only means of salvation it should be a duty and a joy to send it out.

I do appreciate The Restitution very much and the efforts of all the dear brothers and sisters who work to make it a success.

Trusting that God's blessing may be yours in your work, and that he may make you a blessing to many, I remain your sister in the blessed hope,

LILIAN S. MASON.

SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST

Opens April 1, 1913, Closes June 30, 1913

READ ABOUT THE SPECIAL AWARDS TO BE GIVEN TO CONTESTANTS WHO SECURE NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE RESTITUTION. Read every word, so that you will be thoroughly familiar with every detail.

FIRST—THE AWARDS

FIRST AWARD—To the person who secures the largest number of new yearly subscriptions to The Restitution between the dates of April 1, 1913, and June 30, 1913, we will give free a TWENTY-YEAR GUARANTEED GOLD-FILLED WATCH, with choice of Elgin, Waltham or Deuber-Hampton movement, either ladies' or gentlemen's size. This is a beautiful watch and a splendid timepiece. You can also choose a plain or fancy case.

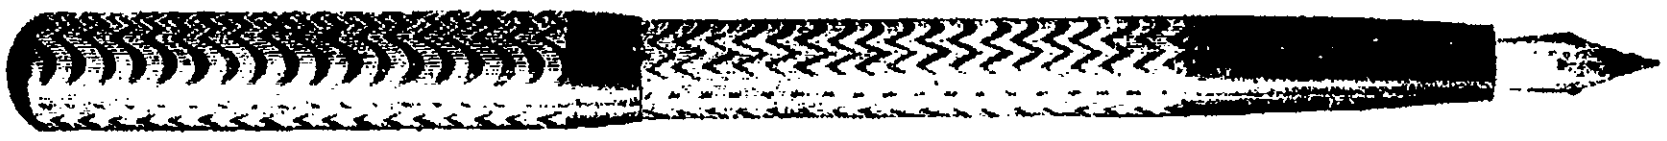
THIRD AWARD—For the third largest list we will give an extra large 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN, barrel covered with silver filigree work.

SPECIAL AWARDS—Besides these first three awards, we will give to everyone who sends in at least one new subscriber a handsome and useful POCKET MEMORANDUM BOOK.

To everyone who sends in at least two new subscribers a 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN like cut, or to everyone who sends in at least three new subscribers we will give a 14k. SOLID GOLD SELF-FILLING FOUNTAIN PEN. These pens are all fully guaranteed.



So you see, everyone who enters into this contest will receive some kind of an award for their efforts; the greater the effort, the greater the award, and everyone will have the same opportunity.

NOW READ THESE CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each subscriber to count must be a NEW subscriber. NO RENEWALS WILL COUNT.
2. Two six-months' subscriptions count as one yearly.
3. Subscriptions must be received after midnight March 31 and before June 30th, at midnight, to count.
4. If two contestants send the same number of subscribers in competing for the first three awards duplicate awards will be given.
5. All awards will be given at the end of the contest.
6. And this is going to be the best help of all: NEW SUBSCRIBERS WILL BE RECEIVED DURING THIS CONTEST at the special rate of

One Dollar a Year : 50c Six Months

This rate does not apply to renewals. To subscriptions in Canada add 50 cents.

We believe the above offer to be very liberal—liberal to the new subscribers, liberal to you who are to get the new subscribers.

Why do we give these awards? To stimulate your interest in helping us increase our mailing list and to get The Restitution into the many homes where it should be read. We want to increase the size of The Restitution, but in order to do this we must increase the size of the mailing list first, so THE BIG EFFORT IS STARTED AND THE CONTEST IS ON - and remember, EVERYONE WILL RECEIVE AN AWARD.

THE NEW BIRTH; OR HOW AN INDIVIDUAL IS BORN OF WATER AND THE SPIRIT

A Sermon By J. H. Thomas, M. D.

The apostle Paul says in his epistle to the Corinthians that "flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God;" and as the same apostle also says, in his letter to the Thessalonians, that "God had called them unto his kingdom and glory," it is important that we understand how persons of a flesh and blood nature, who have been called to God's kingdom and glory, are to inherit it; for the Savior says: "Many are called, but few chosen." The logical deduction from the words of the Savior is that the large number of the many that are called to God's kingdom either fail to understand, or will not comply with, God's revealed way of putting off the flesh and blood nature, and putting on an incorruptible nature, which is the only nature that can "enter" or inherit the kingdom of God. This is clear from Paul's words: "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality."

Believing, then, that the scriptures teach that this change from corruptibility to incorruptibility is brought about by being "born again," or "born from above," leads us to the consideration of "the new birth."

In John 3:3 we are told that Jesus said to Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews: "Except a man be born again (born from above—Diaglott) he can not see the kingdom of God."

The call to God's kingdom and glory was commenced by Jesus in person to the Jews of that generation, as recorded by Mark in these words: "Now, after John was imprisoned, Jesus came into Galilee publishing the glad tidings of God and saying, The time has been accomplished and God's royal majestey has approached; reform and believe the good message" (Diaglott).

This call to the Jews had been sounded by Jesus through every city and village (see Luke 8:1), and telling them that "God's royal majesty had unexpectedly appeared among them" (Matt. 12: 28—Diaglott), or as rendered in the common version, "the kingdom of God has come unto you." Nicodemus had been attracted by this announcement, and, being a ruler of the Jews himself, and not understanding the nature of the kingdom proclaimed in glad tidings, but believing that Jesus spoke with authority, having "come from God," he evidently sought Jesus with a view of securing for himself a continuation of his rulership in the kingdom which Jesus announced. Jesus, evidently perceiving the thought of his heart, said unto him: "Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God." This was a startling announcement to Nicodemus, which his unenlightened understanding could not comprehend, and he immediately asks: "How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?" showing by the questions he asked that his thought rose no higher than the natural man.

He did not understand the difference between the kingdom of Israel or of God, under the Mosiac constitution of things, and the kingdom of God under the constitution of things to be established by Jesus. He did not understand that while "flesh and blood" could inherit and rule in the one, that it was necessary to become incorruptible in order to inherit and rule in the other. Hence the answer of Jesus again (5th verse): "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the spirit he can not enter the kingdom of God; that which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit."

This was not only an answer to the question, How can a man be born when he is old? but an explanation of the first answer given by Jews in the third verse: "Except a man be born again, or born from above, he can not see the kingdom of God."

We see then that to be born from above a man must be born of water and of spirit; he then becomes a spirit, or incorruptible in nature, and can enter or inherit the kingdom. But just here the question arises: What is it to be born of water and so be born from above?

As there can be no birth without a begettal, I answer in accordance with what we have written, that to be the subject of a new birth a man must first be begotten by the spirit, or Word; then be quickened, or his begettal made manifest by obedience, which is being born of water in the act of baptism or immersion; after which he must continue to be nourished by the Word, or Spirit; "continue in the apostle's doctrine and teaching" until he is brought to the birth, which takes place at the coming of Jesus, and which is, if the subject of it be dead, a resurrection to incorruptibility and life; if the subject be living, it is a change to incorruptibility.

Having affirmed the above propositions, we will endeavor to show that such is the scripture teaching; in so doing we will establish the last proposition first, namely, that a change to incorruptibility, or a resurrection to incorruptibility and life, is the birth.

That "conversion," or "change of heart," is not being "born again," as popular teaching has it, is evident from the fact that, though a man be converted, or have his heart changed, he is still "flesh and blood;" whereas Jesus says that "he that is born of spirit is spirit;" that is, he is no longer flesh and blood, but incorruptible or deathless, as we shall see. Again Paul says: "Flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God." Is not that man who is converted still flesh and blood?

Yet Jesus says, or teaches that he that is born again can enter the kingdom of God; therefore, those who teach that a man who is converted is born again, not only make Paul contradict Jesus, but make Jesus affirm that which is not true.

But, again, if a man is born again at conversion, when and how is he begotten? It is evident that popular teaching confounds begettal with the birth of the Spirit; therefore we must turn to the scriptures for instruction. If, then, the birth of the Spirit, or being born again, is, as I have affirmed, to be made incorruptible, or raised from the dead to die no more, then Christ, who was begotten by the Spirit, must have been born again, for Paul says: "Christ being raised from the dead dieth no more; death hath no more dominion over him" (Rom. 6:9). If he could die no more he must have become incorruptible—born again, born of Spirit. The following passages will show this to be correct:

Rev. 1:5: "And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness and the first-born (chief born—Diaglott) of the dead, and the Prince of the kings of the earth."

Rom. 8:29: "For whom he did foreknow he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first-born among many brethren."

Col. 1:5, 18: "Who is the image of the invisible God—the first-born of every creature; and he is the head of the body, the Church; who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence."

We submit the passages quoted as positive proof that to be raised from the dead to incorruptibility and life is to be "born again"—"born of spirit." Hence, says Paul (Rom: 8:11): "If the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead will also make alive your mortal bodies through the in-dwelling of his spirit within you" (Diaglott).

The Spirit of God, by which a man is begotten, continuing to dwell in him, eventually, by the power of God, brings him to the birth, and changes him to incorruptibility, and he becomes a "new creation in Christ Jesus," both in mind and body, and therefore, being born from above, or born of Spirit, he is spirit. This being true, Jesus became spirit, not a "phantasma," or phantom, nor yet a ghost, or immortal soul creation of popular theology, but an incorruptible being or spirit, whom Paul affirms to be "an exact impress of the substance of God" (Heb. 1:3—Diaglott).

Also in 1 Cor. 15:45 Paul says: "And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit" (life-giving Spirit—Diaglott).

As God is a spirit, so Jesus, through a birth from the dead, became, in the words of Paul, "an exact impress of the substance of God," a spirit-giving life from the dead to all that are his, for he says:

"As the Father has life in himself, so he gave also to the Son to have life in himself; for as the Father raises up and makes alive the dead, so also the Son makes alive whom he pleases" (John 5: 21, 26, Diaglott).

We now proceed to prove the second proposition, and show that to be "born of water" is to be quickened by the spirit in the act of baptism. As the resurrection of Christ to incorruptibility or spirit substance—a new life to die no more—is a birth of the spirit, so a resurrection from a watery grave, in the act of immersion, to lead a new life, is a birth of the water, for water is used in scripture as an emblem of spirit. We die to sin, are buried in water, and rise to walk in a new life, in a new character. This is clear from the words of Paul to the Romans, 6:3, etc.: "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that, like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life; for if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall also be in the likeness of his resurrection. * * Now if we be dead with Christ we believe we shall live with him. Knowing that Christ, being raised from the dead, dieth no more, death hath no more dominion over him; for in that he died, he died unto sin once; but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. Likewise reckon ye yourselves dead unto sin but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Now as Christ's resurrection from the dead to a new nature, incorruptibility and life was a birth from the grave, as being born of spirit, so being dead to sin and buried in water, our resurrection therefrom to a new character or life of the mind is a birth from the water, is the quickening by the spirit.

It will be understood that in a birth of the flesh there is first a begettal, of which, however, there is no positive evidence until quickening takes place. Quickening is simply action of the body, the first evidence or sign of life. So in the birth of the spirit: there is first a begettal by the spirit, but the first positive evidence of that begettal or reception of the word into the minds is action of the body in obedience to the faith by immersion in water, thus showing that the spirit has quickened or made alive the mind, which causes the individual, as says Paul, "to walk in newness of life." Thus a new creature or creation in Christ Jesus has been begotten and quickened by the Spirit, evidenced by a birth from the water of the individual in the act of immersion; hence Paul says to the Colossions, 2:12, 13: "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him, through faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead. And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses."

As an individual is born by the Spirit by resurrection from the grave to incorruptibility, leaving behind him his corruption, sinful, fleshly nature, so when he is born from a watery grave he leaves behind him his sinful character, the old thoughts and doings of the flesh, and walks in newness of life. Such an individual, if he continues to be nourished by the Spirit, by continuing in all the apostles' doctrine and teaching, will, when Christ comes, be born of the Spirit by a resurrection from the dead to incorruptibility and life, and inherit the kingdom of God.

Having shown what it is to be born of the spirit, and born of water, we will now endeavor to see how we are begotten by the Spirit. The importance of understanding this will appear to every mind that stops to consider the words of Jesus: "Except a man be born of water and of spirit he can not enter the kingdom of God."

That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit. It will not do to pass this over carelessly without giving it thought; for flesh and blood can not enter the kingdom of God. It is absolutely necessary, then, that we be born again, born from above, born of spirit, and so become like Jesus, "a spirit giving life." As no one can be quickened by the spirit, nor born of spirit unless he be first begotten by the spirit, the importance of understanding how an individual can be begotten by the spirit will, I think, be fully realized by every thinking person. It is to be deeply regretted that there are so many earnest seekers after truth, many who sincerely believe they are accepted of God, having much light, who have rejected the dogma of immortal-soulism, and rejoice in the knowledge of the truth that there is life only in Christ, have been immersed, and believe in the literal personal reign of Christ on the earth, and yet have never been begotten by the spirit, and hence have never been quickened, or scripturally baptized, and therefore can never be born of spirit and have a right to enter the kingdom of God unless they do their first work over, and, like Apollos, learn the way more perfectly.

Our right to enter the kingdom of God depends upon our becoming the children of God by begettal and birth of the spirit; therefore God, in his wisdom and goodness, has made plain how children of the flesh may be begotten by the spirit. Everyone understands how persons are begotten of the flesh or corruptible seed, but how a person is begotten of "incorruptible seed" is not so well understood, and can not be understood except by those who are the "taught of God" by his word. We would say here, then, that to be begotten of the spirit is to have the incorruptible seed planted or sown in the heart or mind. The question then arises: "What is the incorruptible seed?"

On this question Peter will best enlighten us. He says: "Being begotten (Diaglott) again, not of corruptible seed but of incorruptible, by the word of God which liveth and abideth forever."

The incorruptible seed, then, is the word of God. But the question naturally arises: What Word of God? or How much of the Word of God? for it would require a lifetime for the most astute to have a comprehensive knowledge of all of God's Word. If such were necessary the law of faith or of Christ would, like the law of Moses, be unto death through the weakness of the flesh. But here again Peter makes it very plain. He says: "And this is the Word by which the gospel is preached unto you" (1 Peter 1:23, 25).

With this passage before us there can be no disputation as to what the incorruptible seed is, and how we are begotten by it. It will be clearly seen that the Word of Gospel announced by "the gospel is the incorruptible seed," or germ of life—that by which every child of God is begotten. Such, at least, is the plain testimony of Peter.

But what says James? In the 1st chapter and 18th verse he says: "Of his own will begat he us with the Word of Truth." But is the "Word of Truth" the gospel? We will let Paul answer. He says, in writing to the Ephesians: "In whom ye also trusted after ye heard the Word of Truth, the gospel of your salvation."

It is very clear, then, from the testimony of Peter and James that the "incorruptible seed," the "Word of God" that begets, is the gospel. There can, then, be no part of the revelation of Deity so important to man as the gospel. Paul was not ashamed of it, and declares it to be "the power of God unto salvation." No man, then, can be begotten by the spirit who has not a comprehensive understanding of the gospel. He must first have heard, understood and believed that, being immersed for the remission of sins, he is introduced into the Name—"the only name given under heaven whereby men can be saved"—and is then the begotten son of God. It is important, then, to know what the gospel is by which we are begotten. Paul will help us to an understanding of this, for he tells the Corinthian brethren that in Christ Jesus he had begotten them through the gospel. Now, as there is but one gospel, as there is but one faith and one hope, it is evident that the gospel which Paul preached, and through which he begat the Corinthian brethren, is the only gospel that will beget children of God at this present day. Therefore every truly honest man must turn with pleasure to the Word, that they may ascertain what gospel Paul announced, what glad tidings he proclaimed. If we turn to Acts 28:23, 30, 31, we there read:

"There came many to him into his lodgings to whom he expounded and testified the kingdom of God, persuading them concerning Jesus, both out of the law of Moses and out of the Prophets, from morning till evening. And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came unto him, proclaiming the kingdom of God and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ." We find, then, that the gospel Paul proclaimed was the glad tidings of God's kingdom in connection with things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ.

We see that Paul did not merely tell the inquirers after truth that God would set up a kingdom on the earth, but the Word says he "expounded the kingdom;" that is, he explained it, made it clear that they might understand it, for this was necessary to their hearty belief and reception of the truth, that they might be begotten thereby. He not only "expounded the kingdom," but "persuaded them concerning Jesus." As we are informed in Acts 18:8, Paul mightily convinced the Jews publicly, showing by the scriptures that Jesus was Christ. He referred them to Moses and the Prophets as proof that he was the seed of Abraham to whom the promises were made (see Gal. 3:16); that he was the promised seed of David, and therefore heir to David's throne, and that God had fulfilled his promise to the fathers to raise him from the dead (see Acts 13:17-36); that through him was preached the forgiveness of sins (see Acts 13:38); that "as many as were immersed into Christ had put on Christ, and were Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise," which promise embraced the land or territory of that kingdom which he had expounded or explained to them, and made Abraham and his seed "heirs of the world;" that in Abraham and his seed should "all the nations of the earth be blessed;" that "his seed should possesses the gate of his enemies, or rule over them" (Gen. 12:1, 3; 13:14, 17; 22:17, 18; Rom. 4:12, 13). It is clear, then, that the "incorruptible seed" which Paul cast abroad, and by which believers were begotten, was the gospel, or things concerning the kingdom of God and name of Jesus Christ.

Ought not every reader of this sermon who claims to be in Christ heed the injunction of Paul: "Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith," and ask himself this question: Was it this incorruptible seed which was sown in my heart before I was immersed, or have I come to a knowledge and belief of these things since my immersion? It is plain that the hearing and believing the glad tidings of the kingdom and things concerning Jesus the anointed King, as announced by Paul, begat the Corinthian brethren. Can anything else beget us, anything but the gospel of the kingdom? Let Paul's words answer this question: "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel until you, let him be accursed" (Gal. 1:8).

But it is said by some that in 1 Cor. 15 the three facts, namely, the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ are called the gospel. This is a delusion which a more careful reading ought to dispel. Paul calls their attention to the glad tidings which he had announced to them, and which he says they received, and through which they were saved, if, as he says, "you retain a certain word I evangelize to you; for I deliver to you among the first things (not in first order, but pre-eminent, or 'chief things,' see Diaglott) that which I also received, that Christ died for our sins according to the scriptures," that he was buried, and raised the third day, according to the scriptures." We see, then, that the death, burial and resurrection of Christ was not all that Paul announced when he preached the gospel to the Corinthians, but was among the chief things.

There were other pre-eminent or "chief things," which, we are told in Acts, were "things concerning the kingdom of God." It will also be observed that when Paul announced the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ he says he did so according to the scriptures, which no one can do without announcing the things concerning the kingdom of God, for he was crucified because he claimed to be the Messiah—the Son of God, and King of the Jews. Hence we find when Philip went down to Samaria to sow the incorruptible seed, or "preach Christ unto them," that he announced the glad tidings "concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ," which, "when they believed, they were baptized, both men and women," and so were begotten of God by the spirit through hearing the "Word of the kingdom." We see it was impossible for Philip to preach Christ "according to the scriptures" without announcing the things of the kingdom, so I may add, to preach "life" only in Christ, according to the scriptures, it is necessary to announce that "Jesus Christ hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel;" therefore the life and immortality in Christ can be obtained only by a hearty belief of the gospel, and obedience hereto by immersion into the all-saving Name. "He that believeth the gospel, and is immersed, shall be saved," are the words of Jesus, and he doeth well who taketh heed thereto.

We find, then, from the testimony of the Apostles that the incorruptible seed sown by them, by which believers were begotten, was the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, to which were added "the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ" after he arose and opened their understanding that they might see "that it behooved Christ to suffer and rise from the dead, and that repentance and remission of sins be preached in his name." If we turn to Matt. 13, and Luke 8 we find that the Master himself sowed the same "incorruptible seed," "the Word of the kingdom," teaching his disciples that it must fall into "good and honest hearts" and be "understood" in order to produce fruit or bring forth children of the kingdom.

With all this testimony before us we think it should be plain to everyone how a child of God is generated from a man of flesh and blood; in other words, how a person is begotten of spirit and born of spirit that he may have a right to enter the kingdom of God. A summary of what we have written is, that to be born from above a man must:

1. Have a "good and honest heart," as the seed will not bear fruit in any other (Luke 8:11, 15).

2. He must have the incorruptible seed or "Word of the kingdom sown in his heart" (Matt. 13:19, 23); or, in other words, he must hear "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12).

3. He must have a comprehensive understanding of the things (Matt. 13:23).

4. He must believe the things with a lively faith.

5. He must obey the faith by immersion in water for the remission of sins, and for introduction into the all-saving Name, in the doing of which he is "born of water" or quickened by the Spirit (Mark 16:16; Acts 3:38; Rom. 16:25, 26; Col. 2:12, 13).

6. He must be nourished by the spirit, "the Word," by continuing steadfast in the apostles' doctrines and fellowship, and in breaking of bread and in prayers (Acts 2:41, 42).

7. He will, then, at the return of Jesus, be born of spirit (if dead) by a resurrection to incorruptibility and life; (if living) by a change from a corruptible flesh-and-blood nature to an incorruptible spirit nature, and so, being born of spirit, he will be spirit and have a right to inherit the kingdom of God (Rom. 8:11; 6:5, 9; John 3:6; 1 Cor. 15).

"Examine yourselves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves" (Paul).

"Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall" (Paul).

AT THE DOORS

We ought to go with lifted head,
Redemption is so nigh;
Almost a score of centuries dead
Since Jesus went on high.

It is a time of cheer,
Sweet summertime is near;
The stir of sap is in the fig,
The leaves upon the tender twig,
On all the trees appear.

These be tempestuous days,
Of quaking, rending rocks;
Death brooding in the haze,
And hunger-bitten flocks.

It is a time of cheer,
Sweet summertime is near;
The stir of sap is in the fig,
The leaves upon the tender twig,
On all the trees appear.

Men starved and fevered die,
Earth shudders at her wars;
We know that he is nigh,
Yea, even at the doors.

It is a time of cheer,
Sweet summertime is near;
The stir of sap is in the fig,
The leaves upon the tender twig,
On all the trees appear.

Sacrifice

The spirit of sacrifice can not be too highly valued. Its presence or absence has always marked the difference between the loving, sympathetic, generous and heroic man and the cruel, hard, selfish and mercenary one. Human nature, everywhere and always, bows in reverence before the spirit which inspires a man to give up pleasure or advantage and accept pain or deprivation for some object or person outside of himself. This it is which has enabled the martyr to suffer for his principle and the hero to die in defense of his country; this it is which supports and makes possible the loving, patient and helpful lives of thousands of men and women who endure hardship without a murmur and spend their lives in joyful devotion to some good cause which they have at heart or to some beloved ones who are dearer to them than their own private happiness.

Pleasure is a shadow, but knowledge is ecstatic in enjoyment, perennial in fame, unlimited in space and infinite in duration. In the performance of its great offices it fears no danger, spares no expense, looks into the volcano, dives into the ocean, perforates the earth, wings its flight into the skies, encircles the globe, explores sea and land, contemplates the distant, examines the minute, comprehends the great, ascends to the sublime. There is no place too remote for its grasp, no sphere too exalted for its reach.

A FREQUENT MISQUOTATION

A correspondent of the Methodist Recorder, says Bro. Aldridge, points out that the Conference Address recently published contained a misquotation of scripture which is very common in speech and writing. The sentence to which objection was taken reads as follows: "The cause of our early success is written so plainly that he who runs may read." The words thus italicized take us back to Habakkuk 2:2: "Write the vision and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it." In the words of the correspondent, "The Lord did not say to the prophet that 'he who runs may read,' but that 'he may run that readeth it'—which is different thing altogether. It was not a question of making the writing so plain and legible that a man who happened to be running might be able to read it; but that the vision, or message, was of such profound importance that it was to be made quite plain, i. e., no ambiguity about it—so that a man who read it might at once perceive its importance and urgency, and run, hasten, to make it known to others. The misquotation calls attention to the writing; the correct quoting calls attention to the importance of the message.

THOUGHT HIS CHURCH ASSESSMENT TOO HIGH

A man once said to Sam Jones:

"Jones, the church is putting my assessment too high."

Jones asekd: "How much did you pay?"

"Five dollars a year," was the reply.

"Well," said Jones, "how long have you been converted?"

"About four years," was the answer.

"Well, what did you do before you were converted?"

"I was a drunkard."

"How much did you spend for drink?"

"About two hundred and fifty dollars a year."

"How much were you worth?"

"I had rented land and plowed a steer."

"What have you got now?"

"I have a good plantation and a pair of horses."

"Well," said Sam Jones, "you paid the devil two hundred and fifty dollars a year for the privilege of plowing a steer on rented land, and now you don't want to give the Lord who saved you five dollars a year for the privilege of plowing horses on your own plantation! You are a rascal from the crown of your head to the soles of your feet."—Standard.

SLANDER

The slanderer, says R. L. Whiteside, has been styled "a character assassin." Generally he is too cowardly to make his attacks in the open. He is a sneak, usually preferring to do his work as secretly as possible. This gives you no chance of defense. He is a whisperer, a backbiter. In showing the spiritual and moral corruption into which those who refused to have God in their knowledge had plunged themselves, Paul mentions this crime along with murder and the basest crimes known to man (Rom. 1:28-32). God says to the wicked, "Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother; thou slanderest thine own mother's son" (Ps. 50: 16-20).

Slander comes from a corrupt, malicious heart. More; it is corruption and malice seeking to harm someone so far as possible. It is a malignant evil. The slandered would be glad if he could find some evil in your life that he could magnify to your hurt. He would be glad to find that your character is as bad as he represents it to be. But, in fact, he can do your character no harm, unless his words stir you up to do something which you should not do. Herein is the great danger to you. Hold your tongue; keep your temper; pray for strength.

God severely condemns the slanderer. What is your attitude toward such a one? Suppose he slanders you; that is different, eh? "Well," says one, "I have no right to complain so long as he treats me right." Our estimate of sin depends greatly on the way it affects us personally. Is that just and right? You do not respect a thief, no matter from whom he steals. Is not slander worse than thievery? Stealing may grow out of need; slander comes from a vicious heart. In the following lines Shakespeare give a clear estimate of these things: "Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something, nothing; 'twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands. But he who filches from me my good name robs me of that which not enriches him, and makes me poor indeed!"

Perhaps the last clause in the foregoing might be somewhat modified if the slandered one be a faithful child of God. David said: "Commit thy way unto Jehovah; trust also in him, and he will bring it to pass.' And he will make thy righteousness to go forth as the light, and thy justice as the morning" (Ps. 37:5, 6). Again: "The Lord is my helper; I will not fear; what shall man do unto me?" (Heb. 13:6). God watches over his faithful child, and under his care all things work together for his good. If you walk uprightly, God shows himself strong in your behalf. Worry not about the other fellow's malice toward you; no man can hurt you if you please God. God set a limit on Satan's afflictions of Job; beyond that satan could not go. God is your shield, and your life is hid with Christ in God; and though the malignancy of the wrath of the slanderer is directed toward you God takes notice of the perverseness of his heart and will hold him to strict account and make the mischief of his malice fall on his own head.

What is your attitude toward the slanderer? Do you become vindictive when he slanders you? That is wrong. Are you indifferent when he slanders another? That is also wrong. It is not a personal matter. Are we to condemn or excuse a man according to the way his sins affect us personally? If so, we have a very low standard of right. The slanderer sins against God, not against you. He violates God's laws, not yours. God so recognizes it, and commands Timothy to turn away from such (2 Tim. 3:1-5). The Christian who fails to do this becomes a partaker with the slanderer in his sins and also disobeys the command of God.

WHY?

It is a common understanding that men dodge even the quotation of such scriptures as treat on the subject of baptism for the remission of sins, observes G. W. Savage. Why is this? Are they dishonest and have no fear of God? And do they never think of death and the judgment when men must give answer for every act and deed? Yet there are thousands of men and women, who otherwise are zealous for the teaching of God's word, who do this very thing continually. It is not long since a preacher who stands high in the mysterious perversions of God's will and the process of the unscriptural act of "getting religion," who in one of his "great sermons" on salvation came right up to the 38th verse of the Acts of the Apostles, and before a large congregation of people refused to even read it. He read the 37th verse, asking the question as to what to do, and said these people cried out for salvation, yet did not give them the scriptural answer glaring them in the face, and written by the finger of God. Instead of this he gave them another answer, directly contrary to the one the Lord of the world gives plainly written. Peter said: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus, for the remission of sins." This is a well known statement. It has been fully tested by the scholarship of the world. If men who do not believe it, and most of them do not, could have, by their keen scholarship, translated it out of the Bible, it would have long since been relegated to the past; no child, however simple and believing, would now even get to read it. No man or woman would know it except as a spurious passage not authorized by the word of God, and the world, without remorse of conscience, would be rushing to eternity unconscious of the divine command. But God did not put it there to be rubbed out. It was his divine will that men should be baptized—just why, he has not revealed, but it is true. He couched it in such unmistakable language that all the men on earth can not move it, and it remains, after the awful assaults, as pure and as easy to understand as it was when three thousand people understood and obeyed it on the day of Pentecost. God will not allow it to die. It will remain until the coming of the Lord. The actions of men, as a rule, are as this one. Even the Bible-makers—those who prepare helps for Bible study—either leave it out of these helps or fix questions and answers so as to put it in the background and destroy the force of its meaning. Why do they do this? They well know that it is there by the inspiration of God. It is hard to accuse men of dishonesty; it is equally as hard to say they are insincere—for men who dare to teach God's word are guilty of an awful condemnation if they handle it deceitfully. But one thing is sure; that one thing is that every time Acts 2:38, Mark 16:15-16, Acts 22:16, John 3:5, and a number of other passages on the baptism question are read, or quoted, the whole fabric of the "mourners' bench" is swept from the face of the earth. The doctrine of justification by faith only is forever gone and all the creeds destroyed. There then would be but one simple way to the tree of life, and all could see it. That way would not be the 'mourners' bench," "getting religion," "justification by faith only," nor yet would it be baptism for the remission of sins and nothing else; but it would be simple and faithful obedience to all that God requires—faith, repentance, a prayerful and earnest heart, confession of the name of Christ before men and then baptism for the remission of past sins as God has ordained it. Baptism alone could not, under the arrangement of God, effect anything in salvation, any more that can faith only, which is plainly condemned by the Bible in the second chapter of James. It might be that men refuse to read these plain scriptures, because they absolutely destroy their doctrine. They ought not to do it. Let God be true, for he is true. And why should men try, even if their inclinations are to favor another doctrine, to overthrow the word of the living God? Why should they do it? But if preachers will do this, and curse themselves and those who hear and believe them, we are not justified in so doing ourselves; for the time will come when preachers and all others will stand alike, some trembling and some rejoicing, before the great white throne and answer to God for the things which they have taught and the things which they have done. Let us be faithful to God. "For if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ."

Prompt Action

Not only in cases where decision is called for, but in all the plain duties of life, is prompt action imperative. Many persons mean to do the things which their consciences demand, who yet fail, simply from delay. Certainly they will return that borrowed money, they will attend to those unsettled bills, they will perform this or that neglected duty—but not just now. Thus it is put off from time to time, trouble is caused by the unjust delay, other duties crowd in, and they carry a load of unfulfilled obligations, continually increasing, until life itself seems one huge burden which they can hardly bear.

Avoid an angry man for a while a malicious man forever.

OBITUARY
T. L. Stamp

Thomas Lester Stamp was born February 2, 1893 and died April 10, 1913, aged 20 years, 2 months and 8 days. He was a son of Sister Stamp and Mr. M. W. Stamp. A young man of pure habits and more than ordinary intelligence, he had a mechanical mind and loved all things good. He was industrious and a lover of good books, especially poetry. During his illness, which was brief (eight days), he quoted from several of the most noted poets. He was an observer and a lover of nature, and often said to his mother: "If you want to know how great God is just walk out and view his creation of the heavens and the earth." He was a lover of Bible truths, and often contended for them among his friends.

The writer spoke from John 5:25, showing that eternal life is the product of pre-existent life, and not the continuation of mortal or animal life. Paul speaks of "the life that now is and the life that is to come" (1 Tim. 4:8). It was our privilege to speak to a large and intelligent audience. We commend our sister to the One who will never forsake nor leave her. D. C. ROBISON.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES

Dear Restitution:

I left you last week at Corvallis. We held meetings Monday night. A man and his wife took a stand for truth who have heretofore been Baptists; also a man and his wife who have been Adventists for years.

Tuesday we boarded the train for Eugene and spent Tuesday evening with Bro. and Sister Palmer. We met also Bro. and Sister Belshon.

Wednesday we boarded the train for San Francisco, where we arrived at 1:30 p. m. Thursday, staying over night there. We called on Bro. Thos. Wilson, editor of Last Days, and had a pleasant meeting with him for a short time.

Friday we boarded the train for Santa Barbara, riding all day in the renowned Santa Clara Valley. In the evening we came to the ocean, and ran along the beach for fifty miles. It was a most beautiful sight. We expected to meet Bro. Southwick, but he and his family were away from home, so the next morning we continued our journey to Telzah, arriving Saturday morning. Found all well. Sunday evening we spoke for the folks at Zelzah. This leaves us at Zelzah preparing for the May meeting.

May God add his blessings and give us wisdom in all things. O. J. ALLARD.

AMONG THE BRETHREN
ELDER C. C. MAPLE

We started a series of special meetings at the Blessed Hope Mission in Elyria, Ohio, on Sunday evening, April 6th. We have, as most of our readers know, been conducting a Sunday-school and evening preaching service here for some weeks.

Our services have continued at this writing for eight days, and will continue a day or so more. We have had several stormy nights, and the east side of the city has been without light part of the time. This has hindered much in the success of the work.

We have a list of some families who seem interested in the truth as we have been able to present it unto them. It takes time, however, to get people away from the confusion of Babylon. So much error has been taught that truth can't find much soil. Pray that the gospel may still find its way into many hearts here through the work that has been done.

In addition to the preaching, many tracts and papers have been circulated among the people. We hope they may read them and find some help in the understanding of the scriptures. We shall continue tonight and tomorrow in the effort. Will report next week the final results.

Beloved, the field is white unto harvest, but where are the reapers? Let us who know the story of the gospel be active as never before in spreading the truth.

MARRIAGE WITH UNBELIEVERS
S. ROXANA WINCE
Concluded.

Idolatry always corrupts because it leaves a man free from the purifying restraints of a higher power, to be "taken captive by satan at his will." But "the sons of God" had seen the idolatrous daughters of the unbelieving Cain, and had taken them for wives because of their beauty of form and face. They had "looked on the outward appearance, and not on the heart," not realizing what God would think nor what the consequences would be to themselves and their posterity. The best of men are influenced by their wives. Solomon was, to the extent of having his heart turned away from the Lord. And of all the after kings of Israel and Judah, those with wicked wives, or who were the children of wicked mothers, were wicked kings. And so it was in the case of the Seth family. Teaching and example bore its awful fruit. "The sons of God" became idolators. And, becoming so, the inexorable law of heredity brought swift and ever-increasing degeneracy. The unbeliever can not endow the child with the high qualities of reverence, adoration and love for the Creator, nor with love for all things that are right and pure and holy—it is impossible. The moral qualities, being wanting in his own brain, can not be transmitted, and so the qualities that make men irreligious and cruel must be.

I may have made it too strong, but though there may be exceptions the general law is that the degenerate, whether man or woman, has degenerate children. But the offspring of the Sethites and of the daughters of Cain was a race of "giants." Giants in what? Not in stature, for the Hebrew term does not imply so much the idea of great size as of reckless ferocity, impious and daring characters, who spread devastation and carnage far and wide; "filling the earth with violence," and grieving the Lord that he had formed them. We can have little conception of their wickedness, even from reading of the awful depravity of a latter-day heathendom in India, China, Russia, Africa, Papal Rome, ancient Mexico and Peru, and in the Cannibal Islands of the Pacific. Rome, Turkey and Russia perhaps come the nearest to filling the bill, but the antediluvians were worse even than these, for among them all, outside of the family of Noah, there was not a heart that could be touched by his preaching, while among the former there are many who can be made converts to the gospel.

Then marriage with unbelievers did have something to do with the universal corruption of the world as then known. It was the very factor that worked the mischief in the Seth family; the very factor that, hand in hand with idolatry, brought about the destruction of the race by the flood.

Solomon's marriage with idol-worshiping wives leavened Judah with idolatry was never gotten rid of until the captivity in Babylon.

God asys: "Thou shalt not take their daughters for thy sons, nor give thy daughters to their sons." How much disobedience to this command has had to do with the present Romanizing of England and America! It has turned the hearts of the husbands away from the Lord, has given the children to that idolatrous church, has poured millions of dollars into her coffers, has filled the land with her "cages," where her "unclean and hateful birds" are kept, and where her little ones are offered upon the shrine of Moloch. It has made us drink of her cup until we are so drunken, so stupid, that we do not realize that her foot is on our necks and our very lives in danger. Ah! but it is a fearful thing for an individual or for a nation to disobey God. "Be not unequally yoked with unbelievers." It is a heavy yoke for a husband or a wife, and a yoke that is sure to bring disaster and punishment to the nation whose citizens are so yoked, or that so yokes itself with another nation. Unions, to be happy ones, must be made with those who stand out and out for God.

An individual may believe the gospel and may contend for it, but if he is not brave enough himself to enlist under its banner, by stepping out as Abraham did and doing the things that God requires, will God account him a believer? James says: "Faith without works is dead." Can a man be "a son of God," without the name? And, if not "a son of God," where does he stand? These are solemn questions. Let those who are vitally interested answer them as if the very presence of a soon coming Christ. Eternal life is the stake. The happiness of home, the eternal well-being of companions and children, the salvation of fellowmen and the stability of the nation are all involved in the manner of their answer.

The man who is indifferent as to the matter of obedience to God will not impress the necessity of absolute and unquestioning obedience to God upon his children; and here is where the danger comes in, even in the best of the many marriages of "the sons of God" with "the daughters of men," and vice versa.

When we think that the worship of the sun, moon and stars, instituted in all likelihood by Cain, was brought into the Seth family by marraige, carried across the flood by the same means, set up at Babylon by the idolatrous wife of Nimrod, and from thence was spread to all other nations (the idols, the cakes, the crosses, the figures of the virgin mother all being worshiped as incarnations of the sun and moon), and that this same worship has come down to our own day, and is spreading the corrupting influence of its "consecrated prostitution" throughout our own land, not only by the devotees of Rome, the successors of ancient Babylon, but also by the thousands of converts to sun worship in all our great cities who, like Ella Wheler Wilcox, deny the atonement, make light of it, and put Christ on a level with Buddha and Krishna, we can realize something of what it means to marry an unbeliever.

SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES

"These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether these things were so" (Acts 7:11).

We see by the above text that those people in Paul's day searched the scriptures daily to see whether the things Paul preached were so or not so. However, with some of us, we let the preacher tell us what it means, and don't investigate the scriptures.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God." We must study the scriptures that we may understand the way the Lord intends for us to walk. Jos. 1:18: "This book of law shall not depart out of thy mouth, but thou shalt meditate therein day and night." "Blessed art thou, O Lord; teach me thy statutes. Yes, let the Lord teach us, and not man. Anxiously search the scriptures, for it means life through his name" (John 20:31). "That believing ye might have life through his name." If we know the law and love him we will keep his commandment. "And this is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you" (John 15:13).

We read in 2 Tim. 13:16, 17: "All scripture is given by inspiration of God (not man), and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the name of God may be perfect, thoroughly finished unto all good work." "Preach the word."

How can we know the word, only by seaching and reading God's holy scripture? "Be instant in season, out of season reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine, for the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine." This time is upon us. People are turning away from the truth, and are being turned into fables. May God help us to search the scriptures and not be turned into the fables of false teachers. "Be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving your own selves" (James 1:22).

Each of us, as Christaians, have a work to do. We are living in the time of the end. The fast-fulfilling signs of the times declare that the coming of Christ is near at hand. The days in which we live are solemn and important. "Search the scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify to me" (John 5:39).—The Messenger.

A man who would be a good worker must see to it that he is a good sleeper. Human life is like a mill. Sometimes the stream is so copious that one needs care but little about the supply; but often the stream that turns the mill needs to be economized.

Contented minds are more conducive to happiness than riches, glory or fame. In our life work let us remember that it will profit us but little if we gain a world of wealth and lose contentment and happiness.

SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST

Opens April 1, 1913, Closes June 30, 1913

READ ABOUT THE SPECIAL AWARDS TO BE GIVEN TO CONTESTANTS WHO SECURE NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE RESTITUTION. Read every word, so that you will be thoroughly familiar with every detail.

FIRST—THE AWARDS

FIRST AWARD—To the person who secures the largest number of new yearly subscriptions to The Restitution between the dates of April 1, 1913, and June 30, 1913, we will give free a TWENTY-YEAR GUARANTEED GOLD-FILLED WATCH, with choice of Elgin, Waltham or Deuber-Hampton movement, either ladies' or gentlemen's size. THIRD AWARD—For the third largest list we will give an extra large 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN, barrel covered with silver filigree work.

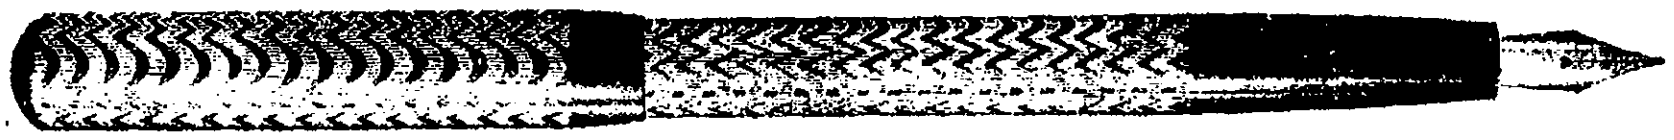
SPECIAL AWARDS—Besides these first three awards, we will give to everyone who sends in at least one new subscriber a handsome and useful POCKET MEMORANDUM BOOK.

To everyone who sends in at least two new subscribers a 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN like cut, or to everyone who sends in at least three new subscribers we will give a 14k. SOLID GOLD SELF-FILLING FOUNTAIN PEN. These pens are all fully guaranteed.



So you see, everyone who enters into this contest will receive some kind of an award for their efforts; the greater the effort, the greater the award, and everyone will have the same opportunity.

NOW READ THESE CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each subscriber to count must be a NEW subscriber. NO RENEWALS WILL COUNT.
2. Two six-months' subscriptions count as one yearly.
3. Subscriptions must be received after midnight March 31 and before June 30th, at midnight, to count.
4. If two contestants send the same number of subscribers in competing for the first three awards duplicate awards will be given.
5. All awards will be given at the end of the contest.
6. And this is going to be the best help of all: NEW SUBSCRIBERS WILL BE RECEIVED DURING THIS CONTEST at the special rate of

One Dollar a Year : 50c Six Months

This rate does not apply to renewals. To subscriptions in Canada add 50 cents.

We believe the above offer to be very liberal—liberal to the new subscribers, liberal to you who are to get the new subscribers.

Why do we give these awards? To stimulate your interest in helping us increase our mailing list and to get The Restitution into the many homes where it should be read. We want to increase the size of The Restitution, but in order to do this we must increase the size of the mailing list first, so THE BIG EFFORT IS STARTED AND THE CONTEST IS ON—and remember, EVERYONE WILL RECEIVE AN AWARD.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "The things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

THE SYMBOL OF SPRING

When the soft, warm flush of springtime
Falls gently on your cheek,
And folded buds and blossoms fair
In silence seem to speak;
When the laughing brook goes dancing
Through the woodlands green,
And here and there and everywhere
The heart of nature sings
Then the scent of hidden flowerets
Thrills you through and through,
As they speak of a coming promise
They hold in their cups of blue;
Of the garden of eternal spring,
Restored to earth anew,
When curse will be lifted and
All things be as they were long ago;
When righteousness shall conquer
All hatred, strife and woe:
And we, like the tender flowerets,
Will rise from out the dusty mold
To greet the Master, who will call us
To his bosom fold.

THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT—AN EXPOSITION OF ACTS 11:38, 39

Meaning of the Words

"The gift of the holy spirit," as an expression is only found twice in the New Testament—Acts 2:38, where it is used by the apostle Peter, and Acts 10:45, where it is used by the historian of the Acts of the Apostles. There are two impressions that might be made on the mind of a reader from these words, looking at them abstractly. One is that the holy spirit "is the gift;" the other is that "the gift" is something given by "the holy spirit." We may say this watch is "the gift of the father" and this brooch "the gift of the mother" of John; thus the watch and the brooch are the things given by the father and the mother. But when a friend says John's father has promised him "the gift of the watch" and his mother "the gift of the brooch" when he returns from school well commended by his teachers, although the form of expression is changed so as to put "watch" in the place of "father" and "brooch" in the place of "mother" in the arrangement of words, still the idea is not changed so far as the giver is concerned or the thing given. The reason that we find no difficulty in the latter expressions is that we never predicate or assert of "the watch" and "the brooch" that they give, but we do and can assert of the father and mother that they give; hence the mind is not confused with the necessity of discriminating in that particular. The holy spirit "giving" gifts is not a scriptural idea, although "manifestations" of the spirit is. The phrase "gifts of the holy spirit"—Hebrews 2:4, as found in the Common Version—has possibly given currency to the idea that there are "gifts" given by the holy spirit, or that the holy spirit gave the gifts. The word is not the same in the original in both cases. In Hebrew 2:4 it would properly be rendered "distributions" or "parts"—that measure or portion of the holy spirit given to each, the "manifestations" of which were for the benefit of all—1 Cor. 12:7: "For to one is given through the spirit a word of wisdom, and to another a word of knowledge, according to the same spirit" (verse 8, etc.). Now, all these does one and the same spirit effectively work, distributing to each respectively as it pleases (verse 11). Hence the apostles says, "We know only in part, and prophesy in part" (1 Cor. 13, 9). The expression, "Now, there are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit" (1 Cor. 13:4), does not state the "gifts" to be gifts by the holy spirit, but that the diversities or varieties in the gifts and manifestations do not prove many, or various, or different spirits, "but the same spirit." In the same way "the diversities of services" do not prove many lords, "but the same Lord;" and even though there are "diversities of operations," there are not various or different gods, "gods many and lords many," as among the heathen, among whom are distributed the different powers, as the "goddess of wisdom," the "god of war," the "goddess of love," "but it is the same God who works all in all" (1 Cor. 12:6). Christ ascended on high, "captivated captivity, and gave gifts to men" (Eph. 4:8). But the holy spirit is never said to "give;" it is said, however, that the holy spirit is "given," is a gift. "And when Simon saw that through the laying on of the apostles' hands the holy spirit was given" (Acts 8:18). Hence, both from the form of expression and from the facts, we are led to the conclusion that the phrase "the gift of the holy spirit" denotes the holy spirit given, and not the holy spirit as the giver of a gift. There is an analogous phrase in Acts 2:33—"the promise of the holy spirit"—which clearly means the holy spirit promised.

Who, Then is the Giver?

"But when the advocate is come whom I will send you from the Father, the Spirit of truth who proceeds from the Father, he will testify concerning me" (John 10:26). The apostles were "to wait for the promise of the Father" at Jerusalem (Acts 1:4). "This Jesus God has raised up, of which all we are witnesses: being exalted, therefore, to the right hand of God, and having received the promise of the holy spirit from the Father, he hath shed forth this which you see and hear" (Acts 2:33). "And so is also the holy spirit whom God gave to those submitting to him" (Acts 5:32). "And God, who knows the heart, bore witness to them, giving them the holy spirit, even as he did to us" (Acts 15:8). It is quite clear that God is the giver of this gift. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, descended from the Father of lights" (James 1: 16). What God is in these scriptures alleged to have given is "the holy spirit." Peter says the "holy spirit" is a witness "whom God gave to those submitting to him," and he also alleges that God bore witness that the Gentiles should receive the gospel, "giving them the holy spirit, even as he did to us." There is no intimation anywhere that it was simply a miraculous power, but the holy spirit, of which the miraculous powers were "manifestations." The holy spirit was the gift given by the "Father of lights," and not something manifested as a consequence of the gift or as a work of the holy spirit. The "gift" was miraculous, and so also were the "manifestations" of the spirit.

What Was Given?

We ought already to be able to answer the question, What was given? Was it the holy spirit, or a manifestation of the holy spirit, otherwise termed a gift? We are forced by many facts and explanations to the conviction that the holy spirit was given. Not only the terms used indicate it, but every reference to it, both before and after the fact. First, what was promised? John says, "This he spoke of the spirit which they that believe on him were to receive; for the holy spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not yet glorified" (John 7:39). Peter's quotation of Joel says, "I will pour out a portion of my spirit on all flesh" (Acts 2:17). So Peter promised on Pentecost: "Repent and each of you be immersed in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and you will receive the gift of the holy spirit; for the promise is to you," etc. Acts 2:38, 39). Now, this was what was promised before, and is identified with the holy spirit. Second, Luke's statement in reference to the Gentiles: "While Peter was yet speaking these words the holy spirit fell upon all who were hearing the word and they of the circumcision who believed, as many as came with Peter were astonished that the gift of the holy spirit was poured out upon the Gentile also" (Acts 10:44-47). Here "the gift of the holy spirit" and the "receiving of the holy spirit" are directly identified, and both are identified with the "giving" of the holy spirit to the apostles. Third, Peter's explanation at Jerusalem of this gift to the Gentiles identifies it with the holy spirit: "And God, who knows the heart, bore witness to them, giving them the holy spirit, even as he did to us" (Acts 15:8). Fourth, the express reference to what was given to the believers in Acts 5:32 is completely conclusive, and leaves no room for a doubt: "And so is also the holy spirit whom God gave to those submitting to him;" and this is the first allusion to the fact after the day of Pentecost.

Was the Gift General?

The "spirit of God" had not been given to mankind in the previous history of the world generally; only to a few. In the Patriarchal age it was not general; was not given to everyone, or even to everyone of a family or community, only to extraordinary persons for extraordinary purposes. In the Jewish age it was not given generally; only to the leaders of the people, rulers, priests, prophets, judges and kings, and only to some of these classes. "God, who in ancient times spoke often and in various ways to the fathers, by the prophets, has in these last days spoken to us by a Son" (Heb. 1:1). "Knowing this first, that no prophecy of scripture is of private impulse, for never, at any time, was prophecy brought by the will of man; but holy men of God spoke, being moved by the holy spirit" (2 Pet. 1:21. See 1 Peter 1:10, 11, 12; Neh. 9:30-30). "Then he remembered the days of old, Moses and his people saying: Where is he that brought them out of the sea with the shepherd of his flock. Where is he that put his holy spirit within him?" (Isaiah 63:11). It was said to be upon, or "come upon," or "clothe" persons in ancient times (see Judges 6:34; 2 Chron. 24:20; 20:14). The expression in Gen. 6:3: "My spirit shall not always strive with man, for that he also is flesh; yet his days shall be an hundred and twenty years," does not necessarily intimate that an abstract power was exercised in striving with every man. Noah was a "preacher of righteousness." 2 Peter 2:5: "And God testified against the Antediluvians 'by his spirit in his prophets' for one hundred and twenty years." Neh. 9:30: "Yet they would not give ear and they were destroyed." The question still presents itself, Was the "gift of the holy spirit" to be general and perpetual; to be given to each and every Christian of all times during the Christian dispensation? To answer this satisfactorily the whole information upon the subject must be collected and laid before the mind. In addition to the prophecies of the Old Testament already referred to, especially that of Joel, we have promises in the New Testament, Luke's report of our Lord's saying: "If you then being evil know how to impart good gifts to your children, how much more will your Father in heaven give a holy spirit to those who ask him!" Luke 11:13 need not be referred to except to say that it is "a holy spirit," not the holy spirit," which Matthew states to be "good" gifts (Matt. 7:11; See Acts 15:9). John records a promise in these words: "He who believes on me, as the scripture says, shall be like a cistern, whence rivers of living waters shall flow. This he spoke of the spirit, which they who believed on him were to receive; for the holy spirit was not yet given because Jesus was not yet glorified" (John 7:38, 39). "And he said unto them, Go throughout all the world, proclaim the glad tidings to the whole creation; he who shall believe, and be immersed, shall be saved, but he who shall not believe shall be condemned. And these miraculous powers shall attend the believers; in my name they shall expel demons, they shall speak languages unknown to them before. They shall handle serpents with safety, and if they drink poison it shall not hurt them. They shall cure the sick by laying their hands upon them" (Mark 16.15). These I think are all the promises we have in the histories of Christ on the subject under consideration. These promises are again repeated on the great Pentecost: "And Peter said to them, Repent and be each of you immersed in the name of Jesus Christ, in order to the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the holy spirit; for the promise is to you and your children, and to all that are afar off; as many as the Lord our God shall call. And with many other words he testified and exhorted, saying, Save yourselves from this perverse generation" (Acts 2:38-40). These promises in Mark 16: 17 and Acts 2:39 are substantial equivalents. Our Lord said, "He that believes and shall be immersed;" Peter said, "Repent and be immersed." Our Lord said, "Shall be saved;" Peter said, "In order to the remission of sins." Our Lord promised, "These miraculous powers shall attend the believers;" Peter promised, "And you shall receive the gift of the holy spirit." This was a "miraculous" power of gift; it was not usual, it was not ordinary, it was not common to the saints of the Jewish dispensation. This was the cause or power which produced the others (Rom. 15: -9). The others were "manifestations" of this. Our Lord, as related by Mark, described the "manifestations" (see 1 Cor. 12:8). Peter promised "the gift," which would be the source of these manifestations. Where "the gift" was the "manifestations" were, and where the "manifestations" were not "the gift" was not. The manifestations were the outward and visible sign of the inward and invisible gift. Most speakers find no difficulty, when preaching the gosepl and quoting our Lord from Mark, in stopping at, "And these miraculous powers shall attend the believers," although given them without any express limitations whatever; but when the same speakers quote Peter from Acts 2:38, 39, their mistaken theory drives them to quote, "and you shall receive the gift of the holy spirit," and they stop there and leave out the express limitation used by Peter in connection with the promise when he made it. This may look to an unprejudiced observer as very odd, but it is nevertheless true. It shows, moreover, that the unreflecting acceptance of the stereotyped traditions of ecclesiastics has a wonderful power over minds otherwise candid and intelligent. No person should ever quote to a sinner that promise of Peter's without quoting the whole of it—the express limitation and all, just as Peter did; then there would be a chance for the hearer not to be misled, although that is not very probable at the present day, without direct explanation, in consequence of the muddle and confused ideas which tradition and superstition has substituted in the place of the plain and simple declarations of the scriptures.

THE PAPAL POWER

During the fifteenth century the Papal power was sinking deeper and deeper into the slough of iniquity and despotism, if that were possible; but a gleam of light was beginning to dawn in that the scriptures had become a little more accessible to the people, notwithstanding all the desperate efforts made to suppress them, and also general knowledge was beginning to be more generally diffused. The Arabs, or as they were called the Saracens, had got a foothold in Spain, and had brought some of the lost learning of the East and of the Greeks with them. Colleges were being founded here and there, and men were beginning to reason, observe and think more than they had done before for many centuries. The result was a growing dislike against the terrible evils practiced by the officials connected with the Papal power. Mosheim says: "The most eminent writers of this century unanimously lament the miserable condition to which the Christian church was reduced by the corruption of its ministers, and which seemed to portend nothing less than its total ruin."

The vices that reigned among the Roman pontiffs, and indeed among all the ecclesiastical order, were so flagrant that the complaints of these good men do not appear at all exaggerated or their apprehensions ill-founded; nor had any of the corrupt advocates of the clergy the courage to call them to account for the sharpness of the censures and of their complaints.

It was during this century that Ferdinand and Isabella, in the pontificate of Gregory IX., introduced the holy office of the Inquisition into Spain. "The name of justice was unknown in its administration. Suspicion made the crime, accusation was virtually sentence, imprisonment the prelude to death; * * the relatives of a victim dare not mourn for his fate; at the moment of his arrest they regarded him as dead, and concealed their sorrows in privacy or exile."

Rabbi Joseph says in part: "This Isabella was a satan in those days. And she set searchers and spies over them to see if they (the Jews) walked in the ways of their Messiah or not. And they burned by hundreds many of them for no cause, and all they had they plundered daily. * * * And now, O God, be not far off; hasten to help us, O Lord! For thy sake we are killed all the day; we are counted as sheep for the slaughter. Make haste to help us, O God of our salvation. Plead our cause and deliver us."

The pontiff whose reign closed this century was Alexander VI., a Spaniard by birth, whose name was Roderic Boriga. "The life and actions of this man show that there was a Nero among the popes as well as among the emperors. The crimes and enormities that history has attributed to this Papal Nero evidently prove him to have been not only destitute of all religious and virtuous principles, but even regardless of decency and hardened against every feeling of shame." Yet a writer in the Catholic Encyclopedia, just being issued, has been found to defend him and deny all his nefarious deeds that were never attempted to be denied by his contemporaries. He died by poison, given to him in mistake, which he had intended for a lot of his cardinals, as he intended to get their wealth by that means. This occurred in A. D. 1503. Mosheim says: "The monastic societies, as we learn from a multiple of authentic records and from the testimonials of the best writers, were at this time so many heads of lazy, illiterate, profligate and licentious epicureans, whose views in life were confined to opulence, idleness and pleasure."

When Leo X. ascended the Papal throne in A. D. 1513 he found the treasury exhausted by the long wars of his predecessor Julius II., while heavy claims were made upon the exchequer for the payment of soldiers and political agents and for the continuance of several public works, especially the cathedral of St. Peter. To recruit his finances he adopted an expedient to which his predecessors frequently had recourse, the sale of indulgences; but he carried this deceptive plan of raising money to an unprecedented extent, not foreseeing the trouble that he was about to bring upon himself and the whole Papal power. In November, 1483, Martin Luther was born, who was to strike a blow at the Papal power that was to resound through the ages. In his eighteenth year he entered the University of Oxford with a view of qualifying himself for the legal profession. Chancing one day to examine the Vulgate in the University library he saw with astonishment that there were more gospels and epistles than in the lectionary. He was arrested by the contents of his new-found treasure. His heart was deeply touched, and he resolved to devote himself to a spiritual life. He separated himself from the friends and fellow-students, and withdrew into the Augustine convent at Erfurt. Here he remained for the next three years of his life, earnestly studying the Bible. In 1507 he was ordained a priest, and in the following year he removed to Wittemberg. He became a teacher there in the new university, founded by the Elector Frederick, of Saxony. In 1509 he became a Bachelor of Theology, and commenced lecturing on the holy scriptures. In 1510 or 1511 he was sent on a mission to Rome, and the condition of things he found there astounded and shocked him. Shortly after this John Tezel, a Dominican friar, was sent throughout Germany to preach indulgences in order to fill up the empty treasury. This Tezel was loud of tongue and brazen with impudence, and carried a strongbox with him to hold his treasures. He was to proclaim that he had the power from the pope to forgive all sins, past, present, and also those they intended to commit. It was only a question of money. If they had any friends in purgatory all they had to do was to put so much money into his strongbox; and when they did so he declared that he could see the souls of the departed escaping from purgatory. It is said that some irreverent ones bought an indulgence from him for a round sum for the purpose of giving a rogue a beating and taking his money from him, and then did this to Tezel himself.

This man roused the ire of Luther, who had got the length of seeing that this must be largely fraud. He drew out ninety-five theses on the doctrine of indulgences, which he nailed up on the gate of the church of Wittemberg and which he offered to maintain in the university against all opponents. In these Luther denied that the pope had power to forgive sins. Tezel was forced to retreat from the borders of Saxony to Frankfurt-on-the-Oder, where he drew out and published a set of counter theses, and publicly committed those of Luther to the flames. The students of Wittemberg retaliated by burning Tezel's theses. The elector refused to interfere, and the excitement increased. A number of combatants took the field against Luther, amongst whom was one Eck, an old friend of Luther's, and an able man. The arguments between him and Luther were most vehement. At first Leo took little notice of the disturbance. He is reported to have said that "Friar Martin was a man of genius and that he did not wish to have him t. olested." Friar Martin, however, was not very long in giving him more trouble than ever he imagined was to happen him and his Catholic adherents.

OUR FUTURE LIFE AND OUR FUTURE ABODE

"Which hope we have as an anchor of the Soul" (Heb. 6:18, 19)

The following article was sent to a very good religious paper, which for fifty years has been spreading the gospel of the kingdom—i. e., the news of the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ to reign upon the earth. But it will persist in trying to bolster up the theory that man is possessed of an immortal soul, which at the death of the body flies away to heaven, a theory which is based upon the lie the devil told Eve in the Garden of Eden—that if she ate of the forbidden fruit she should not die, but she should "be as God, knowing good and evil" (Gen. 3:5). If that theory be true why should the soul be brought from all joys and sorrows of heaven and reunited to its body to again dwell upon the earth? Such a theory is a muddled up, inconsistent heathen tradition, which has no foundation in the holy scriptures. But here is the article:

"I have been an editor the best part of my life, but I never tried to make a paper to please everybody, because I was well aware that I would make a complete failure if I did. I suppose you are in the same boat. But there is one question I wish you would either quit hammering at or else give the opponents of your views an opportunity to present their side of the matter, and that is, whether man is possessed of an immortal soul. You keep firing shot at those you are pleased to call materialists, but in all your little pop-gun shots, or in all your attempts at heavy artillery and siege work, you have not been able to present one single positive text to sustain your immortal soul theory, because there is no such text in the Bible.

1. There is not a text in the Bible that says anything about man being possessed of an immortal soul or never-dying spirit, or any such thing.

2. The Bible does not present a single promise of a future life without a resurrection—and that through our Lord Jesus Christ. He is the Life-Giver.

3. The Bible does not present a single promise that those who attain to a future life shall ever dwell anywhere else than on this earth, renewed and purified.

Those three points cover the whole ground, and if you will point out positive texts in our Bible that will refute them I will send you a check for fifty dollars. I do not mean texts from which you draw such inferences, because I have the same right to draw inferences from what may be called obscure texts, and I want my inferences to agree with the positive texts, to avoid making the holy scriptures contradict themselves.

Man was created out of the dust of the ground and he did not have a living soul put into him, but he—the man made out of the dust— became a living soul when God breathed the breath of life, or—as the Hebrew has it—the breath of lives, into him (Gen. 2:7). "The soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ez. 18:4, 26). "His spirit goeth forth, he returneth to his (native) earth; on that very day perish his thoughts." "That which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even the same thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea they have all the one kind of spirit, so that the pre-eminence of men is naught" (Leeser's translation of Ps. 146:4 and Eccles. 3:19). Read also the standard version, and read carefully the 37th Psalm and scores of other texts of similar import.

2. Christ Jesus is the Life-Giver. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life" (John 3:16). "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life, and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life" (John 3:36). "The hour is coming in the which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation," or condemnation (John 5:28, 29). "If the dead rise not, then is not Christ raised; and, if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished" (1 Cor. 15:16-18). Those "that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, * * * shall be punished with everlasting destruction" (2 Thess. 1: 8, 9). Not everlasting torment. Paul, after giving a long list of ancient worthies, says: "These all having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise" (Heb. 11:39). "This is the promise that he hath promised us, even eternal life" (1 John 2:25).

3. "For a child is born unto us, a Son has been given unto us, and the government is placed on his shoulders; and his name is called Wonderful, counsellor of the mighty God, of the everlasting Father, the prince of peace, for (promoting) the increase of the government, and for peace without end, upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom, to establish it and to support it through justice and righteousness, from henceforth and unto eternity; the zeal of the Lord of hosts will do this" (Leeser's translation of Isa. 9:6, 7). "I looked in the nightly visions, and, behold, with the clouds of heaven came one like a Son of Man, and he attained as far as the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there were given him dominion, and dignity, and government, and all people, nations and languages had to serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom is one which shall never be destroyed" (Leeser's translation of Dan. 7:13, 14). The angel Gabriel, when he appeared to Mary and foretold the birth of her Son, told her to "call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end" (Luke 1:32, 33). "Behold, I will create new heavens and a new earth; the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind; but be glad and rejoice unto all eternity in what I create; for, behold, I will create Jerusalem for rejoicing and her people for gladness. And I will rejoice over Jerusalem, and be glad in my people; and there shall not be heard in her any more the voice of weeping, nor the voice of complaint." "The new heavens and the new earth, which I make, shall have permanence before me, saith the Lord" (Leeser's translation of Isa. 65:17-19, and 66:22). "We, according to his promise, look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness" (2 Pet. 3:13).

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. And I, John, saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. * * And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof. And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it; and the kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor unto it" (Rev. 21:1-5, and 23 and 24). "And there shall be no night there; and they need no candle, neither light of the sun; for the Lord God giveth them light; and they shall reign for ever and ever" (Rev. 22:5).

What better heaven, or place of eternal abode, could be asked or imagined? Read both chapters in full, and then search the Bible from Genesis to Revelations, and if your find a single plain, positive text showing that the human race are possessed of immortal souls which at the death of the body fly away to heaven, then send me word where it is, and where that heaven is located. These are things I want to know.

The paper referred to has not published the article or any reply thereto, and the editor, in a private letter, only quoted one text from which he drew an inference that men are possessed of immortal souls. Yours for the truth,

ALPHEUS DAVISON.

Every man lives for others as well as himself; and, while the tenor of his life should be that of cheerful industry in his calling, he should keep open every avenue to compassion and liberality. The business of such a man is habitual, and includes no unreasonable cares; his benevolence is uniform, and finds opportunities for exercise. He lives reputably, and is believed by his contemporaries. In this way he secures a fair share of happiness.

The daily admiration given to whatever is expensive and rare, the worship paid to success as such, the deference shown to men who are even known to have risen to place and power by dishonorable means, afford continual nourishment to that keen desire for wealth which is the source of much meanness and knavery.

HOW GOD USES BEELZEBUB'S DOGS TO BLESS US

Shimei cursed David. Abishai asked, "Why should this dead dog curse my lord the king? Let us go over, I pray thee, and take off his head" (2 Sam. 16:9). The natural man always wants to "take off the head" of those who curse him, like Abishai; but the spiritual man, like David, can say, when he is slandered and lied about, "Let him curse, because the Lord hath said unto him, Curse David" (verse 10). Having recently had the experience of David, we have kept his spirit intact, realizing that nothing can happen to us but as God permits. If God did not bring good out of evil, pray tell us where good would come from? As an exchange points out, and as the word of God explicitly declares, God can make the wrath of man to praise him. He can bring good out of evil, and he can so control the acts of wicked men that they shall turn to the profit of those that trust him. He has said, "Woe unto you when all men shall speak well of you." He has also said, "Blessed are ye when men shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake." We may fail to see what blessing there is in being lied about it, but he sees more than we do, and understands the end from the beginning. He knows just what is for our good, and if we will watch narrowly we may find great blessing in those those things which try us most severely and grieve us most sadly.

Doubtless many a Christian has been saved from wrongdoing by being lied about and falsely accused. He may have thought, "How horrible it would be if that story were true, but by the grace of God I will see that it never shall be true." It is hard to have falsehoods told. How much harder it would be if the statements were true!

Thus the devil's watch-dogs often keep God's sheep from straying away: they raise such a howl over the slightest departure from the paths of peace that the wandered is in haste to get back out of the hearing of the barking of Beelzebub's dogs. Let the child of God then be patient; the Lord on high rules over all things, and they who trust him shall never be confounded or dismayed, and he has a special blessing for good men whom "dead dogs" vilify.

A CORRECTION

In last week's Restitution we stated in our sermon notes on Revelations that "ascending" in Rev. 7:2 was translated from Anabanta, and that it is the second aroist participle, signifying a past action. We were led to doubt this statement after using it in public discourse and in print, so we looked up differant authorities, and none of them support our contention but John Thomas, in Eureka, vol. 2, page 282. Dissatisfied with our own ability in the matter, we placed our statement before a Greek scholar, a friend and brother we fortunately have in California, and we now give our readers the benefit of his findings. He writes:

"The word in Rev. 7:2 rendered 'ascending' is not anabanta, but anabainonta. See Westcott's Greek testament and the Diaglott. It is in accusative case, active voice, masculine gender, and is a present participle. It can not be rendered 'having ascended.' It denotes simultaneous action, and is correctnly translated 'ascending.' The action is simultaneous with the principal verb, and that is eidon, and so is second aorist of horaoo. 'I saw (second aorist) angel ascending.' The word anabainonta comes from anainoo, and that means to 'go up, to ascend, to climb,' etc. I find anabainei in Zenephon's Anabasis, chapter 1, verse 2. It is there rendered (he) 'goes up.' In Matt. 17:27 we have anabanta. It is accusative, singular masculine participle, second aorist."

EDITOR'S SERMON NOTES ON THE APOCALYPSE

Subject: The Seventh Seal: or the Sealed Redeemed as a "Great Multitude" of Palm Bearers.

Text: Rev. 7:4-17.

1. Symbols of the Seventh Seal Explained.

1. The People Sealed. 1. "Out of the tribes of Isreal's sons" (verse 4; Jno. 4:22; Acts 28:20; Rom. 15:8; 11:17; Eph. 2:12; Rom. 9:1-9; Matt. 3:7-13; Gal. 6:16).

2. The Number Sealed. 1. 144,000, a miniature number for the whole of the redeemed (Rev. 7:9; Gen. 15:5; Rev. 14:1-5; Matt. 19:28; Rev. 4:10; 21:12. 2. The Apocalyptic Urim and Thummim, typical of (a) Christ (Ex. 28:15-21; Deut. 33:8; Ex. 17:7; 1 Cor. 10:4; 1 Tim. 6:16; Col. 1:19); and (b) the saints(Isa. 54:11; Zech. 14:7; Dan. 12:3; Phil. 2:15; Eph 5:8).

3. A "Great Multitude" of Palm Bearers in Post-Adventual and Post-Resurrectional Glory.

1. "After this," Greek, "After these things" (verses 1, 9). 2. Sealing and glorification are here placed as sequential in relation, not in succession of time (verse 9; 13:7; 17:6; 2:10; 2 Tim. 2:12; Isa. 26:19, 20; Dan. 12:1, 2; verse 14). 3. After the "great tribulation" the saints are seen clothed with white robes and palms in their hands, celebrating the feast of tabernacles (Rev. 15:2; Hos. 12:9; Zech. 14:16; Isa. 61:3; Ps. 1:3; Rev. 22:2; Ps. 110:7; Luke 22:16).

THE TWO-HORNED BEAST OF REV. 13

In our day, when people are "running wild" on prophecy, as on many other subjects, it is refreshing to read something that is calm, sober and sane. The following from Editor Schaumburger on the beast of Rev. 13 is logical and full of clear reasoning. With pleasure we give it to our readers verbatim:

Let us inquire: First, when did the two-horned beast arise? We answer, Just when the beast with the ten horns and seven heads arose. Why so? Because,

1. He did miracles in the sight of the ten-horned beast. This he could never do if he didn't arise till the ten-horned beast had gone down. Let us give the Douay version: "And he (the two-horned one) seduced them that dwell on the earth, for the signs which were given him (this two-horned beast) to do in the sight of the (ten-horned) beast" (Rev. 13:14).

The expression "in the sight of," in Rev. 13:14, comes from the Greek word "enoopion." It is rendered "in the sight of" in verse 13. Why not in verse 12? It is translated "in the presence of" twice in Rev. 11:10. See R. V. for a fine translation.

2. The two-horned beast "had power to give life unto the image of the (ten-horned) beast" (verse 15). This is simply inconceivable on the principle that the ten-horned and two-horned beasts did not exist at the same time.

3. "The image (some sort of a teaching akin to that of the ten-horned beast) of the (ten-horned) beast should * * * cause that, as many would not worship the image of the (ten-horned) beast should be killed" (verse 15). Could it be if both did not exist together?

One thing seems sure: The two-horned beast is not the United States. It is simply absurd to claim that the United States will "cause" all those who will not worship the ten-horned and seven-headed beasts of Rev. 13 to be killed. It runs against numerous facts. We will cite a few.

The ten-horned beast of Rev. 13 has lost its power, never to be regained. This is seen by a careful study of Dan. 7: "They shall take away his (Daniel's 'ten-horned' beast of 7:7) dominion." Will he ever get it back? Never! Listen: "To consume and destroy it unto the end." Can anything be plainer? It is but a short time till Rome civil, ecclesiastical, will have to pass into into judgment; no time for a renewal of power. Besides, it was to be "consumed."

Then, too, is the "number" of the United States 666? No! The two-horned beast came up lamb-like. Did the United States? No, it came up in a revolution. The two-horned beast came "out of the (Roman) earth." Did the United States? No! When did the United States speak as the dragon of Rev. 12? The dragon was cast unto the "earth" (12:13); but we are quite certain that the dragon was never cast "into" America!

Let the two-horned beast symbolize whatever it will, it is absurd to argue that it represents the United States. It must do "miracles * * * in the sight of the (ten-horned) beast" (Rev. 13:14). This must not be any later than when the ten-horned beast exists and has power—a thing of the past! In studying prophecy we must consider conclusions or we shall run wild.

CONTENDING FOR THE FAITH

Bro. Juergensen has been busy getting the truth before the people of Barberton, Ohio. He advertised a reward for anyone who would produce Bible evidence in support of some popular dogmas. This attracted some attention. It seems that Mr. Benner responded, which gave Bro. Juergensen a chance to get the following communication before the readers of the Barberton Telegram:

"Mr. G. Benner, Barberton Ohio.

"Dear Sir: Having been attacked and accused of an act to which I must plead 'not guilty,' I wish to give you, as well as the readers of this paper, this explanation without trespassing on the kindness and patience of the editor.

"The object of my advertisement in the issues of February 6th and 20th of the Telegram was to arrest the readers' attention, that they for themselves might be encouraged to find out in what pitiful condition they are concerning their future state. Mr. Benner has taken upon himself to carry it before the public, and now I wish to give a public explanation concerning the subject. I insist that those who wish to discuss with me the doctrine of the immortality of the soul must be loyal to the Word of God, which is and must be our supreme authority on this question.

"This doctrine of the immortality of the soul must be taken directly from the Word of God. What saith the scripture? Neither science, nor philosophy, nor sentiment, is able to teach it to us. I hold it to be treason to the scripture and to the God of the scriptures for one to reject their plainly-spoken, explicit testimony on this question, and attempt to read his own speculations or the speculations of others, however learned they may be, into them, or try to make them agree with his own preconceived notions by putting a forced or unnatural construction upon their language.

"And yet this is the grave charge that must be made—if the truth be told—against the philosophic Christianity of the schools; and the only excuse that can be made is that their philosophy requires it and traditions have authorized it, and 'the people love to have it so!'

"The doctrines of the resurrection and life everlasting, upon which the early disciples fixed all their hopes for the future but which alas! under the blighting influence of this error (the immortality of the soul) have lost their true place in the creed of the orthodox church and in the preaching of its ministers, and have come to the shadowy myths; I wish to brush away the clouds which this false dogma of Paganism has thrown around them, and bring out again from its eclipse the one doctrine of life and immortality, as it is brought to light in the gospel.

"As there is not one passage in the Word of God which says man is immortal, or even appears to favor the idea, it is certainly of human origin. The idea of natural immortality of man found no place among the Hebrews under Moses and the earlier prophets. It was not until after their long captivity, nor indeed until after Plato's philosophy had come to prevail throughout the world, that their rabbinical teachers began to entertain these philosophical speculations.

"And now, Mr. Benner, let us strike the balance and see how we are standing.

"You got the $10.00 reward set for your mark without proving the immortality of the soul in Bible language, which is impossible to do, for the Bible does not teach it. We hope for immortality as confidently as you, and we advocate the doctrine more earnestly than you, if possible. But we differ from you in the ground of our hope. We advocate it as a Christian doctrine, you as a doctrine of philosophy; you claim it from Adam by your natural birth, we from Christ only by a new spiritual birth and a resurrection from the dead; you believe it to be the natural endowment of every man, we believe it to be a supernatural endowment--yea, a gift of God's grace through redemption by Christ.

"Among the many passages of scripture in which our thesis is plainly enunicated, we need now only quote the following simple text, which sets it forth, both positively and negatively, so clearly and in such categorical terms that it would seem to be impossible for anyone who accepts the testimony of the Holy Writ to gainsay or resist its force: "And this is the record; that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" (1 John 5: 11-12).

As I think me, there is one verse in God's book which speaks of never dying, Gen. 3:4: "Ye shall not surely die!" and the author gives the reason to be, "Ye shall be as gods."

Is it possible, Mr. Benner, that you are a follower of that author, especially as making your statement credited to me in column one from top row 34 to 38. You must either give proof from where you get it, or else stand the consequence and be called a follower of that author.

"But in conclusion: turn away from your leader, accept God's sentence, "Thou shall surely die," inquire God's way of salvation (deliverance from dead), that in that great resurrection morning you may stand before the Lamb of Zion and join in the new song before the throne.

"Yours truly, H. JUERGENSEN.

While the due preparation for and organization of labor deserve all the careful and wise adjustment they receive, the intervals of life should never be suffered to be filled up by chance. They too should be provided for, and the necessity of employing them aright should be impressed on all.

Opinion is the main thing which does good or harm in the world. It is our false opinions of things which ruin us.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Bro. Huggins:

As it has been some time since I wrote a letter to the paper, I will just write a few lines to let you know how we are getting along away down here in the sunny South. Many of you know that we are some of the isolated ones of God's household; however, we are not discouraged, but are striving to let our light shine, that we may be the means of showing others the way to eternal life.

We have recently had great cause to rejoice. Bro. W. H. Wilson has visited us again and spent twelve days with us. Oh, what a treat it was! We always look forward with much pleasure to a visit from Bro. Wilson. He preached ten discourses at my daughter's home. We invited the neighbors in, and several were present each night and were well entertained. Bro. Wilson's sermons are very instructive and are a perfect feast to those who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness. Like Paul, he never shuns to declare the whole counsel of God. His teaching on prophecy is wonderful. This is a subject that every child of God should be interested in. The apostle says: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shines in a dark place" (2 Pet. 1:9). All who are interested in the things that must shortly come to pass should send to Bro. Wilson and get his books on prophecy. Brethren and sisters, let us be up and doing, for the time is short. If we want to be overcomers we must work, watch and pray. If there ever was a time when God's children should be on their guard it is now. Everything around us tends to evil. We want to examine ourselves (2 Cor. 13:5), that we be sound in the faith (Titus 1:13). For there are many vain talkers and deceivers teaching things they ought not to teach (verses 10, 11). Yes, we are living in perilous times, which Paul said would come in the last days, when people would be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. He says: "Evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived" (2 Tim. 3).

These scriptures are certainly fitted to represent the age we are living in. So, dear ones, let us, the children of God, "continue in the things which we have learned and have been assured of." I thank the Lord for his word, for without it we would have nothing to guide use. Let us stay close to what is written, and practice it in our lives. For "the holy scriptures are able to make use wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim. 3:15).

We should meditate upon these things, and give ourselves wholly to them (1 Tim. 4:15).

In hope, MRS. A. J. MARTIN.

AMONG THE BRETHREN

ELDER C. C. MAPLE

Our special meeting at Elyria came to a close on Friday evening, April 18. We have put forth an extra effort in Elyria during the past few weeks to get the gospel before the people of the East Side.

We have been to the homes of the people, and, in addition to personal printed invitations to attend our meetings, we have also passed out copies of our tracts and papers, giving the people a chance in all ways at our command to hear the gospel.

Many things worked against the success of our meeting as far as we can see, and yet in God's sight it may be that it was very successful. We had expected a song leader to assist us in the meeting, but the flood made it impossible for him to reach us. This was quite a disappointment to many, as the singing is quite an attraction to the ones outside of the church.

Our city was also in darkness a portion of the time, the city light being cut off by the high water.

We trust that some good may have resulted from the effort put forth in this special series of meetings. We have had some most excellent meetings, even though the attendance was not large. Our listeners have been of the character that the preacher likes to preach to.

We are leaving now for a few days' meeting at another point. Address us at North Ridgeville, and mail will be forwarded.

TO MICHIGAN AND INDIANA BRETHREN

Having resigned as Ohio Coneference Evangelist, I shall have some time to devote to general evangelistic work. I will (D. V.) be in Michigan to fill some appointments, and to attend the annual state conference at Patton in June. Shall be pleased to visit churches in Michigan or Indiana following the conference.

Please address all correspondence to me at North Ridgeville, Lorain County, Ohio, and it will be forwarded to me. C. C. MAPLE.

THE VISITOR

S. ROXANA WINCE

What about Sister Harriet E. Boice's "Visitor?" It has cost her a great deal of thought, time, work and worry; shall we let all this be thrown away? It is just the thing to be put into the hands of learners. I only wish I could scatter it by the thousands. Why could it not be used in Bro. Maple's Blessed Hope Mission? It has some fine lessons for a Bible Readers' Class. Who will donate $2.00 worth for this purpose?

Our churches could everywhere use it to good advantage in their Bible Classes. Scatter the seed; some of it will germinate. Get the book and lend to those who will promise to read, and keep lending it until it is worn out. We were not put here to dance for a day in the sunshine, and die, like a butterfly. God wants more out of our lives than this, and when a child of his has done his or her part of the work in his great vineyard we should take hold and help carry it on. Let us help Sister Boice.

OBITUARY

Rebecca McDonald-Osborn

Rebecca McDonald-Osborn was born September 24, 1840, near Rutland, Marshall County, Indiana. Here she grew to womanhood and received a common school education such as the community afforded in that early day. She was the daughter of Samuel and Eliza Porter McDonald, who were among the early pioneers of our county. Consequently she witnessed the wonderful transformation of the wilderness into fertile fields and prosperous cities that has taken place in the last half century.

She was united in marriage to George Alleman September 22, 1860, with whom she lived happily until his death, March 6, 1894. She was again united in marriage to Samuel Osborn January 18, 1900, and took up her residence in Culver, Indiana. Here she enjoyed the blessings of a good home and congenial companionship. She had been in poor health for the past three years, but was only confined to her bed for a few days when death took her away from us. She died on April 17, 1913, at her home in Culver, at the age of 72 years, 6 months and 23 days.

She heard the preaching of the gospel at old Pisgah, the original Church of God in our county, and was baptized about the year 1862. When Antioch succeeded old Pisgah her membership was transferred to that place, where it has since remained. Her life has been one of faithfulness to her trust in God through Christ, her accepted Lord and Savior. She was loyal to the church, doing what she could with her strength and means to promote the spreading of the gospel. She was modest and unobtrusive in her disposition and made lasting friends of those she came to know. Her life record is worthy of emulation as a model of Christian virtue and rectitude. Her friendly face and kindly greetings at the meetings of the church will be greatly missed by her wide circle of friends.

She leaves her beloved husband, Samuel Osborn; two sisters, Catherine Upmeyer and Florence Litler, both of Harrisburg, Oregon, and many other relatives, to mourn her loss. The church loses a faithful servant, the community a kindly neighbor, and the world a good woman, in her death.

Funeral services were held from the home in Culver at 9:30 a. m., from the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Jennie McDonald, in Plymouth, Ind., at 2 o'clock p. m., conducted by D. E. Vanvactor, and interment was made in Oak Hill Cemetery, where Sister Osborn was laid to rest to await the coming of the great Life-Giver, Jesus the Christ.

SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST

Opens April 1, 1913, Closes June 30, 1913

READ ABOUT THE SPECIAL AWARDS TO BE GIVEN TO CONTESTANTS WHO SECURE NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE RESTITUTION. Read every word, so that you will be thoroughly familiar with every detail.

FIRST—THE AWARDS

FIRST AWARD—To the person who secures the largest number of new yearly subscriptions to The Restitution between the dates of April 1, 1913, and June 30, 1913, we will give free a TWENTY-YEAR GUARANTEED GOLD-FILLED WATCH, with choice of Elgin, Waltham or Deuber-Hampton movement, either ladies' or gentlemen's size. This is a beautiful watch and a splendid timepiece. You can also choose a plain or fancy case.

SECOND AWARD—To the one sending in the second largest number we will give choice of either a pair of SOLID GOLD CUFF LINKS or a SILVER MESH BAG, either a handsome present.

THIRD AWARD—For the third largest list we will give an extra large 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN, barrel covered with silver filigree work.

SPECIAL AWARDS—Besides these first three awards, we will give to everyone who sends in at least one new subscriber a handsome and useful POCKET MEMORANDUM BOOK.

To everyone who sends in at least two new subscribers a 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN like cut, or to everyone who sends in at least three new subscribers we will give a 14k. SOLID GOLD SELF-FILLING FOUNTAIN PEN. These pens are all fully guaranteed.

So you see, everyone who enters into this contest will receive some kind of an award for their efforts; the greater the effort, the greater the award, and everyone will have the same opportunity.

NOW READ THESE CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each subscriber to count must be a NEW subscriber. NO RENEWALS WILL COUNT.
2. Two six-months' subscriptions count as one yearly.
3. Subscriptions must be received after midnight March 31 and before June 30th, at midnight, to count.
4. If two contestants send the same number of subscribers in competing for the first three awards duplicate awards will be given.
5. All awards will be given at the end of the contest.
6. And this is going to be the best help of all: NEW SUBSCRIBERS WILL BE RECEIVED DURING THIS CONTEST at the special rate of

One Dollar a Year : 50c Six Months

This rate does not apply to renewals. To subscriptions in Canada add 50 cents.

We believe the above offer to be very liberal—liberal to the new subscribers, liberal to you who are to get the new subscribers.

Why do we give these awards? To stimulate your interest in helping us increase our mailing list and to get The Restitution into the many homes where it should be read. We want to increase the size of The Restitution, but in order to do this we must increase the size of the mailing list first, so THE BIG EFFORT IS STARTED AND THE CONTEST IS ON—and remember, EVERYONE WILL RECEIVE AN AWARD.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The Inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37), the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

"WE WOULD SEE JESUS"

(John 12:21)

We wou'd see Jesus as the shepherds found him,
Wrapped in the lovely innocence of youth;
The glory of the star that shone around him
Led to the One who is eternal truth.

And we would bring him gifts, our best suffices,
As did the wise men in the days of old—
Our willing service in the stead of spices,
And loyal hearts of love in place of gold.

We would see Jesus as he sat and reasoned
Before the doctors in the temple dim;
His words of truth were with deep wisdom seasoned,
His teaching and his youth astonished them.

We would see Jesus preaching on the mountain,
Before him gathered a great multitude;
His words refreshed their souls like cooling fountain
Revives the grass; their needs he understood.

And we would see him as the "great physician,"
Soothing the pain-racked souls that to him came,
Changing the loathsome leper's sad condition,
Healing with touch and word the blind and lame.

Ah, we would see him in that solemn hour,
As at the grave of Lazarus he wept,
When he bade him, in voice of mighty power,
"Come forth," who in the grave had slept.

If we had seen him in the garden praying,
When drops of agony suffused his brow,
And heard his voice in gentle sorrow saying,
"Could ye not watch one hour with me now?"

We never more would wound his gentle spirit,
Nor pierce the hear that broke upon the tree;
Our changed lives his smile of love would merit,
Our hearts be tuned to love and harmony.

We would see Jesus when all eyes behold him
And every tongue his praises shall confess;
When shining clouds as garments bright enfold him,
And he comes back his waiting ones to bless.

Oh, we would see him in that heavenly city,
So wondrous fair, that in the future lies;
When God, with touch of boundless love and pity,
Shall wipe the bitter tears from weeping eyes.

Then we shall see his face, and dwell forever
Within that city where is no more night;
As pillars in his temple, to go never
From out that city where our God is light.

O come, Lord Jesus, quickly come and lead us
To living waters of the fountainhead;
Come, blessed Savior, come, and thou shalt feed us,
Thy hand shall feed us on the living bread.

—ALICE B. CURTIS.

THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT; OR THE EXPOSITION OF ACTS 2:38, 39

Concluded

This leads us to the consideration of

The Words of the Promise

Peter, addressing a great multitude out of many nations, told them certain marvelous facts which had transpired lately concerning Jesus of Nazareth; and also explained to them the character of the facts and the effect they were intended to have on the world. His hearers believe and ask "What shall we do?" and he told them in answer that they were to "repent and be immersed in the name of Jesus Christ in order to the remission of sins." This command they could all obey; there was no limintation to their power to do these acts which they were commanded, and if the commands were obeyed the consequence was sure and certain. The "remission of sins" is stated as a consequence, a result of the obedience. It is not in the form of a promise, but stated as the effect of certain causes. He then changes the style, the change of idea or thought demanding it, and says: "And you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit;" he does not rest here. Without anything farther in the connection or otherwise it might be claimed very reasonably that this promise was co-extensive with "the remission of sins;" but he proceeds and says, "For the promise is to you and to your children, and to all that are afar off." This is more extensive and has a wider range than the former words would indicate. It does not confine the "promise" to the obedient, but enlarges its boundaries to all present and "afar off," and to that generation and the suceeceding one or more. Some theorists might step in here and claim that the passage is not quoted far enough when the stop is made at, "And you shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit;" the other words should be quoted, and then all the world is included; notwithstanding our Lord said to his apostles they would receive the spirit of truth "whom the world can not receive" (John 14:17). The only safe way to deal with this, as with all other scripture, is to hear it all, and what do we find? Words of limitation, narrowing the boundaries, drawnig in the circle, reducing the numbers, fixing and ascertaining the numerical total by words of number; "as many as," so many only; that number precisely; "as many as the Lord our God shall call." This settles controversy. This sentence is pronounced, and establishes the extent and number, the limit and boundary of the whole question. It is not general unless the call is general. It is, however, promised to a definite extent and for a definite number. How many? "As many as the Lord our God shall call," to this promise, to this blessing.

How Did God Call?

The call of God to the reception of "the gift of the Holy Spirit" was not by a voice from heaven, nor by the proclamation of the gospel, for that was to all mankind, but by means of the apostles of Christ. We are not informed as to the facts with respect to those who were immersed on the day of Pentecost, although in Acts 5:32 we are told God gave the Holy Spirit before that time. We do not know how many, if any, received this gift on that day of Pentecost; we are only left to conjecture; and when I am left to that process in relation to religious matters I stop at once and proceed to analogous facts, if there are any to be found. In this particular we are not without facts. A little advance in the history informs us of one with numerous details that explains the whole difficulty. But before entering upon the consideration of that fact we should remember that never again, in all the discourses we have from the apostles, do we find this promise repeated to sinners or saints. We have remission of sins indicated as a result of the obedience to the gospel in more than one instance (see Acts 5:31; 10:43; 13:38; 26:18), but this promise of "the gift" is never again associated with it. This is significant, if not final, on the question. The act, then, illustrative of how God called persons to the enjoyment of this gift is no exception. Philip the evangelist preached to the Samaritans (Acts 8). They received the Word of God; they believed, and were immersed, were saved; their sins were forgiven. "The Holy Spirit had fallen upon none of them, only they were immersed in the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 8:16). If the promise of Peter on Pentecost was to have been general, here was the occasion to find its fulfillment; but the fact being directly denied in this instance settles controversy on the subject, and shows beyond a doubt that the promise was not general, nor designed for each individual Christian. They did not "receive the Holy Spirit," which we have seen means the same thing as "the gift of the Holy Spirit;" for the apostles, hearing the news in Jerusalem that Samaria had received the word of God, "sent Peter and John, who, when they came, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Spirit." The apostles did not pray for them to receive what they already possesssed; and yet it was some time after they had been immersed, long enough at least for the news to go to Jerusalem and for the apostles to go to Samaria, which in those days must have been no inconsiderable time. "Then they laid hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit;" and they had not received it until then. These simple statements of the historian of Acts of Apostles at once and forever rebuts all theories of inferences about "the gift of the Holy Spirit" being given at, or as an immediate consequence of, immersion.

We further read: "Now when Simon saw that the Holy Spirit was given by the imposition of the apostles' hands," he offered them money, saying, "Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands he may receive the Holy Spirit." The evidence accumulates as we read, and we find the question answered in express and explicit terms by the historian, when he (not Simon) says that "the Holy Spirit was given by the imposition of the apostles' hands;" and in this way the call of God was indicated, or expressed: "In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established."

Let us then turn to another testimony (Acts 19). Paul came to Ephesus, and finding there some disciples, he said to them: "Have you received the Holy Spirit since you believed? And they replied to him, No; we have not even heard if there be any Holy Spirit." Paul then explained to them the gospel; "and hearing this they were immersed into the name of the Lord Jesus." So far the gift of the Holy Spirit was not given, although they had believed and had been immersed; "and Paul laying his hands on them, the Holy Spirit came upon them; and they spake with tongues and prophesied." "The Holy Spirit was given by the imposition of the apostles' hands."

These facts ought to be satisfactory in explanation of the manner in which God called saints to the reception of "the gift of the Holy Spirit" in the gospel dispensation. There is no fact in any aspect opposed to this. We have no details as to the manner in which the Holy Spirit was given to any saint in the New Testament other than these, unless it should be the "gift" given to Timothy (2 Tim. 1:6), and even in that case the same action was presented, the imposition of apostles' hands. The Holy Spirit, nevertheless, was given in many other instances, as we find in repeated allusions in the Epistles, as, for instance, to the Corinthians, the Galatians, the Thessalonians; but we are obliged to conclude it was always given in the same way. This would seem to explain the apostle Paul, in his Epistle to the Romans (1:11), when he said: "For I greatly desire to see you, that I may impart to you some spiritual gift, that you may be established." His personal presence was necessary to that end, although it was not necessary that he should be present to impart to them all the teaching, exhortation, comfort and edification found in his epistle to them. It is, moreover, clearly established that this gift was not general or universal; to all persons who obeyed the gospel, to those only; to "as many as the Lord our God might call," by the "imposition of the apostles' hands."

Was the Gift to Be Perpetuated?

That "the gift of the Holy Spirit" was not to be perpetuated through all time is sufficiently shown from the fact that it was given "by imposition of the apostles' hands," and that since the death of John the Apostle, the last apostle of Christ, no such gift has been imparted. Since it was necessary for Paul, in his lifetime, to see the Roman Christians to "impart some spiritual gift" to them, it can not be expected that after his death, and the death of all the apostles, such gift should be imparted. The fact, too, that miracles have ceased is proof positive and decisive that "the gift" has not been given since the apostles' time, as the miracles were the "manifestations" of the spirit and of power, and proved that what the apostles spoke was the Word of God (Mark 16:20; Acts 14:13; Rom. 15:19; Heb. 2:4). Besides, we are told expressly that they were to cease (1 Cor. 13:8). The "gift of the Holy Spirit" was miraculous; the "manifestations" were miraculous; "the gift" was the foundation of all the others; the others the superstructure, showing where the foundation was. When "the gift" was not given the manifestations were not seen, and when the manifestations are not seen we may reasonably conclude that "the gift" is not given; that, in fact, the perpetuation of "the gift" would perpetuate the "manifestations" of the gift; and as the manifestations are not perpetuated or continued, the gift is not perpetuated or continued. "But now these th" e continue, Faith, Hope, Love; but of them the greatest is Love" (1 Cor. 13:13).

FULFILLMENT OF PROPHECY

In view of the present critical situation in Europe the calling attention to certain prophecies found in the Bible may be interesting to your readers. Whether the time is fully ripe for the next great event, or if it will be further postponed by a patched-up agreement among the powers, remains to be seen.

Much prophecy has been and is now being made into history, and all will be fulfilled in due time. For verification to those who care to search into the matter I append reference to proof texts. In Revelations 16:12 we read: "And the sixth angel poured out his vial upon the great river Euphrates, and the waters thereof were dried up, that the way of the kings of the east might be prepared."

Revelations is a book of symbols (A). The events spoken of are not made known by literal descriptions, but are portrayed by signs and symbols. As far as I know, all Bible expositors are agreed on the meaning of "the great river Euphrates," as used in this verse—that it stands for the Ottoman empire. The literal river Euphrates has its source and in its course flows only through Turkish territory, and is the great river of that empire, and therefore fitly represents the dominion of the sultan.

Prior to about one and one-half centuries ago Turkey was the most formidable nation of the world, having dominion over vast territories in Europe, Asia and Africa. Since then she has been gradually declining as slice after slice has been carved from her. Loss of strength has caused her to be known as the "sick man of the East." Of late the drying up process has been very much accelerated. Within a year she has lost to Italy all of her remaining African possessions, and now is about to lose nearly all of what remained to her in Europe. The end is not yet. The drying up process will continue until she has disappeared from the map, for the mouth of the Lord has spoken it.

Attention is called to the next statement of this symbolic prophecy, the fulfillment of which seems imminent. It could be shown, reasoning from prophecy and history, that the unclean, frog-like spirits are French in their origin, and by diplomacy speak through the official mouths located in Constantinople, Vienna and Rome, going forth to the kings ruling in the territories which in John the Revelator's day was the then Roman habitat, stirring them up to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. It seems probable that the present war against Turkey, before it is settled, will involve the nations of Europe in strife. Either in the very near future or a little later they will be arrayed against each other. We may therefore confidently expect that the present eastern question will not be permanently settled by the mediation of the great powers. It is not likely that they will agree among themselves, but will become arrayed in hostile alliances, offensive and defensive. When the conflict comes, which it will sooner or later, we know in part what nations will be allied on the one side. Gog (doubtless Russia) will win to his footsteps certain helps, which are mentioned by name in Ezekiel 38:5, 6. And in the war they will be successful, even to the invading of Palestine and sacking the city of Jerusalem (B).

But we must go back in point of time, as we have passed beyond the chronological order. It is not definitely revealed if the powers will be engaged in actual war, or only arrayed in hostile camps, when the next and most stupendous event in the world's history will be enacted. "Behold, I come as a thief" (C). The personality of the "I" can easily be established. The introductory verse of this book says "The revelation of Jesus Christ"—even he who was dead, but now living for ever more (D). and in chapter 22, verse 16, he says: "I, Jesus, have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things." The same Jesus who ascended from the Mount of Olives (E). and who will descend from heaven with a shout (F). The same who made promise to his disciples, "I will come again" (G).

But why is this thief-like coming such a stupendous event? Because then will occur the resurrection of all who sleep in Jesus, and they, with the living saints, will meet the Lord (H) and be assembled before the tribunal of Christ, and receive in body according as the award shall be (I). The saints, having been removed from among the left ones, then will begin the time of trouble, the like of which has never been (J).

Between the time of the gathering of the saints to judgment (probably at Sinai) and the coming of Christ with his saints to the Mount of Olives (K), Gog and all his bands (L) will have waged a successful war, and in his cupidity and thirst for spoil and conquest will have marched into Palestine to rob the Jews, who will have been gathered again to their own country and become rich (M), and will succeed to the extent of capturing and sacking the city of Jerusalem (N). But then and there his conquering career ends, for the Lord intervenes and destroys that great host to the extent of five-sixths of their numbers (O). The invader, having been defeated and driven out of the land by the Lord and the saints, is now ready to begin the establishment of the kingdom of God in its "little stone" form (Q), proclaiming himself the rightful heir to David's throne, and calling on nations to submit to his righteous rule (S). Those nations refusing to submit will be subdued one by one until the whole earth will have been conquered (T), after which the inhabitants of the earth will enjoy the peace and prosperity of the millennial reign (U).

LONG-FACED CHRISTIANS

I often hear church members say: "I don't like a long-faced Christian." A Congregational preacher here that gave nearly universal satisfaction said he had no use for a long-faced Christian. I wondered if he would have had any use for Jesus when he was on earth, for we have no account of him being full of hilarity and fun-making, as this man was. He quit in this country peace and went to Los Angeles, where he could get a larger salary for preaching the gospel—Oh, no, I mean for pleasing the people.

It is surely a true saying that a Christian has a better reason for rejoicing than any other person living. We are told many times in God's word to rejoice. In Luke 10:21: "Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid those things from the (worldly) wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes." See Isaiah 35:1: "The wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad for them; and the desert shall rejoice, and blossom as the rose." Was there any witty jokes and laughter in those cases of rejoicing and gladness? I think not. Suppose I should see a fractious team, hitched to a carriage, loaded with near friends, the lines broken and the horses running at desperate speed; should I laugh, or be what is called "long-faced?" All will surely say, "No place for laughing here." But we have to witness what I believe to be a thousand times worse than a runaway, namely, to see loved ones that have been taught the true way of life, and who enlisted for life in the Christian warfare by being buried with Christian baptism, making them close relations, to see these dear ones throw all of their influence with a popular church (world's church), and as near as possible dress in all of the latest fashions, even beyond their means, and very injurious to health. The girls wear a heavy looking yellow band on the arm for a badge, showing that they belong to the world. Is that a cause for rejoicing and laughter? I have observed in some cases that the more parents do to please such children the less the child will do to please the parent, which will be very dishonoring to the parent and shorten the natural life of the child(Gen. 20:12). Dear ones, what does this mean? Not only cutting this natural life short; it means a second death, which is eternal. Is the temporal death, if caused by the runaway team, any comparison? Surely a thousand times no. Where would the time or place come in for hilarity and witty jokes for one that is a Christian or Christ-like? All signs indicate that we are now living in the last days; today may be the last for us all. Are you satisfied with your manner of life should he come this week? If not, lose no time in changing your ways. Read carefully 2 Tim. 2:1-5: "In the last days perilous times shall come (surely they are here now); for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, traitors, bonsters, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." Do you sometimes spend from twenty-five cents to twenty-five dollars for a midnight supper (that is harmful), and nothing for the spread of the gospel? If so, where is your love?

Dear ones, do any of the above statements hit you? If so, turn away from such fleshly lusts. Gal. 6:7: "Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Be careful; the time of sowing is short; reaping time is at hand. What do you expect to reap? What are you sowing? We read in James 4:4 that whosoever is a friend of the world "is the enemy of God." Could such an one expect a favorable harvest? If a person helps to instill into the minds of the people the lie of the serpent in Gen. 3:4, who are they friend of, God or the world? Almost all of the world, heathens included, believe the serpent. We read in 2 Cor. 4:17, 18: "Wherefore come out from among them (the world), and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty." So on easy conditions we have a plain, positive promise of the Lord, who is able and will fulfill all of the grand and glorious promises that he has made unto the faithful. But what has the world to offer but the pleasures of sin for a season, which shortens their natural life? Dear ones, which will you choose, life or death? As in Josh. 24:15: "If it seem evil unto you to serve the Lord, choose you this day whom ye will serve." Make a wise choice today and serve the Lord in earnest. We read in Hosea 8:7: "They have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whilrwind." We have good reason to believe that many of the young people that are now living will experience the awful time that we read of in Rev. 6:15, 16, when people hide themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains, and say to the mountains and rocks: Fall on us (surely great anguish), and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne and from the wrath of the Lamb. Is it a cause of rejoicing to see people working up to that time? I don't feel like laughing to see so much indifference, but the grand and glorious promises of God have done me much good after everything of an earthly nature failed in giving any relief from my affliction.

Your true friend, hoping to get someone to take more interest in their own eternal welfare,

G. W. CALDER.

THE HAND OF GOD

How wonderfully, how silently, moves the hand of God through the universe which he has created, and among the children of men! The workings of his hand are visible to all flesh, if they will but see and heed its movements, for from this hand have come the mighty happenings of the centuries, which show forth his power and greatness in the fulfillment of his word.

Some time ago I was looking through a magazine, in which I found some reproductions from the hand of the famous French sculptor Rodin. Among those created by his genius I was particularly impressed with one called "The Hand of God." The hand, of generous proportions, was that of a sculptor, significant of creative power, and holds in its outspread palm two recumbent figures. The artist's intention, no doubt, was to convey in a measure to the finite mind the utter helplessness of man in the grasp of the Infinite and his dependence upon him for life and for all things.

In careful consideration of this masterpiece, its message to me was one of awe and humility, of fear and love, for this mighty Creator who made no mistakes in his vast plans for the redemption of his creatures. With this thought ever before us, how free we should be of all pride, how contritely we should walk before him, and in humbleness of heart serve him and our fellow-beings.

By this hand events are marching rapidly on, and the closing scenes are upon us. Let us, beloved (not unmindful of what this brings to a world lying in darkness and sin, and which defy him and his power), be ever guided by this hand, which will at last and in his own time bring us into that "haven of peace," where we shall share the glories prepared for all those who loved him and sought to do his will.—Minnie McIlrath.

PETER'S TABERNACLE PUT OFF

VIRGIL F. HUNT

Usually when I am confronted with a hard problem I begin its solution by casting about and seeing if there is anything connected with the question at all that I POSITIVELY do know.

Concerning this matter I know first, "That flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God" (1 Cor. 15:50). Secondly, that my present nature (my body) is composed of flesh and blood. Thirdly, I know that "We shall not all sleep, but we shall ALL BE CHANGED" (1 Cor. 15:51). Fourthly, I know that this change is to be accomplished in the "twinkling of an eye, at the last trump" (1 Cor. 15:52; Rev. 11:15). Fifthly, I know that "the dead shall be raised incorruptible" (1 Cor. 15:52). Sixthly, I know that "it (this body) is sown a natural body" (1 Cor. 15:44).

Now somewhere between birth and resurrection this TABERNACLE (natural flesh and blood body) is put off. But when and where is it put off. NOT AT THE RESURRECTION, for we have just seen that the dead are raised incorruptible—not raised mortal and later on mortality exchanged for immortality; so it follows that the time for putting off this mortal body (tabernacle) is at death, when it is sown a natural body, later to be raised a spiritual body.

As a tabernacle (tent) signifies something temporary and transient, even so it is with the body we now have. It is not always to endure, but it will be sown in death sooner or later, and out of it will be raised the "spiritual body," which will be an immortal proposition—not a tent or tabernacle, but a fixture.

Now for an exposition of Peter (2 Pet. 1: 13-15). Christ had shown Peter that he should die, so those who tell us that the apostles expected Christ to come again in their day and time make a sad mixture of things; and Peter was desirous that the church of God should have certain things always in mind, and so he took the necessary precautions and steps to have those things made permanent (as set over against his life, which was but a vapor soon to vanish. James 4:14). Putting off his tabernacle was simply putting off this mortal body (to be sown in death and corruption), which Paul says can not inherit the kingdom of God.

When we speak of the back of a chair, the seat of a chair, the legs of a chair, we do not mean that there is a chair independent of back, seat and legs; neither did Peter, when speaking of his tabernacle, mean to say that he (Peter) existed independent of his body, for now that Peter has put off his tabernacle, even as Christ showed him, there is not Simon Peter and will not be until he is quickened again—raised from the dead. Then he will be not "tabernacle" Peter, but immortal Peter.—Messiah's Advocate.

THE NEW TESTAMENT DOCTRINE OF GIVING

By C. F. L. SMITH

An Outline

1. It is a grace, i. e., a disposition created by the spirit (2 Cor. 8:7).

2. In contrast with the law, which imposed giving as a divine requirement, Christian giving is voluntary, and a test of sincerity and love (8:8-12; 9:1, 25).

3. The privilege is universal, belonging, according to ability, to rich and poor (8:1-3, 12-15).

4. Giving is to be proportioned to income (8:12-14). The Old Testament proportion was the tithe, a proportion which antedates the law (Gen. 14:20).

5. The rewards of Christian giving are: (a) joy (8:2), (b) increased ability to give in proportion to that which has already been given (9:7-11), (c) increased thankfulness to God by an increasing number (9:12), (d) God and the gospel glorified (9:13, 14), (e) it incites God's love toward the giver (9:7).—Messiah's Advocate.

Don't mope and brood over your woes, disasters and losses. Do something. Set to work. Brooding only weakens, and makes misery of feeling more intense. Begin at once to repair the disaster. If your life work suddenly falls in ruins about you, like a house of cards, put some of the stones of the ruins down at once, as a foundation for the new building. If all you have earned with hard and anxious labor is plucked away from you, do not fret; begin again, gather some more. You will not forget your trouble in any way so easily as by filling life again with activities, interest and toils.—Selected.

No human being can be isolated and self-sustained. The strongest and bravest and most helpful have yet, acknowledged or unacknowledged to themselves, moments of hungry soul-yearnings for companionship and sympathy. For the want of this what wrecks of humanity lie strewn about us—youth wasted for the mocking semblance of friendship, adrift at the mercy of chance, without the grasp of a true, firm hand, without a kindly, loving heart to counsel!

EDITORIAL

Our series of sermons on Reevlations have been concluded until next winter.

April 27th was our anniversary Sunday. We had a large attendance both morning and evening. Bro. and Sister Moore, of Salem, were visitors. Bro. Moore presided at the Lord's table in the morning. Another reason for rejoicing occurred after the evening service when two more were baptized into the name of the Life-Giver, Mrs. Irish and her daughter Jennie, both formerly Methodist. The Lord bless them and make them a blessing to others, and finally give them his great salvation, is our prayer.

THE GOD OF WAR

In the press of April 29th is a description of the military condition of Europe. While we are beginning to feel the grip of the god of war, we know nothing of his terrors in the old countries as he feeds greedily on the women and children.

Germany has just decided to spend $270,000,000 for war preparations, by taxing incomes.

And this will be so great that German business houses, of a certain income, must pay the government the first five per cent. of their earnings before they can take any earnings themselves.

Wherefore, if a firm wishes to earn 6 per cent. it must, in reality, make 11 per cent.!

With beefsteak at 68 cents a pound in Berlin, due to the fact that the butcher must make his 11 per cent., is it any wonder that in this city last year seven thousand dogs were slaughtered for eating purposes?

German Workman Pays Half Day's Wage, Weekly, for War

It is fair to say that the German workingman pays half a day's wages every week for war!

And the burden will be increased when Germany, next year, begins to collect over $7,000,000 to spend for airships alone!

"This war cloud hangs over every pair of sweethearts in Germany," says a young German. "Just now war seems certain, and my girl and I can't be married and start a home with the chance that she'll be a widow and the children half orphans.

"All the laws of Germany that have to do with morals are based on war! 'Get children, no matter how,' is the government's rule. No man will be punished for being the father of an illegitimate child! The woman is hopeless and helpless. The result is that women are driven into prostitution to care for their children—and to supply the soldiers."

France, Too, Seeks Soldiers at Whatever Cost to Morals

Men children for fighting—they are what France, too, evidently wants, no matter how they come into the world. All the laws regarding prostitution and morality are framed with this end in view. A betrayed girl is prevented from seeking the father of her child; she must care for the child herself. Which means that most of the girls along the boulevards who make Paris awful instead of gay are mothers of nameless children, whom they are supporting as best they can.

In Germany and France, when war guns are booming, men are fed into the maw of war; but, in the lulls of peace, into the hungry maw is fed the countries' girlhood.

Each French workingman pays about three-fourths of a day's wages every week for war alone, not counting his other taxes!

War Last Drains Resources and is Bar to Happiness

In Germany and France alone $5,000,000,000 is practically set aside from commerce, in order to produce, at 5 per cent. interest, enough to keep the two countries ready to fight each other.

In other words, if France and Germany could agree never to go to war, it would practically mean taking this $5,000,000,000 and turning it to making their countries richer and their homes happier.

In England the situation is as bad, though the Englishman, as an individual, is bucking up against the foolishness of it all. England is building sixteen warships to Germany's ten; but her difficulty is to find Englishmen ready to man them.

Englishman Has Learned He Fights Only For "Interests"

Just at present Lord Roberts is going about England crying out: "Join the militia and be patriotic, or else the government will have to enforce military enlistment." But the Englishmen are only pooh-poohing him and all such as hold his ideas, for the Englishman has discovered, during the past few English wars, that the average English soldier never fights for himself, but for the money interests of the lords and nobles. The English government is having a hard time to get people to stand a war tax.

COMMUNICATIONS

Bro. Huggins:

Some days ago I received a copy of your work, "Paradise Lost; Paradise Regained." I wish to say that I enjoyed reading it, and also the other works which you have given us. I have thought many times in the past year that I would write you a personal letter to tell you how much I appreciated your efforts in putting the plain, simple truth in such plain and simple words that even a fool had no need to err therein. I have often wished that I might occupy a seat at some of your services. I wished to show my appreciation in a way that will help to hold up your hands, and perhaps in a small way share in the good work.

At the present writing I have quite an ample supply of tracts and books, which we always try to get before those we can interest, of whom there are exceedingly few. I will enclose a small remittance for you to apply as you deem best, and if the Lord wills I may be able to do more in days to come.

Our aged Bro. John Mitchel is very ill at this writing. He is about 78 years of age, a firm believer and a lover of the truth.

May the Lord's blessings crown your eoffrts in the Master's service.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

L. G. JAEGER.

BEREAN DEPARTMENT

Happy is the man who has the confidence expressed by the Psalmist: "Though an host should encamp against me my heart shall not fear; though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident. One thing have I desired of the Lord; that will I seek after, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord and to inquire in his temple. For in the time of trouble he shall hide me in his pavilion, in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me; he shall set me upon a rock" (Ps. 27:3, 4, 5).

It is not our province to take revenge, or seek it. "Vengeance is mine, saith the Lord, I will repay."

May we be enabled to say: "Though we walk in the flesh, we do not war after the flesh; for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds" (2 Cor. 10:3, 4).

We sought revenge in the days of our ignorance, but now that we have come to knowledge may we remember that "all that take the sword shall perish with the sword" (Matt. 26:52).

The sermon on the Mount is throughout a command not to take revenge, but to do good, against evil.

"Wisdom is better than weapons of war" (Eccl. 9:18).

"No weapon that is found against thee shall prosper" (Isa. 54:17).

KATHRYN TOWNSEND.

Flattery is often a traffic of mutual meanness, where, although both parties intend deception, neither is deceived.

Ask

"In Gibeon the Lord appeared to Solomon in a dream by night; and God said, Ask what I shall give thee" (1 Kings 3:5).

We find Solomon's reply in the four following verses. We will notice verse 9: "Give therefore thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and bad; for who is able to julge this thy so great a people?"

God was so pleased with his request that he not only granted what he asked for, but much more. Read verses 11 to 14 inclusive.

Now let us turn to Jas. 1:5, 6: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed."

Here we find faith plays an important part in our petitions. We must ask in faith and according to God's words. "And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive" (Matt. 21:22).

Jas. 4:3 says: "Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts."

"And this is the confidence that we have in him, that if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us" (1 John 5:14).

ANNA M. WERTZ.

Time

The Ecclesiastical writer gives us to understand that there is a time for everything. It may be we do not use our time judiciously, for we are so often handicapped for the commodity.

When we are busy, time, instead of dragging heavily upon our hands, flies rapidly by, and we are unable to accomplish this, that or the other thing that we would like to, because we haven't time.

I once heard a teacher say to her pupils: "You have all the time there is to get your lessons," when the lack of time was given as an excuse for poorly learned ones.

If we could only manufacture a little extra time by saying, as did Joshua, upon one memorable occasion, "Sun, stand still," and have him obey us, what satisfaction we would get out of it!

I am quite sure that the most of us do enough, but am not so certain that we are doing the very best we can under the circumstances. There is room for improvement. Let us not settle down in contentment, but ever strive to press forward "toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

We need time to think in order that we may not omit the weightier matters.

Having learned from bitter experience, as well as by revelation, that man's allotted time is short, let us take heed to the language of Paul when he says: "It is high time to awake out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed." "Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation" (2 Cor. 6:2).

Let us take a retrospective view of the past to see wherein we can make better use of our time, present and future, than we have in the past. We ought to find time and take the opportunity to scatter a little seed by the wayside, trusting the Lord for growth and for yield. There are various ways of doing this.

An excellent way, but so easy any of us can do it, is to distribute tracts by able writers. Then "a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver" (Prov. 25:11). Various opportunities present themselves if we but take the time to embrace them.

There's no time like the present time,
The future is not ours;
If we would make our lives sublime,
Improve the present time.

In fact, present time is the only time we can depend upon, unless we merit, by obedience and faithfulness, the gift of God, which is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord, and are permitted to enjoy the blessings of eternity.

MRS. J. M. GLOTFELTY.

EIGHTH ANNUAL MAY MEETING

May 23-25, 1913.

May, 1912, is hardly out of sight, but we're rushing rapidly into May, 1913! How fast the years do pass! Time appears to be leaping forward, as if anxious to greet the bright morn of the new day. To its section in this fast-rushing car of Time, the church at Fonthill, Ont., invites all who are interested in the literature descriptive of the day and peoples across the date line of the second advent of our Lord to again meet and study such important topics as our nearness to that day; conditions which will mark and contrast that day from the present; the preparedness essential to our crossing over to engage in its majestic labors; and the means and methods now at hand for making that preparation. To assist in such studies, Bro. L. E. Conner, of Cleveland, O., has been engaged.

For this, the eighth annual May meeting of the Church of God at Fonthill, Ont., we have prepared the following outline of work:

Friday at 8 p. m. and Saturday at 8 p. m., addresses by L. E. Conner. On Saturday, talks and conversations pertaining to church work. Sunday at 10 a. m., Sunday-school and Bible study; 11 a. m., sermon by L. E. Conner, followed by communion; dinner in church basement; 3 p. m., sermon by F. L. Austin; 5:30 p. m., luncheon in basement; 7 p. m., service in charge of the young people; 8 p. m., sermon by L. E. Conner.

Fonthill is fourteen miles from Niagara Falls, on the N. S. & T. (electric) railroad, which connects with all steamship and railway lines in this district.

Many important events have flitted past the windows of time in the last twelve months. So many, in fact, that we must have made marked progress. Some day we shall we rushed into the great divisional yards which mark the termination of this age and the beginning of the coming one. But time will not stop. Neither will it "slow down." It will carry us past that great event of the ages with the same rapid flight as it speeds today. No time then to forecast or re-arrange; such all-inspiring work must be done now, en route. May this proposed gathering assist.

Address all questions and communications relative to this meeting to Joseph H. Fletcher, Secretary.

AMONG THE BRETHREN

ELDER C. C. MAPLE

Brethren Beloved:

As we have closed our labors as the Conference Evangelist for Ohio, perhaps a few lines may be of interest regarding the work of the past eight months, during which time we have served in this capacity.

We have enjoyed meeting the brethren over the State, and have found most of them ready to help and not hinder in the work of the gospel.

During the past eight months we have delivered in all 133 sermons and addresses, making an average of 200 a year.

We have traveled in all between three and four thousand miles, have baptized six and preached three funeral sermons. No record has been kept of the calls made, which have been a great many, nor of the tracts and papers distributed, which are not a few. We have not been able to see the results of the work done that we had hoped, yet we feel that we have done all that we could to make our church work a success. Let me say that to continue in this work constantly is no easy task.

We wish to thank all who have assisted us during this time. We still continue at the service of the brotherhood, and any calls that may be made we are ready to fill.

We expect to spend our time largely in Michigan, but can answer calls in Ohio, Indiana or any state near, as we may have the time.

There is so much to do and so few to do the work. May we have strength and wisdom to continue to preach. May God's blessing rest upon all of the work and workers. Amen.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES

Dear Restitution:

I did not make any report last week, as I had so little to report. I will now make report from April 13th to 20th.

We visited some of the brethren and perfected arrangements for the May meeting to be held in Los Angeles, and spoke at the home of Bro. Kimball to a small gathering Sunday afternoon. In the morning my uncle, J. P. Allard, and myself attended services at the First Day Advent Church, listening to an excellent sermon, as far as it went, from a brother recently from New Hampshire. We surely felt surprised to hear the same line of thought presented that we can remember hearing when we were a boy forty-two years ago, and felt to thank God for the light we had received during the past forty years of the plan of God for the future blessing of the nations of the earth. We also were glad to think that though we looked through a glass darkly then, the light has grown clearer as the years have rolled along. As we wended our way home we deplored the fact that there should be a separation of this kind of people who are one in faith as regards the nature of man. I feel sorry indeed that our differences of opinion as to how God will bring about the day of judgment and as to the details of the execution of his judgments and meting out the rewards according to every man's work, and the definite time it will be done, should separate people who are a unit in belief as to the nature of man. It looks as though we must all be a unit on the gospel, for that is the power of God unto salvation. As to just how much or how little a man must know, I wonder if anyone can point out just the passage of scripture that will draw the line. The eunuch said: "I believe Jesus Christ is the Son of God," and "Here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized." I sometimes wonder how much preaching the eunuch did after that. It is easy to tell whether a person really believed that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. How? Oftentimes people say: "Oh, well, a man could say to you, if you should ask him the question, Do you believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, Yes, when he did not know anything about it. How then is one to know whether when he was baptized if he believed it?

I answer, the way you can tell and make no mistake. Turn to 1 John 3:2, 3: "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And—" And what? "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." Also John 13:35: "By this shall all men know ye are my disciples: if ye have love one for another." You see, brethren, when we come to the apostle Paul. In Gal. 5:22: "The fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." Also Rom. 8:14: "For as many as are led by the spirit of God, they are the sons of God." When? Now. You see the test of what we believed, or rather how much we believed Jesus is the Son of God depends upon how we change our lives after baptism into his name.

This week we have assisted in getting out the programs and spreading the news of the meeting. Below we give you a report for the month. The reason for so few sermons is on account of the scattered condition of the brotherhood and inability to obtain a suitable place to hold services, and busy time of year.

Expenses for April	$28.05
Receipts for April	73.75
Balance	$45.70
Short during February and March	$49.75
May 1st, short on expense	$ 3.57

Sermons preached during April; services attended elsewhere, 2.

The bulk of the expense was incurred in the month of March on account of meetings then.

Yours in the work, O. J. ALLARD.

When you speak evil of another you must be prepared to have others speak evil of you. There is an old Buddhist proverb which says: "He who indulges in enmity is like one who throws ashes to windward, which come back to the same place and cover him all over."

If ever we find it hard to bestow our forgiveness when it is asked it is a good plan to count up the times within a month, or even a week, when we have had need to ask forgiveness of our Father in heaven.

OBITUARY

A. J. Herron

Amanda J. Herron departed this life January 15, 1913, aged 76 years and 6 months. She was the wife of C. W. Herron, who preceded her to the grave some three years ago. She was a firm believer in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, having embraced the faith forty-two years ago. She had been an invalid for eleven years, and the last two years of her life had been unable to raise from her chair without assistance. She was only bedfast a few days and died with the full expectation of a new life when Jesus comes and calls forth all the sleeping saints and crowns them with immortality. Oh, what a glorious thought when we lay our loved ones away to remember the words of our Savior: "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." With those comforting thoughts we sorrow not as those that have no hope, for we have the assurance that she will be among the saints that hath part in the first resurrection, crowned with everlasting life.

Your sister waiting for Jesus to return,

MRS. HATTIE NETT.

THE CHILDREN OF ADAM

S. ROXANA WINCE

Josephus tells us in Book I., Chapter 2, Section 3, that Adam had thirty-three sons and twenty-three daughters. Josephus knew, for the Jews had records, and reliable ones too, of which we know nothing, and so had also the Arabs. The Bible says that he not only begat Cain, Abel and Seth, but that he "begat sons and daughters" besides these. It does not even say that Cain was his oldest son; it only leaves us to draw the inference that he was. Nor does it tell us why the land of Nod was so named, but we know that men often call the countries where they settle after their own names (see Psa. 49:11—Editor). So "Nod" must have been one of the sons of Adam, and his settlement quite a populous one when Cain fled thither. One of the daughters of Nod may have become Cain's wife.

WHAT IS CALLED SACRIFICE

To be wholly in the hands of the One who loves us most ought not to be a hardship. How strange that anyone should ever think it is! "Sacrifice" means simply the setting of a thing apart wholly to God. Gen. Armstrong, of Hampton, once wrote:

"A work that requires no sacrifice does not count for much in fulfilling God's plans. But what is commonly called sacrifice is the best, happiest use of one's self and one's resources—the best investment of time, strength and means. He who makes no such sacrifice is most to be pitied."

Faith is proved not by what we say, but by what we do. Thousands declare belief in God and his word, when their daily lives are giving the lie to their claims.

Whenever anything good comes our way let us enjoy it to the fullest and then pass it along in another form.—Hubbard.

Opens April 1, 1913, Closes June 30, 1913

READ ABOUT THE SPECIAL AWARDS TO BE GIVEN TO CONTESTANTS WHO SECURE NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE RESTITUTION. Read every word, so that you will be thoroughly familiar with every detail.

FIRST—THE AWARDS

FIRST AWARD—To the person who secures the largest number of new yearly subscriptions to The Restitution between the dates of April 1, 1913, and June 30, 1913, we will give free a TWENTY-YEAR GUARANTEED GOLD-FILLED WATCH, with choice of Elgin, Waltham or Deuber-Hampton movement, either ladies' or gentlemen's size. This is a beautiful watch and a splendid timepiece. You can also choose a plain or fancy case.

SECOND AWARD—To the one sending in the second largest number we will give choice of either a pair of SOLID GOLD CUFF LINKS or a SILVER MESH BAG, either a handsome present.

THIRD AWARD—For the third largest list we will give an extra large 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN, barrel covered with silver filigree work.

SPECIAL AWARDS—Besides these first three awards, we will give to everyone who sends in at least one new subscriber a handsome and useful POCKET MEMORANDUM BOOK.

To everyone who sends in at least two new subscribers a 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN like cut, or to everyone who sends in at least three new subscribers we will give a 14k. SOLID GOLD SELF-FILLING FOUNTAIN PEN. These pens are all fully guaranteed.

So you see, everyone who enters into this contest will receive some kind of an award for their efforts; the greater the effort, the greater the award, and everyone will have the same opportunity.

NOW READ THESE CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each subscriber to count must be a NEW subscriber. NO RENEWALS WILL COUNT.
2. Two six-months' subscriptions count as one yearly.
3. Subscriptions must be received after midnight March 31 and before June 30th, at midnight, to count.
4. If two contestants send the same number of subscribers in competing for the first three awards duplicate awards will be given.
5. All awards will be given at the end of the contest.
6. And this is going to be the best help of all: NEW SUBSCRIBERS WILL BE RECEIVED DURING THIS CONTEST at the special rate of

One Dollar a Year : 50c Six Months

This rate does not apply to renewals. To subscriptions in Canada add 50 cents.

We believe the above offer to be very liberal—liberal to the new subscribers, liberal to you who are to get the new subscribers.

Why do we give these awards? To stimulate your interest in helping us increase our mailing list and to get The Restitution into the many homes where it should be read. We want to increase the size of The Restitution, but in order to do this we must increase the size of the mailing list first, so THE BIG EFFORT IS STARTED AND THE CONTEST IS ON—and remember, EVERYONE WILL RECEIVE AN AWARD.

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-53); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

AWAKE!

S. ROXANA WING

Oh, sleeping watcher, waken!
The Master's looking on;
And what if at his coming
Your tasks be all undone?

Oh, what if, 'mid your cares,
And wider grasping plan,
The clouds of heaven open
And show the Son of Man?

And he not ready find you,
Your oil all burned away,
And no time left for buying
And none to lend will stay?

Oh, sleeping watcher, waken!
The signs are in the sky
That tell the Savior's coming
Is surely, surely nigh.

The fig tree now is blooming,
Euphratean stream is dry;
The dragon, beast and prophet
Send out their battlery.

Let lip and foot be moving,
Let heart be all aflame,
To spread the Advent message
For glory of God's name.

No longer be an idler,
There still are grapes to glean,
And fields await the sickle
Reap every corner clean!

For God can make e'en weakness
Confound some evil way;
You've no excuse to offer:
"Your strength is as your day."

Go out the seed to scatter
Alike for rich and poor;
Lift up your fallen fellows,
Throw wide the prison doors!

"LET HIM THAT READETH UNDERSTAND"

Part 2

CHAS. A. GOSS

But another and more important starting point is that of the era of the Seleuciden, or the era of the founder of the Syrian dynasty (B. C. 312), which includes Antiochus Epiphanes, the first of the three powers referred to in the prophecy as defiling the sanctuary and causing the daily sacrifice to cease.

Reckoning from this ear in lunar years, it terminates in A. D. 1919-1920, or just seventy-five years later than when reckoned in solar years from the decree of Artexerxes, before referred to. The propriety of reckoning this period in lunar scale is appreciated when we reflect that this is the great Mohammedan desolation and down-trodding, and that they use lunar time in their calendar, as did the Jews.

Now it is quite necessary, in order to clearly apprehend the meaning of such terms as "the time of the end," "the last days," "in the latter days," etc., that we have some knowledge of the reckoning of time on both the solar and lunar scale; in fact, without it a right understanding of the prophetic periods of Daniel is impossible.

A brief digression to comment upon the above and note its application may not be amiss. We find that "the times of the Gentiles" (Luke 21:24) is the limit for the downtreading of Jerusalem, and this naturally suggests, by the intimate relationship of the two, that the "cleansing of the sanctuary" will be accomplished at the same time. The great "seven times," or Gentile age, is a period of 2520 years, a great week whose "days" are 360 years each. This period is also divided into two parts of 1260 years each by the term "time, times and a half" (i. e., one time 360, two times 720, half a time, 180, 1260 years). This first half of the great "week" of Gentile supremacy is covered by the history of four great empires whose duration was as follows: Babylon, 217 years; Medo-Persian, 210 years; Grecian, 280 years, and Roman 553 years. The papal "little horn" arose upon the fall of the Roman Empire, and the time of its dominion is specified as "a time, times, and the dividing of time" (Dan. 7:25), or three and a half times, thus covering the whole of the latter half of the great Gentile times.

In considering this whole grand period we meet two noteworthy facts; first, its being an arithmetically perfect number—2520 being the least common multiple of the first ten numbers; and, secondly, it is also perfect astronomically. It contains 132 lunar or meteoric cycles, in which the epact amount to 77 lunar years, and a remainder of 12 years, which remainder raises the epact of the entire period to seventy-five solar years. To make this clear, we will say that the difference between 2520 true solar years and the same number of lunar years is also 75 years. So we see that if we begin at any given date and reckon forward 2520 years in both solar and lunar years, the lunar will run out 75 years before the solar. This difference between the two scales is the epact. Or to put it still more clearly, 2520 lunar years, plus the epact (75 solar years) equals 2520 solar years.

A noteworthy example of the use of two or more endings to a series of prophecies is seen in the various terminal points given in the 12th chapter of Daniel. The oppressor and downtreading power comes to his end by divine judgments as recorded in the last verse of the previous chapter, and the 12th chapter opens with a brief outline of events up to the close of the present age; then follows the question of the 6th verse: "How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?" The answer takes into consideration periods of time for the accomplishment of all that is to occur. When he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, in other words, to bring the time of their scattering, as well as the power which kept them out of their land, to an end, "shall be for a time, times and an half," 1260 years. And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, a thousand two hundred and ninety days" 1290 years, or an addition of 30 years more) (verse 11). Again, in the 12th verse there is another addition of 45 years in the cryptic sentence: "Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days." What, exactly, may be the events of that terminus we can only surmise, but that it is the crisis, or full ending of the series of events, there is little room for doubt. The point I wish to fix in mind is the fact that these two additions carry us seventy-five years beyond the terminus of the times of the Gentiles and introduces the Millennial Age and blessings—a transition period from an epoch of judgments to one of righteousness and peace.

Now to return to the consideration of the 2300 day period of dispersion and desolation of the sanctuary, the greatest importance is given in this prophecy to the "little horn" of the East. By comparing it with what we know of the Roman or western "little horn," we get a strong clue to the meaning of this prophecy.

Two, and only two, "little horns" are presented in prophecy, and only two powers are found in history which exactly answer the symbols. From small beginnings they gradually gain empire on religious grounds; growing exceeding great thereby, they proudly oppose Christ, and fiercely persecute his people, repress and exterminate the truth, enjoy dominion for many long centuries (treading down Jerusalem, either spiritual or literal), and must perish at last under the judgment of God. The papacy does not stand out more distinctly as the great apostacy of the West than does Mohammedanism as the great parallel apostacy of the East. The one originated from within the church, the other from without; but they arose together in the beginning of the seventh century; they have run chronologically similar courses; they have both based their empire on religious pretensions; the one defiled and trampled down the church, and the other defiled and trod down Jerusalem; in their life they have been companion evils; in their death they are not divided, for the one has expired politically and the other is fast expiring.

For seventeen centuries all expositors, Jewish as well as Christian, held the view that the prophecy referred to Antiochus Epiphanes. Josephus and the commentaries on the Book of Maccabees record great details and trace fulfillment of these predictions to the little horn. But Antiochus never waxed "exceeding great," he never "threw down the place of the sanctuary," though he took away the daily sacrifice, and he lived too near the time when the prophecy was given to be the full and proper fulfillment of it, seeing it was to be "for many days"—"at the end of the indignation." Besides this, the time of the desolation effected by Antiochus—just three years—does not in any way or on any system correspond with 2300 days, so we are driven to regard this as one of those prophecies which has had a double fulfillment, like Hosea 11:1 or Psalm 72.

No sooner did Roman emperors cease to tread down Jerusalem than the Moslem power began and has not ceased to this day. The utmost efforts of Christendom (so-called), expended in eight different crusades, failed to drive the Moslem out of the Holy Land; for twelve centuries he has "defiled the sanctuary," and "stood up against the Prince of princes," "casting down the truth to the ground," "practicing and prospering;" but it is written that when this period of 2300 years comes to an end "he shall be broken without hand" (Dan. 8:25), and "then shall the sanctuary be cleansed."

And isn't it remarkably assuring of the correctness of this exposition that its ending dates coincide exactly with those of the great Gentile times? But even if these were not so clearly indicated there appears abundant confirmation in the fact that the year A. D. 1844 is indicated as the beginning of the end of this "little horn," for it was on the 21st of March of the year that the combined great powers of Europe (England, Russia, France, Prussia and Austria) received the official declaration of the Sublime Porte relinquishing the practice of executing those who embraced Christianity, and practically signing away their sovereignty and independence as a power among powers.

Now note and ponder with what exactitude and certainty God deals with events and dates concerning his people. The date of the official declaration, March 21st, is very remarkable as being in fact the first day of Nisan, the first sacred month of the Jews. And this is the more notable as it is connected with the termination of the 2300 years. It will be noticed that Ezra is very specific in stating the dates (B. C. 457). "On the first day of the first month began he to go up from Babylon" (Ezra 7:9), and the whole time of the return and restoration was exactly one year (Ezra 10:17).

Ezra's commission for the restoration of the sacrifice was B. C. 457. The period of a year was occupied in the return and the cleansing of the sanctuary, B. C. 456. The restoration of sacrifices continued with slight exceptions to the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, since which Jerusalem has been trodden down by the Gentiles, to the period of March 21, 1844. This period, according to the Jewish year, ended March 20, 1844, which made 2300 years. Now on the first of Nisan, 1844, the power of the Mohammedans to persecute Christians passed away, and liberty was given for Christian worship, the beginning point of the true cleansing of the sanctuary.

This is very remarkable because it was the 1260th year of Hegira, and so the closing year in Mohammedanism of that prophetic period, 1260 years. The Hegira or flight of Mohammedan from Mecca to Medina was the turning point in the career of the false prophet, that which transformed him from the despised leader of a sect of fanatics to the prince and prophet of his people. In Mohammedan history the Hegira ranks second only to the capture of Jerusalem in A. D. 637. It occurred in A. D. 622, and to the important crisis in the decay and fall of the Mohammedan power, A. D. 1844, is just 1260 lunar years; and it should be remembered that they reckon by lunar years.

In the next article we will consider the "seventy weeks" of Daniel, and give some comments upon the seventy years of captivity.

WOMEN DEFENDED

In The Restitution of April 15th I notice an article written by J. T. Auld entitled "God's Judgment Upon Israel After Women Caused Israel to Sin," in which he quotes Isaiah 2:12-26 as his authority. Now if this brother means to compare the women of today with those wicked and frivolous women of Israel I think he is doing a great injustice to Christianity, education and civilization. I am glad he quoteed the scripture above alluded to as the kind of women God's judgment was visited upon. Can we wonder at it? Would not God's judgment and indignation have rested upon men equally as strong if they had been as ignorant and wicked as the women referred to were? It is a well known fact that the women of that day were uneducated and ignorant, being kept down and looked upon as little if any better than slaves. The same may be said of women today in some of the old countries, especially in the East. Was it any wonder that they ran into frivolity, which is always the outcome of ignorance mixed with pride, either in men or women. For the same reason Paul denounces the women of his day as not being competent to speak in church, but not because they were women. They were not educated and enlightened on religious subjects as were the men. If the women of today in our churches were of the class Paul referred to, and some of our latter-day Pauls were to make the same statement, we would all heartily say "Amen." But times have changed. Nowhere in scripture has God or any of the apostles ever placed women on a lower level than men simply because they were women. On the contrary, we find them taking the lead and standing firm when men's hearts failed them. Note the women who were associated with Jesus in his work during his ministry, and then especially at his crucifixion and resurrection. In Paul's first letter to the Corinthians he said: "Let your women keep silence in the churches, for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but they are commanded to be under obedience, as also saith the law (law of Moses). If they will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home, for it is a shame for women to speak in the church." Note what Jesus said to the Pharisees regarding divorce as commanded by the law of Moses. I do not wish to belittle the law of Moses or slight it the least. It was for the particular class of people of that day, and was very good. In the 10th chapter of Mark, beginning at the second verses, Jesus told them Moses granted it to them because of the hardness of their hearts. But from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave to his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together let no man put asunder. Then again in Matt. 5:38-39 Jesus says: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. But I say unto you that ye resist not evil, but whosoever shall smite them on the right cheek, turn to him the other also." And again, in verses 43-44: "Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemies. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that course you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." There are many other places where the teachings of Jesus far surpass the law of Moses. Jesus taught these truths to women as well as men, making no difference whatever; and although Paul was not under the law of Moses when he spoke regarding the women taking part in the church, yet the conditions had not changed sufficiently to sanction anything else, and was therefore carrying out the Will of the people that had been handed down for many generations. As far as I can see by studying the scriptures, God has never pronounced judgment or sorrow on the women any more than on the men. You will notice the judgment in the 3rd chapter of Genesis, commencing at the 16th verse to the end of the chapter, is fully more on the man than on the woman. On account of Adam and Eve's transgression he even cursed the ground for his sake.

The members of our churches of today are two-thirds women, as is also every other reform movement in existence where they are allowed. While the men are very busily engaged on Sundays with ball games and other amusements, their wives, daughters and sisters are teaching a class in Sunday-school. Where is there in this or any other country any great reformer but owes his or her success to the early training of their mother? Men and women may be mentioned by the hundreds who have publicly proclaimed that, and surely if they are competent to impart such useful knowledge to their children are they not equally competent to help in any and all reform movements, either religious or secular? They were given to men for helpmates, and men need help in secular matters as well as religious. Then why not give to the women the franchise so that they can help in that way. We need all the help we can get.

I think the most unreasonable statement made by Bro. Auld is that Lot's disobedient wife is proof our Lord warns us that women are not competent to rule either church, state or nation. Would not the same have happened to Lot if he had looked back? Besides, our Lord's statement proves nothing more against women than men. Let us be reasonable.

I will say another thing here, and that is, when you find a man that is against the women having the right to vote you may put it down that man is satisfied with the present state of affairs, including the liquor traffic and all the other crime-leading vices, and does not desire a change. When we do have a man running for office that comes out plain, like Roosevelt, and says he is in favor of the suffragette movement, he is called a "milk and water politician." Milk and water is a very good name for such a man. I am glad he used those adjectives, as either milk or water is first-class either mixed or separate, and much to be prefered to a concoction of all kinds of sweet dope mixed especially to suit the tastes of the particular class of people they are catering to. I have just said a few things on this subject, but a great deal more might be said. I think if Bro. Auld will look carefully and prayerfully into this matter he will not only wish he could take back that writing, but would be just a little ashamed for having taken such a stand.

Hoping this will not be encroaching too much on your valuable space, I am, yours in the faith that saves, R. W. THOMPSON.

DID THE APOSTLES HAVE POWER TO FORGIVE SINS?

John 20:23: "Whose soever sins ye forgive, they are forgiven unto them; whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained" (R. V.).

This is part of the very concise account, by John, of the first meeting of our Lord and his disciples the evening of the same day of his resurrection. Verses 19-23 inclusive comprise John's entire account of that interview. Comparing this with Luke 24:36-49 and Mark 16:14-18, which are parallel accounts of these other writers of the same interview, we see that John does not attempt to tell the whole story, but only a part that impressed him deeply, and the Holy Spirit inclined him to write. The accounts in Luke and Mark should also be placed with John's account, as they help to explain and understand it. We can not here quote all these accounts. Luke 24:47-49 records some things Christ said about forgiveness of sins at that interview, and how the disciples were to preach and offer it after they were clothed with power by receiving the Holy Spirit. Mark 16:16 tells something Jesus said at that interview about conditions of salvation or forgiveness, and who would be condemned or unforgiven. Read these carefully and remember that they go with John 20:23.

Matthew says nothing about his meeting of Jesus with his disciples at Jerusalem after his resurrection, but in chapter 18:3 he mentions a similar statement of Jesus to his disciples during his ministry, which refers to power afterward to be given them, viz.: "Verily I say unto you, What things soever shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and what things soever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

Putting all these accounts together, we conclude that John's words can not be understood to mean that his disciples were divinely authorized to forgive sins for God. None of the apostles seem so to understand, and no apostle of Christ ever presumed to exercise such power. But all the apostles, so far as we are informed, did claim authority to declare forgiveness offered by God to man upon conditions of belief in Christ and obedience to his commands, beginning with baptism.

Thus when Peter was led by the Holy Spirit to preach to the assembled people on the day of Pentecost at Jerusalem he told them with absolute authority and positive assurance that upon condition of repentance for their past rejection of Christ, and baptism in his name, they should receive remission or forgiveness of sins from God, which fact would be attested to them by the reception of the Holy Spirit. About three thousand believed Peter's words, accepted the terms, and were thus forgiven, experiencing great joy and having the witness of the Holy Spirit. This began the work of the infant church under Christ's commission, as all agree, and in every recorded case of apostolic procedure we find the same course taken.

Observe: Christ himself forgave sins by his own authority, and proved his power to do so by a miracle in the very face of criticism (Matt. 9:6; Mark 2:10, 11; Luke 5:24). No apostle ever said anything like this, or claimed such power, which they could do if the extreme construction of John 20:23 is to be accepted. John himself afterward teaches that forgiveness is to be sought from God direct, upon condition of confession, and not of a fellow-man (1 John 1:9). It is the teaching of the Apostasy, the "Man of Sin," who "as God sitteth in the temple of God (the church of Christ), showing himself that he is God," that as the vice-regent of God on earth he has the power to forgive sins and to empower his priesthood so to do.

Thus when Simon Magus attempted to purchase the gift of the Holy Spirit for money, Peter, who was confessedly the primate among the apostles, did not lay upon Simon the ban of the apostolate of the church, but announced to him his sin and enjoined him to ask God for forgiveness. Simon also did not ask Peter for forgiveness or absolution, but asked Peter to pray for him (Acts 8:20-24). When the Philippian jailer asked how he could be saved, meaning of course pardoned from sin, Paul and Silas, perceiving his sincerity, did not say, "We absolve thee," as would be possible if the claim of priestly absolution is correct. No; they announced or declared to him the gospel conditions of divine pardon to be received from God: "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved (immediately forgiven), and thy house."

So we might enumerate every case of apostolic teaching on this subject. Paul writes to the Roman church on the essential prerequisite for salvation or pardon. Does he say, The power to forgive is vested in us the apostles? or in the church of Christ? or in any man on earth? No, indeed! He says: "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved," i. e., at once forgiven. This is fulfilling Christ's own words given in that same interview with his disciples on the evening following his resurrection, as recorded by Luke: "Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures and SAID UNTO THEM: Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead the third day, and that REPENTANCE AND REMISSION OF SINS SHOULD BE PREACHED IN HIS NAME among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem" (Luke 24: 45-47).

The words recorded in John 20:23 may well have followed those just quoted from Luke, as they form a suitable climax. They are the Holy Spirit's strong, concise, idiomatic reiteration of previous instruction which John does not here record. He is simply adding some things to what is elsewhere written on this subject. Toward the close of that memorable interview, having fully instructed his disciples, as Luke tells us, Christ then with grand, sublime and thrilling import closed his discourse, saying: "Peace be unto you; as the Father hath sent me, even so send I you." "And when he had said this," adds John, "he breathed on them and said unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost (that is, in due time, as I have instructed you); whose soever sins ye forgive (declare forgiven, according to my instruction), they are forgiven unto them; whose soever sins ye retain (upon the impenitent to whom you preach), they are retained." The church of Christ, and every humble minister of the gospel, shares in this same power, as Christ subsequently said: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the age" (Matt. 28:20), which must include his followers to the last day of this dispensation.—Henry Pollard.

THE TRUE CHURCH

By the Late Bishop Ryle, of Liverpool, Eng.

I want to belong to the one true church, to the church outside of which there is no salvation. I do not ask where to go on a Sunday; I only ask, "Do you belong to the one true church?"

Where is this one true church? What is this one true church like? What are the marks by which this one true church may be known? You may well ask such questions. Give me your attention and I will provide you with some answers.

The one true church is composed of all believers in the Lord Jesus. It is made up of all God's elect—of all converted men and women—of all true Christians. In whomsoever we can discern the election of God the Father, the sprinkling of the blood of the Son, the sanctifying work of the Spirit, in that person we see a member of Christ's true church.

It is a church of which all the members have the same marks. They are all born again of the Spirit; they all possess "repentance towards God, faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ," and holiness of life and conversation. They all hate sin, and they all love Christ. They worship differently and after various fashions; some worship kneeling and some standing, but they all worship with one heart. They are all led by one Spirit; they all build upon one foundation; they all draw their religion from one single book—that is the Bible. They are all joined to one great center—that is Jesus Christ. They all even now can say with one heart "Hallelujah;" and they can all respond with one heart and voice, Amen and Amen.

This is the only church which possesses true unity. Its members are entirely agreed on all the weightier matters of religion, for they are all taught by one Spirit. About God, the Christ, and the Spirit, and sin, and their own hearts, and faith, and repentance, and necessity of holiness, and the value of the Bible, and the importance of prayer, and the resurrection, and judgment to come—about all these points they are of one mind. Take three out of four of them, strangers to one another, from the remotest corners of the earth; examine them separately on these points; you will find them all of one judgment.

This is the only church which possesses true sanctity. Its members are all holy. They are not merely holy by profession, holy in name, and holy in the judgment of charity; they are all holy in act, and deed, and reality, and life, and truth. They are more or less conformed to the image of Jesus Christ. No unholy man belongs to this church.

This is the only church which is truly apostolic. It is built on the foundation laid by the apostles and holds the doctrines which they preached. The two grand objects at which its members aim are apostolic practice; and they consider the man who talks of following the apostles without possessing these two things to be no better than sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.

This is the only church which is certain to endure unto the end. Nothing can altogether overthrow and destroy it. Its members may be persecuted, oppressed, imprisoned, beaten, beheaded, burned; but the true church is never altogether extinguished; it rises again from its afflictions; it lives on through fire and water. When crushed in one land it springs up in another. The Herods, the Neros, the Bloody Marys, have labored in vain to put down this church; they slay their thousands, and then pass away and go to their own place. The true church outlives them all and sees them buried each in his turn. It is an anvil that has broken many a hammer in this world, and will break many a hammer still; it is a bush which is often burning, and yet is not consumed.

This is the church which does the work of Christ upon earth. Its members are a little flock, and few in number, compared with the children of the world: one or two here, and two or three there—a few in this parish and a few in that. But these are they who shake the universe; these are they who change the fortunes of kingdoms by their prayers; these are they who are the active workers for spreading the knowledge of pure religion and undefiled; these are the lifeblood of a country, the shield, the defense, the stay and the support of any nation to which they belong.

This is the church which shall be truly glorious at the end. When all earthly glory is passed away, then shall this church be presented without spot before God the Father's throne. Thrones' principalities and powers upon earth shall come to nothing; dignities and offices and endowments shall all pass away; but the church of the firstborn shall shine as the stars at the last, and be presented with joy before the Father's throne in the day of Christ's appearing. When the Lord's jewels are made up, and the manifestation of the sons of God takes place, one church only will be named, and that is the church of the elect.

Reader, this is the true church to which a man must belong if he would be saved. Till you belong to this you are nothing better than a lost soul. You may have the form, the husk, the skin and the shell of religion, but you have not got the substance and the life. Yes; you may have countless outward privileges; you may enjoy great light, and knowledge—but if you don't belong to the body of Christ, your light, and knowledge, and privileges, will not save your soul. Alas for the ignorance that prevails on this subject.

EDITORIAL

The things we think govern our minds, and the things we do make up the sum of our lives; so to do even passably well we have to think any amount better.

The different writers who have been expressing themselves on the relationship of the sisters to the church have written well and on an interesting topic. Discussion, when it is carried on in the right spirit, is helpful and stimulating to all our readers. Let our contributors keep this fact in mind. Let us also suggest that our readsrs are not interested in the phase of the question as to whether women have the right of the ballot. In future discussion of this subject let us drop out politics and elucidate the religious part of the question. In this all of us are interested.

Several communications have recently been published in The Restitution expressive of the future fulfillment of Revelations. We wish it distinctly understood that we do not share these views. It is merely childish prattle when compared with the word of the Lord and the records of history. A good brother in this issue says that the Lord's day is future; "and that what John saw takes place in that day." This makes the whole book future, yet in the same article the brother says that "the resurrection takes place under the sixth seal." He overlooks the fact that if Christ comes under the sixth seal five seals must be historic, accomplished before the coming of the Lord! Thus he nullifies his own exposition of the Lord's Day. From beginning to end futurism is a tissue of inconsistency. The fact is, if the futuristic interpretation of Revelations stands, the reign of Christ, about which we have been strong advocates in the past, must be wholly abandoned. Not long since a futurist boldly advocated that Babylon must be "reconstructed," and then destroyed like Sodom and Gomorrha, and be desolate from generation to generation! Catholics and world-burners could, of course, accept this idea, for they invented it, but we who believe in the reign of Christ and the restoration of the earth to paradise—impossible! The toggery of the apostacy makes a poor suit of clothes for a child of God. Beware of theories which neutralize and destroy the truth.

COMMUNICATIONS

Dear Restitution:

I wish to thank Bro. Bronson for answering my question. He voices my thoughts exactly as I have held for a number of years; in fact, ever since I began to study the Book of Revelations.

Now if my view is correct, it follows as a matter of fact that if John was carried forward to the Lord's Day, or day of the Lord, that what John saw takes place in that day, not some hundreds of years before that day comes.

John saw under the fifth trumpet a swarm of locusts come out of the bottomless pit, and in describing them he saw they were as an army of horsemen prepared for battle, and they had a king over them. In the Hebrew his name is Abaddon, but in the Greek his name is Appollyon. I think it was Baxter that said that was Napoleon, but he was about as near correct as those that try to apply it to the Roman beast, or any beast in the past.

In the 11th chapter of Revelations he speaks of the same beast making war agains the two witnesses and killing them. In the 17th chapter he is the beast that was, is not, and yet is. We find his work is after the resurrection, as the resurrection takes place under the sixth seal, and the beast does not rise until the fifth trumpet. The 38th and 39th verses of Ezekiel describe a power that seems to fit the work of that beast. John says he is a leopard beast, with the feet of a bear and the mouth of a lion. We find that Daniel saw a leopard beast, and he was a Greek beast. He had his day and went out of existence, and the same Greek power comes up again. In trying to apply this beast to the past you will have to add 361 days to every day to make it year days.

Now, brethren, beware, as a curse is pronounced on anyone that adds to the sayings of this book. Your brother in wating for the Lord,

J. B. LENT.

THOUGHTS CAUGHT ON THE WING

At a Recent Meeting of the Young People's Society

As the shadow cast by a tree falls from it, and in a place where the tree can not be, so the influence of a true Christian is unconsciously shed in unknown places. But let us always remember that there can be no shadow without a sun or light behind it, and if the tree is gnarled and bent the shadow will show it.

The stone which lies far up the beach, away from the troublesome waters, is unpolished and rough. On the other hand, the stone which is washed constantly becomes smooth and clean. The water represents our trails, which will purify us. We should praise God for loving us enough to chasten us, and not, like the dry stone, be kept far away from the cleansing influence.

FRANCES RUSSELL

THE SPIRIT OF MAN—PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE

The spirit, what is it? From whence does it come?

Job 27:3 says: "All the while my breath is in me and the spirit is in my nostrils. My lips will not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit" (Notice marginal reference on the word spirit). What do we learn from this? Is not the spirit the anatomy of life, as dust is the anatomy of the body?

This spirit, what is it? Is it not an attribute of God? If it is an attribute of God, can it be a conscious part of man?

We have another text: "The spirit returns to God who gave it." Does not the body return from whence it came? Did the spirit have a conscious existence before it was given to the body?

We read: "The spirit shall return to God who gave it." Does it not return to its original source? If it returns to its original source or condition, has it any more conscious existence than it had before it was given to man? The dust returns from whence it came before created into man. Is it anything but dust after it returns? Then if both body and spirit return to their former state, how can either have a conscious existence in separation or death?

There must be a spirit of the natural as well as of the spiritual man, for we read: "If the spirit of Christ dwell in you, he that raised up Christ will also quicken your mortal bodies by that spirit which dwelleth in you" (Rom. 8:11).

What spirit must dwell in us? Is it not the spirit of Christ? We read that the wicked are also to be raised from the dead. With what spirit are they raised? The spirit of God? What spirit is given them? Is it not the spirit of natural life? "Blessed and holy are they which have part in the first resurrection; on such the second death hath no power."

J. B. ROBINSON.

SYMPATHY

"Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep" (Rom. 12:15).

"Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another; love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous" (1 Pet. 3:8).

"To be a strong hand in the dark to another in the time of need, to be a cup of strength to a human soul in a crisis of weakness, is to know the glory of life" (Hugh Black).

Interest in others and sympathy for them is the magnet which draws people towards us. The greater a person's breadth of sympathies, the more inspiring he is, and the world is better because there are natures who can build us up and save us from ourselves.

True, genuine sympathy makes itself felt, and it is only because we are so narrow that we are not interested in others. The only spirit that makes any life beautiful is the spirit that of loving service for others. Someone has said that the measure of a man is the mesure of his sympathies. It is only sympathy that can melt the hard limit of individualities and join them spontaneously with brotherly lives. There is one touch of nature which makes the whole world kind, and that touch is sympathy.

Sympathy, compassion, fellow-feeling, tenderness, love—these are the qualities which made the rich disciples and the weary sinners follow Christ. There is nothing we need to more fully understand than this, that the Father loves us and cares for us. The whole sympathy of Jesus, from the beginning in Galilee to the ending in crucifixion, revealed his loving touch with humanity. Jesus sympathizes with us; let us take the needed help out of it. He does care, he does feel, he does know, he does help. This is the business of everybody in this world—to smooth the road for everyone else, and thus it will be smoothed for the doer.

"It's everybody's business
In this old world of ours
To root up all the weeds we find
And make room for the flowers."

And the flowers will be just a little sweeter for the one who made room for them.

Those who have the attributes of Jesus growing in their innermost souls are friends to humanity; and what friends!

Someone has asked, "What is a friend?" Here is the answer: "A person with whom you dare to be yourself. He seems to ask of you to put on nothing, only be what you are. He does not want you to be better or worse. When you are with him you feel as a prisoner feels who has been declared innocent. You do not have to be on your guard. You can say what you feel. He is shocked at nothing, so long as it is genuinely you. He understands those contradictions in your nature that lead others to misjudge you. You can avow your little vanities and envies and hates and vicious sparks, your absurdities, and in opening them upon him they are lost, dissolved in the white ocean of his loyalty. He likes you. He is like the fire that purifies all you do. He is like water that cleanses all you say. He understands. You can weep with him, laugh with him, pray with him. Through and underneath it all he sees, knows and loves—you. A friend, I repeat, is the one with whom you dare to be yourself."

Love is the only atmosphere in which God can reveal himself. Love has eyes to see God and ears to hear him. He that does not love does not know God, for God is love. If there is not faith in and love for our brothers, then we are hindering God from working in us.

What a world of suffering there is about us, and how we all fail when the opportunity for help comes to us! While we can not heal the eyes of the blind, or call a person to life from the couch of death, still we can be like Christ in sympathy—extending a helping hand to the fallen and tenderly leading those halting by the way. The great lesson which the work of Jesus teaches us is that we can be like him in spirit. This sounds easy, but the best often fail; and where would the rest of us but for the inspiring words of Paul: "For we have not an high priest which can not be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us, therefore, come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need."

FRANCES H. RUSSELL.

Keep to the present little inch that is before you, and accomplish that in the little moment that belongs to it.—M. A. Kelly.

OBITUARY

Ezra K. Barnhill

Ezra K. Barnhill was born in Marion County, near Indianapolis, Ind., on July 6, 1841, and died at his home on Alexander Street, this city, at 6:15 the morning of Wednesday, April 30th, aged 71 years, 9 months and 24 days.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh S. Barnhill, his father being one of the pioneer preachers of the gospel in this country. His father's home was for many years before his death a mile north of Argos, on the Michigan Road, the family having settled in this county in September, 1846.

Ezra Barnhill was married to Miss Nancy Kirkpatrick in Indianapolis on October 1, 1868, and to this union were born a son, Madison, who died July 22, 1891, and a daughter, Stella, who lives at the present home, having devoted her life to the care of her parents.

Besides his wife and daughter, he leaves three brothers—Robert, of this city; Othniel, of Hunter, Kas., and Hugh W., of Wenatchee, Wash. Five sisters Mrs. Bathia Chapman, of Walkerton; Mrs. Sallie Bucher, Mrs. Fannie Cleveland and Mrs. Mary Whited, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Nancy, of near that city, in California.

Mr. Barnhill was a soldier in the war of the rebellion, serving till honorably discharged with his comrades of Company D, 73d Indiana. His record in this conflict, and with the G. A. R. Post, and as Secretary for the reunion events of his regiment, will furnish a volume, which is in the keeping of the history of the Post of which he was an honorary member.

He was from early manhood a member of the Church of God, serving the membership in various positions, and while an active life a devoted and earnest worker in the cause. He was in business in this city in the grocery trade for a number of years, and clerked in the store of W. M. Kendall before his death. For a number of years Mr. Barnhill has been inactive, being a sufferer with rheumatism, which has rendered him helpless. He also suffered from a stroke of paralysis, which further crippled him, and he lost the power of speech to a large degree. He had not been over town since early last fall, till one day a week ago he was wheeled out by his daughter and Mr. McQueen, and met a number of friends as he passed along the street.

He was about as usual on Tuesday, and did not require more than the usual amount of attention during the night. He arose and was dressed as usual, and told his wife he felt about the same as ever as he sat in his chair. She was preparing to get breakfast, when, happening to look toward him, she saw he was about to fall and hastened to catch him. He died in a few moments.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, at the family residence. Elder D. E. Vanvactor was in charge of the services, assisted by Elder Jos. Williams. The burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery. D. E. VANVACTOR.

Think before you speak. The ones we wound by unkind speech are most often those whose intimate relation with us afford us opportunity for the sudden thrust.—Selected.

ILLINOIS BEREANS

Will the societies and isolated members who pay their dues quarterly please be prompt in sending the third quarter, and those who are behind please send all that is due to the end of the third quarter? Please have all moneys in by the first of June. Do not neglect this matter. As our treasury was emptied last year by the heavy expense of publishing our lesson books we are sending out a call for free will offerings. Many of our members have often contributed a dollar to the state treasury besides their dues; but we do most sincerely assure you that we will not refuse any amount, small or great, that you are pleased to send.

We would call your attention to the fact that only two cents a month per member from the ten cents monthly dues goes to the state treasury, and when all members pay the treasury does not wax fat on this amount. The Treasurer's address is: Mrs. Will Lindsay, 404 S. Cottage Street, Kewanee, Ill. ANNA E. DREW, President.

MICHIGAN CONFERENCE NOTICE

To the Brethren of Michigan and Elsewhere, Greetings:

In the language of the prophets, we say: "Come, let us go up to the house of the Lord," where we have received blessings and strength which helped us to stand firm for the Master and endure the trails and hardships of the past years.

The annual Michigan Conference meeting for the year 1913 will be held at Dutton (located just eleven miles south of Grand Rapids, on the Michigan Central railway), commencing on Thursday evening, May 28th, and continuing over the following Sunday.

We expect to have with us as speakers Bro. Reed, of Chicago, and Bro. L. E. Conner, of Cleveland, O. All who had the privilege of attending the quarterly conference at Coats Grove last fall will readily remember the stirring and inspiriting addresses given by both these able speakers in defense of the truth, and if possible they will be present again this year. To you who have never heard either of these brethren declare the gospel, we not only invite but urge you to come, knowing you will lose nothing and gain much.

As Dutton seems to be the home of the conference meetings, let us lay aside all worldly pursuits and gather home once a year. Remember, your very presence speaks for the Master. He has said, "He that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad." Come yourself, bring your friends, invite your neighbor; come to strengthe and be strengthened in the most holy faith of our coming King. In his name, ROSE MILLER, Sec'y.

INDIANA BIBLE SCHOOL

The Churches of God in Indiana will hold their seventh annual Bible School at Plymouth the week beginning June 9th, and your committee having provided place and teachers it will devolve upon the church membership to furnish the rest. Bro. and Sister D. C. Robison and Bro. Williams have been secured as teachers again, and all else will be done to make the session a success. The usual mode of securing funds will be employed —contributions, which please send to Mrs. F. M. McCrory, Secretary and Treasurer.

Brethren, these young people must take our places in the near future, and it is our duty to fit them for this work; therefore let each church in Indiana send a goodly number. All those from other states who attended before are invited to come again and bring their friends. Those coming should notify Mrs. F. M. McCrory or Mrs. Charles Stauffer, that lodging places may be secured. In his name,

ASA O. ROSE,
MRS. F. M. McCRORY,
MRS. CHARLES STAUFFER,
Comimttee.

SONG BOOK

In reply to those who have written again regarding song book, I wish to say that it has been impossible for me to find the time to prepare even a small pamphlet, which we had expected to do. It may be that some of the brethren who have more time will in the near future look after the matter. We are in need of a book, but so many calls to preach the word makes it impossible for those who would prepare the work of editing the book to do so. I am at present making good use of a book called "Golden Sheaf," by the A. C. Publishing Company, 160 Warren Street, Boston, Mass. These books cost $27.50 per hundred, and are very good for Sunday-school or special meetings. A very few of the hymns might need some slight corrections, yet I only remember one that we can not sing. This book is as free from error as anything I know of at present.

We hope to hear soon that our people will soon be ready with a book "all scriptural," that we can feel safe to recommend. We must with patience wait.

In the blessed hope, C. C. MAPLE.

BOOKS WANTED

Has anyone a copy of "Barnes' Notes on Revelations" for sale? Please write, stating price and condition of the book, to C. C. Maple, North Ridgeville, Ohio.

Following breakfast each morning all are requested to gather at the church building for devotional service at 8 o'clock.

COME! COME! COME!

Tune: "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp!"

In this world, so full of sin,
We are waiting for the time
When our Savior comes to raise to life the dead;
We believe the time is near
When our Savior will appear,
And will raise the sleeping saints, just as he said.

Chorus:

Come! Come! Come! the saints are sleeping,
Still our faith in God is strong;
For we know the great reward
That we learn of in God's word
Will be given on the resurrection morn.

So we in our daily life
Must avoid all worldly strife,
Waiting, hoping, trusting in the Christ as king;
Live and serve our Savior dear,
For the time is drawing near
When he comes to earth, the great reward to bring.

Chorus:

Come! Come! Come! the saints are sleeping,
Still our faith in God is strong;
For we know the great reward
That we learn of in God's word
Will be given on the resurrection morn.

So we'll walk from day to day
In the straight and narrow way
That will lead us to our Savior soon to come;
And we'll strive with all our might
To obey the gospel right,
Then he'll take us to his own eternal home.

Chorus:

Come! Come! Come! the saints are sleeping,
Still our faith in God is strong;
For we know the great reward
That we learn of in God's word
Will be given on the resurrection morn.

Recreation

It is a common thing to speak of the education of work, but few people recognize how much education there is in play. Nearly all the progress of a young child comes through this medium, and certainly more is learned during one of the very earliest years than in any subsequent one. Yet all through life this influence continues. While the primary purpose of recreation is rest and refreshment, it has also the power of developing intellect, improving the taste, cultivating the judgment, and strengthening the character; and those who know how to invoke this power will never regard the amusements of life as a frivolous or indifferent subject.

Faith and obedience are properly counted for righteousness; for with enlightenment they mean perfect living. Abram knew less of standards than we of a later day, but the root of the matter was there—faith that did not question, obedience that was unfaltering.

One sunbeam, shot across a cloudy day, can brighten all the clear expanse of skies; one living smile can make a dreary way a path to paradise.

SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST

Opens April 1, 1913, Closes June 30, 1913

READ ABOUT THE SPECIAL AWARDS TO BE GIVEN TO CONTESTANTS WHO SECURE NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE RESTITUTION. Read every word, so that you will be thoroughly familiar with every detail.

FIRST—THE AWARDS

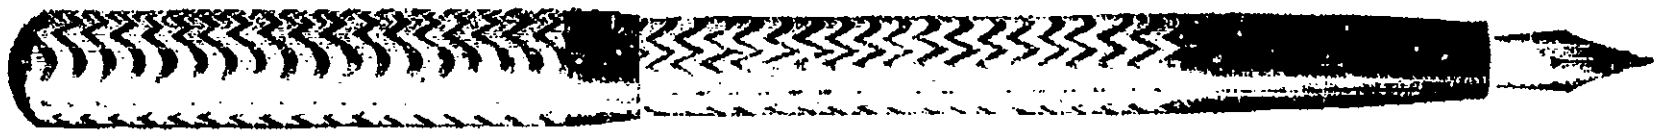
FIRST AWARD—To the person who secures the largest number of new yearly subscriptions to The Restitution between the dates of April 1, 1913, and June 30, 1913, we will give free a TWENTY-YEAR GUARANTEED GOLD-FILLED WATCH, with choice of Elgin, Waltham or Dueber-Hampton movement, either ladies' or gentlemen's size. This is a beautiful watch and a splendid timepiece. You can also choose a plain or fancy case.

SECOND AWARD—To the one sending in the second largest number we will give choice of either a pair of SOLID GOLD CUFF LINKS or a SILVER MESH BAG, either a handsome present.

THIRD AWARD—For the third largest list we will give an extra large 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN, barrel covered with silver filigree work.

SPECIAL AWARDS—Besides these first three awards, we will give to everyone who sends in at least one new subscriber a handsome and useful POCKET MEMORANDUM BOOK.

To everyone who sends in at least two new subscribers a 14k. SOLID GOLD FOUNTAIN PEN like cut, or to everyone who sends in at least three new subscribers we will give a 14k. SOLID GOLD SELF-FILLING FOUNTAIN PEN. These pens are all fully guaranteed.



So you see, everyone who enters into this contest will receive some kind of an award for their efforts; the greater the effort, the greater the award, and everyone will have the same opportunity.

NOW READ THESE CONDITIONS OF THE CONTEST.

1. Each subscriber to count must be a NEW subscriber. NO RENEWALS WILL COUNT.
2. Two six-months' subscriptions count as one yearly.
3. Subscriptions must be received after midnight March 31 and before June 30th, at midnight, to count.
4. If two contestants send the same number of subscribers in competing for the first three awards duplicate awards will be given.
5. All awards will be given at the end of the contest.
6. And this is going to be the best help of all: NEW SUBSCRIBERS WILL BE RECEIVED DURING THIS CONTEST at the special rate of

One Dollar a Year : 50c Six Months

This rate does not apply to renewals. To subscriptions in Canada add 50 cents.

We believe the above offer to be very liberal—liberal to the new subscribers, liberal to you who are to get the new subscribers.

Why do we give these awards? To stimulate your interest in helping us increase our mailing list and to get The Restitution into the many homes where it should be read. We want to increase the size of The Restitution, but in order to do this we must increase the size of the mailing list first, so THE BIG EFFORT IS STARTED AND THE CONTEST IS ON—and remember, EVERYONE WILL RECEIVE AN AWARD.

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:15, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13, 14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1: 3:18); and all other truths of "The things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

VOLUME 61. AKRON, O., JUNE 3, 1913 NUMBER 22

FORSAKE ME NOT

IDA SCOTT TAYLOR

Forsake me not, though fast the night is falling,
And shadows gather in the darkened sky;
I can not fear when thou, O God, art calling,
I can not fall when thy kind arms are nigh.

Stay thou with me! Be thou my refuge ever,
My strength, my all whatever be my lot;
O bless me with thy gracious love forever,
And in the gloom of night forsake me not!

Forsake me not in time of tribulation,
Be thou my rock and fortress in despair;
O fill my burdened soul with thy salvation,
And pour thy spirit's balm on all my care.

Though sorrows break my heart, O gracious Father,
Thy rod and staff can comfort my distress;
Though grief oppress, and heavy teardrops gather,
Thy pitying love can bring me sweet redress.

Forsake me not. Breathe thou into my being
The very breath of heaven from above;
Unseal mine eyes, that I, thy goodness seeing,
May know and feel thy deep, thy boundless love.

In storm or calm be thou, O God, beside me,
That I thy child may never be forgot;
Through shade or sun, by day or nighttime guide me,
Through all my journey, O forsake me not!

Forsake me not, dear God, though I forget thee,
And trusting to myself go blindly on;
O bring me back to thee again, and let me
in meekness know my boasted strength is gone.

And if I falter, waiting for the morning,
Then let thy grace my every need supply;
What matter if I have its rich adorning,
Though neither gold nor precious gems have I!

Forsake me not I need thee every minutes;
I trust thee, want thee, love thee, God of all!
Through life, with all the destined changes in it,
Be near me, watch me, help me, lest I fall!

And when I reach death's dim o'ershadowing river,
When earth's poor gains and losses are forgot,
Divine Redeemer, gracious heavenly Giver,
Be thou still near me! O forsake me not!

WHAT IS THE WORLD'S HIGHEST PRODUCT?

S. ROXANA WINCE

Easily answered, is that query. Though all God made was good, he made nothing higher than man. Him he made in his own image and likeness, not merely as to outward form and feature, but as to the intellectual and moral qualities whereby "knowledge, righteousness and true holiness" are attained. It was not the outer that made him "the highest product of earth," though perfect and lithe of limb, and unspeakably beautiful with his speaking eyes and rapidly changing expression, but the inner, that fitted him to be not only the loving subject, but the friend and companion of God. His schooling in letters, in astronomy, in mathematics, in law, all came from God. God was king of his mind, and enthroned in his life. He felt no weariness when trimming the trees of the garden, nor when studying and naming the innumerable forms of vegetable and animal life about him. He did not know the meaning of pain.

He could talk with God, he could write books, or work, just as he chose, enjoying the beauty of the world to the full, with his lovely children—such a host of them, older perhaps than Cain and Abel—growing up about him, under the wise training of Eve, his helpmeet and companion.

But why was this highest product of earth made? What is man here for? Why does he live? To be, what Adam might have continued to be, the friend and companion of God, to walk with him as Enoch walked, to believe him as Abraham believed, to obey him as Jesus obeyed, to let him rule in all things, to have no judge, no king, save him; and, taking Paradise as a model, to make of the whole earth a garden of delight, a highway where the feet of God could tread.

But this "highest product of earth," being "a moral being, a being that could choose, must choose, if the final step is ever to be taken which is to make him a perfect God-like, moral personality." He did choose, but he chose wrong; he sinned, he broke the law of Paradise, and brought death upon himself and the race.

But God did not give up. This "highest product of earth" must remain its "highest product." The plan would be long delayed by man's foolish sin, but the loss would be retrieved, "the woman's seed would bruise the serpent's head." Man would yet attain the end for which he was made, the highway in the desert for the coming King, the second Adam, would yet be prepared.

And we, dear saints of God, have, under the leadership of Christ, been given a blessed part in this work of taking some glorious legions of soldiers back to Eden.

Let us not slacken our efforts. The greater the opposition the harder we must fight. "The Advent message has no brakes to it." "Nothing is rarer or choicer than the human spirit touched by the spirit of God in his Son, Jesus, and rising in response thereto to sublime heights of personal character and service which are eclipsed alone by that wondrous character and divine service of our Lord himself."

"LOVE OF CHRIST CONSTRAINETH US"

M. JOBLIN

2 Cor. 5:14)(

Part I.

The context proves that Paul and his fellow-laborers in the gospel field are the ones referred to as "us." Faction had been doing deadly work at Corinth. Although he had begotten them with the word of truth, through party spirit some had been trying to belittle the apostle, and he has been giving them information that would enable his friends to answer his traducer and give them occasion to glory in him as their teacher and uphold him in his ministry. From the 13th verse it is evident that some had been representing him as a crazy head, an insane person, for he says: "For whether we have been beside ourselves, it was for God; or whether we be of sound mind, it is for you." So that you have reason to glory in us anyway; if they will have it that I was mad, it was a holy madness for God. Then comes our text: "For Christ's love constraineth us, having pledged this, that if one died on account of all, then they all died: and that he died in behalf of all, in order that the living might no longer live for themselves, but for him who died and rose again in their behalf."

This was the spring of Paul's action. It was the love of Christ that constraineth him to toil so hard to win souls for Christ. We often hear it said that love is the motive power of the gospel, and the truth of that statement is verified in this scripture; he who has experienced the effect of that power—in some measure, at least—goes to work as Paul did. He is a new creature (verse 17), old things have passed away, behold they are new. Not physically, of course; mentally, morally, religiously; the old selfish and impure motives, views, prejudices and practices pass away. And this makes one of the objects for which he died in behalf of all stand out in bold relief, for it says: "And he died for all, that those who live should no longer live unto themselves, but unto him who died and rose again for them.

M. JOBLIN

The next question is, How does this new creature in Christ live to him who died for him? The answer is, to live to Christ is to live for Christ. In dying for his sins, or on account of his sins, and being raised again for his justification, Christ acquired the right to him. He was no longer his own by accepting the terms of pardon, reconciliation and peace, he handed over to Christ all that he has or is. He is the bond-servant of the Lord who bought him, for he has a right to all his services. By that I mean he has to work for Christ. But no man can work without tools, and happily this scripture shows what work God and Christ have in hand. This is the way the apostle states it: "God was by Christ reconciling the world unto himself not counting to them their offences." The apostle adds: "And has given to us the ministry or service of the reconciliation; and has deposited with us the word of reconciliation." Take this in connection with the words of the Lord himself: "Ye are the light of the world," and you will have the proof of what I have scores of times said, that none of us have been called for our own sakes alone. We have been ourselves reconciled by that same word, if indeed we are reconciled. And says Paul (2 Cor. 6:1): "We then, as workers together with him (God), beseech you also that ye receive not the favor of God in vain." You doubtless remember that part of the Lord's message from heaven to John while on Patmos contained in the second of Revelations: "But that which ye have, hold fast till I come," and "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations." So, as we often sing, "There's work to do, there's work for us to do."

Having seen that there's work to be done, and knowing that no one can work without a tool, and in addition to this that the great Head of the church has entrusted to us the work of reconciliation, and informed us that the Bride, the Lamb's wife, is expected to say "Come," we know to a certainty that every reconciled one is expected to work together with God, and that the word of reconciliation is the tool to work with. Does someone ask if I am sure that every reconciled one must work for God and Christ by means of the word of reconciliation? Yes, I am quite certain of it. But I do not mean that all can work the same way in all respects. I contend that there are some ways in which all who have been reconciled to God can and must work together with God.

To make this as clear as I can, I remark that the word of reconciliation is the gospel of Christ which you have all believed. Everyone who believes it certainly knows what it is, and can tell another what he believes, and why he believes it in a simple, homespun way, and the simpler the better for all practical purposes—it can not be too simple. The promises of God are as plain as words can make them, and the facts, the fulfilled part of the gospel, relating to the word and work of Jesus when on earth, are real history, and the conditions to be complied with in order to pardon and reconciliation and adoption into God's family, could not be plainer stated. They have to be known by every one of us before reconcilation can take place.

But there is another way we all can and must work together with God. In 2 Cor. 3:1, 2, 3, the apostle speaks of the members of that church, and the epistle of Christ as his epistle, known and read of all men, or by, through his service among them, by preaching the gospel to them, the word of reconciliation. The idea being this: As they moved about among men they showed they had believed the gospel of Christ Paul had preached to them, and were trying to regulate their lives by it, so as to be fit to partake with the saints in light. They adorned the teaching or doctrine of Christ by their conduct. You doubtless remember what was said of Peter and John in the 3rd and 4th of Acts, very soon after the ascension of Jesus. The two apostles found at the gate of the temple a man who had been born blind, and who asked an alms of them. Peter and John fastened their eyes on the lame one, and said, "Look on us," and he did, expecting to receive something. Peter said: "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee. In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." And he took him by the hand and lifted him up, and immediately his feet and ankle bones received strength, and, leaping up, stood, and, walking and leaping, and praising God, went into the temple," and still clung to Peter and John. This caused the people to run together at the porch of the temple, and they marveled greatly. Whereupon Peter addressed them, and explained that the miracle had been wrought through faith in the Prince of Life, whom they had so recently denied and crucified, but whom God had raised from the dead. This alarmed the authorities, and the apostles were arrested and brought before Caiphas and others, and it was demanded "by what power or authority they had healed the lame man." Peter boldly announced that it was by the name of Jesus, whom they had crucified. And when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and saw that they were ignorant men, they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus, and could say nothing against it. Plainly enough, they had the badge of Jesus on them, and after consulting together the authorities concluded to threaten what they would do to them if they did the like again. But listen to Peter, he who denied his Lord on the night of the Lord's betrayal, and you will see by the metal in him that he is not the same Peter now. He has been converted, and is now a faithful witness for Jesus and a noble soldier of the cross. Said he to these notables: "Whether it be right, in the sight of God, to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye."

A WORD OF CAUTION

In the last Restitution a writer has said several things that ought to be read with considerable caution. The reason will be apparent as we proceed. We don't write in a sense of controversy, but to get the facts. The writer speaks of listening to a First Day Adventist preach and present the same thoughts he had heard when a boy forty-two years ago, then rejoices because of the light received since, and could see where this man did not go far enough; then deplores the fact that we should be separated when both bodies believe alike on the nature of man.

They believed in the mortality of man forty-two years ago, the same as now; then why rejoice in the light received since that time, and then wish to go back forty-two years and unite with them on that one point of faith? If they can be sound in believing man to be mortal, notwithstanding their many other errors, then the light you have received in the last forty-two years could not be a source of rejoicing. They believe and teach some things just as contrary to God's word and plan as the immortality of the soul. The only basis of union would be to teach them the truth, the same as other people.

When the writer asks the question as to just how much or how little a man must know, I wonder if anyone can point out just the passage of scripture that draws the line. That is easy to find. Mark 16:15-16: "Go into all the world, and preach the gospel." Now what is the gospel? It is the good news concerning the kingdom of God and name of Jesus Christ (Luke 8:1; Acts 8-12). You express uncertainty as to how much or how little is contained in the gospel. Did Jesus inject any elements of uncerainty in the commission? No. He simply said: "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." This is a command that no one in the world could obey or carry out without knowing what the gospel is; and to express doubt about it would unfit us for the work.

In 2 Tim. 2:2 Paul says to Timothy: "The things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." The moment one begins to modify it to suit people or conditions, that moment we become unfaithful. In Acts 20:27 Paul said he was not ashamed to declare the whole counsel of God. How do we know where to draw the line? Why, be faithful to the world and preach what is there; trouble and uncertainty will come only when we get wise about what is written. Stick to the written word and there will be no mistakes made. Rom. 14:23 reads: "And he that doubteth is damned if he eat, because he eateth not of faith; for whatsoever is not of faith is sin." The import of this scripture is simply this: If anyone should go forth to preach the gospel, and after having preached it should express a doubt as to whether certain parts of it were essential or not, would be condemned and commit a sin, because doubt shows a lack of faith, and Paul says that is sin.

But now we go back to the commission: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved and he that believeth not shall be condemned." Now if our hearers are to be saved or lost by hearing or rejecting the gospel, it is quite important for us to know what it is; and Jesus says nothing that would indicate that we might not know it all. If the gospel is the power of God unto salvation (Rom. 1:16), and you should leave out one element of the gospel, it would be powerless to save you. For it is the gospel as a whole that is the "power of God unto salvation." This being true, every element of the gospel must be in God's word, and no room is left for doubt.

In our word of caution we wish to call attention to your references to the eunuch (Acts 8: 26-40). Did you know that you got one point only out of this incident? And that the very last one, the one upon which all the rest is founded? You refer to what he said: "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God." I wonder if this was all the eunuch believed and all Philip taught him? Who was this eunuch? Open your Bible at Acts 8 and read verse 27. The fact that he was reading from Isaiah is proof that he had been to Jerusalem to some of the Jewish feasts and was worshiping according to the law and knew nothing of the gospel. To understand the facts we must study the scripture from this standpoint. The first thing Philip asked the eunuch was: "Understandest thou what thou readest?" His reply was: "How can I except some man guide me?" And Philip commenced at or began at the same scripture and preached unto him Jesus." No doubt that Philip used other scripture, for it says he began at that scripture, like we begin with one text. This leads us to the question, What is it to preach Jesus? In Acts 8, or in the beginning of this chapter, it says that Philip went into the city of Samaria and preached Christ unto them; and in verse 12 it says: "And when they believed Philip the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized, both men and women." We learn, then, when Philip preached Christ to the Samaritans, that he preached the kingdom of God and baptism; and circumstances prove that he did the same thing in preaching to the eunuch. Would Philip in fact preach any more to the Samaritans before baptism than to the eunuch? He preached the kingdom of God and the name Jesus to them, and he preached Jesus to the eunuch, and no doubt at all the kingdom as well

The Samaritans were baptized, so also the eunuch. When the eunuch said: "See here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized," leads us to ask, "Where did he learn of baptism?" It is evident that Philip included this in his preaching to him. Then it is plain that Philip carried out the commission; the eunuch heard the gospel (the glad tidings of the kingdom of God), believed it, was baptized after confessing that Jesus was the Son of God, as a means of salvation. Do we then have any excuse of knowing how much or how little the eunuch believed or where Philip drew the line? Yes. The eunuch believed the gospel, and Philip preached the gospel; and if we know what that is then the line is drawn. We can't add anything to it, nor take anything from it. I have no right to modify and say you can be saved, no difference if you believe certain things. That would depend altogether on whether those "certain things" were contained in the gospel. If they are, then they could not be saved, because it is a belief in the gospel that saves, and anything not contained in the gospel, no difference how earnestly believed, would condemn. Then in preaching the gospel, the glad tidings of the kingdom, what are we to preach? What does it contain? We are not left to conjecture here, for we have already learned in preaching the kingdom of God that Philip included baptism and Jesus as the Son of God.

Then turn to I Cor. 15:1-4. Here we find a few more of the elements of the gospel, which we learn has to be preached and believed in order to be saved. Here Paul says: "Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel, which I preached unto you, which also ye have received, and wherein ye stand." Notice three things in this verse: (1) Paul had preached the gospel to them; (2) they had received it; (3) they stood in it. Then notice the result (verse 2): "By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye have believed in vain." The gospel Paul preached to them, which they had received and stood in, if kept in memory, would save them, unless they had believed in vain. Now the question is: Can we preach any less gospel or any more than Paul did, or can the people receive any more or less and still be saved? The text itself would forbid any such conclusion. The next verse says: "For I delivered unto, first of all (or among first things), that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the scriptures." According to this verse the gospel of the kingdom contains, as one element, the death of Christ for our sins, and would have to be preached and believed in in order to be saved. We are aware of the fact that it has been preached and believed that the death of Christ was only a circumstance brought about by conditions then existing, and was not necessary to our salvation. Then can one believe this and be a brother in Christ and be saved, when Paul taught that the death of Christ was a necessity and had to be preached and believed in order to be saved? Here Paul draws the line, and so do I. Have I the authority for so doing? Paul says Christ died for our sins, according to the scriptures. To preach the contrary would be opposed to the scriptures. If such an one believed in the mortality of man should we count him as a brother when he was directly opposite to Paul and one element of the gospel?

The fourth verse says: "And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the scriptures." Here are two more elements of the gospel that must be believed, because they are according to the scriptures. The first element of the gospel spoken of in this verse is that Christ was buried. If you should ask the majority of people if it was necessary to believe that Christ was buried in order to be saved they would say, No. Our Orthodox friends will say that the body of Christ was buried, but not the real Christ. But Paul says we must believe Christ was buried. So they would be out of fellowship. The second element in this verse is that he rose the third day, according to the scriptures. Suppose one should say, "I believe he rose the first day," and another believe he rose the second day, and another the third day; would they be in fellowship? Could they compromise by saying: "We will all be saved; a little thing like that will make no difference?" Paul says it is according to scriptures and must be believed. So Paul draws the line here and points out that these elements of the gospel must be believed and kept in memory in order to be saved. Paul calls these things "the first" he had presented to them, and which they had received. Other elements we find in other places till we find every element of the gospel; so we know just where to draw the line. It is a very easy thing to say this or that makes no difference, when a little study will reveal the fact that it does. So the idea of compromise or being liberal is very dangerous. Let us be faithful servants.

THE EXERCISES OF A GOOD RELIGIOUS PERSON

In choosing this subject, brothers and sisters, my thoughts were a great deal better than this essay has brought forth. We have often heard the expression, "I can not express my thoughts." That has been my fault in writing this paper.

The main thoughts of the subject have been based upon the following paragraph: "The life of a good religious person ought to excel in all virtues, that he may inwardly be such as outwardly he seemeth to men."

In Matthew 5:48 we read: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." We should set our standard high. Although we may not attain its perfection, we will certainly improve if we strive to reach it. If we take Christ as our standard, and ask the question, "What would Jesus do?" every time we are in doubt as to our actions, I am sure we would not sin beyond forgiveness.

Rightly, there ought to be much more within than is perceived without, for God beholdeth us; wherever we are and wherever we go, we should walk in purity in his sight. In Ps. 15 we have a good explanation of the purity with which we should be endowed. "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? Who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor."

As our walk through life is amongst iniquity, we have many trials to overcome. We possibly find this Psalm statement rather hard to live up to, but if we daily renew our purpose and stir ourselves to greater fervor, as though each day were the first day of our conversion, and say: "Help me, my God, in thy holy service, and grant that I may this day begin perfectly, for that which I have done hitherto is as nothing." We know that we sin daily, and as often as we sin we must ask forgiveness. Through the knowledge of the scriptures we know that we shall receive it.

According to our purpose shall be the success of our spiritual profiting, and much diligence is necessary to him that will profit much. If we intend making good Christians we can not be hearers only and not doers; therefore it behooves us to study and branch into the scriptures, so we may always be ready to give a reason for the hope that is within us. If we firmly purpose anything and fail, we should try again and again, and even after a third time do not be discouraged, as the only way to bring success is to persevere.

Just men do not depend upon their own wisdom, but upon God's grace, on whom they always rely for whatever they take in hand; for man purposes, but God disposes. "The way of man is not in himself."

If we have brothers or sisters in the faith with whom we are attending accustomed exercises, and some of them are neglected, we may, after the first offense, easily recover ourselves; but if, out of weariness or carelessness, we lightly omit them, it is very blameworthy, and will be felt to be hurtful. Do the best we can; we shall still too easily fail in many things.

An excellent way to curb our sinful natures, I think, is to set or fix our purpose in life each day, in the morning, and in the evening examine ourselves and see how far short of our ideals we come, and then ask God to help us overcome those obstacles. In this way we can always have pure and righteous thoughts.

We should never entirely be idle. We should either be reading, writing, praying, meditating, or endeavoring to do something for the public good. This, I think, is the one great fault with many of the people of the world; they find pleasure and amusement in things that are wholly devoid of religious thoughts and actions, and, what is more, are almost degrading in a moral standard.

This is the origin of most sin, and the downfall of many a worthy saint.

Another important thing in our life is the persons we choose for associates and the environments into which we go. If they are not becoming to a religious person, they certainly will not improve our standard, but will harm and finally ruin us.

As for bodily exercises, we have need for these as much as the spiritual in carrying out to the full extent a Christian life. These should be chosen with discretion and practiced in moderation.

Devotions which belong not to the public should not be exposed to public view, for private devotions are practiced most safely in secret. This thought is in connection with meditation and prayer. An hour's counsel with God in private often helps one more than a sermon. Nevertheless, we should never neglect those which are public, as they show we have a hope we are not ashamed of, and also that we are not ashamed of Christ.

About and during the time of our annual conference new zeal is aroused and prayers renewed. These are the times we should prepare to store away all the good and beautiful lessons we hear, so we may have something to help us through the following year.

If we keep the thought in mind of the uncertainty of this life, and live always as we should want to die, we will always be faithful and willing to sacrifice anything.

Our reward will be according to our work. Stop, think, brothers and sisters. Are we ready. Could ye meet the Lord should he appear now? This is my one great thought, and often I think of the consequences if ye are not ready when he comes.

My closing thought takes me to Luke: "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching." My earnest prayer is, brothers and sisters, that we may be found watching and ready to receive him when he returns to gather his chosen people. May we have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom.

TIME TO STOP STORY THAT PERSECUTION KILLED MORGAN

The press has been very kind to the memory of J. P. Morgan. Here and there was silence, but not criticism the kindly spirit that respects the dead. That was as it should be. But it is almost time to stop the story that Mr. Morgan was the victim of a gang of conspirators comprising the Pujo Committee, investigating the money trust, and that his death was the outcome of distress and excitement caused by his examination. The fact is well known that Mr. Morgan's death was caused by cancer of the stomach, and no human agency could have extended his life beyond the period assigned for it. Moreover, a convention of theologians at Denver have decided, after due deliberation, that Mr. Morgan is in heaven. That ought to satisfy everyone. The man who gets there certainly should entertain no malice against agencies that hastened his arrival to realms of everlasting joy. [A news clipping sent by Sister Russell.]

NOT PRAYING, BUT BELIEVING

Jesus did not say, says an exchange, God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever prayeth shall be saved. Nor did he say, He that heareth my word and prayeth shall receive remission of sins. Paul did not preach to the Jews, By him all that pray are justified from all things; nor did he preach to the Philippian jailor, Pray and thou shalt be saved. The gospel is not, To him that worketh not but prayeth, to him that justifieth the ungodly, his prayer is counted for righteousness.

There is not a line in the New Testament which bids an anxious sinner pray in order to be saved; but in every line it is expressed or implied that he is to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

Is it not marvelous that men who are set by the church to preach the glad tidings do not see what is so clearly and abundantly revealed? The four gospels will be searched in vain for a single instance in which the Savior commanded a sinner to pray for the blessing of eternal life; but everything is made to turn upon faith. The Acts of the Apostles and the inspired Epistles will be searched in vain for the direction to pray in order to secure the pardoning mercy of God; but the one object constantly held before the gaze of the inquirer is Christ, in his atoning death for our sins, in the value of his atoning blood poured out upon the Cross.

Does not everyone see at a glance that if the sinner is told to pray he is put upon a course of doing, that he must think there is some merit in his prayers, that he is taught to imagine God will be merciful to him on account of his praying, and that the instruction utterly dishonors the finished work of Christ? If God must be inclined by our praying to show mercy, why did his Son die on the Cross? If praying can save, why did his Son die at all?

Out with it! There is not such thing as acceptable prayer, unless it is offered in faith; and if the sinner has faith he has already passed from death into life, and needs no more prayer to be saved, for he is saved. If anyone thinks he ought to tell the sinner to pray to God before he believes in Christ, it is enough to remind him that "without faith it is impossible to please him" (Heb. 11:16), and that "whatsoever is not of faith is sin" (Rom. 14:23). "He that turneth away his ear from the law, even his prayer shall be abomination," and "He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool" (Prov. 28:9, 26). What matters it that a man feels here (in his heart) that he is all right? There is no one under the blinding delusion of satan who does not feel that same way, and feeling is not worth a cent unless it springs from the truth. We are no more saved by feeling that we are by praying, and the question put to the sinner is not whether he feels good, or whether he feels bad, but whether he believes on the Lord Jesus Christ as his Savior. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16:31).

WATER IS POWERFUL

Water is the strongest drink. It drives mills. It is the drink of horses and of lions. Samson himself never drank anything else. Charles H. Spurgeon.

ALCOHOL WEAKENS

Sir Frederick Treves, surgeon of King Edward of England, speaking of alcohol as a work producer, says: "I was with the relief column that moved on to Ladysmith in the South African war, and of course it was an exceedingly trying time. In that enormous column of thirty thousand men the first who dropped out were not the tall men, or the short men, or the big men, or the little men; they were the drinkers, and they dropped out as clearly as if they had been labeled with a big letter on their backs."

GOD'S GREAT LEVERS

There are the same difficulties in enforcing the restrictions of license as those of prohibition. We have also learned that if prohibition does not always prohibit, neither does civilization always civilize, nor education educate, nor Christianity Christianize. But they are God's great levers, by which we can lift; his blessed tools with which we can work; his leaven in the lump of humanity, obedient to the slow, sure law of growth. - Frances E. Willard.

UNQUENCHABLE FIRE

If we turn to Mark's Gospel chapter 9, we find the language following:

"And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off; it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into (gehenna) hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off; it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched; where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out; it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into (gehenna) hell fire; where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. For everyone (every sinner) shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice (every saint) shall be salted with salt" (Mark 9:43-49).

In looking at the margin we find this: "If thy hand cause thee to offend;" and so verses 15 and 17. For example: If we are brought to the place where our faith is called into question -the parting of the ways - and we must then choose between serving God and renouncing our faith, and we are offered a "maimed" existence with our faith or a "whole" body and an apostacy from our faith, Jesus says we should choose the "maimed" life rather than a "whole-body" life. If the best we can do is to retain our members at the terrible expense of apostatizing, we had better lose our members.

This is the precise teaching of our Lord. There can be no mistake here: Our faith and salvation value infinitely more than any of the members of our body.

Our orthodox friends who are so anxious to teach the doctrine of eternity of sin and sinners have failed to note the exact language of the Lord. They aver that the "hell" here is something the wicked "disembodied soul" drops into at death. Of course Jesus did not say this, nor did he hint it. But such is the teaching of "orthodoxy." But accepting the statement from our orthodox teachers that the "disembodied souls" of the bad go there at death, what kind of a looking soul would it be that appeared with one leg, or one eye, or one arm?! If they attempt to take refuge in the thought that to take a physical leg or arm would deprive this so-called immaterial soul of a leg or arm, then certain it is that if we can kill the physical man we have taken the life of the so-called "disembodied soul." But if the "disembodied soul" is afterall immortal, then how could it "enter into life" with a part of its members gone?

The saints who are dead will experience a "resurrection of life" (John 5:29), and the sleeping saints will be awakened, Gabriel says, "to everlasting life" (Dan. 12:1-3). This is the "life" that they will "enter into," so they haven't this life yet.

The word rendered "hell" in this discourse of Jesus is not "hades," but "gehenna." And "gehenna" is a word which conveys the Greek meaning of total consumption. It never means preservation. That thought is not even involved in the least. South of Jerusalem there were fires which were constantly kept burning. In it were consumed the rubbish, dead bodies of animals and malefactors, and the filth of the city. This was all consumed. An able writer has well said "that which fell inside of the arches was consumed by the fires, and that which fell outside was consumed by the worms nothing was preserved."

Now Jesus uses the strongest language he can find to teach us that the ungodly will be utterly consumed, destroyed, annihilated, reduced to utter extinction, etc. If that devouring worm could die the wicked might not be totally devoured, or if the fire could be quenched then he might not be utterly consumed. But the fire is unquenchable, and the worm doesn't die.

We needn't worry ourselves over the words "unquenchable fire." This very phrase in sacred history reduced Jerusalem and her houses to ashes (Jer. 17:27). Jude calls it "everlasting fire" (verse 7), and it made Sodom and Gomorrah an ash heap (2 Peter 2:1-6). The sinner is not due to go into this fire till after the "Judge of the quick and the dead" comes the second time (Acts 24:15; 17:30-31; Matt. 25:30-41; Jude 14; Heb. 9:27, and 2 Tim. 4:1). So he can't move into it or be cast there at death. We are to judge "nothing ... till the Lord come" (1 Cor. 4:5). The tares and wheat grow "together" till the harvest, and that harvest is the "end of this age" (Matt. 13:39-43). The separating comes when Jesus comes (Matt. 25:30-33).

Instead of allowing the worm to devour that which is cast into gehenna, current theology says the worm itself is cast into gehenna! Jesus makes the worm an agent of total consumption, while theologians make it an "imperishable immortal soul!"

Jesus says that "everyone shall be salted with fire." Who is the "everyone?" Why the reference plainly is to "their" in verse 48, and that is the sinner, not the saint. God has told us by example what he does when he salts human beings with fire. Remember, while "salt" is a preserving element, fire is an element destructive in its very nature. Now turn to 2 Peter 2 and Jude and Gen. 19 and see how God has salted Sodom and Gomorrah; yes, Lot nearly got it too! Jesus himself says that Jehovah's salting in this case "destroyed them all" not preserved them all. Luke 17:29, 30.

The objection which is urged sometimes that "salt conveys the thought of preservation" is no objection at all, for salt does not certainly not convey the thought of "preservation" unless it is connected with a preserving element. If it is coupled to a destroying element it always conveys the idea of destruction.

To illustrate this further: If we should associate "rain" with fire, then the idea of water is necessarily involved and conveyed by the word

The Restitution

FOUNDED IN A. D. 1852

A WEEKLY PAPER DEVOTED TO THE EXPOSITION AND DEFENSE OF

The inspiration of the Bible (2 Tim. 3:16, 16) and the restitution of all things foretold by the spirit-guided prophets (2 Pet. 1:21; Acts 3:21). As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on earth (Dan. 2:44; 7:13,-14, 27) at the return of Christ (Luke 19:12-15), who will be King of kings (Rev. 19:16), and the saints coadjutors with Him in the government of the nations (Rev. 2:26); the restoration of Israel as a nation (Ezek. 37); the literal resurrection of the dead (John 11:23, 25); the immortalization of the righteous (1 Cor. 15:52-58); the final destruction of the wicked (Psa. 37:10, 20); and eternal life only through Christ, the Life-Giver (John 3:16; Rom. 6:23). Also an understanding of (Rom. 10:14-17), and belief in, the gospel (Rom. 1:16), repentance (Luke 13:3), and obedience by Baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, as prerequisites to the remission of sins (Acts 2:38), followed by a life of growth in knowledge, grace and holiness, in order to final salvation (2 Pet. 1; 3:18); and all other truths of "the things concerning the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ" (Acts 8:12; 28:23, 31).

THE RESTITUTION SONG

Lift up your heads, desponding pilgrims,
Give to the wind your needless fears;
He who has said redemption's nearing
'Soon is to reign a thousand years.

Chorus

A thousand years earth's restitution,
'Tis the glad day so long foretold;
'Tis the bright morn of Zion's glory
Prophets foresaw in times of old.

What if the clouds do for a moment
Hide the blue sky where morn appears?
Soon the glad Sun of promise given
Rises, to shine a thousand years.

Tell the whole world these blessed tidings,
Speak of the time of bliss that nears;
Tell the oppressed of every nation
Jubilee lasts for a thousand years.

Haste thee along, thou age of glory,
Haste the glad time when Christ appears;
Oh, for the faith of ancient worthies!
Oh, for that reign of a thousand years!

See, all our foes are in commotion,
The very air seems filled with commotion;
But soon he'll come, our conquering Savior,
He'll come and reign a thousand years.

On David's throne in Mount Zion
We'll reign with him as priests and kings;
A thousand years we'll rule the nations,
While dove-like peace shall fold her wings.

[This is an old prophetic song I have had for many years. It may be new to some of your readers.—Mrs. M. Hobson.]

STUDIES IN THE APOCALYPSE

The First Seal (Rev. 6:1, 2).

GEO. FRANCIS.

The student will not proceed far before he will notice the prominence of the number seven. In the Salutation (1:4) we read: "Grace be unto you, and peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the seven spirits which are before his throne." This language points us to the throne of the Deity, as the source of the number seven; therefore the origin of the number of the days of the week, forming the weekly cycle, which points us back to prehistoric times for its origin. As to its "why" and "wherefore," we are left in the dark; but we perceive its significance to be fullness and completeness. The seventh day is sacred to the Jew, also the seventh year, in which the land was to rest; and the square of seven completed the period between the years of the jubilees. Seven times the Israelites encompassed the walls of Jericho, before they fell down; seven times they were to be punshed for their sins; that is, they were to receive full and complete punishment for all their sins (Lev. 26).

The number seven is continued in the New Testament, especially in the Apocalypse, where we read concerning the seven past plagues: "For in them is filled up the wrath of God" (15:1). In the seven epistles to the seven churches we find the significance of the number seven, in that they fill up the space of time from Patmos to the Holy City full and complete. The book, being prophetic, deals with the events of the seven churches in all this dispensation. Proof: "Behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that ye may be tried, and ye shall have tribulation ten days." This is foretelling future events; and again to the church of Thyatira the woman "Jezabel" is mentioned; not old Jezabel, the wife of Ahab, but the modern Jezabel, who, like Ahab's wife, put the prophets of God to death. In a figure or metaphor, old Jezabel is alive again, and at her old work. If those epistles are not prophetic, touching events all through this dispensation, why are seven and no more mentioned? Had the Master no care for the church of Colosse, Miletus, Troas, Corinth and of Rome? The fact is, the book is largely constructed on the number seven; its significance is fullness and completeness. What I am trying to impress upon the reader is that, before the book will be understood, we will have to keep in mind what is symbolized by the number seven; and, having learned that, apply it to the seals and trumps, as well as to the seven churches. The seven plagues are an exception to the rule, in this respect, that they are called the "last plague." They are full and complete, in that they contain the fullness of the wrath of God (ch. 15).

Now, keeping this in mind, I will attempt an exposition of the seven seals, in harmony with the significance of the number seven. The seals will reveal a class of events from A. D. 98 to the end of this age.

The Opening of the Seals (Rev. 6:1).

"And I saw when the Lamb opened one of the seals, and I heard, as it were, the noise of thunder, one of the four beasts saying, Come and see. And I saw, and behold a white horse: and he that sat on him had a bow, and a crown was given unto him; and he went forth conquering and to conquer."

The leading symbol is the horse and its color; and the first question is, What did the horse symbolize? In Zech. 6:5 we learn that it is the spirit of the heavens. The horse, being the most spirited of animals, is here used to indicate the spirit of the government. In Rev. 19:11 we find a white horse, and the rider makes war in righteousness. The white horse in the first seal must symbolize the same as it does in Rev. 19; therefore we should expect to find a spirit of righteousness in the government during the period of this seal. Now, have we anything to guide us as to the time of this seal? Yes, verily we have. In Rev. 1:1 we read: "The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave to him, to show unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass." The revelation, being given A. D. 96, we expect the going forth of the white horse not far from that date.

We find in history just such a period, commencing A. D. 98 with the accession of Nerva to the throne, and continuing through the reigns of Nerva, Trajan, Hadrian and the two Antonines, until the accession of Commodus, A. D. 180. Gibbon says of this period: "If a man were called to fix the period in the history of the world during which the condition of the human race was the most happy and prosperous he would without hesitation name that which elapsed from the death of Domitian to the accession of Commodus. The vast extent of the Roman empire was governed by absolute power, under the guidance of virture and wisdom" (Gibbon, vol. 1:93). Volumes may be written concerning the testimony of Gibbon.

"And he that sat on him had a bow: and a crown was given unto him." The bow indicates war, as in Rev. 19 the rider of the white horse makes war, but it is in righteousness; and so we expect this bow will be used in a just or righteous cause. This war was waged by Trajan against the Dacians, a warlike people who inhabited the country now called Germany. They insulted the dignity of the empire, but were completely subdued in the reign of Trajan (Gib. 1:6). Thus a crown was given to the rider: the crown of Dacia.

"And he went forth conquering and the conqueror." In the reign of Trajan the empire of Rome attained its greatest extent of territory and prestige." He undertook an expedition against the nations of the East. * * * He descended the river Tigris in triumph, from the mountains of Armenia to the Persian Gulf. He enjoyed the honor of being the first, as he was the last, of the Roman generals who ever navigated that remote sea. * * * Every day the astonished Senate received the intelligence of new names and new nations that acknowledged his sway." Thus "he went forth conquering and to conquer" (Gib. 1:7). "The golden age of Trajan and the Antonines had been preceded by an age of iron. It is almost superfluous to enumerate the unworthy successors of Augustus, their unparallel vices and the theaters on which they acted have saved them from oblivion. The dark, unrelenting Tiberius, the furious Caligula, the feeble Claudius, the profligate and cruel Nero, the beastly Vitellins, and the timid, inhuman Domitan are condemned to everlasting infamy" (Gib. 1:96). The last named, Domitan, is compared to a madman on the throne of the world, with unlimited power. Mark the contrast when the gentle and humane Nerva came to the throne, A. D. 96.

GOVERNOR AMONG THE NATIONS

How people who claim to believe the Bible can believe that all the nations of earth will be destroyed when the eternal ages set in, at the second coming of Christ, is hard for me to understand. Why, the very object, or at least one of the objects, of setting up the kingdom of God upon the earth is, "That all people, nations and languages should serve him" (Dan. 7:14). In order to dodge this plain declaration of scripture Elder Hines, in our debate, said this was fulfilled when Christ went to heaven after his resurrection. He says: "He came to the Ancient of days, and the Ancient of days is God, and God was in heaven." In answer I said: "Hold on, and let's see where the Ancient of days will be at that time. This is a prophecy, and in Daniel's vision he said, I beheld until the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did it. When did he sit? Listen. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him; thousands thousands ministered unto him, and ten times ten thousand stood before him: the judgment was set and the books opened. Here is where the Ancient of days was when the Son of Man came to him with the clouds of heaven, and there was given unto him dominion, glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him. He had come and sat in judgment."

Now, to prove that this is true, Daniel, in explaining the vision, said: "I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; until the Ancient of days came, and judgemnt was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came for the saints to possess the kingdom." We shall not take the time or space to speak of the kind of judgment spoken here, but there can be no doubt but the coming of the Son of Man spoken of in verse 14 is his second coming, for he came "with the clouds of heaven," and that is precisely the way he will come the second time. John says: "Behold, he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him." Hence this point is settled. Not only did Daniel declare that "all people, nations and languages should serve him," but David, speaking of the time when Christ shall reign, says: "The kingdom is the Lord's, and he is the governor among the nations" (Ps. 22:25). Yet we are told that there will be no nations for him to rule!

Listen again: "He shall have dominion from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth. They that dwell in the wilderness shall bow before him; and his enemies shall lick the dust. The kings of Tarshish and of the isles shall offer gifts. Yea, all kings of Sheba and Seba shall oqer gifts. Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations serve him" (Ps. 72:8-11). Again: His name shall endure forever; his name shall be continued as long as the sun, and men shall be blessed in him; all nations shall call him blessed." Isaiah declares that when the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains that "he shall judge (rule) among the nations, and shall rebuke many people," while Micah says: "And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off, and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. * * * And I will make her that halteth a remnant and her that was cast afar off a strong nation, and the Lord shall reign over them in Mount Zion from henceforth, even forever." And, to cap the climax, Christ himself says: "To him that overcometh will I give power over the nations;" and John says: "The kings of the earth shall bring their glory and honor into it."

Now, in the face of this divine testimony, how can any Bible believer believe that there will be no nations for him to reign over when his glorious kingdom is established? So rich and grand is the theme of the kingdom that the people will talk about it when it is established. David says: "All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the glory of thy kingdom, and talk of thy power; to make known to the sons of men his mighty acts, and the glorious majesty of his kingdom. Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and they dominion endureth throughout all generations." I tell you, dear brethren, while we are hated and persecuted here, we will be somebody sure enough when the Lord comes. Listen to what the Lord says about it: "Let the saints be joyful in glory; let them sing aloud upon their beds. Let the high praises of God be in their mouth, and a two-edged sword in their hand; to execute vengeance upon the heathen and punishment upon the people; to bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron; to execute the judgment written; this honor hath all the saints. Praise ye the Lord." Oh, yes; our coming King will rebuild David's throne, and take his seat thereupon, and he will make Jerusalem a praise in the earth, for Jerusalem is the "City of the great King," and he, with the saints, shall "reign over the nations," just as sure as the Bible is true. Then the weary, sad and tossed ones shall have crowns of glory and palms of victory, and assist in the "restitution of all things." T. J. DANIEL.

A VISIT TO THE HOLY LAND

No. 1

As we are all interested in the journeys of our Savior while on earth, let us, beloved, take the train of remembrance back to those scenes of old, and pay a visit to the Holy Land.

How fair and calm the day! We could not have chosen a better day for beginning our journey. How swiftly the train flies over the plains, carrying us from the turmoil and hubbub of modern life to those quiet and restful places visited by the holy men of old; yea, even to places where God himself talked with men of old.

I do believe, my friend, that these fields which we are riding through now are the very ones in which

"The shepherds watched their flocks by night,
All seated on the ground;
When the angel of the Lord came down,
And glory shone around."

What a blessed anouncement this was to the world, that "this day in Bethlehem is born a babe, which is Christ the King." Do you not feel appalled when you think that this is the very place in which was revealed to man, for the first time, the coming of the Great One, so long foretold? "A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of his people Isreal."

Bethlehem

We are now approaching the little town of Bethlehem. How fresh and green everything looks! Here we are at last in the very heart of the little town. Let us walk slowly through its streets and talk over the wonderful birth of Jesus. I have read that the associations of our Lord's nativity were all of the humblest character, and the very scenery of the birthplace was connected with the memories of poverty and toil. On that night, indeed, it seemed as though the heavens must burst to disclose their radiant minstrelles, and the stars and the feeding sheep, and the light and sound in the darkness and stillness, and the rapture of faithful hearts, combine to furnish us with awe. There being no roon, at the inn, Christ was laid in a manger. Just think for a moment of the lowly condition of Christ at his birth. He entered into the world, over which he is to rule, without a place to rest. "The birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." As you reflect upon that eventful night, do you not seem to hear, in the distance, a multitude of heavenly hosts, praising God, and singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men?"

The Jordan

Let us, beloved, hasten our steps toward Jordan, that we may reach there before evening. Here we are, and the sun is just disappearing over the distant towers of the place where at one time stood Jericho, and painting with the richest purple the hills between the river and Jerusalem. Jordan, catching its reddenig radiance, rolls past like a river of liquid gold, embanked in emerald. The sun has now gone down, and the full moon is rising on the opposite shore. The broad dise of the moon is pouring a flood of orange-tinged radiance upon us. Notice, friends, how Jordan, dark as India's eye, darts swiftly past at our feet, between its deeply-shaded banks, sending up to our ears the faintest murmur of its pebbly passage. Look forward, friends; far above our heads swells the vaulted arch of the temple of Jehovah, with its myriad of altar fires. If you look backward you will see, far-stretching, the desert waste, cheerless and yet grand in its desolate distances. All things praise God; shall we be silent? Let us join our voices and sing:

"Praise! praise! praise ye the Lord!
Praise him in the heights! Praise him in the seas!
Praise him, men of Israel! Praise ye the Lord!
For he exalteth high his people and reigneth evermore."

Did you notice how the tide of praise floating over the waters, echoed and re-echoed from the opposing shores, as if the banks and streams, trees, hills and sky found voice as well as we? Dear ones, this is holy ground, for do you not remember this to be the very earth upon which Christ trod when he descended into these waters of Jordan for baptism? Is this not the very place in which, when he raised himself up from baptism, that the spirit, in the form of a dove with outstretched wings, descended upon the Savior, and the voice of God was heard to say: "This is my beloved Son, is whom I am well pleased?"

But the time is short; we must now pass onward. The weather is delightful; nights dewy, mornings fresh and cool, days warm, sky clear, grass high and green, trees in full leaf, flowers in blossom, and all nature smiling.

Galilee

I am glad we arrived here at Galilee at daybreak, for the light in the East, just breaking through those clouds of night, recalls to my mind those people which sat in the drakness and saw a great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death, light sprang up. To our right, beloved, is the place where stood the sacred city of Capernaum, where Christ spent so many of his days. Some of the most eventful things of interest occurred here in Galilee: Here is where Christ called his disciples to be fishers of men; he healed a leper; cured a paralytic; delivered his sermon on the mount; raised Jarius' daughter; a woman sick for twelve years healed by touching the hem of his garment; healed two blind men; cured a deaf and dumb man. Can you picture, as you look across this body of water, the scene of the storm at sea? Darkness had fallen on land and sea, and the disciples were rowing toward Capernaum from Bethsaida, while Jesus was alone in the mountain, praying to his Father. The wind blew stronger and stronger over the dark waters, and the sea was boisterous. They were toiling against wind and waves. Suddenly a figure seemed to appear to them in the dimness and darkness, and lo! they heard their blessed Master's voice: "It is I; be not afraid."

Beloved, let us claps our hands and pray,

"That Jesus Ac may see,
He the Christ, who stilled the wave
On the Sea of Galilee."

Garden of Gethsemane

Dear ones, let us now pay a visit to one of our Savior's favorite places, a very secluded and beautiful spot, "The Garden of Gethsemane." This garden is across from the Kidron. Here Jesus and his disciples often resorted for rest, conversation and prayer. It is called "Gethsemane," which means oil-press. A "press' always suggests a crushing process; olive oil is obtained by squeezing the berries in a press; and here Jesus comes to a place where he is to be pressed down by a weight of sorrow that crushes him to the earth, and causes his body to sweat and drip with blood, while his soul agonizes in a conflict that threatens to kill him. Thus the very name of this spot tells the story of Jesus' woe for all men.

Here we are in sight of the garden. What beautiful flowers grow here, also fruit hangs upon the trees, and these trees cast cool shadows which invite tired men to rest. So are we reminded that he gives us rest by his sorrow and life by his death. All that is fair and good flourishes in the garden of the Lord.

"Gethsemane! Joy hath no flowers so sweet
As those which cluster on thine olive slope;
Beneath the crimson sheen of Jesus' feet
Springs up the blossom of a deathless hope."

Let us recall the time when Jesus and his disciples arived at this accustomed spot. The full moon was shining, and Jesus asked his disciples to sit down, while he retired into the grove of olive trees to pray; he also bade them pray for preparation against temptation. Feeling the pressure of an awful weight upon his soul, he took Peter, James and John with him. These men had seen him transfigured in a mountain in Galilee, and were especially dear to him. They walked slowly on when Jesus expressed depression at the heaviness of his burden; something was bearing him down to death. He asked them to stay near and watch with him. He then went a few steps farther, about a stone's throw, and they saw him fall on his face, and as he lay on the ground they heard, in the stillness of the night, his prayer, in broken sentences, like the voice of one fainting yet struggling: "O my Father, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; if it be possible, let this cup pass from me." He again cried out: "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done." Then they saw a bright form beside the sufferer, an angel from heaven, who lifted him up and soothed his troubled spirit. This messenger from his Father's throne showed him that he must go and finish his work; and his agony in prayer became so intense that "the sweat was, as it were, great drops of blood falling down to the ground."

A writer describing his visit to Jerusalem says: "As I was passing near Gethsemane one day I saw, at a little distance, a shepherd engaged in shearing one of his flock. The animal lay stretched before him on the ground, submitting without resistance or complaint to the operation which he was performing. It seemed as if every movement of the shears would lacerate the flesh; the feet were bound; the man's knees were pressed rudely against the sides of the helpless captive. This posture, so irksome, had to be endured for a considerable time before the ample fleece was removed. Yet, during it all, it was wonderful to observe how patient the creature remained; it struggled not, opened not its mouth. Under ordinary circumstances this might not have attracted my attention; but, being seen in such a place, it spoke to my heart with touching power. How could I forget the prophet's use of that emblem, in describing the spirit of unshrinking submission to appointed suffering, which was to distinguish the Savior of Men, and of which he gave such matchless proof in the agony in the garden. Isaiah said, with reference to his character: "He is brought as a lamb to the slaughter; and, as sheep before her shearer is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth."

"The scene is changed! A garden - One is kneeling
Beneath the ancient olive's deepening shade:
Lanterns and torches! footsteps nearer stealing,
The apostate's kiss the Holy One betrayed!"

As Jesus' persecutors rushed upon him he who was able to procure twelve legions, an uncounted host of angels, only said: "This is your hour, and the power of darkness." It was a bitter experience; but "The cup which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?" Gethsemane is one of the choicest spots on earth to Christ's people who have their hours of anguish, when the memory of Jesus, and of his wonderful words: "Thy will be done," bears them up, as he was strengthened by the angel.

VIOLA GAZELEY.

Consolation heals without contact; somewhat like the blessed air which we need but to breathe.

One who is very variable can not be very sincere—today's truth is tomorrow's falsehood—or, at least, it is but a momentary sincerity.

THE SPIRIT OF UNITY

By GAVIN LANG, Inverness.

"And Abraham said unto Lot, Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee, and between my herdmen and thy herdmen, for we are brethren" (Gen. 13:8).

There can be but one judgment as to which of the two, Abraham or Lot, comes best out of the transaction with which the text is associated. Could magnanimity go further than that which Abraham showed? Nearly a thousand years later one even wiser, though not more faithful than he, said: "The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water;" and, in view of a danger so startling, he adjures "to leave off contention before it be meddled with."

A word this to the churches! And, if they will not listen to Solomon, the Royal Preacher, the greatest of the glorious company of the Apostles is ready with his counsel. St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Romans, thus writes: "If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men;" and again: "Follow after the things which make for peace." If the patriarch's plan of nipping strife in the bud had not been pusued, as indicated in the text, Christendom would today have presented another and fairer spectacle. Instead of being torn into hundreds of denominational shreds and fragments, by wrestling and wrangling about matters of minor significance, it would have shown a bolder, because more united, front to error, infidelity and sin.

Is there any occasion for, can there be any extenuation of, the bitterness which has ever accompanied the formation of sects? Even the herdmen of Christ's flock, like those of Abraham and Lot, indulge in such bitterness; and there are those who freely express the conviction that they are to a great extent answerable for the divisions which mar the church's beauty and grieve the spirit of God.

There will be, to the end of the chapter, varieties of sentiment leading to separations; and, as the late Charles H. Spurgeon once quaintly remarked, "It does no harm to have these well labeled." But surely religion should never be allied to intolerance. It is bad enough to magnify difference which, when viewed out of the arena of combat, appear microscopic. But it is worse still to get vehement and angry in the assertion of these differences. What a gain it would have been to the spread of truth if, at each of those crucial epochs of controversy out of which there came fresh dismemberment of the church, there had arisen some voice of authoritative entreaty, like that of Abraham to Lot.

It is often urged that secessions have been useful in so far as they have led to increase in the number of places of worship and an expansion in the volume of ordinances and means of grace; but who can pretend that they have sweetened the social or ecclesiastical atmosphere, or that they have extended the dominion of charity?

What does it all mean if we are really children of the one Father and disciples of the one Master? It is told that in the Peninsular War a detachment of British soldiers were firing briskly in the direction of a distant wood, where men were seen hovering in dark outline, when the Duke of Wellington rode up, and, looking through his telescope, turned to the officer in command and quietly said: "Well aimed, Captain, but enough; these are our own 99th!" They had come dangerously near committing the crime of fratricide. Consciously or unconsciously, churches are guilty of that same heinous sin when, either wilfully or allowing themselves to be misled, they forget, in their attitude towards fellow-Christians, that they too are of the brotherhood.

Half the trouble is caused by our misunderstanding one another. Mr. Jay, one of the devoutest of writers, told a man who, early one foggy morning on a mountainside, thought he saw a great monster. It seemed to be in motion, but he could not make out its exact shape. His heart beat quick as he went forward. As he drew nearer he saw that the monster was a man. He drew nearer still, and he saw that it was his own brother.

We have only to go in thought to Calvary to have all haze and mist, and all distorted views regarding others, dispelled. As we contemplate him who was crucified on that "green hill far away, and who died to save us all, there could not fail to dawn upon us, dull though we are, a conception of what we should be to and do for those around us and everywhere throughout his whole creation. His atonment there wrought out, his sacrifice there offered, were the seal of his teaching: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." If we could, even afar off, follow in his footsteps who thus enjoined, there would be little need to ring in our ears the admonition used by Abraham and handed down by inspiration of the Holy Ghost to every age: "Let there be no strife, for we be brethren;" nor yet the exhortation of that most illustrious ambassador of the Cross, who in farewell word to the Corinthians touchingly pleads: "Be of one mind, live in peace, and the God of love and peace shall be with you."—Selected by Ian Kattison.

THE LORD IS MY SHEPHERD

Psalms 23.

I shall not want rest. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures."

I shall not want refreshments. "He leadeth me beside still waters."

I shall not want repentance. "He restoreth my soul."

I shall not want guidance. "He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness."

I shall not want protection. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death."

I shall not want companionship. "For thou art with me."

I shall not want comfort. "Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

I shall not want provision. "Thou preparest a table before me."

I shall not want joy. "Thou anoinest my head with oil."

I shall not want any good thing. "My cup runneth over."

I shall not want anything in the life to come. "I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

—CASSIE HICKLIN WILLIAMS.

"rain;" so we have a wet element in the word "rain." But once let us connect the thought of fire to "rain," as Jesus did in Luke 17:29, 30, then we cease to have a wet element. "To rain fire, is not to rain a wet element; to salt with fire is not to use preserving element, but one that is sure to consume."

Here are the saints. They have presented their bodies a living sacrifice" (Rom. 12:1-3). They have salt in themselves (Mark 9:50). In the day when God rains fire and brimstone from heaven (2 Thess. 1:7-10; Luke 17:29-30) they shall be salted with salt—an element which shall preserve them throughout all eternity to come.—J. J. Schaumburg.

FIGHT AGAINST THE BIBLE

The contest that is going on against the Bible, especially the aim to bar it from all American schools, goes steadily on. A local paper in Minnesota, reporting from Mankato in that state, has the following: "Rev. Father Robert Hughes, pastor of the St. James Roman Catholic Church, has directed a temporary restraining order against the president of the local school board to stop the reading of the Bible and other so-called religious exercises in the high school."

When one calls to mind the oft-repeated claim that the American schools are godless and dangerous, this attitude of the priesthood of Rome shows them as seeking to make capital out of a situation largely of their own creation. Engaged in an insistent propaganda against the American schools, presumably to make more favorable the conditions of parochial schools, and in time to secure public funds for them, they are seeking to undermine the present school system, and are using the power of their church to accomplish this end.

For the priesthood to oppose the quiet reading of the Bible in the American school, and even the use of the Lord's Prayer, and then to be casting most serious reflections on the school system because it is not religious, shows what seems like a two-faced policy. If they are sincerely desirous to have some religious influence in the school, why not allow the reading of the Bible and the Lord's Prayer? It is the old contest that has been on for ages regarding church dominance of education and of conscience.

The American school system deserves better at the hands of the Roman Catholic Church than it receives. On the other hand, we believe it will be a long day before the American public will be ready to discard these schools for the parochial system and the teachers and the matter taught therein. It will be well for the American people if they are aroused on this question sufficiently to stand for the defense of American principles and the highest efficiency of our school system, and the introduction of some measure of moral and religious instruction may well receive their attention.

NOTICE

The twenty-eighth annual state conference of the Church of God in Nebraska will be held this year from August 16th to August 24th. We print this notice now so that all may begin to get ready to attend. The place and further particulars will be printed later. ALTA KING, Secretary.

Meals	.50
Total	$11.30

Money Received

From Bro. Fox, for ticket and meals	$ 5.65
Expenses above receipts	$ 5.65
Wages	35.00
Due	$70.65

On the 4th I left for Moorefield in company with Bro. and Sister Fox, whose son had died in a local hospital. We conducted the funeral on Friday, the 5th. Began meetings in the church Saturday evening, and continued until Monday night, when a snowstorm began and continued for about forty-eight hours, which stopped the meetings till Sunday, the 13th, when we resumed with good interest. We were having one of the best meetings held for a long time, but sickness at home compelled us to close, with the promise to return as soon as possible, which we are now arranging to do. ALMUS ADAMS, Evangelist.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Rosana Joblin

Mrs. Rosana Joblin was born in the Isle of Wight, England, June 30, 1831, and died at The

MRS. ROSANA JOBLIN

Eliza Jennings Home, 10603 Detroit Avenue, Cleveland, O., May 18, 1913.

Sister Joblin was the widow of our beloved Bro. Joblin, whom so many knew, both by word and pen, throughout the brotherhood. Sister Joblin has been an invalid and a sufferer for many years. About eight years ago she had her first stroke of apoplexy, from which she never fully recovered. She has had several strokes since that time, the last one attacking her on May 8th, rendering her almost speechless and entirely helpless.

For over three years she has been at The Eliza Jennings Home for invalids, where she has been very contented with her surroundings, which have been very pleasant and homelike. She has been confined to her bed since November, and we can only speak in the most commendable terms of the matron and nurse who have given her such excellent care; in fact, we wish to extend our sincere thanks and appreciation to the staff of directors for their kindness and consideration of her during the entire time she has been in the home.

Sister Joblin, like her husband, has defended the truth as it is in Jesus for many years. She had a most excellent knowledge of the scriptures, and the meditation on them since she has been deprived of the pleasure of persuing them herself has been a great source of comfort to her.

Jesus, speaking back to John in Patmos, said: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Truly it can be said of her: "She has fought a good fight; she has finished her course; she has kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for her a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give her at that day; and not to her only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

After a funeral discourse in the chapel at Lakeview Cemetery, we placed her beside her dear husband, to await the glorious return of Christ the Life-Giver. W. S. TOMLINSON.

Nellie Congleton

Nellie Congleton, of Johnson Township, Clark County, Ill., fell asleep in Jesus May 15, 1913. She was born March 14, 1875, at the home farm where her entire life was spent, and here she enjoyed the blessings of a good home and congenial companionship. She was laid to rest in the Restitution Cemetery, beside her father, to await the summons of him who has promised to call and claim his own at the last day. Early in life she united with the Christian church, and was ever faithful to her Christian duty. She was possessed of rather a frail constitution, but with an exceedingly energetic and industrious disposition that was an inspiration to all who labored with her. She was an artist by nature, and the home is adorned with paintings of her creation, and numerous other works of art. She has exchanged bits of her handiwork with people of the different states and various other countries for relics and mementoes which would do credit to a museum. Such a busy life was hers!

Having listened to the truth preached time after time, it never became quite clear to her until presented by Bro. L. E. Conner in a sermon on "Begettal by the Word." At that moment the seed fell on good ground, and, never shirking a duty and true to herself and the leading of the spirit or word, she submitted herself to baptism without delay.

Since the organization of a Sunday-school at the Church of God near her home, and prior to her baptism into the truth, she has been a most faithful co-laborer with us, and doubly so since embracing the truth as it is in Christ Jesus. Her friendly face and kindly greetings will be missed there more than anywhere else, except in her own home. She was loyal to the church, doing what she could with her strength and means to present the truth to others.

She made lasting friends of those she came to know. She was a lovely character. Words are inadequate to express the nobility of her life. None who were not closely associated with her can appreciate the lovable attributes which were hers. Her life record is worthy of emulation as a model of Christian virtue and rectitude. Truly

"None knew her but to love her,
None named her but to praise."
